The men of Machmas, an hundred and two and twenty: the men of Bethel and Ai, two hundred and thre and twenty: the children of Nebo, two and fyfty: the children of Magbis, an hundred and fyre and fyfty: the children of the other Elam a thousande, two hundred and foure and fyfty: the children of Harim, thre hundred and twenty: the children of Lodhadid and Ono, seuen hundred & fyue and twenty: The children of Jericho, three hundred and fyue and fourty: the children of Senaah, three thousande, fyre hundred, and thirty.

The preastes. The children of Jedaiah of the house of Jesua, nyne hundred and three & seuenty: the children of Emer, a thousande & two and fyfty: The children of Phashur, a thousande and two hundred, & seuen & fourty: The children of Harim, a thousande and seuentene.

The Nethinims, the children of Ziha, the children of Hakupha, The children of Tababaoth, the children of Ceros, the children of Sicha, the children of Phadon, the children of Lebanah, the children of Hagabah, the children of Acub, the children of Hagab, the children of Samlai, the children of Hanan, the children of Gadel, the children of Gahar, the children of Reaiah, the children of Rezin, the children of Necuba, the children of Gasan, the children of Usa, the children of Phaleah, the children of Bessai, the children of Asena, the children of Meunim, the children of Nephussim, the children of Bacbuc, the children of Hacupha, the children of Harhur, the children Bezeluth, the children of Mahira, the children of Harsa, the children of Barcom, the children of Sisara, the children of Thamah, the children of Neziah, the children of Hatipha.

And these went vp also, Thelmelah, Thel, Harsa, Cherub, Addon & Emer. But they could not shewe their fathers house nor their sede, whether they were of Israel. The children of Dalaiah, the children of Tobiah, the children of Necoda, sixe hundred and two and fyftye.

And of the children of the preastes. The children of Hobaiah, the children of Hakoz, the children of Berzilai, whiche toke one of the dughters of Berzilai the Galaadite to wyfe, and was counted amonge the same names: these sought the register of their byrth, & found none, therfore were they put frome the preasthode. And Hathirsatha sayde vnto them, that they shuld not eate of the most holy, tyll there rose vp a preast with the * lyght and perfitnesse.

The hole congregacion as one man, was two and fourty thousande, three hundred and three score: beside their seruauntes and maydens, of whome there were seuen thousande, three hundred and seuen and thirtye. And they had two hundred singynge men and women, seuen hundred and sixe and thirty horses, two hundred and fyue and fourtye Mules, foure hundred and fyue and thirty Camels, and.vi. thousande, seuen hundred and twenty Asses. And certayne of the chefe fathers, when they came to the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem, they offred willyngly vnto the house of God, that it shulde be set in his place, and gaue after their habilitie vnto the treasure of the worke three score and one thousande drammes, and fyue thousand pounde of siluer, and an hundred preastes garmentes. So the preastes and the Leuites, and certayne of the people, and the syngers, and the porters, and the Nethinims dwelte in their cyties, and all Israell in their cyties.

¶ After the foundacyon of the temple ones layed, they sacrifyse vnto the Lorde.

CAP. III.

When the seuenth moneth came, and the children of Israel were now in their cyties, the people clouered together as one man, vnto Jerusalem. And Jesua the sonne of Josedec arose and his brethren the preastes, & Zorobabel the son of Salathiel and his brethren, and buylded the aultar of the God of Israel, to offre burntofferinges theron, as is written in the law of Moses the man of God and the aultar they dyd set vpon his sockettes (for there was a fearfulnes among them because of the nacions and landes) and offred burnt offringes theron vnto the Lorde in the mornynge and at euen. And beside the feast of Tabernacles (as is written) and offred burnt sacrifices dayly in order, accordinge to the custome, daye by daye. Afterwarde the dayely burntoffringes also, and of the new Monthes of all the feast dayes of the Lorde that were halowed, and all maner of freewill offringes, whiche they dyd of their owne motion vnto the Lorde.

Upon the first daye of the seuenth month begaune they to offre burnt sacrifices vnto the Lorde. But the foundacion of the temple of the Lorde was not yet layde. Neuertheles they gaue money vnto the masons and carpenters, and meat and drinke and oyle vnto them of Zidon and of Tire, to bringe them Ceder timbre frome Libanus by see vnto * Joppa, accordinge to the commaundement of Cyrus kynge of Perlia.

In the seconde yere of their commynge vnto the house of God at Jerusalem and the seconde moneth, began Zorobabel sonne of Salathiel, and Jesua sonne of Josedec, and the rest of their brethren the preastes and Leuites and all that were come out of captiuite vnto Jerusalem, and appointed the Leuites from twenty yere olde and aboue, to ouersee the worckes of the house of the Lorde. And Jesua stode with his sonnes and brethren, and Cedmiel with his sonnes, and the children of Juda, to forther the worckemen of the house of God, namely the children of Henadad, with their children, and their brethren the Leuites.

And when the buylders layde the foundacion of the temple of the Lorde, the preastes stode in their araye, with trompetters. And the Leuites the children of Asaph with Cymbales, to praise the Lorde * after the maner of Dauid kynge of Israel. And they sange together, grupynge praises and thankes vnto the Lorde, that he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for euer vpon Israel.

And all the people shouted loude in praysinge the Lorde, because the foundacyon of the house of the Lorde was layde. Many also of the olde Preastes and Leuites and auncient fathers fathers, which had sene the first house: when the foundacion of this house was layde before their eyes, wepte with a loude voyce. And many shouted with ioye, so that the noyse gaue a great sounde, in so moch that the people could not perceyue the ioyfull sounde for the noyse of the weppynge amonge the people: for the people shouted with a loude crye, so that the noyse was herde farre of.

CAPI. IIII.

But when the aduersaryes of Juda and Ben Jamin hearde, that the children of captiuitie buylded the temple vnto the Lorde God of Israell, they came to Zorobabel and to the principall fathers, and sayd to them: We wil buylde with you: for we seke the Lorde youre God as ye do. And we haue vsed sacrifice vnto him, sythens that Asor Hamon kynge of Assur brought vs vp hyther. But Zorobabel and Jesua and the other auncient fathers of Israel answered theym: It belongeth not to you, but to vs to buylde the house vnto our God: for we our selues will buylde alone vnto the Lorde our God of Israell, as Cyrus kynge of Persia hath commaunded vs.

Then the folke of the lande hyndered the people of Juda, & made them afeayde to buyld and hyred counselours against them and hynbered their deuyse, as longe as Cyrus kynge of Persia lyued, tyll the raygne of Darius kynge of Persia. And whē Asuerus was made kynge, in the begynninge of his raygne they wrote vnto him a complaynt against them of Juda and Jerusalem.

Also in the tyme of Artaxerxes, wrote Bisellam, Mithridates, Tabeel, and the other of their conspiracie vnto Artaxerxes kynge of Persia. But the scripture of the letter, was written in the Syrians speache, and was red in the language of the Syrians. Rehum the chaunceler, and Samsai the scrybe, wrote also an Epistle frome Jerusalem, to Artaxerxes the kynge, of this tenour.

We Rehum the chaunceloure, and Samsai the scrybe, and other of the counsel of Dina, of Arphasath, of Tarplat, of Persia, of Arach of Babylon, of Susan, of Deha, and of Ela, and other of the people, whome the great and noble Asenaphar brought ouer, and set in the cyties of Samaria, and other on this syde the water, and in Ceneeth. (This is the summe of the letter that they sente vnto kynge Artaxerxes). Thy seruauntes the men on this syde the water and in Ceneeth to kyng Artaxerxes greting. Be it knowen vnto the kynge, that the Jewes are come vp frome the to vs vnto Jerusalem a cytie seditious and frowarde, and buylde the same, and laye the foundacion of the walles therof, and repayre them. Knowe now therfore, O kynge, that yf this cytie be buylded and the walles made vp agayn, they shall not gyue tribute, tolle, ne pearely custome and so euen vnto the kynges shall this hurt redounde. But now sythe we al are therby, whiche destroyed the temple, we woll no longer se the kynges dishonoure. Therfore we haue sent out, and caused the kynge to be certified therof: that serche maye be made in the Chronycles of thy progenitours, and so shalt thou fynde in the same Chronycles, and perceyue, that this cytie is seditious and noysom vnto kynges and landes, and that they cause others also to rebell of olde, and for the same cause was this cytie destroyed. Therfore we certifye the kynge, that yf this cytie be buylded, & the walles therof made vp, thou shalte kepe nothinge on this syde the water by reason of it.

Then sent the kynge an answere vnto Rehum Chaunceler, and Samsai the Scribe, & to the other of their counsel that dwelt in Samaria, and vnto the other beyonde the water. Peax and salutation. The letters whiche ye sent vs, haue bene openly red before me, and I haue commaunded to make searche: and it is founde, that this cytie of olde hath made insurrection against kynges, and how that sedicion and rebellion hathe bene committed therin. There haue bene myghty kynges also at Jerusalem, whiche haue raigned ouer all that is beyonde the water, and colle, tribute and yerely custome was gyuen therm. Do ye now after this commaundemente, forbyd the same men, that the cytie be not buylded, tyll I haue gyuen commaundement. Se nowe ye be not negligent here in, least the kynge haue harme by meanes of it. The kynges answere.

When kynge Artaxerres letters were red before Rehum the chaunceler and Samsai the Scrybe and their counsell, they went vp in al haste to Jerusalem vnto the Jewes, and forbad them with vyolence and power. The ceased the worke of the house of God at Jerusalem, and continued so tyll the seconde yere of Darius kynge of Persia. The worke ceaseth

¶ By the exhortacyon of Aggeus and Zachary the temple is redified.

CAP. V.

The Prophetes, Aggeus and Zachary the sonne of Ado, prophecyed vnto the Jewes that were in Juda and Jerusalem, in the name of the God of Israell. Then gat vp Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Jesua the sonne of Josedec, and began to buylde the house of God at Jerusalem, and with the the Prophetes of God which helped them. At the same tyme came to theym Thathanai the Capitayne on this syde the water, and Sthar buzanai, and their felowes, and sayd thus vnto theym: Who hathe commaunded you to buylde this house, and to make vp the walles thereof? Then tolde we theym the names of the men, that made this buyldynge. But vpon the Elders of the Jewes came the eye of their God, so that they coulde not cause theym to ceasse, tyll the matter was brought afore Darius, and tyll they had answered by letters therunto.

This is the coppe of the letters that Thathanai Capitayne on this syde the water, and Sharbuzanai, and their adherentes of Aphar sach (which were on this syde the water) sent vnto kynge Darius. The wordes they sente vnto him were these: Vnto Darius the kyng All peax. Be it knowen to the kynge, that we came into Jewri to the house of ℔ great God which is buylded with rought stone, and beames are layd in the walles, and the worke goeth fast forthe, and prosspereth in their handes. We asked therfore the elders, and sayde vnto them: Who hath commaunded you to buylde this house, and to make vp the walles therof? We asked their names also, that we myghte certifye the, and haue written the names of the men that were their rulers. But they answered vs these wordes, and sayde: We are the seruauntes of the God of heauen and earthe, and buylde the house that was buylded many yeres ago, which a great kynge of Israel buylded and set vp. And after our fathers had sorowed ℔ God of heauen vnto wrath, he gaue them ouer into the hande of Nabuchodonozor kynge of Babilon the Caldee, which ouerthrew this house, and caryed the people awaye vnto Babilon. But in the first yere of Cyrus the kynge of Babilon, the same kynge Cyrus commaunded to buylde this house of God, for the vessels of golde and syluer in the house of God, which Nabuchodonozor toke out of the temple at Jerusalem, and brought theym into the temple at Babilon, those dyd Cyrus the kynge take out of the temple at Babilon, ✠ and deliuered them vnto Sasbazar by name, whom he made Capitayne, and sayde vnto him. Take these vessels, go thy waye and bringe them vnto ℔ temple at Jerusalem, & let the house of God be buylded in his place. Then came the same Sasbazar and layd the foundacion of ℔ house of God at Jerusalem. Sithes that tyme hath it bene in buyldinge, and as yet is not fynysshed. Nowe therfore yf it lyke the kynge, let searche be made in the kynges treasure house at Babylon, whether it was kynge Cyrus cõmaundement, that the house of God at Jerusalem shulde be buylded: and sende vs the kynges pleasure in this behalfe.

¶ Cõmaundement of Darius, when the temple was buylded and dedycate, the chyldren of Israel kepe the feast of vnleuend bread.

CAPI. VI.

Then commaunded kynge Darius, search to be made in the Library of the kynges bookes, whiche laye at Babilon. So at Ecbathanis in a castel that lyeth in the lande of the Medes, was founde a booke, and in it was a recorde written after this maner: In the first yere of kynge Cyrus, commaunded kyng Cyrus to buylde the house of God at Jerusalem, in the place where ℔ sacrifice is made and to laye a foundacion of thre shore cubites hyghe, and thre shore cubytes brode, and thre walles of rought stones, and one wall of tymber, and the expenses shulde be gyuen of the kynges house. And the golde and syluer vessels of the house of God (which Nabuchodonozor toke oute of the temple at Jerusalem, and brought vnto Babilon) shulde be restored agayne, that they may be brought vnto the temple at Jerusalem to their place into the house of God.

A ii. Eldr. v. a.

Nowe therfore thou Thathanai capitayne beyonde the water, & Sharbuzanai, & youre felawes which are beyonde the water, get ye awaye frome theym. Let theym worke in the house of God, that the Capitayne of the Jewes and their elders may buylde the house of God in his place. I haue commaunded also, what shall be wone to the Elders of Juda in the buyldinge of the house of God, that there shall dyligently be taken of the kynges goodes, euen of the reuenues beyonde the water, and gyuen vnto the men, and that they be not hyndred. That yf they haue nede of calues, lambes, or gotes, for burntoffrynge vnto the God of heauen, wheate, salt, wyne and oyle, after the custome of the preastes at Jerusalem be it gyuen them dayly that no complaynt be made therein. And let them offre swete sauoures vnto the God of heauen, and praye for the kynges lyfe, and for his children. This commaundement haue I gyuen. And what man so euer altereth these wordes, there shall a beame be taken frome his house, and set vp, & he shalbe hanged theron, and his house shall be forfayted for the dede. Yea the God that hath made his name to dwell there, destroye all Realmes & people, that put to their hand to alter and breake wowne the house of God at Jerusalem. I Darius haue commaunded, that this be diligently wone.

Then Thathanai, the Capitayne beyonde the water, and Sharbuzanai with their fellowes (to whome kynge Darius hadde sent) dyd their deuour. And the elders of the Jewes buylded, and they prospered thorowe ℔ prophecyenge of Aggeus the prophete and Zacharye the sonne of Aw: and buylded, and set vp the worke, accordinge to the commaundment of the God of Israel, and after the commaundement of Cyrus, Darius and Artaxerres kynges of Persia. And they were in fynysshynge the house vnto the thirde daye of the moneth Adar, that was in the sixte yere of the raygne of kynge Darius.

And the children of Israel, the preastes, the Leuites, and the other children of captyuite helde the dedication of the house of God with ioye, and offred at the dedication of the house of God, an hundred calues, two hundred lambes, foure hundred gotes: and for the synnes of all Israel twelue he gotes, according to the nombre of the trybes of Israel, and set the preastes in their courses, and the Leuites in their offices to minister vnto God which is at Jerusalem, as is written in the booke of Moses.

And the children of captiuite helde passeouer, vpon the fourtenth daye, of the fyrst moneth: for the preastes and Leuites hadde purified them selues, so that they were all clene as one man, and offered Passeouer for all the children of captiuitie, and for their brethren the preestes, and for them selues. And the children of Israell, whiche were retourned oute of captiuitie, and all suche as hadde seuered them selues frome the fylthynesse of the Paynymes in the lande to seke the Lorde God of Israel, ate and helde the feaste of vnleuend breed seuen dayes with ioye: for the Lorde hadde made them gladde, and tourned the herte of the kynge of Assur vnto them, so that their handes were strengthed in ℔ worke of the house of God, whiche is the God of Israel.

CAPI. VII.

After these thynges in the raygne of Artaxerres kynge of Persia, there wente vp frome Babilon, Esdras the sonne of Saraiah, the sonne of Asariah, the son of Helkia, the sonne of Helum, the sonne of Sadoc, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amariah, the sonne of Asaria, the son of Maraioth, the sonne of Zaraiah, the sonne of Ozi, the sonne of Boki, the son of Abisua, the sonne of Phines, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron the chiefe Preeste. This Esdras was a quicke scribe in the lawe of Moses, ✠ which the Lord God of Israell dyd gyue. And the kynge gaue him all he requyred, accordynge to the hand of the Lorde his God vpon him. So went vp certayne of the children of Israel, and of the preastes, and of the Leuites, of the syngers, of the porters, and of the Nethinims vnto Jerusalem, in the seuenth yere of kynge Artaxerres. And they came to Jerusalem in the fifth moneth, that is the seuenth yere of the kynge. For vpon the first daye of the firste moneth began he to goo vp from Babilon: and on the firste daye of the fifth moneth came he to Jerusalem accordinge to the good hande of God vpon him. For Esdras prepared his herte to seke the lawe of the Lorde, and to do it, and to teache the precept and iudgement in Israel. This is the coppe of the letter that kynge Artaxerres gaue vnto Esdras the Preest, the scribe, which was a teacher in the wordes of the Lorde, and of his statutes ouer Israell. Unto Esdras the preest and scribe in the lawe of the God of heuen peax and greetynge. I haue commaunded that all they of the people of Israel, and of the preestes and Leuites in my realme, whiche are mynded to go vp to Jerusalem, that they goo with the, beinge sente of the kynge and of the seuen Lordes of the counsell, to vysyte Juda and Jerusalem, according to the lawe of God, whiche is in thy hande: and that thou take with the, syluer and golde, whiche the kynge and the Lordes of his counsell haue gruen of their good wyll vnto the God of Israel (whose habitacion is at Jerusalem) and all the syluer and golde thou canst fynde in all the countrey of Babilon: with that also that the people and preestes gyue of their good wyll vnto the house of God at Jerusalem. Take thou ℔ same and bye dilygently with it, calues, lambes, gotes, and sacrifices, and drynckoffrynges, to be offered vpon the aultare of the house of youre God at Jerusalem. And loke what it lyketh the and thy brethren, to do with the rest of the moneye, that do after the wyll of youre God. And the vesselles that are gruen the for the ministracion in the house of thy God, those delyuer thou before God at Jerusalem.

And what so euer thyng more shall be nedefull for the house of thy God, whiche is necessarye for the to spende, let the same be gyuen oute of the kynges chamber. I kynge Artaxerres haue decreed and commaunded to all the kepers of our treasour beyond the water, that loke who so euer Esdras the Preest and scryde in the lawe of the God of heuen requyreth of you, that ye fulfyll the same dilygentlye, vntyll an hundred talentes of syluer, vntyll an hundred quarters of wheate, and tyll an hundred Bathes of wyne, and tyll an hundred Bathes of oyle, and salte without measure. What so euer belongeth to the rytes of the God of heuen, let the same be done with diligence for ℔ house of the God of heuen, that there come no wrath of, vpon ℔ kinges realme and his children.

And knowen be it vnto you, that ye shall haue no auctorite to requyre taxes and custome and yerely rentes vpon anye of the Preestes, Leuites, syngers, porters, Nethinims, and ministers in the house of this God. But thou Esdras (after the wysdome of the God that is in thy hande) set thou Judges and presidentes to iudge all the people that is beyonde Jordan, euen all suche as knowe the lawe of thy God: and theym that knowe it not, those se that ye teache. And who so euer wyll not dylygentlye fulfyll the lawe of thy God, and the kynges lawe, shal haue his iudgement for the dede, whether it be vnto death or to be banysshed or to be condemned in goodes, or to be put in pyson.

iii. Esd. viij. c.

✠ Praysed be the Lorde God of youre fathers, which so hath inspyred the kynges hert to garnysshe the house of God at Jerusalem: and hathe enclyned his mercye vnto me in the presence of the kyng and his counsellours, and before all the kynges hye estates. And I was comforted (accordyng to the hand of the Lord my God ouer me) and so gathered I the heades of Israel togyther, that they myghte goo vp with me.

¶ The nombre of them that returned to Jerusalem with Esdras.

CAP. VIII.

These are the heades of their fathers that were named, whiche wente vp with me from Babilon, what tyme as kyng Artaxerres raigned. Of the children of Phines, Gersom: Of the chyldren of Ithamar, Daniel: of the children of Dauid, Hatus: of the chyldren of Zecaniah, of the chyldren of Pharos, Zacharye, and with him were nombred an hundred and fiftye men: of the chyldren of Pahath, Moab, Eltoenai, the sonne of Zarahiah, and with him two hundred men: of the chyldren of Zechaniah the sonne of Jahaziel, and with him thre hundred men: of the chyldren of Adin Abed, the sonne of Jonathan, & with him fiftye men: of the chyldren of Elam Esaiah the sonne of Athaliah, and with hym seuentye men: of the chyldren of Saphatia, Zabadiah the sonne of Michael, and with him. lxxx. men.

Of the chyldren of Joab, Obadiah the son of Jehiel, and with him two hundred & eyghtene men: of the chyldren of Selomith the son of Josphiah, and with hym an hundred & three men. Of the children of Bebai, Zacharye the sonne of Bebai, and with him eyght & twenty men. Of the children of Asgad, Johanan the sonne of Hakatan, and with hym an hundred and ten men. Of the last chyldre of Adonicam, and these were their names: Eliphelet, Jehiel and Samaiah, and with them thre scoze men. Of the chyldren of Begui, Uthai and Zabud, and with them seuentye men. And I gathered them together by the water that renneth towarde Ahaua, and there abode we thze dayes.

And when I loked amonge the people and the preestes, I founde no Leuites there. Then sent I Eliezer, Ariel, Semetah, Elnathan, Jarib, Elnathan, Nathā, Zachary and Mosollam the rulers/and Joiarib and Elnathā the teachers, and those sent I vnto Ew the chiefest at Calphia, that they sholde fetche vs ministers for ꝑ house of our God, and I told them what they sholde saye vnto Ew, and to his brethren the Nethinims at Calphia.

And (accordynge to the good hande of our God vpon vs) they broughte vs a wyse man keome the chyldren of Moboli the sonne of Leui, the sonne of Israell, I meane Sarabia with his sonnes and brethren eyghtene. And Hasabia, and with him Jsaiah of the children of Merari, with his brethren and their sonnes, twentye. And of the Nethinims, whome Dauid and the Princes gaue to minister vnto the Leuites, two hundred and twenty, all named by name.

A fastynge proclaymed.

And euen there at the water beside Ahaua, caused I a fastynge to be proclaymed, that we myght humble our selues before our God, to seke of him a right waye for vs, and oure children, and all our substaunce. For I was ashamed to requyre of the kynge, souldiours and horsemen, and to helpe vs agaynst the ennemy in the waye. For we had sayd vnto the kynge: The hande of our God is vpon all them that seke him in goodnesse, and his vyolence and wrathe vpon all them that forsake him. So we fasted, and sought this at our God, and he herde vs. Then I rose out twelue of the chief preestes, Sarabia, and Hasabia, & ten of their brethren with them, and weied them there the syluer and golde, and vessells for the offeryng vnto the house of our God, whiche the kynge and the lordes of his counsell and princes, and all Israel that were at hand, had gyuen to the offeryng: and there weyed I them vnder their hande, fiue hundred and fiftye talentes of syluer, and in syluer vessell an hundred talentes, and in golde an hundred talentes, twenty cuppes of golde of a thousand drammes, and two costly ornamentes of good brasse, as cleare as golde, and sayd vnto them: Ye are holye vnto the Lorde, therfore are the vesselles holy also, and so is the syluer and golde that is gyuen of a good wyll vnto the Lorde God of your fathers: Watche ye therfore and kepe it, tyll ye weye it downe before the chiefe Preestes and Leuites, and auncient fathers of Israel at Jerusalem in the Thelaurie of the house of the Lorde. Then toke the Preestes and Leuites the weyed syluer and gold and vessell, to bring it to Jerusalem vnto the house of oure God.

So we marched forwarde, from the water of Ahaua, on the twelueth daye of the firste moneth, to goo vnto Jerusalem: and the hande of oure God was vpon vs, and delyuered vs keome the hande of the ennemye and lyers in awaye by the waye. And we came to Jerusalem, and abode there thze dayes. But on the fourth daye was the syluer and golde, and vessell weyed in the house of oure God vnder the hande of Meremoth the sonne of Uria the Preestle, and with him Eleazar the son of Phinees, and with him Josabad the sonne of Jesua, and Noadia the sonne of Benoi the Leuites, accordynge to the nombre and weyght of euery one. And the weyght was all written at the same tyme.

And the chyldren of the captiuytie, whiche were come oute of prison, offered burntoffrynges vnto the God of Israell: twelue bullockes for all Israell, nynetye and fiue rammes: seuentye and seuen lambes, and twelue gotes for a synneoffrynge, all to the burntoffreynge of the Lorde. And thy delyuered the kynges commyssion vnto the kynges officers, and to the capitaynes on this syde the water. And they auaunced the people, and the house of God.

¶ Esdras complayneth on the people, that had mixed them selues from God, and entermaryed with the gentyles.

CAPI. IX.

When all this was performed, the rulers cam to me, and sayde: the people of Israell and the Preestes and Leuites are not seuered from the nations in the landes as touchyng their abhominations, namely of the Cananites, Hethytes, Pherezites, Jebusites, Ammonites, Moabites, Egyptians, and Amorites. * For they haue taken their doughters, and their sonnes/and haue myxte the holye seed with the nacyons of the landes: and moreouer the hande of the prynces and rulers hath ben peynepall in this trespace. * When I herde this, I tare my clothes and my rayment, and pluckt of the heere of my heed and of my berde, and sat mournynge. Then resorted vnto me all suche as feared the worde of the Lorde God of Israel, bycause of the great transgression. And I sate mournynge tyll the euenynge sacrifyce. And aboute the euenynge sacrifice, I rose vp fro my heuynesse, and rente my clothes and my rayment, and fell vpon my knees, and spred our my handes vnto ꝑ Lorde my God, and sayd. My God, I am ashamed, and dare not lyfte vp myne eyes vnto the my God: for our wyckednesses are growen ouer our heed, & our trespaces are waxen great vnto the heuen: Sithes the tyme our fathers, haue we ben in great trespace vnto this daye, * and bicause of oure wyckednesse haue we and oure kynges ben gyuen vp in to the hande of ꝑ kynges of the nacions in to the swerde, in to bondage, in to spoyle, and in to confusion of face, as it is come to passe this daye.

But now a lytle and sodayne graciousnes is come from the Lord our God, so that some of vs are escaped, that he maye giue vs a nayle in his holy place, that our God maye lyght oure eyes, and gyue vs a lytle lyfe in oure bondage. For we are bondmen, and our God hathe not forsaken vs in our bondage, but hath enclyned mercy vnto vs in ꝑ sight of the kinges of Persia, that he sholde gyue vs lyfe, & auaunce the house of our God, and buylde vp the desolate places therof, and to gyue vs an hedge in Juda and Jerusalem.

And nowe, O our God: what shall we saye after this? for we haue forsaken thy commaundementes, whiche thou hast commaunded by thy seruauntes the Prophetes, and sayd: The lande vnto whiche ye go to possesse, is vncleane thorow the filthynesse of the people of the landes, by their abhominacions wherwith they haue filled it with vnclennes on euerye syde.

Therfore ye shall not gyue your doughters to their sonnes, and their doughters shall ye not take vnto your sonnes, and seke not their peax and welthe for euer, that ye maye be stronge and eniaye the good in the lande, and that ye and your chyldren may haue the inheritaunce of it for euermoze.

And after all this that is come vpon vs, bycause of our cupl wrks and great trespace thou our God hast spared oure wyckednesses, and hast gyuen vs a delyueraunce as it is come to passe this daye.

And neuertheles we haue tourned backe, and haue let goo thy commaundementes, to make contracte with the people of these abhominacions. Wylte thou then be wrothe with vs, tyll we be vtterly consumed, so that nothynge remayne, and tyll there be no delyueraunce? O Lorde God of Israel thou art righteous/ for we remayne yet escaped, as it is this daye. Beholde in thy presence are we in oure trespace, for bycause of it there is no standyng before the.

CAPI. X.

While Esdras prayed after this maner, and knowleged, wepte, and laye before the house of God, there resorted vnto him out of Israel a very great nombre of men and women, & chyldren: for the people wepte verye sore. And Sechanias the sonne of Jehiel one of the chyldren of Elam, answered & sayd vnto Esdras: We haue trespaced agaynst the Lorde oure God, in ꝑ we haue taken straunge wyues of all the people of the lande. Nowe there is hope yet in Israell concernynge this, therfore let vs make a couenaunt nowe with our God, to put awaye all the wyues, & suche as are borne of them, accordynge to the counsell of the Lorde, and of them that feare the commaundement of oure God, that we maye do accordynge to the lawe. Ryse vp therfore, for the matter belongeth vnto the. We will be with the, be of good comforte and do it. * Then rose Esdras, and toke an othe of the rulers, Preestes and Leuites, and of all Israell, that they sholde do accordynge to this worde: and they sware. And Esdras stode vp before the house of God, and wente in to the chambre of Johanan the sonne of Eliasib. And when he came thyther, he ate no breed, nor dranke water: for he mourned bycause of the transgression of them that hadde bene in captiuitie. III. Esdr. iv.

And they caused a proclamacion be made thorowe oute Juda and Jerusalem, vnto all the chyldre which had ben in captiuitie, that they sholde resorte vnto Jerusalem: And that who so euer came not within thze dayes, accordyng to the determinacion of the rulers and elders, all his substaunce sholde be forfeyt, and he to be put out of the congregacion of the captiue. Then all the men of Juda and Benjamin assembled vnto Jerusalem in thze dayes, that is on the twentye daye of the nynth moneth: and all the people sate in the strete before the house of God, and trembled bycause of theyr synnes, and for the rayne. And Esdras ꝑ preest stode vp and sayd vnto them: * Ye haue transgressed, in that ye haue taken straunge wiues, to make the trespace of Israell yet more: confesse nowe therfore vnto the Lorde God of youre fathers, and do his pleasure, and seuer your selues from the people of the lande, and from the straunge wyues. Then answered all the assemble, and sayd with a loud voyce: Loe it be done as thou hast sayde. But the people are many, and it is a rayny wether, and they can not stande here without, neyther is this a worke of one day or two, for we are many that haue offended in this transgression. Let vs appoynte oure rulers therfore in all the congregacion, ꝑ all they whiche haue taken straunge wyues in oure cityes, maye come at the tyme appoynted, and the elders of euery citye, and theyr Judges with them, tyll the wrathe of our God be tourned awaye from vs for this offence. * Deut. xxi. & Judith. viii.

Then were appoynted Jonathan the sonne of Asahel, and Jahasia, the sonne of Thekua ouer this matter: And Mosollam and Sabathai the Leuite holpe them. And the chyldren of the captyuitie, dyd euen so. And Esdra the Preest, and the auncient heades thorowe the house of theyr fathers, and all that were now rehersed by name, seuered them selues, and sat them them downe on the fiest daye of the tenth moneth to examyn this matter. And in the fyrste daye of the fyrste moneth they made an ende concernynge all the men ꝑ had taken straunge wyues.

And amonge the chyldren of the Preestes there were men founde ꝑ hadde taken straunge wyues, namely amonge the chyldren of Jesua the sonne of Josedec and of his brethren, Maasiah, Eliezer, Jarib and Godoliah. And they gaue their handes there vpon, that they wolde put awaye their wyues: and for their offering to giue a ramme for their trespace. Among the children of Emer, Hanani, and Zabadiah. Among the children of Harim, Maasiah, Eliah, Semeiah, Jehiel, and Ozias. Amonge the children of Phachur, Elioenai, Maasia, Ismael, Nathanael, Jozabed and Elasa. Amonge the Leuites, Jozabed, Semei and Kelaia, which same is Kalithah, Pathahiah, Juda and Eleazar. Amonge the singers: Eliasib. Amonge the porters: Selum, Telem and Uri.

Of Israel. Amonge the children of Pharos: Remiah, Jesiah, Melchia, Miamin, Eleazar, Melchia, and Banaiah. Amonge the children of Elam, Mathania, Zacharye, Jehiel, Abdi, Jerimoth and Elia. Amonge the children of Zethua, Elioenai, Eliasib, Mathania, Jerimoth, Zabad and Aziza. Amonge the children of Bebai, Johana, Hananias, Zabai and Athelai. Amonge the children of Boni: Mosolam, Maluch, Adaia, Jasub, Saal and Jerimoth. Amonge the children of Pahath Moab, Edna, Calai, Banaiah, Maasia, Mathaniah, Bezeleel, Benui, and Manasses. Amonge the children of Harim, Eliezer, Isiah, Melchiah, Semeiah, Simeon, Ben Jamin, Maluch and Samarias. Among the children Hasem, Mathnu, Mathatha, Zabed, Eliphelet, Jeremai, Manasse and Semei. Amonge the children of Beni, Madai, Amram, Uuel, Baneay, Chelai, Badaia, Uania, Maremoth, Eliasib, Mathania, Mathanai, Jaasan, Baui, Benui, Semei, Salamia, Nathan, Adaia, Machnadebai, Sasai, Sarai, Asarael, Selemiah, Samaria, Sellum, Amariah, and Joseph. Amonge the children of Nebo, Jaiel, Mathathiah, Zabed, Zebina, Jedai, Joel and Banaiah. All these had taken straunge wyues. And among ꝑ same wiues there were some that had borne children.

THE BOKE OF NEHEMIAS, OTHERVVYSE CALLED THE SECONDE BOKE OF ESDRAS.

¶ Nehemy butteler to kynge Artaxerxes, prayeth to God for the people.

CAPI. I.

THese are the actes of Nehemie the sonne of Hachalia. It fortuned in the moneth Casleu, in the twenty yere, that I was in the castell at Susa: and Hanani one of my brethren came wt certayne men of Juda, and I asked them howe the Iewes dyd that were delyuered and escaped from the captiuitie, and how it went at Jerusalem. And they sayde vnto me: The remnaunt of the captiuitie are there in the lande in greate myschefe and rebuke. * The walles of Jerusalem are broken downe, and the gates therof are brent with fyre.

When I heerde these wordes, I sate me downe and wepte, and moumed thre dayes, and fasted and prayed before the God of heauen, and sayd: O Lorde God of heuen, thou greate and terrible God, * thou that kepest couenaunt and mercy for them that loue the, and obserue thy commaundementes: Lette thyne eares harken, and thyne eyes be open, that thou mayste heare the prayer of thy seruaunt, whiche I praye nowe before the, daye and nyght, for the chyldren of Israel thy seruauntes, and knowlege the synnes of the chyldren of Israell, whiche we haue committed agaynst the. And I and my fathers house haue synned also. We haue bene corrupte vnto the, in that we haue not kepte the commaundementes, statutes and lawes, whiche thou commaundedst thy seruaunte Moses. Yet call to remembraunce the worde that thou commaundedst thy seruaunt Moses, and saydest: Yf ye transgresse, I wyll scatter you abrode amonge the nacyons. But yf ye tourne vnto me, and kepe my commaundementes and do them: thoughe ye were caste out vnto the vttermoll parte of heuen, yet wyll I gather you thence, and bringe you euen vnto the place that I haue chosen for my name, to dwelle there. They are thy seruauntes, and thy people, whome thou haste delyuered thorowe thy greate power, and stronge hande. O Lorde, let thyne eares harken to the prayer of thy seruaunte, and the prayer of thy seruauntes, whose delyte is to feare thy name, and let thy seruaunt prospere this daye, and graunte hym mercye in the syghte of this man: for I was the kynges butler.

¶ After Nehemy had obtayned letters of Artaxerxes, he cometh to Jerusalem, and buildeth the walle.

CAP. II.

IN the moneth of Nisan, in the .xx. yere of kynge Artaxerxes, when the wine stode before him, I toke vp the wine and gaue it vnto the kynge, and I was heuye in his presence. Then sayde the kynge vnto me: why lokest thou so sadly? Thou art not sycke, this is not without cause, but there is somwhat not well in thyne herte. And I was sore afrayde & sayde vnto the kynge: God saue the kynges lyfe for euer: sholde I not loke sadly? the citye of my fathers burial lieth waste, and the gates therof are consumed with fire. Then sayd the king vnto me: what is thy request? the made I my prayer to the God of heuen, and said vnto the kyng: yf it please the kyng, and if thy seruaunt be fauoured in thy syght: I beseche the sende me in to Juda, vnto the city of my fathers burial, that I may buylde it. And the kynge said vnto me, and also the quene that sate by him: how longe shall thy iourney continue, & when wilt thou come again? And it pleased the king to sende me, and I set him a tyme, and sayd vnto the kyng: yf it please the kyng, let him giue me letters to the capitaynes beyonde the water, that they may conueye me ouer, til I come in to Juda: and letters vnto Asaph keper of ꝑ kings wod, that he may gyue me wod for beames to the gates of the temple, for the towres of the house, for the walles of the city, and for the house that I shal entre in to. And the kyng gaue me accordyng to the good hande of God vpon me. And when I came to the capitaynes beyonde the water, I deliuered them the kynges letters. And the kynge had sent capitaynes and horsemen with me. But whē Sanaballat the Horonite, and Tobiah the seruaunt of the Ammonites herde this, it greued thē sore, that there was come a man which sought ꝑ welth of the chyldren of Israel. And when I came to Jerusalem, and had ben there thre dayes, I gat me vp in the night season, and a few men with me: for I tolde no man what God had gyuē me in myne hert to do at Jerusalem, and there was not one beast with me, saue that I rode vpon. And I rode by night vnto valey gate before the dragon well, and to the donge gate, & considered the walles of Jerusalem that were broken downe, and the gates therof consumed with the fyre. And I went ouer vnto the well gate, and to the kinges condite, and there was no rowme for my beast, that it could go vnder me. Then went I on in the night by the broke side, and considered the wall, and turned backe and came home agayne to valeye gate.

And the rulers knewe not wyther I went, or what I dyd, for hither to had I not told ꝑ Jewes and the preestes, the counsellers and the rulers, & the other that laboured in the worke. And I sayd vnto them: ye se the misereye that we are in, how Jerusalem lyeth waste, & howe the gates therof are brent with fyre, come let vs buyld vp the walles of Jerusalem, that we be no more a repproche. And I told them of the good good hande of my God, whiche was vpon me: and the kynges wordes that he had spoken vn to me. And they said: then let vs arise & buyld: and their handes were strēgthed to good. But when Sanaballat the Horonite, and Tobias the seruaunt of the Ammonites, and Gesem ỹ Arabian herde this, they laughed vs to scorne, and despised vs and said: what is this that ye do? Wyll ye fal away agayne from the king? Then answered I them, and said: the God of heuē it is that causeth vs to prospere: and we be his seruauntes Let vs arise and buylde. As for you, ye haue no porcion nor right nor remēbraunce in Jerusalem.

CAPI. III.

A AND Eliasib the high preest gat him vp wt his brethren the preestes, and buylded the shepegate. They repayred it, & sette vp the wies of it: euen vnto the tower Meah repayred they it, namely vnto the * tower of Hananeel. Nexte vnto him buylded the men of Jericho. And beside him buylded Zachur the sonne of Amri. But the fyshgate dyd the chyldren of Asanah buylde, they couered it, and set on the dores lockes and barres of it. Nexte vnto him buylded Marimoth the sonne of Vrias the sonne of Hakoz. Nexte vnto him buylded Mesolam the sonne of Barachiah the sonne of Mesesabeel. Next vnto him buylded Sadoc ỹ son of Baana. Next vnto him buylded they of Thekua. But their great mē put not their neckes to the seruice of their Lorde.

The oldegate buylded Joiada the sonne of Pasah, and Mosolam the sonne of Besodiah they couered it, and sette on the wozes, lockes, and barres. Nexte vnto them buylded Malatiah of Gabaon, and Jadon of Merano, men of Gabaon, and of Maspha for the seate of the capitayne on this syde the water. Nexte vnto him buylded Vsiel the sonne of Harhaiah the goldsmyth. Nexte vnto hym buylded Hananiah the Apotecarys sonne, and they repayred Jerusalem vnto the brode wall. Nexte vnto him buylded Raphaiah the sonne of Hur the ruler of the halfe quarter of Jerusalē. Next vnto him buylded Jedaiah the sonne of Harumaph ouer agaynst his house. Next vnto him buylded Hatus the sonne of Hasabonaiah. But Melchia the sonne of Harim, and Hasub the son of Pahath Moab buylded the other pece, and the towre beside the fornace. Nexte vnto him buylded Sellum the sonne of Balohes the ruler of the halfe quarter of Jerusalem, and his daughters.

The valey gate buylded Hanun, and the cityzens of Zanoah. They buylded it, and set on the dores, lockes and barres, and a thousande cubites on the walle, vnto dounggate. But dounggate buylded Melchiah the sonne of Rechab the ruler of the fourth parte of the vnnesarbes: he buylded it, and set on the wozes, lockes and barres therof. But the welligate buylded Sellum the sonne of Cholhasah, the ruler of the fourth part of Maspha. He buylded it, and couered it, and set on the dozes, lockes, and barres, and the wall vnto the pole of Siloah by the kynges garden, vnto steppes goo downe frome the cuye of Dauid. After him buylded Nehemias the sonne of Asbuk, the ruler of the halfe quarter of Bethzur vntyll the other lyde ouer agaynste the sepulchres of Dauid, and the pole Asuta, and vnto the house of the myghtye.

After him buylded the Leuites, Rehum the sonne of Bani. Next vnto him buylded Hasabiah the ruler of the halfe quarter of Keila in his quarter. After him buylded their brethren, Bauai the sonne of Hanadad, the ruler of the halfe qnarter of Keilah. After him buylded Ezer the sonne of Josua the ruler of Maspha, the other pece harde ouer agaynste the harnesse corner. After him buylded Baruch the sonne of Zabai the other pece worshyppfully & costly, from the corner vnto the dore of ỹ house of Eliasib the hyghe preest. After him buylded Marimuth the sonne of Urias the son of Hacos the other pece, from the doze of the house of Eliasib, euen as long as the house of Eliasib extēded. After him buylded the preestes, the men of the countrey. After him buylded Benjamin and Hasub our against their house. After them Asariah the son of Maasiah the son of Ananiah nexte vnto his house. After him buylded Benui the sonne of Henadad, the other peace frome the house of Asariah, vnto the turnynge, and vnto the corner. After him buylded Phalel the sonne of Vsai ouer against the corner and the hye towze, whiche lyeth out ouer from the kynges house, beside the coute of the prison. After him Phadaiah the sonne of Pharos (as for the Nethinims they dwelte in Ophel, vnto the water gate, towarde ỹ East where the towre lyeth oute.) After him buylded they of Thekua the other pece ouer against the great towre that lyeth outwarde, and vnto the wall of * Ophel.

¶ The buyldynge of Jerusalem is hyndred and let, but the Jewes buylde it beinge redy harneysed: lest theyr enemyes shulde muade them.

CAPI. IIII.

WHen Sanaballat herde that we buylded the wall, he was wroth, and toke great indignacion, and mocked the Jewes, and sayd before his brethren and the hoste of Samaria;

maria what do the weake Jewes? shall they be thus suffered? shall they offre? shall they perfourme it in one daye? shall they make the stones pole agayne that are brought to duste and dyrte? And Tobias the Ammonite beside him sayd: let them buylde on, yf a fore go vp he shall breake downe their stony wall. Heare O thou ouer God how we are despised, turne their shame vpon their owne heed, that thou mayste gyue them ouer in to despisynge in the lande of their captiuitie. Couer not their wickednesse, and put not oute their synne frome thy presence: for they haue prouoked the buylders. Yet buylded we the walle, and ioyned it hole together vnto the halfe heygthe. And the people were well mynded to laboure. But when Sanaballat and Tobias, and the Arabians, and Ammonites, and Asdodites herde that the walles of Jerusalem were made vp, and that they had begon to stoppe vp the gappes, they were very wrothe, and conspyred all together to come and fyght against Jerusalem, and to make an hynderaunce therin. Nerthelesse we made our prayer vnto our God and set watchemen vpon the walle daye and nyght ouer agaynst them. And Juda sayd: the strength of the bearers is to feble, and there is to moche dust, we are not able to buylde vp the wall. And our aduersaryes thought: they shal not knowe neither se, tyll we come in the myddes amonge them, and slee them, and hinder the wozke. But when the Jewes ỹ dwelte beside them came out of all the places where they dwelte aboute vs, and tolde vs as good as ten tymes/ then set I the people after their kynredes with their swerdes, speres and bowes benethe in the lowe places behynde the wall, and loked, and gat me vp, and sayde vnto the chiefe men and rulers, and to the other people: be not ye afrayde of them, * thynke vpon the greate Lorde, whiche oughte to be feared, and fyght for youre brethren, sonnes, doughters, wyues, and houses. Nouertheles when our ennemyes herde that we had goten worde of it, God brought their counsell to nought, and we turned all agayne to the wall euery one vnto his labour. And from that time forthe it came to passe, that the halfe parte of the ponge men dyd the laboure, and the other halfe parte helde the speares, shyldes, bowes, and brestplates: and the rulers stode behynde all the house of Juda, whiche buylded on the walle, and bare burthens frome those that laded them. With one hande dyd they the worke, and with the other helde they their weapen. And euerye one that buylded, hadde his swerde gyrde by his syde, and so buylded they/ and the trompetters stode beside me. And I sayde vnto the pyncipall men and rulers, and to the other people: the wozke is greate and large, and we are diuided vpon the walle one farre from an other. Loke in what place nowe ye heare the noyse of the trompet, resorte ye thither vnto vs. * Our God shal fight for vs, and we wyll be labourynge in the wozke. And the halfe parte of them helde the speares from the mornynge sprynge, tyll the starres came forthe. And at the same tyme sayd I vnto the people: euerye one abyde with his seruaunte at Jerusalem, that in the nyghte season, we maye gyue attendaunce to the watche, and to laboure on the daye tyme. Surely I and my brethren and my seruauntes, and the men of the watche behynde me, we put neuer of our clothes, so moch as to washe our selues.

¶ The people are vexed with hōger. Nehemias forbiddeth vsurye. He requyreth not the lyuynge of a capitayne.

CAPI. V.

A AND there arose a great complaint of the people and of their wyues against their brethren ỹ Jewes. And there were some that sayd: our sonnes and oure doughters are to many, let vs take corne for them and eate, that we maye lyue. Some sayd: let vs set our landes, vineyardes and houses to pledge, and take vp corne in the derth. But some sayd: let vs borowe moneye of the kynges tribute for our landes and vineyardes. Now are our brethrens bodyes as our owne bodyes, and their children as our children: elles wolde we subdue our sonnes and doughters vnto bondage, and some of oure doughters are subdued alredye, and no strength is there in our handes, and other men shall haue oure landes and vineyardes.

But when I herde their complaynte and suche wordes, it displeased me sore, and I reuolued so in my mynde; that I rebuked the heades & rulers, and sayd vnto them: * wyll ye requyre vsurye one of an other? And I brought a great congregacion agaynste them, and sayd vnto them: we (after our habilitie) haue bought our brethren the Jewes, whiche were solde vnto the Paninies. And wyll ye sell youre brethren, whome ye haue bought vnto vs? Then helde they their peace, and coulde fynde nothynge to answere.

And I sayde: It is not good that ye woughte ye not to walke in the feare of God, because of the rebuke of the heythen oure ennemyes? I and my brethren, and my seruauntes haue lent them money and corne: but as for vsurye, let vs leaue it. Therfore this same daye, se ye restore them their landes agayne, their vineyardes, oyle gardens, and houses, yea, the hundred parte of the money, of the corne, wyne, and oyle, that ye haue wonne of them. Then sayd they: we wyll restore them agayne, and wyll requyre nothynge of them, and wyl do as thou hast spoken. And I called the preestes, & toke an othe of them, that they sholde do so. And I shoke my lappe and sayde: God shake out euery man after the same maner frome his house and laboure, that mayntayneth not this worde: euen thus be he shaken out, and voyde. And all the congregacion sayd, Amen: and praysed the Lorde. And ỹ people dyd so. to the people, and hadde taken of them breed and wyne, and fourty sicles of syluer: yea and their seruauntes hadde oppressed the people.
But so did not I, and that because of the feare of God. I laboured also in the worke vpō the walle, and boughte no lande. And all my ser-uautes came thyther together vnto the worke Moreouer there were at my table an hundred and fyftye of the Iewes and rulers, whiche came vnto me from the Panyms that are a-boute vs, and there was prepared me daply an oxe, and sixe chosen sheepe and byrdes, and euer ones in ten dayes a greate quantite of wyne.

A Nd when Sanabalat, Tobiah, and Ge sem the Arabian, and the other of oure ennemyes herd that I had buylded the wall, and that there were no moo breakes therin (how be it at the same tyme I had not hanged the wyes vpon the gates) Sanabalat and Gesem sente vnto me, sayinge: come and let vs mete togyther in the villages vpon the playne of the citye Ono. Neuertheselle they thoughte to woo me euyll. Notwithstandynge
I sent mellengers vnto them, sayinge: I haue
a great busynelle to w, I can not come downe.
The worke sholde stande styl yf I were slacke and came downe to you. How be it they sente vnto me as good as foure tymes after ꝑ same manor. And I gaue the same answere. Then E sente Sanabalat his seruaunte vnto me the fyfth tyme, with an open letter in his hande, wherin was wrytten: it was tolde the Hey-then, and Gesem hathe sayde it, that thou and the Iewes thynke to rebell: for the whiche cause thou buyldest the walle, and wylte be their kyng in these maters, and hast ordeyned
the Prophetes to preache of the at Jerusalem, and to saye he is kyng of Juda. Now shal this come to the kinges eares: come now therfore, & let vs take hur counsel togyther. Neuerthelesse I sent vnto him, saying: there is no suche thynge done as thou sayest: thou haste fay-ned it out of thyne owne herte. For they were all mynded to make vs afrayde, and thought:
they shall withdrawe their handes frome the worke, that they shall not laboure. How be it F I strengthed my hande the more. And I came vnto the house of Semeiah the sonne of Melatiah the son of Mehetabeel, and he had shut him selfe within, and said: let vs come togy-ther in to the house of God, euen in to the mid-des of the temple, and shut the wyes of the tem ple: for they wyll come to sle the, yea euen in the night will they come to put ꝑ to deth. But I said: sholde any suche man as I flee? Who is that being as I am, that wil go in to the temple to saue his lyfe? I wyll not go in. For I perceyued ꝑ God had not sent him: Yet hath he prophesie vpon me, neuertheselle Tobias & Sanabalat had hyred him for money. Therefore toke he the money, that thoughe fearr I sholde so do, and synne: that they might haue an euil reaporte of me, to blaspheme me. Re-G member God thynke thou vpon Tobias and Sanabalat, according vnto these their workes, & of the prophet Noadiah, and of the other prophetes, that would haue put me in feare. And thus was fynyshed on the fyue and twentye dye
of the moneth Elul, in two and fiftye dayes.
And when all our ennemyes herde therof, all the Heythen that were about vs, were afrayde and their courage fayled them: for they per-ceyued that this worke came of God. And in the same tyme were there manye of the chefe of Juda, whose letters wente vnto Tobias, & from Tobias vnto them (for there were many in Juda ꝑ were sworne vnto him: for he was the sonne in lawe of Sechaniah, the sonne of Arah, and his sonne Johanan had the doughe-ter of Mosolam the sonne of Barachiah, and they spake good of him before me and tolde him my wordes) and Tobias sente letters, to put me in feare.

¶ After the wall ones buylded the watche is ap-poynted. They that returned frome the captyuyte are nombred.

CAPI. VII

When we hadde buylded the wall I hanged on the wores, and the porters, syn-gers, & Leuites were appoynted. And I commaunded my brother Hanani and Hana-niah the ruler of the palace at Jerusalem (for he was a faythful man, and feared God more then dyd many other,) And I sayd vnto them:
let not the gates of Jerusalem be opened tyl
the sonne be hote. And whyle they are yet stan dynge in the watche the dores shal be shut and barred. And there were certayne citezins of Jerusalem appoynted to be watchemen, euery one in his watche, and aboute his house. And the citye, was large of rowme and greate, but the people were few therin, & the houses were not buylded.

And my God dyd put in my herte that I gathered togyther the pryncipall men, and the people to nombre them, and I founde a register of the nombre of them, whiche came vp afore oute of the captiuite: and founde wrytten therin: ✳ these are the sonnes of the lande that wente vp from the captiuite of the cap-inge awaye (whom Nabuchodonozor the king of Babilon had broughte awaye) and came a-gayne to Jerusalem and Juda, euery one vnto his citye, whiche came with Zorobabel: Jesua, Nehemias, Asariah, Raamiah, Nahamani, Mardochee, Belsan, Mesparath, Begual, Nahum, and Baanah.

im, the children of Amon. All the Nethinims
& the children of Salomons seruauntes were thre hundred, nyntye and two.

And these wente vp also of Thel Mela, Thel Harsa, Cherub, Adon and Emer: but they coulde not shewe their fathers house,
nor their seed, whether they were of Israell.
The chyldren of Dalaiah, the children of To-bia, and the chyldren of Necoda, sixe hundred and two and fourtye. And of the preestes the chyldren of Habaiah: the chyldren of Hacos, the chyldren of Berzilai, whiche toke one of the doughters of Berzilai the Galaadyte to wyfe, and was named after their name. These soughte the register of their pedigrue, & when they founde it not, they were put frome the Preesthode. And Hathirsatha sayd vnto them, that they shoulde not eate of the moost holye, tyll there came vp a Preest with the light and perfectnelle,

The hole congregacion as one man, was two and fourtye thousande, thre hundred and thre score, beside their seruauntes and mayres, of whome there were seuen thousande, three hundred and seuen and thirtye. And they had two hundred and seuen and fourtye syngynge

A When the seuen moneth drewe nye, and the chyldren of Israel were in theyr cytyes, all the people gathered togyther, as one man, vpon the strete before the water gate, and sayde vnto Esdras the scrybe, that he sholde fetche the boke of the lawe of Moses, whiche the Lorde commaunded to Israel. * And Esdras the Preest broughte the lawe before the congregacion, bothe of men and women, and of all that coulde vnderstande it, vpon the fyrste daye of the seuenth moneth, and redde therin in the streate that is before water gate (frome the mornynge vntyll the noone daye) before men and women, and suche as coulde vnderstande it: and the eares of all the people were inclyned vnto the boke of the lawe. And Esdras the scrybe stode vpon an hyghe pulpyt of wodde, whiche they hadde made for the preachynge, and besyde him stode Mathathiah, Sema, Ananiah, Vriah, Helkiah, and Maaseiah on his ryghte hande: and on his lefte hande stode Phadaiah, Misael, Melchiah, Hasum, Hasbadanah, Zacharye and Mosolam.

The boke of the lawe is red to the people.

B And Esdras opened the boke before all the people, for he stode aboue all the people. And when he opened it, all the people stode vp. And Esdras praysed the Lorde the great God. And all the people answered: Amen, Amen / with theyr handes vp, and bowed them selues, and worshipped the Lorde with their faces to the grounde. And Iesua, Baani, Serabiah, Iamin, Acuba, Sebathai, Hodaiah, Maasiah, Celita, Azariah, Iosabed, Hanan, Phalaiah, and the Leuites caused the people to giue hede vnto the law, and the people stode in their place. And they red in the boke of the lawe of God distinctly and playnely, so that men vnderstode the thynge that was redde. And Nehemias (whiche is Hathirsatha) and Esdras the preest and the scrybe, and the Leuites that caused the people to take hede, sayde vnto all the people: this daye is holye vnto the Lorde your God: be not ye sorye therfore, and wepe not. For al the people wepte when they herde the wordes of the lawe.

C Therfore sayde he vnto them: goo youre waye, and eate the fat, and drynke the swete / and sende parte vnto them also that haue not prepared them selues, for this daye is holy vnto oure Lorde, be not you sorye therfore: for the ioye of the Lorde is youre strengthe. And the Leuites stylled the people, and sayd: hold youre peace, for the daye is holye, vexe not ye your selues. And al the people went their way to eate and drynke, and sende part vnto other, and to make greate myrthe, bicause they hadde vnderstande the wordes that were declared vnto them.

And on the nexte daye assembled the chiefe fathers amonge all the people and the Preestes and Leuites, vnto Esdras the scrybe, that he shoulde teache theym the wordes of the lawe. And they founde wrytten in the lawe * how the Lorde hadde commaunded by Moses, that the chyldren of Israel shoulde dwell in boothes in the feast of the seuenth moneth. And so they caused it be declared and proclaymed, in all their cityes, and at Ierusalem, sayinge: goo vp vnto the mounte and fetche Olyue braunches, Pyne braunches, Myrre braunches, Palme braunches, and braunches of thycke trees, to make boothes, as it is wrytten. D

And the people went vp and fet, and made them boothes, euerye one vpon the rofe of his house, and in their courtes, and in the courtes of the house of God, and in the strete by water gate, and in the strete by the gate Ephraim. And all the congregacion of theym that were come agayne oute of the captiuitie, made boothes, and dwelte therin: for sythens the tyme of Iosua the sonne of Nun vnto this daye, had not the chyldren of Israell done so, and there was verye greate gladnesse. And euerye daye frome the fyrst daye vnto the laste, redde he in the boke of the lawe of God. And the seuen dayes helde they the feaste, and on the eyghte daye they made a gatherynge, accordynge to the maner.

¶ The people repent and forsake theyr straunge wiues. Esdras receyteth the benefytes of God and the synnes of the people.

CAPI. IX.

In the foure and twentye daye of this moneth, came the chyldren of Israel togyther with * fastynge and sacke clothes, and erth vpon them, and separated the seed of Israell from all the straunge chyldren, and stode and knowleged their synnes, and the wyckednesses of their fathers, and stode vp in their place, and redde in the boke of the lawe of the Lorde theyr God foure tymes on the daye, and they knowleged, and worshypped the Lorde their God foure tymes on the daye. And the Leuites stode on hygh, namelye Iesua, Bani, Cadmiel, Sabaniah, Buni, Sarebiah, Bani and Chanani, and cryed loude vnto the Lorde their God. And the Leuites, Iesua, Cadmiel, Bani, Hasabniah, Serebiah, Hodiah, Sebaniah, Phathahiah, sayd: stande vp, prayse the Lord your God for euer: and let thankes be geuen vnto the name of thy glorye, whiche excelleth all thankesgyuynge and prayse. Lorde, thou alone hast made heuen, and the heuen of all heuens, with all their hoste, the earthe and al that is therin, the see and all that is therin: thou geuest lyfe vnto all, and the hoste of heuen bowe them selues vnto the. Thou art the Lorde God, that haste chosen Abram, and broughtest him out of * Vr in Chaldea, * and calledst him Abraham, and foundest his herte faythfull before the, * and madest a couenaunt with him to gyue vnto his seed the land of the Cananites, Hethites, Amorites, Pherezites, Iebusites, and Gergesites, and hast made good thy wordes: for thou arte ryghtous, * and hast consydered the miserye of our fathers in Egypte, and herde their complaynt by the reed see / and shewed tokens and wonders vpon Pharao, and on all his seruauntes, and on all the people of his land: for thou knewest that they were presumptuous and cruell agaynste theym, and so madest thou the name as it is this daye. And the redde see dyddest thou deuyde in sonder before them, so that they wente thorowe the myddes of the see drye shoed: and their persecuters threwest thou in to the depe as a stone, in the myghtye waters, and leddest them on the daye tyme in a cloudye pyller, and on the nyghte season in a pyller of fyre, to shewe them lyghte in the waye that they went.

E * Thou camest downe also vpon mounte Sinai, and spakest vnto them frome heuen, and gauest them ryghte iudgementes, true lawes, good commaundementes and statutes, and declaredst vnto them thy holye Saboth, and commaundedst them preceptes, ordinaunces, and lawes, by Moses thy seruaunt: and * gauest them breed frome heauen when they were hungrye, and * broughtest forthe water for them oute of the rocke when they were thyrstye: and promysedst them that they sholde go in and take possession of the lande, ouer which thou haddest lyfte vp thyne hande for to gyue them.

But oure fathers were proude and hardnecked, so that they folowed not thy commaundementes, and refused to heare, and were not myndeful of the wonders that thou dyddest for theym: but became sturdye and headye, in so moche that they tourned backe to their bondage in their disobedience. But thou my God forgauest, and wast gracious, mercyfull, pacyent, and of greate goodnesse, and forsokest them not. * And thoughe they made a moulten calfe, (and sayd: this is thy God that broughte the oute of the lande of Egypte) and dyd greate blasphemyes, yet forsokest thou them not in the wyldernesse, accordyng to thy greate mercy. * And the cloudye pyller departed not from them on the day tyme to leade them the waye, neyther the pyller of fyre in the night season, to shewe them light in the way that they went.

And thou gauest theym thy good spirite to enforme them, * and withheldest not thy Manna frome theyr mouthe, * and gauest them water when they were thyrstye. Fourty yeres longe madest thou prouysion for theym in the wyldernesse, so that they lacked nothynge * their clothes waxed not olde, and their fete swelled not. And thou gauest them kyngdomes and nacions, and partedst theym accordynge to their porcions, so that they possessed * the lande of Sehon kynge of Hesebon, and the lande of Og the kynge of Basan. And their chyldren multiplyedst thou as the sterres of heauen, and broughtest them in to the lande wherof thou haddest spoken vnto their fathers, that they sholde go in to it, and haue it in possession.

And the chyldren wente in, and possessed the lande, * and thou subduedst before them the inhabiters of the lande, euen the Cananites, and gauest them in to their hande, and theyr kynges and the people of the lande, that they myghte do with them what they wolde. And they wanne theyr stronge cityes, and a fatte lande, and toke possession of houses that were full of all maner goodes, welles dygged oute, vyneyardes, oyle gardens, and manye fruteful trees: and they ate and were fylled, and became fat, and lyued in welthe thorowe thy greate goodnesse. Neuerthelesse they were disobedient, and rebelled agaynste the, and cast thy lawe behynde their backes, and slewe thy Prophetes (whiche exhorted them so earnestly that they sholde conuerte vnto the) and dyd great blasphemyes. Therfore gauest thou them ouer in to the hande of their enemyes that vexed them.

And in the tyme of theyr trouble they cryed vnto the, and thou herdest them from heuen, and thorowe thy greate mercye, thou gauest them sauiours, whiche helped them out of the hande of their enemies. But when they came to reste, they tourned backe agayne to do euyll before the: therfore leftest thou them in the hande of their enemies, so that they had the dominion ouer them. So they conuerted, & cried vnto the, and thou herdest them from heuen, and many tymes hast thou delyuered them accordynge to thy great mercye, and testifiedst vnto them, that they sholde turne agayne vnto thy lawe. K

Notwithstandynge they were proude, and harkened not vnto thy commaundementes, but synned in thy lawes, (* whiche a man shulde do, and lyue in them) and tourned the shoulder awaye, and were styffenecked, & wold not heare. And manye yeres dyddest thou forbeare them, and diddest witnesse vnto them thorowe thy spirite, euen by the offyce of thy Prophetes, and yet wolde they not heare. Therfore gauest thou them in to the hande of the nacions in the landes. But for thy greate mercyes sake, thou hast not vtterly consumed them, neither forsaken them: for thou art a gracious and mercyfull God.

Leuitic. xxv. a. Deuter. xv. a. let the seuenth yere be free concernyng all maner of charge.

C And we decreed a statute vpon oure selues, to gyue yerely the thyrde parte of a sycle to the ministracion in the house of oure God, namely to the shewbreed, to the dayly meate offerynge, to the dayly burntofferyng of the Sabothes, of the new mones and feall dayes, and to the thinges that were sanctified, and to the synne offerynges, to reconcyle Israel withall, and to all the busynesse in the house of our God.

And we caste the lot amonge the preestes, Leuites, and the people, for offeryng of the wod to be brought in to the house of our God from yere to yere, after the houses of oure fathers, that it myght be brent at tymes appoynted, vpon the aulter of the Lorde our God, as it is wrytten in the lawe: and yerely to bryng D the firstborne of our land, and the firstborne of our frutes of all trees, yere by yere, vnto the house of the Lorde: and the firstborne of oure sonnes, and of our cattell, as it is wrytten in the lawe: and the firstborne of oure oxen and of our shepe, that we sholde brynge all this to the house of oure God, vnto the preestes that minister in y house of oure God: and that we sholde bryng the firstborne of our meates, and of oure drynkes, and the frutes of all maner trees, of wyne also and of oyle, vnto the preestes to the chestes of the house of oure God. And the tithes of our lande vnto the Leuites, that the Leuites might haue the tithes in all cities of our ministracion.

And the Preeste the sonne of Aaron shall with the Leuites haue also of the tythes of the Leuites, so that the Leuites shall bynge vp the tithes of their tithes vnto the house of oure God, to the chestes in the treasure house. For the chyldren of Israel and the children of Leui shall bynge vp the firste frutes of the corne, wyne and oyle vnto the chestes. And there shall be the vesselles of the sanctuarye, and the preestes that minister, and the porters and syngers, that we forsake not the house of our God.

CAP. XI.

AND the rulers of the people dwelte at A Jerusalem. But the other people caste lottes therfore, to that among ten one parte went to Jerusalem in to the holy cyty to dwell, and nyne partes in the cities. And the people thanked al the men that were willing to dwell at Jerusalem.

These are the heades of the lande that dwelte in Jerusalem, and in the cities of Juda. And euerye one dwelt in his possession, and in theyr cityes of Israell, the Preestes, Leuites, the Nethinims, and the chyldren of Salomons seruauntes. And at Jerusalem dwelt certayne of the chyldren of Juda and of Ben Jamin.

Of the chyldren of Juda: Athaiah the sonne of Usiah the sonne of Zacharye, the sonne of Amariah, the sonne of Saphatiah, the sonne of Mahalaleel, of the chyldren of Phares. And Maasiah the sonne of Baruch, the sonne of Chol Hose, the sonne Hasaia, the sonne of Adaia, the sonne of Joiarib, the sonne of Zachary, the sonne of Siloni. All the chyldren of Phares that dwelte at Jerusalem, were foure hundred thre score and eyght valiaunt men.

These are the chyldren of Ben Jamin: Hallu the sonne of Mesullam, the sonne of Joed, the sonne of Phadaia, the sonne of Colaiah, the sonne of Maasiah, the sonne of Ithiel, the sonne of Isaiah. And after him Abai, Sellai, & nyne hundred and eyghte and twentye. And Joel the sonne of Zechri had the ouersyghte of them: & Juda the sonne of Senuah ouer y seconde parte of the cytye.

Of the preestes there dwelte: Idaia the sonne of Joiarib, Jachin, Saraiah the sonne of Helkia the sonne of Mosolam, y sonne of Zadoc, the sonne of Meraioth, the sonne of Ahitob, was prince in the house of God, and his brethren that perfourmed the wozke in the house: of whom there were eyghte hundred and two and twentye. And Adaiah the sonne of Jeroham, the sonne of Phalaliel, the sonne of Amzi, the sonne of Zacharye, the sonne of Phashur, the sonne of Melchiah & his brethren, chiefe amonge the fathers: of whom there were two hundred and two and forty. And Amasai the son of Asarael the son of Ahasai the sonne of Mosolamoth, the son of Emer: & his brethren were valiaunt men of whome there were an hundred and. xxviij. And their ouerseer was Zabdiel the sonne of Hagdolim.

E Of the Leuites: Semeiah the sonne of Hasub, the sonne of Azrikam, the sonne of Hasabiah the sonne of Boni: and Sabathai and Josabad of the chiefe of the Leuites, in y outwarde busynes of the house of God. And Mathaniah the sonne of Micha, the son of Zabdi, the sonne of Asaph, which was the principal to begyn the thankesgyuyng vnto prayer. And Bakbukiah the seconde amonge his brethren, and Abda the sonne of Sammua, the sonne of Galal, the sonne of Idithun. All y Leuites in the holy cytie were twoo hundred lxxiiij. And the porters Acub and Talmon, & their brethren that kept the portes, were an hundred leuenty & two. The rest of Israel, the preestes and Leuites, were in al the cyties of Juda, euery one in his inheritaunce. And the Nethinims dwelt in Ophel: and Ziha & Gispha belonged vnto the Nethinims. The ouerseer of the Leuites at Jerusalē, was Usi the sonne of Baani, the sonne of Hasabia, the son of Mathania, the sonne of Micha.

Of the childre of Asaph there were singers aboute the ministery in the house of God: for it was the kynges cōmaundement concerning them, that the singers shulde teache faithfully euery daye as was accordinge.

And Pathaia the sonne of Meselsabel of y children of Zarah the sonne of Juda next the kynge in all matters concernynge the people and their villages, throwow out all their regions. And y children of Juda that were without in the townes of their landē, dwelte some at Kariath Arbe, and in the villages therof, and at Dibon, and in the villages therof: and at Cabzeel, and in the villages therof: and at Jesua, Molada, Bethphalet, Hazersual, Bersabe and in their villages: and at Siklag & Meconah, and in their villages: And at Enimon, Zarah, Jermuth, Zanoah, Odilā and in their villages: At Lachis, and in the fields therof: At Azekah, and in the villages therof: and dwelt from Bersabe vnto the valley of Hennom.

The children of Ben Jamin of Gaba, dwelt at Machmas, Aia, Bethel and in their villages. And at Anathoth, Nob, Ananiah, Hazor, Ramah, Gethaim, Hadid, Zeboim, Nabalath, Lod, Ono and in the carpenters valley. And certayne of the Leuites that had porcions in Juda, dwelt in Ben Jamin.

¶ The preestes and Leuites which came with Zorobabel to Jerusalem are numbred: and the wall is dedycate.

CAPI. XII.

THese are the preestes and Leuites that A went vp with Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel and with Jesua: Saraiah, Jeremy, Esdras, Amariah, Melich, Hatus, Sechaniah, Rehum, Meremoth. Abi, Genthoi, Abiah, Miamin, Maadia, Belga, Semaiah, Joiarib, Idaia, Salu, Amok, Helkia, and Jadaiah. These were the heades among the preestes and their brethren in the tyme of Jesua. The Leuites were these: Jesua, Bennui, Cadmiel, Sarabiah, Juda and Mathaniah ouer the office of thankesgyuinge, they & their brethren: Bacbukiah and Uni and their brethren, were about them in the watches.

Jesua begat Joakim. Joakim begat Eliasib. Eliasib begat Joiada. Joiada begat Jonathan. Jonathan begat Jadua. And in the tyme of Joakim were these the chiefe fathers amonge the Preestes: vnder Saraiah, Maraiah, vnder Jeremy, Hananiah: vnder Esdras Mosolam: vnder Amariah, Joanan: vnder Melico, Jonathan: vnder Sebaniah, Joseph vnder Harim, Edna: vnder Maraioth, Helcai: vnder Adia, Zachary, vnder Genthon, Mosolam: vnder Abia, Zechri: vnder Miniamin and Moadia, Peltai: vnder Belga, Samua: vnder Semeiah, Jonathan: vnder Joiarib, Mathnai: vnder Jadaiah, Usi: vnder Selai, Kelai: vnder Amok, Eber: vnder Helkia, Hasabiah: vnder Jadaiah, Nathanael.

And in the tyme of Eliasib. Joiada, Johanan and Jadua, were the chief fathers amōg the Leuites, and the preestes written vnder y raygne of Darius the Persian. The children of Leui the principall fathers were writen in the Chronycles, vntyll the tyme of Jonathā the sonne of Eliasib. And these were the chief amonge the Leuites, Hasabiah, Serebiah & Jesua the sonne of Cadmiel, and their brethrē ouer against them, to gyue prayse and thākes accoyding as Dauid the man of God had ordeyned it, one watche ouer against an other. Mathania, Balbukiah, Obadiah, Mosolam Talmon and Abub were porters in the watche at the thresholdes of y gates. These were in the tyme of Joakim the sonne of Jesua the sonne of Josedec, and in the tyme of Nehemi as the Capitayne and of the prest Esdras the scribe.

And in the dedication of the wall at Jerusalem, were the Leuites sought out of al their B places, that they myght be brought to Jerusalem, to kepe the dedication and gladnesse, w thankesgyuynges, with singynge with Cymbales, Psalteries and Harpes. And the children of the singers gathered them selues together frome the playne countrey about Jerusalē salem, and frome the villages of Nethophathi, and from the house of Galgal, and oute of the feldes of Geba and Asmaueth: for the singers had buylded them villages about Jerusalem. And the preistes and Leuites purified them selues, and cleused the people, the gates and the wall.

And I caused the princes of Juda to goo vp vpon the wall, and appoynted twoo greate queers of thankesgeuynge, whiche went on the ryght hande of the wall towarde the Donge gate, and after them went Hosaiah, and half of the princes of Juda, and Azaria, Esdras, Mosolom, Juda, Ben Jamin, Semeiah and Jeremy: and certayne of the preistes childre with trompettes, namely Zachary the sonne of Jonathan, the sonne of Semeiah, the son of Mathaniah, the sonne of Michaiah, the son of Zeeur, the sonne of Asaph, and his brethre Semeiah, Azarael, Melalai, Galalai, Maai Nathanael and Juda and Hanani, with the musical instrumentes of Dauid the man of God.

And Esdras the scribe before them, towarde the Welgate, and they went vp ouer against them vpon the steppes of the cyty of Dauid at the goynge vp of the wall to the house of Dauid, vnto the Watergate eastward.

The other queer of thankesgeuynge went ouer against them, and I after them, and the half part of the people vpon the wal, toward Fornacegate vpwarde, vntyll the brode wall, and to the gate of Ephraim, and to Oldgate, and to the Fyshgate, and to the tower of Hananeel, and to the tower of Meah, vntyl shepegate. And in the prysongate stode they still, and so stode the two queers of thankesgeuynge of the house of God, and I and the halfe of the rulers with me, and the preistes, namely Eliakim, Maasiah, Miniamin, Michaiah, Elioenai, Zachary, Hananiah, with trompettes and Maasiah, Semeiah, Eleasar, Vsi, Johanan, Melchiah, Elam and Ezer. And the singers sange loude, and Jezraia was the ouersear.

And the same daye were there great sacrifices offred, and they reioyced: for God had geuen them great gladnes, so that both the wyues and childzen were ioyful, and the mirthe of Jerusalem was herde farre of.

At the same tyme were men appointed ouer the treasure chestes (wherin were the offeringes, firstfrutes, & the tythes) that they shuld gather them out of the feldes about the cyties to deale them vnto the preistes and Leuites, accordinge to the law: for Juda was glad of the preistes, and Leuites, that they stode and wayted vpon the office of their God, and the office of the clensinge. And the singers & porters stode after the commaundement of Dauid and of Salomon his sonne: for in the tyme of Dauid and Asaph, were the chiefe singers ordred, and the songes of prayse and thankesgyuynge vnto God. In the tyme of Zorobabel and Nehemias, dyd all Israel, geue portions vnto the singers and porters, euery daye his portion, and they gaue thynges halowed vnto the Leuites, and the Leuites gaue thinges that were sanctified, vnto the childzen of Aaron.

CAPI. XIII.

And what tyme as the booke of Moses was red in the eares of the people, there was founde written therin, that the Ammonites and Moabites shulde neuer come into the congregacion of God, because they met not the childzen of Israel with bred & water, and hyred Balaam against them, that he shulde curse them: neuertheles our God turned the curse into a blessinge. Now whē they herde the Lawe, they seuered from Israel euery one that had myxte him self therin. And before this had the preiste Eliasib delyuered the chest of the house of our God vnto his kynsman Tobiah: for he had made him a great chest and there had they afore tyme layde the offerynges, frankincense, vessell, and the tythes of corne, wyne and oyle (accordynge to the commaundement gyuen to the Leuites, syngers and porters) and the firste frutes of the preistes.

But in all this was not I at Jerusalem: for in the two and thirtyeth yere of Artaxerxes kynge of Babilon, came I vnto the kynge and after certayne dayes I got lycence of the kynge to come to Jerusalem. And I gat knowledge of the euyll that Eliasib dyd vnto Tobiah, in that he hadde made him a chest in the courte of the house of God, and it greued me sore, and I cast forth al the vessels of the house of Tobiah out of the chest, and commaunded them to clense the chestе. And thether brought I agayne the vessels of the house of God, the sacrifice and the incense.

And I perceyued, that the portions of the Leuites were not gyuen them, for which cause the Leuites and singers were fled, euery one to his lande for to worke. Then reproued I the rulers, & sayd: Why forsake we the house of God? But I gathered them togither, and set them in their place. Then brought all Juda the tythes of corne, wyne and oyle vnto the treasure. And we ordeyned to be treasurers ouer the treasure, euen Selemiah the preist, Zadoc the scrybe, and of the Leuites Phadaiah and vnder their hande Hanan the sonne of Zacur the sonne of Mathaniah: for they were counted faythfull, and their office was to distribute vnto their brethren. Thinke vpō me O my God herein, and wype not out my mercye, that I haue shewed on the house of my God, and on the officers therof.

At the same tyme sawe I some treadynge wyne presses on the Sabboth and bringynge in clustres, and asses laden with wyne, grapes kygges, and bryngynge all maner of burthens vnto Jerusalem, vpon the Sabboth daye. And I rebuked them earnestly the same daye that they solde the victayles. There dwelt men of Tyre also therein, whiche brought fysshe and all maner of ware, and solde on the Sabboth vnto the childzen of Juda and Jerusalē. Then reproued I the rulers in Juda, & sayde vnto them: what euyll thynge is this ye do, & breake the Sabboth day? Dyd not our fathers euen thus, & our God brought all this plage vpon vs and vpon this cytye? And ye make the wrathe more yet vpon Israell, in that ye breake the Sabboth.

And it fortuned, that when the gates of Jerusalem were touched with the euenynge shadowe on the Sabboth, I commaunded to shut the gates, and charged that they shulde not be opened tyll after the Saboth: & some of my seruauntes set I at the gates, that there shulde no burthen be brought in on the Sabboth daye. Then remayned the chapmen and marchauntes ones or twyse ouer nyght without Jerusalem, with all maner of wares. Then reproued I them sore, and sayde vnto them: why tarye ye all nyght about the wall? Yfe ye do it ones agayne, I will laye handes vpon you. From that tyme forth came they no more on the Saboth. And I sayd vnto the Leuites which were cleane, that they shulde come and kepe the gates, to halow the Sabboth daye. Thinke vpon me (O my God) concerninge this also, and spare me accordinge to thy great mercy.

And at the same tyme saw I Jewes, that maryed wyues of Asdod, Ammon and of Moab, and their childzen spake halfe in the speche of Asdod, and coulde not speake in the Jewes language, but by the tonge might a man perceyue euery people. And I reproued them, and cursed them, and smote certayne men of them and plucke them by, and toke an othe of them by God: ye shall not geue your doughters vnto their sonnes, nether shal ye take their doughters vnto your sonnes, or for your selues. Did not Salomon the kyng of Israel synne therin? & yet amonge many kaynynes was there no kynge lyke him, and he was deare vnto his God, and God made him kynge ouer al Israel, and yet neuertheles straunge wemen caused him to synne? And shall we then obey vnto you, to wall this great euyll, to halte before our God, and mary straunge wyues?

And one of the childzen of Joiada the son of Eliasib the hyghe preast, hadde made a contract with Sanaballat the Horonite: but I chaced him frome me. O my God, think thou vpon them that defyle preasthode, and the lawe of the preasthode and of the Leuites. Thus clensed I them frome all suche as were straungers, and appointed the courses of the preastes and Leuites, euery one to his office, and to offre the wood at tymes appointed, and the firste frutes. Thinke thou vpon me (O my God) for the best.

THE BOKE OF ESTHER.

¶ Kynge Asuerus, whiche is called Artarerres maketh a royall feaste, whereunto the quene Vasthi wil not come: for whiche cause she is diuorced.

CAPI. I.

A IN the tyme of Asuerus which raygned from Inde vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundred and seuen and twenty landes, what tyme as he sate on his seate royal in the castel of Susan in the thirde yere of his raygne, he made a feast vnto all his princes and seruauntes, namely vnto the myghty men of Persia and Media, to the capitaynes and rulers of his countreyes, that he myght shewe the noble ryches of his kyngdome, and the glorious worshippe of his power, many dayes longe, euen an hundred and foure score dayes.

And when these dayes were ended, ꝑ kynge made a feast vnto all the people that were in the castell of Susan, both vnto great & small, seuen dayes longe in the court of the garden B by the kynges palace: where there hanged whyte, red and yelow clothes, fastened with cordes of lynnen and scarlet in siluer ringes, vpon pylers of Marble stone.

The benches were of gold and siluer made vpon a pauement of greene, whyte, yelow and blacke Marble. And the drinke was caryed in vessels of golde, and there was euer chaunge of vessel. And the kynges wyne was exceding moche, accordinge to the great power of the kynge. And no man was appoynted what he shulde drinke: for the kynge had commaunded all the officers of his house, that euerye one shulde do as it lyked him, And the quene Vasthi made a feast also for the wemen in the palace of Asuerus. And on the .vij. daye when the kynge was pleasauntly merye of the wyne he commaunded Mehuman, Bartha, Harbona, Bagatha, Abagatha, Zathar and Carcas C the .vij. chamberlaynes, that dyd seruice in ꝑ presence of kynge Asuerus, to fetche the quene Vasthi with the crowne regal, that he myght shewe the people and princes her fairnesse: for she was bewtyfull. But the quene Vasthi wolde not come at the kynges worde by his chamberlaynes. Then was the kynge verye wrothe, and his indignacion kyndled in him, and he spake to the wyse men that had vnder standinge in the ordinaunces of the lande, for the kynges matters must be handled before al suche as haue knowledge of the lawe and iugement: and the next vnto him were, Carsena, Sethar, Admatha, Tharsis, Mares, Marsana and Mamucan, the seuen princes of the Persians, and Medes, whiche sawe the kynges face, and were wont to sit first next him, What lawe shulde be execute vpon the quene Vasthi, because she dyd not accordinge to the worde of the kynge by his chamberlaynes.

Then sayde Mamucan before the kynge and the princes: the quene Vasthi hath not onely D hurt the kynge, but also all the princes and al the people in all the prouinces of kynge Asuerus, for this dede of ꝑ quene shall come abrode vnto all wemen, so ꝑ they shall despyse their husbandes before their eyen, and shall saye: ꝑ kynge Asuerus commaunded Vasthi ꝑ quene to come before him, but she wolde not. And by this example shal all the princes wyues of Persie and Media set at naught the commaundement of their husbandes, when they heare of this dede of the quene, thus shall there ryse despytefulnes and wrath ynoughe. If it please the kynge, let there go forth a Proclamacion frome him, and let it be written accordinge to the lawe of the Persians and Medians (and not to be transgressed) that Vasthi come no more before kynge Asuerus, and let the kynge gyue the kyngdome vnto another that is better then she.

And that this wrytynge of the kynge whiche shalbe made, be publyshed thorowe out all his empyre which is great, that all wyues maye haue their husbandes in honoure, both great & smal. This pleased ꝑ kynge & the princes, & the kynge dyd accordinge to the word of Mamucan. Then were letters sent forth into all the kynges landes, into euery lande accordinge to the wrytinge therof, and to euery people after their language, that euerye man shulde be Lorde and chefe in his owne house. And this caused he to be diuulged amõges all people.

¶ The quene put awaye, certayne goodly yonge damoselles are searched out amonges whome Esther pleaseth the kyng. Mardocheus discloseth to the kynge those that wolde betraye him.

CAP. II.

THese thinges done whē the displeasure of kyng Asuer⁹ was alayed he thought vpon Vasthi, what she had done, & what was concluded concernynge her. Then sayde the kynges seruātes: Let there be sayre yonge virgins sought for the kynge, & let the kynge appoynt ouerseares in all the landes of his empyre, that they maye bringe togyther al fayre younge virgins vnto the castel of Susan to the wemens lodgynge, vnder the hande of Hegai the kynges chamberlayne, that kepeth ꝑ wemen, and let him gyue them their apparell. And loke which damosell pleaseth the kynge, let her be quene in Vasthis stede. This pleased the kyng and he dyd so.

In the castel of Susan there was a Jewe, whose name was Mardocheus, the son of Jair, the son of Semei, the son of Cis, the son of Jemini, which was caryed away from Jerusalem, whan Jekonias the kynge of Judea was led away, whom Nabuchownozor kyng of Babylon caryed awaye) & he norysshed his daughter: for she had neyther father nor mother, & she was a fayre and bewtyfull damesell. And when her father and mother dyed, Mardocheus receyued her, as his owne doughter.

Nowe when the kynges commaundement was publyshed, and accordynge to it manye damsels were brought to gyther vnto the castell of Susan vnder the hande of Hegai, Esther was taken also vnto the kinges house vnder the hande of Hegai the keper of the women, and the damsell pleased him, and she founde grace in his syght. And he caused her oyntment to be gyuen her, and her gyftes, & gaue her seuen notable gentyl women of the kynges house, and arayed both her & her gentyll wemen bery rychely in the house of the wemen. But Esther shewed not her people nor her kynred: for Mardocheus had charged her, that she shuld not tell it. And Mardocheus walked euery day before the court of the wemens buyldinge, that he myght know howe Esther dyd, and what shulde become of her.

And when the appoynted tyme of euery damsel came that she shulde come to the kynge Asuerus, after that she had bene .xij. monethes in the dekynge of the wemen (for their dekynge must haue so moche tyme, namely .vj. monethes with Balme and Myrre, and .vj. monethes with good spices, so were the wemen bewtyfyed) then went there one damsel vnto the kynge, and what so euer she required that must be gyuen her to go with her out of the wemens buyldinge vnto the kynges palace. And when one came in the euenynge, she came went frome him on the morowe into ꝑ seconde house of wemen, vnder the hande of Saagas the kynges chamberlayne, whiche E kept the concubynes. And she must come vnto the kynge nomore, oneles it pleased the kyng and that he called her by name.

Nowe when the tyme came of Esther the daughter of Abihail Mardocheus vncle (whō he had receyued as his owne doughter) that she shulde come to the kynge, she desired nothinge but what Hegai the kynges chamberlayne the keper of the wemen sayde. And Esther founde fauoure in the sight of all them that loked vpon her. So Esther was take on to kynge Asuerus into the house royall, in ꝑ tenth moneth which is called Tebeth, in the .vij. yere of his raygne.

And the kynge loued Esther aboue all the wemen, and she founde grace and mercy in his sight before all the virgines: and he set the quenes crowne vpon her head, and made her quene in stede of Vasthi. And the kynge made a great feast vnto all his princes and seruauntes (which feast was because of Esther): & he gaue rest to all the landes, and gaue royal gyftes accordinge to a kynges magnificence.

And whan the virgins were gathered togyther the seconde tyme, Mardocheus sat in the kynges gate. And as yet hadde not Esther shewed her kynred and her people, accordinge as Mardocheus had bydden her: for Esther dyd after the worde of Mardocheus, lyke as whē he was her tutoure. At the same tyme whyle Mardocheus sat in the kynges gate, two of the kynges chamberlaynes Bagathan & Thares which kept the doze were wroth, & sought to laye handes on the kynge Asuerus: wherof Mardocheus gat knowledge, and tolde it vn to quene Esther, and Esther certyfyed ꝑ kyng therof in Mardocheus name. And when inquyrye was made, it was founde so. And they were both hanged on tre: and it was wrytten in the Chronycles, before the kynge.

¶ Haman obtayned of the kynge that all Jewes shulde be put to death because Mardocheus hadde not gyuen hym worshipe, as other had.

CAPI. III.

AFter this the kynge promoted Haman the sonne of Amadatha the Agagite, & set him hyghe, and set his seate aboue A all the princes that were with him. And all ꝑ kynges seruauntes that were in the gate, bowed their knees, and dyd reuerence vnto Haman: for the kynge had so commaunded. But Mardocheus bowed not the knee, and worshipped him not. Then the kynges seruauntes whiche were in the kynges gate, sayde vnto Mardocheus: why breakest thou the kynges commaundement? And when they spake this dayly vnto him, and he obeyed them not, they tolde Haman, that they myght se whether B Mardocheus matters wolde endure: for he had told them that he was a Jewe. And whē Haman sawe that Mardocheus bowed not ꝑ knee vnto him, nor worshipped him, he was full of indignacion and thought it to lyttel to laye handes onely on Mardocheus: for they had shewed him the nacion of Mardocheus, but he sought to destroy all the Jewes the nacion of Mardocheus, that were in the hole empyre of Asuerus.

In the .j. moneth (that is the moneth Nisan) in the .xij. yere of kyng Asuerus, they cast Pour (that is a lot) before Haman, on what daye and what moneth this shulde be done: and there came out the .xij. moneth that is ꝑ moneth Adar. And Haman sayde vnto kynge Asuerus: There is a people scattered abrode & C dispeopled from them selues amonge all people in the landes of thyne empire, & their law is contrary vnto all people, and they do not after the kynges lawes, neyther is it the kynges profyte to suffre them after this maner. If it please the kyng, let him write, that they be destroyed, and so will I weye downe ten thousande talentes of siluer, vnder the handes of the worckmen, to be brought into the kynges chambet. Then toke the kynge his ryng frō his hande, and gaue it vnto Haman the sonne of Amadatha the Agagite the Jewes enemy And the kynge sayde vnto Haman: Let the D siluer be gyuen the, and that people also, to do with all what pleaseth the.

Then were the kynges scribes called on ꝑ xiij. daye of the fyrste moneth, and there was written (accordīg as Haman commaunded) vnto the kynges princes and to the capteynes euery where in the landes, and to the rulars of euery people in the cōtreyes on euery syde, accordinge to the wrytinge of euery nacion, & after their language in the name of kynge Asuerus, and sealed with the kynges ryng. And the wrytinges were sent by purspuantes into all the kynges landes, to rote out: to kyl

& to destroy al Jewes, both yong & olde, chyldren and women in one daye, that is to wite vpon the thirteenth daye of the twelueth moneth, which is the moneth Adar and to spoyle theyr goodes.

This was the summe of the lettres, that there shulde be a commaundement gyuen in all landes, to be publyshed vnto all people, that they shulde be readye agaynste the same daye. And the pursuauntes went in all the haste accordynge to the kynges commaundement. And in the castell of Susan was ꝑ commaundment dyuyded. And the kynge and Haman sate and dranke. But the cytie of Susan was disquieted.

CAPI. IIII.

A Whē Mardocheus perceyued all that was done, he rent his clothes, & put on sack clothe, and asshes, and went out into ꝑ mydes of the cytie, and cried loude and lamētably, and came before the kynges gate: for there might no man entre within the kynges gate, that had sacke clothe on. And in all landes and places, as farre as the kynges worde & commaundement extended, there was great lamentacion amonge the Jewes and many fasted, wept, mourned, and laye in sack clothes and in asshes. So Esthers damoselles, & her chamberlaynes, came and tolde it her. Then was the quene exceedingly astonyed. And she sent rayment, that Mardocheus shulde put them on, and laye the sacke cloth frome hym. But Mardocheus wolde not take them. Then called Esther Hathath one of the kynges chamberlaynes (whiche stode before her) and gaue him a commaundement vnto Mardocheus, ꝑ he myght knowe what it were, and wherfore he dyd so. So Hathath went forth to Mardocheus vnto the strete of the cytie, which was before the kynges gate.

And Mardocheus tolde him of all that had happened vnto him, and of the summe of syluer that Haman had promysed to wepe down in the kynges chamber because of the Jewes for to destroye them, and he gaue him the copy of the commaundement, that was dyuyded at Susan to destroy them, that he might shewe it vnto Esther, and to speke to her and charge her, that she shulde go in to the kynge, & make her prayer and supplication vnto him for her people.

And when Hathath came in, and tolde Esther the wordes of Mardocheus, Esther spake vnto Hathath, and commaunded him to saye vnto Mardocheus: all the kynges seruauntes, and the people in the landes of the kynge knowe, that who so euer commeth within the courte vnto the kynge, whether it be man or woman, which is not called, the commaundement is that the same shall dye immediatly oneles the kynge holde out the golden scepter vnto him, in token of clemencie that he maye lyue. As for me, I haue not bene called to come in to the kynge now this thirty dayes.

And when Mardocheus was certyfyed of Esthers wordes, Mardocheus bad saye agayn vnto Esther: thinke not to saue thyne owne lyfe, whyle thou art in the kynges house before all Jewes: for yf thou holdeste thy peace at this tyme, then shal the Jewes haue helpe & deliuerance oute of an other place, and thou and thy fathers house shalbe destroyed. And who knoweth whether thou art come to the kyngdome, for this tymes sake? Esther bad, geue Mardocheus this answere: go thou thy waye, and gather togither all the Jewes that are founde at Susan, and fast ye for me, that ye eate not and dranke not in thre dayes, neyther daye nor nyght. I and my damoselles will fast lykewyse, and so will I go in to the kynge contrary to the commaundement: yf I perysshe, I perysshe. So Mardocheus went his waye, and dyd all that Esther had commaunded him.

¶ Esther entreth in to the kynge and byddeth him and Haman to a feaste. Haman prepareth a gallowe for Mardocheus.

CAPI. V.

ON the thirde day put Esther on her royall apparell, and stode in the court of ꝑ kynges palace within, ouer against the kynges lodgynge. And the kynge sat vpō his royal seate in his palace ouer against the gate of the house. And when the kynge saw Esther the quene standinge in the courte, she founde grace in his sighte. And the kynge helde out ꝑ golden scepter in his hande towarde Esther. So Esther stept forth, and touched the toppe of the scepter. Then sayd the kynge vnto her: What wilt thou quene Esther? and what requirest thou? aske euen the halfe of the empire, and it shalbe gyuen the. Esther sayde: If it please the kynge, let the kynge and Haman come this daye vnto the banket, that I haue prepared. The kynge sayd: Cause Haman to make haste: that he maye do as Esther hathe sayde.

Now when the kynge and Haman came to the banket that Esther had prepared, ꝑ kynge sayde vnto Esther after he had largely dronke of the wyne: Esther, what is thy petition? it shalbe gyuen the. And what requirest thou? Yf it be euen the halfe of the empyre, it shalbe done.

Then answered Esther and sayde: my petition and desire is, yf I haue founde grace in the sight of the kynge, and yf it please ꝑ kynge to gyue me my petition, and to fulfill my requeste, then let the kynge and Haman come to the banket that I shall prepare for them, and so will I doo to morowe as the kynge hathe sayde.

Then went Haman forthe the same daye, toyfull and merye in his mynde. And when he sawe Mardocheus in the kynges gate, that he stode not vp and kneled before him, he was full of indignacion at Mardocheus. Neuertheles he refrayned him selfe: and when he came home, he sent, and called for his frendes and Zares his wyfe, and tolde them of the glorye of his riches, and the multytude of his chyldren all to gyther, howe the kynge hadde promoted him so greatly, and howe that he was taken aboue the princes and seruauntes of the kynge. Haman sayde moreouer: Yea & Esther the quene let no man come with the kynge vnto the banket that she had prepared except me, and to morowe am I bidden vnto her also with the kynge. But in all this am I not satisfied as longe as I se Mardocheus the Jewe sittinge at the kynges gate. Then sayd Zares his wyfe and all his frendes vnto him: Let them make a galowes of fyftye cubites hyghe, and to morowe speake thou vnto the kynge, that Mardocheus may be hanged theron, and so thou shalt go merely with the kyng vnto the banket. Haman was well content herewith, and caused a gallowes to be made redy.

¶ The kynge turneth ouer the Chronycles and findeth the godelyye of Mardocheus: and then to the confusion of Haman, he commaundeth Mardocheus to be had in honoure.

CAPI. VI.

THe same night could not ꝑ kynge slepe, and he commaunded to bringe the Chronicles and hystories: whiche when they were red before the kynge they happened on the place where it was written, how Mardocheus had tolde, that the kynges two chamberlaynes (which kept ꝑ thresholdes) sought to laye handes on kynge Asuerus. And ꝑ kyng sayde: what worshyp and good haue we done to Mardocheus therfore? Then sayde ꝑ kynges seruauntes that ministred vnto him. There is nothinge done for him. And the kyng sayde: Who is in the court? (for Haman was gone into the court without before ꝑ kynges house that he myght speake vnto the kynge to hang Mardocheus on the tre, that he hadde prepared for him.) And the kynges seruantes sayde vnto him: beholde, Haman standeth in the court. The kyng sayd: let him come in. And whē Haman came in, ꝑ kyng sayd vnto him: what shal be done vnto the man, whō the kynge wolde fayne honge vnto worshyppe? But Haman thought in his hert: Whome shulde the kyng els be glad to bringe vnto worshyp, but me? And Haman sayde vnto the kynge: Let the man vnto whome the kynge wolde be glad to worshyp, be brought hither, that he maye be arayed with the royall garmentes whiche the kynge vseth to weare: and the horse that the kynge rydeth vpon, and that the crowne royall maye be set vpon his heed. And let this rayment and horse be deliuered vnder ꝑ hande of one of the kynges princes, that he maye araye the man withall, (whō the kynge wolde fayne honour) and cary him vpon the horse thorow the strete of the cytie, and cause it to be proclaymed before him: thus shal it be done to euery man, whome the kynge wolde fayne honoure.

The kynge sayde: make haste, and take as thou hast sayde, the rayment and the horse: & doo euen so with Mardocheus the Jewe that sitteth before the kynges gate, & let nothinge fayle of all that thou hast spoken. Then toke Haman the rayment and the horse, and arayed him, and brought him on horsbacke thorow the strete of the cyte, and proclaymed before him: Euen thus shall it be done vnto euery man whome the kynge is disposed to honoure. And Mardocheus came agayne to the kynges gate, but Haman gat him home in al the hast mourninge with bare head, and tolde Zares his wyfe & all his frendes, euery thing that had happened him. Then sayde his wise men of his counsayle and Zares his wyfe vnto him: If it be Mardocheus of the sede of ꝑ Jewes, before whome thou hast begon to fal thou canst do nothinge vnto him, but shalte fall before him. Whyle they were yet talking with him, came the kynges chamberlaynes, & caused Haman to make hast to come vnto the banket that Esther had prepared.

¶ The quene byddeth the kyng and Haman agayne, and prayeth for her selfe and her people. She accuseth Haman: and he is hanged on the galowse, whiche he had prepared for Mardocheus.

CAPI. VII.

AND when the kynge and Haman came to the banket that quene Esther hadde prepared, the kynge sayde vnto Esther on the seconde daye at the banket of wyne: what is thy petitiō quene Esther, that it may be gyuen the? And what requirest thou? Yea alle euen halfe of the empyre, and it shall be done. Esther the quene answered and sayde: If I haue founde grace in thy sight (O kyng) and yf it please the kynge then graunte me my lyfe at my desire and my people for my petitions sake: for we are solde both I and my people to be destroyed, to be slayne and to perysh. And wolde God we were solde to be bondmē and bondwemē, then wolde I holde my tōge so shoulde not the ennemy be so byghe to the kynges harme. The kyng Asuerus spake and sayde vnto quene Esther: Who is this? Or where is he that darre presume in his mynde to do suche a thinge after that maner? Esther sayde: the ennemy and aduersary is this wycked Haman. Which thing when Haman herd he was exceadingly afrayed before the kynge and the quene. And the kynge arose frome the banket and frome the wyne in his displeasure and went in to the palace garden. And Haman stode vp, and besought quene Esther for his lyfe: for he sawe there was a mischefe prepared for him of the kynge alredy.

And when the kynge came agayne out of ꝑ palace garden into the parler where they had eaten, Haman hadde layde him vpon the bed that Esther sat vpon. Then sayde the kynge, will he force the quene also beside me in the house? As sone as that worde wēt out of the kynges mouth, they couered Hamans face. And Harbonah one of ꝑ chamberlaynes that stode before the kynge, sayde. Beholde, there standeth a galowes in Hamans house fyftye cubytes hyghe, which he had made for Mardocheus dochtus, that spake good for the kynge. The kynge sayd: hange him theron. So they hanged Hamā on the galowes that he had made for Mardocheus. So was the kynges wrath appeased.

¶ After the deth of Hamā Mardocheus is promoted then are cōfortable letters sēt vnto the Iewes.

CAPI. VIII.

A The same daye dyd kynge Asuerus gyue the house of Haman the Iewes enemye vnto quene Esther. And Mardocheus came before the kyng: for Esther tolde how he belonged vnto her. And the kynge toke the ryng of his fynger, whiche he had taken frō Haman, and gaue it Mardocheus. Moreouer Esther sette Mardocheus ouer the house of Haman. And she spake yet more before the kynge, and fell downe at his fete, & besought hym, that he wolde put awaye the malice of Haman the Agagite, and his moost vngracious deuises that he had ymagined agaynste the Iewes. And the kynge helde out the golden scepter vnto Esther. Then rose Esther, & stode before the kynge, and sayde: yf it please
B the kynge, and if I haue founde grace in his syght, and yf he be conuenient for the kynge, and if it be accepted in his syghte then let it be written, that the letters of the deuyce of Haman the sonne of Hamadatha the Agagite, maye be called agayne: whiche letters he wrote, to destroye the Iewes in all the kynges landes. For howe can I se the cupll that shall happen vnto my people? and how can I loke vpon the destruction of my kyn?

Then sayde the kinge Asuerus vnto quene Esther, and to Mardocheus the Iewe: Beholde I haue gyuen Esther the house of Haman, and hym haue they hanged vpon a tree,
C because he layed hande vpon the Iewes. Wryte ye nowe therfore for the Iewes, as it lyketh you in the kynges name, and seale it with the kynges ryng (for the wryttynges that were written in the kinges name, & sealed with the kynges ryng, durst noman disanull.) Then were the kynges scrybes called at the same tyme in the thyrde moneth, that is the moneth Siuan, on the thre and twentyeth daye.

And it was wrytten accordinge as Mardocheus commaunded vnto the Iewes and to the prynces, to the deputyes and capitaynes in the landes frome Ind vnyll Ethiopia, namely an hundred and seuen and twentye landes, vnto euerye one accordynge to the wryttynge therof, vnto euerye people after
D their speche, and to the Iewes accordynge to their wryttynge and language. And it was wrytten in the kynge Asuerus name and sealed with the kynges ringe. And by swyft messangers, sent he the wryttynges, wherin the kynge graunted the Iewes (in what cytyes so euer they were) to gather them selues to gyther, and to stande for their lyfe, and for to rote oute, to slaye, and to destroye all the power of the people and lande that wolde trouble them, with childzen and women, and to spoyle theyr good vpon one day in all the landes of kyng Asuerus namely vpon the thyrtenth daye of the twelueth moneth, which is the moneth Adar.

The summe of the wryttynge was, howe there was a commaundement geuen in all landes to be publyshed vnto all the people, & the Iewes shulde be redye agaynst that daye to auenge them selues on their enemyes. And the messaungers that bare the tydinges wente forth with all spede, according to the kynges worde: and the commaundement was dressed in the castell of Sulan.

And Mardocheus went out from the kynge in royal apparel of yelowe & whyte & with a great crowne of golde, arayed with a garmēt of lynnen and purple, and the cytye of Sulan reioyced and was glad: but vnto the Iewes there was come lyght and gladnes & ioye & worshyp. And in all landes and cytyes, into what places soeuer the kynges worde and commaundement reached, there was ioye & myrth, prosperitie and good dayes amonge the Iewes: in so moche that many of the people in the lande became of the Iewes beleke, for the feare of the Iewes came vpon them.

¶ At commaundement of the kynge, the Iewes put their foes to deth. The sonnes of Haman are hanged. The Iewes kepe a feastfull daye in remembraunce of their deliuerye.

CAPI. XI.

IN the twelfte moneth (that is the moneth Adar) the thirtenth daye, which, the kinges worde and commaundement had appointed, that the ennemyes sholde haue dethroyed the Iewes, it turned contrarye wyse that the Iewes sholde subdue their ennemyes. Then assembled the Iewes togyther in their cityes within all the landes of king Asuerus, to lay hand on suche as wold haue wne them euil, no man coulde withstande them: for the feare of them was come ouer all people. And all the rulers in the landes, and princes and tyrantes, and officers of the king promoted the Iewes: for the feare of Mardocheus came vpō them. For Mardocheus was great in ſ kinges house, and the reporte of him was bruted in all landes, how he encreased and grewe.

Thus the Iewes smote all their ennemyes with a sore slaughter, and slew and destroyed, and did after their wyll vnto suche as were their aduersaries. And at the castel Sulan the Iewes slewe and destroyed fiue hundred men, and slewe Pharsandatha, Delphon, Aspharatha, Phoratha, Adalia, Aridatha, Pharmastha, Arisai, Aridai, Vaizatha, the ten sonnes of Haman, the sonne of Amadatha the ennemye of the Iewes: but on his goodes they wolde take no botyes. At the same tyme was the king certified of the nombre of them that were slayne at the castell Sulan. And the kynge sayde vnto quene Esther: The Iewes haue slayne and destroyed fyue hundred men at the castell of Sulan, and the ten sonnes of Haman: What shall they do in the other landes of the kynge? What is thy requeste, that it maye be geuen the? and what requyrest thou more to be done? Esther sayde: Yf it please the kynge, let hym suffre the Iewes to morowe also to do accordynge vnto this dayes commaundement, that they hange Hamans ten sonnes vpon the tre. And the kynge charged to do so, and the commaundement was dressed at Sulan, and Hamans ten sonnes were hanged. And the Iewes gathered them selues to gyther at Sulan, vpon the fourtenth daye of the moneth Adar, & slewe thre hundreth men at Sulan, but their goodes they wolde not spoyle.

Moreouer the other Iewes in the kynges landes, stode for their lyues, and gat rest from their ennemyes: and slew of their ennemyes lxv. thousande, how be it they layd no hādes on their goodes. This was done on the. xiij.
D daye of the moneth Adar, and on the. xiiij. daye of the same moneth rested they, whiche daye they ordeyned to be a daye of feastinge & gladnesse. But the Iewes at Sulan were come together both on the. xiij. daye and on the. xiiij. and on the. xv. daye they rested, and the same daye ordeyned they to be a daye of feastinge & gladnesse. Therfore the Iewes that dwelt in the villages and vnwalled townes, ordeyned the. xiij. daye of the moneth Adar, to be a day of feastinge and gladnes, and one sent gyftes vnto an other.

E And Mardocheus wrote all these actes, and sent the wryttinges vnto all the Iewes that were in al the landes of kynge Asuerus, both nyghe and farre, that they shoulde yerely kepe and holde the. xiiij. and. xv. daye of the moneth Adar, as the dayes wherin the Iewes came to reste frome their ennemyes, and as a monethe wherein their payne was tourned to ioye, and their sorowe into prosperitie: & they
F wolde obserue the same as dayes of welthe & gladnes, and one to sende gyftes vnto an other, and to distribute vnto the poore.

And the Iewes receyued al that they hadde begon to do, and that Mardocheus had wryte vnto them: how that Haman the son of Hamadatha ennemy to all the Iewes, had deuised to destroye all the Iewes, & caused to cast Phur (that is Lot) for to put them in feare, &
G to bringe them to naught: and howe Hester wente and spake to the kynge, that thorowe letters his wycked deuyse, whiche he ymagyned agaynst the Iewes, myght be turned vpō his owne heed, & how he and his sonnes were hanged on the tree. For which cause they called this daye Phurim after the name of Phur accordinge to all the worden of this wryting: and what they them selues had sent, & what had happened vnto them. Phurim

And the Iewes set it vp, and toke it vpon them and their sede, and vpon all such as ioyned them selues vnto them, that they wolde not mysse to kepe these two dayes yerely, accordinge as they were written and appoynted, how these dayes are not to be forgotten, but to be kept of cyteloens childre amonge al kynredes in all landes and cytyes. These are the dayes of Phurim ſ is to saye of lottes, which
H are not to be ouerslipt among the Iewes, and the memorial of them ought not to perysshe frome their sede.

And quene Hester the wughter of Abihail and Mardocheus the Iewe wrote with al auctorite, to confirme this seconde wryttinge of Phurim, and sent the letters vnto all the Iewes in the. c. and. xxvij. landes of the empire of Asuerus, with frendly and faithful wordes to confirme these dayes of Phurim, in their tyme appointed, accordinge as Mardocheus & Iewe and Esther the quene had ordeyned in that behalfe: lyke as they vpon their soule & vpon their sede had confirmed the actes of the
I * fastinges and of her complaynte. And Hester commaunded to stablyshe these actes of this Phurim, and to wryte them in a boke. Hester.viii.c

¶ The glory and noblenes of Asuerus: and auctorite of Mardocheus.

CAPI. X.

AND the kyng Asuerus layd tribute vpō the lande, and vpon the Iles of the see. A
But as touchinge all the actes of his power and auctorite, and the great worshyp of Mardocheus, whiche the kynge gaue him, beholde, it is written in the Cronycles of ſ kynges of Media and Persia. For Mardocheus the Iewe was the seconde next vnto kyng Asuerus, and great amonge the Iewes, and accepted amonge the multitude of his
B brethren, as one that seketh the welthe of his people, and speaketh the best for all his sede.

¶ The ende of the boke of Esther.

THE BOKE OF IOB.

¶ Job is plaged of God by the losse of his goodes and chyldren.

CAPI. I.

A IN the land of Hus, was a man called Job: a perfect and vpryght man, suche one as feared God, and eschewed euell. This man hadde seuen sonnes, and thre daughters. His substaunce was seuen thousand shepe, iij. thousand camels, fyue hundred yoke of oxen, fyue hundred Asses, and a verye greate housholde: so that he was one of the myghtyest men amonge all them of the east countrey. And his sonnes went and made bankettes: one daye in one house, and an other daye in an other, and sent for their .iij. sisters, to eate and drincke with them. So when they had passed ouer the tyme of their bankettinge rounde aboute, Job sent for them, and clensed them agayne, and gat vp early, and offered for euery one a sacrifice. For Job thought thus: peraduenture my sonnes haue done some offence, & haue bene vnthankefull to God in their hertes. And thus dyd Job euery daye. Now vpō
B a tyme, when the seruauntes of God came & stode before the Lorde, Satan came also amonge them. And the Lorde sayd vnto Satā: whence commest thou? Satan answered the Lorde, and sayde: I haue compassed the lande and walked thorow it. Then sayde the Lorde vnto Satan: hast thou not consydered my seruaunt Job, howe that he is a perfecte and vpryght man: suche one as feareth God, and escheweth euyll, and that there is none lyke him in the lande? Satan answered, and sayd vnto the Lorde: Doth Job feare God for nought? hast thou not preserued him, his house, and al his substaunce on euery syde? hast thou not blessed the workes of his handes? Is not his possession encreased in the lande? But lay thyne hande vpon him a lytle, and touche ones al ẏ he hath, and yf he curse the not to thy face, I encruayle. And the Lorde sayde vnto Satan: lo al that he hath, be in thy power: only vpō him selfe se thou laye not thyne hande. Then went Satan forth frome the Lorde.

So vpon a certayne daye when his sonnes
C and daughters were eatinge, and drynkynge wyne in their eldest brothers house, there cam a messenger vnto Job, and sayde: Whyle the oxen were plowynge, and the Asses goyng in the pasture besyde them: the Sabees came in with force, and toke them al awaye: yea they haue slayne thy seruauntes with the swerde, & I onely haue escaped, to tell the.

And whyle he was yet speakyng, there cam an other, and sayde: The fyre of God is fallen frome heauen, it hath consumed, & brent vp all thy shepe and seruauntes: and I onely can my waye, to brynge the tydinges. In the meane season whyle he was yet speakynge, there came an other, and sayde: The Caldees made thre armyes, and russhed vpon thy camels, which they haue caryed awaye, yea slayne thy seruauntes with the swerde: and I onely am gotten awaye, to brynge tydinges. Whyle he was speakynge, there came yet an D other, and sayde: Thy sonnes and daughters were eatynge and drynkynge wyne in their eldest brothers house, and sodenly there came a myghty great wynde out of the South, and smote the .iiij. corners of the house: which fell vpon thy children, so that they are dead: and I am gotten awaye alone, to bringe the tydinges.

Then Job stode vp, and rente his clothes shaued his head, fell downe vpon the grounde, worshipped, and sayd: Naked came I out of my mothers wombe, and naked shal I turne thyther agayne. The Lorde gaue, & the Lord hath taken awaye ✳ now blessed be the name of the Lorde. In all these thinges, dyd Job not offende, ne murmured folysshely against God.

¶ Job is plaged with sore byles, and afterwarde is mocked of his wyfe. His frendes vysite hym, and haue compassion on hym.

CAPI. II.

IT happened also vpon a tyme, that when the seruauntes of God came and stode before the Lorde, Satan came amonge them and stode before him. And the Lorde sayde vnto Satan: whence commest thou? Satan answered and sayde: I haue circuyted the lande and walked thorow it. Then sayde the Lord vnto Satan: hast thou not consydered my seruaunt Job, howe that he is an innocent and vertuous man suche one as feareth God, and escheweth euyl, and that there is none lyke him in the lande? But thou mouedest me agaynst
B him, to punysshe him: yet is it in vayne, for he contynueth still in his godlynesse. Satā answered the Lorde, & sayd: Skynne for skynne and all that euer a man hath, he wil gyue for his lyfe. But lay thyne hand vpon him, touch him ones vpon the bone and fleshe, and then thou shalt se he shall curse the to thy face.

Then sayde the Lorde vnto Satan: lo, he is in thy power, but spare his lyfe. So went Satan forth frome the Lorde, and smote Job with marueilous sore byles, frō the sole of the fote vnto his crowne: so that he sat vpon ẏ groūd in the asshes, and scraped of the fylthe of his sores with a potsherde. Then sayde his wyfe
C vnto him: Dost thou continue in thy perfectnes? curse God and dye. But Job sayde vnto her: Thou speakest lyke a folysh woman. Seynge we haue receyued prosperitie at the hande of God, wherfore shoulde we not be content with aduersitie also? In all these thinges dyd not Job synne with his lyppes. Nowe when Jobs frendes hearde of all the trouble, that happened vnto him, there came thre of them, euery one frome his owne place: Eliphas the Themanite, Baldad the Suhite, and Zophar the Naamathite.

For

D For they were agreed togyther to come to shewe their compassion vpon hym, and to cōfort hym. So when they lyft vp theyr eyes a farre of, they knewe hym not. Then they cryed, and wept: then euery one of them rent his clothes, & sprynkled dust vpon theyr headdes in the ayre. They sat them downe by hym also vpon the grounde seuen dayes and seuen nightes. Neyther was there any of them that spake one worde vnto him, for they sawe that his payne was very great.

¶ The wordes of Job, wherin he declareth that this present lyfe is myserable: and the deth of the ryghtouse ioyouse and fortunable.

CAPI. III.

A AFter this Job opened his mouth, and cursed his daye, and sayde: lost be that daye, wherin I was borne: and the nyght in whiche it was sayde, there is a man chylde conceyued. The same daye be turned to derknesse, and not regarded of God aboue, nether be shyned vpon with lyght: but be couered with derknesse, and the shadowe of death. Let the dymme cloude fall vpon it, and let it be wrapped in sorowe. Let the derke storme ouercome that nyght, let it not be reckened amonge the dayes of the yere, ne counted in ẏ monethes. Despysed be that nyght, and discommended: let thē that curse the daye, those I saye ẏ be redy to rayse vp ‡ leuiathan gyue
B it also their curse. Let the starres be dymme thorow derkenesse of it. Let it loke for light, but se none, neyther the rysyng vp of the mornyng: because it shut not vp the wombe that bare me, ne hyd these sorowes frome myne eyen.

Alas, why dyed I not in the matrice? why dyd not I perysh, as sone as I came oute of my mothers wombe? Why set they me vpon their knees? Why gaue they me suck with their brestes? For now I shuld haue lyen still I shulde haue slept, and bene at rest: lyke as the kynges and lordes of the earthe, whiche buylde them selues solytary places: or as the princes that haue great substaunce of golde, &
C their houses full of siluer. O that I vtterly had no beynge, or were as a thyng borne out of tyme (that is put asyde) eyther as younge children, which neuer sawe the lyght. There the wycked do cease frome their tyranny, there suche as are ouerlaboured be at rest: there are those let out fre, whiche haue bene in pryson, so that they heare no more the voyce of the oppressour: There are small and great: the bōdman, is fre from his master.

Wherfore is the lyght gyuen him that is in wretchednes? and lyfe them that haue heuye hertes? Whiche longe for deathe, yf it come not: and searche for it more then for treasure and wolde be exceadinge gladde, and reioyce yf they founde their graue. That shulde be ioye to the man whose waye is hyd, whiche God kepeth backe frome hym. For my syghes come before I eate, and my roarynge fall out lyke flowynge water. For the thinge I feared, is come vpon me: and the thinge that I was afrayed of, is happened vnto me. Was I not happye? Had I not quyetnesse? Was I not in reste? And nowe commeth indignacion vpon me.

¶ Job is by Eliphas reproued of impacience and iniustice, and of the presumpcion of his owne ryghtousnes.

CAPI. IIII.

THen answered Eliphas the Themanyte and sayde vnto hym: Yf we begynne to commen with the, peraduenture thou A wilt be discontent, but who canne withholde hym selfe frome speakynge? Beholde, thou hast bene a teacher of many, and hast comforted the wery handes.

Thy wordes haue set vp those that were fallen, thou hast refresshed the weake knees. But now that the plage is come vpon ẏ, thou shrynkest awaye: now that it hathe touched thy self, thou art faynt harted. Where is thy awe, thy stedfastnesse, thy pacience, and the B perfectnesse of thy wayes? Consydre (I pray the) who euer perysshed beynge an innocent? Or, when were the godly destroyed? As I haue sene them that plowe wyckednesse, and sowe malyce reape the same. With the blast of God dyd they perysshe, and with the breth of his anger consumed they awaye. The roarynge of the Lyon, the voyce of the Lyonesse, and the teeth of the Lyons whelpes are broken. The Lyon perysheth, for lacke of pray, and the Lyons whelpes are scatered abrode.

And vnto me was the worde hyd, & myne
eare hath receyued a lytell therof. In the phā C tasies and thoughtes of the vysions of the nyghte, when slepe commeth on men; feare came vpon me and drede, and made my bones to shake. And when the wynde passed by before my presence, it made the heares of my flesshe stande vp. He stode there and I knewe not his face, an ymage there was before me, & i. Petri, ii. a.
there was stylnes, so that I herde this voyce. Shall man be more iust than God? Or shall man be purer than his maker? Beholde there D is no trust to his seruauntes, and in his aungelles hathe he founde crokednesse. Howe moche more in theym that dwell in houses of claye, whose foundacion is but earthe; whiche shal be consumed by the moth. They shal be smytten frome the mornynge vnto the euenynge: they shall perysshe euerlastyngly, and no man thynke theron. Is not their dignytie taken away with them, they shall dye & that er they be ware.

¶ The end of a fole. The ryghtousnes of God. The Lorde chasteneth his, and delyuereth them agayne.

CAPI. V.

CAll me one els, yf thou canst fynde anye that loke about the, vpon any of the ho A ly men. As for the folysh man, displeasure kylleth him, and anger slayeth the ignoraunte. I haue sene my selfe, when the folysshe was depe rooted, that his bewtye was soden-

sodenly destroyed, that his chyldrẽ were with out prosperite or helth: that they were slayne in the dore, and no mã to delyuer them: that his haruest was eaten vp of the hungry: that the weaponed man had spoyled it, and that ẏ thursty had dronke vp his riches. It is not the earth that bringeth forthe trauayle, neyther commeth sorowe out of the grounde: but it is man, that is borne vnto myserye, lyke
as the byrde to flyght.
B But nowe wyll I speake of the Lorde, & — The power of God.
talke of God: whiche doth thynges, that are vnsearcheable, and marueles without nombre: which gyueth rayne vpon the earth, and poureth water vpon all thinges: whiche setteth vp them of lowe degre, and sendeth prospe rite, to those that are in heuynesse: Whiche destroyeth the thoughtes of the wycked, so ẏ
they are not hable to performe the thynges ẏ
they take in hande: which compaseth the wyse
in their owne craftynesse, and ouerthroweth C the counsell of the wycked. In so moche that they run into darckenesse by fayre daye, and grope about them at the none daye, lyke as in the nyght.
And so he delyuereth the poore frome the swearde, frome the mouth, and frõ the hand of the cruel, that the pore maye haue hope, & that the mouthe of the oppressoure maye be stopped.
Beholde, happy is the man, whom God pu nyssheth: therfore, despyse not thou the chastening of the almyghty. For though he make a wounde, he gyueth a medicine agayn: though
D he smyte, his hande maketh hole agayne.
He delyuereth the out of sixe troubles, so ẏ
in the seuenth there can no harme touche the.
In the myddest of honger he saueth the frome
death: and when it is warre, from the power of the swerde.
He shall kepe the frome the scourge of the tongue, so that when trouble commeth, thou shalt not nede to feare. In hauocke and derth thou shalt be mery, and shalte not be afrayed of the beastes of the earth: But the stones in the lande shall be confederate with the, & the beastes of the felde shall gyue the peax.
Yea thou shalt know, that thy dwellynge place shalbe in rest: thou shalt behold thy substaunce, and be no more punysshed for synne.
Thou shalt se also, that thy sede shal encrease
and that thy progenye shalbe as ẏ grasse vpon
the earth. Thou shalt come to thy graue in a fayre age, lyke as ẏ corne sheues are brought in to the barne in due season. Loo, this is the thinge that we our selues haue proued by experience. Therfore now that thou hearest it, take better hede to thy selfe.

¶ Job answereth, that his payne is more greuouse then his faute, yet not withstandinge he desireth deth.

CAP. VI.

A IOb answered, and sayde: O that my myse-ry were weyed, and my punysshement layd
in the balaunces: for then shulde it be heuyer, then the sande of the see. This is the cause that my wordes are so sorowfull.
For the arowes of the almyghty are in me,
whose indignacion hath dronke vp my spirite,
and the terrible feares of God fighte agaynste me. Doth the wylde asse roare when he hath grasse? Or cryeth the oxe, when he hath fodder ynoughe? That which is vnsauery, shall it be eaten without salt, or is there any taste in the whyte of an egge? The thinges ẏ some tyme I myght not awaye with, are now my B meate for very sorow. O that I myght haue my desyre: O that God wolde graunte me ẏ thinge, that I longe for: That he wolde begyn and smyte me: that he wolde let his hãd go, and hewe me downe. Then shulde I haue some comforte: yea I wolde desire him in my payne, that he shulde not spare, for I wil not be against the wordes of the holy one.
What power haue I to endure? Or, what is myne ende, that my soule myght be pacient?
Is my strength the strength of stones? Or, is C my flesh made of brasse? Is it not so that there is in me no helpe: and that my substaunce is taken frome me? He that is in tribulation ought to be comforted of his neyghbour: but the feare of the Lorde is cleane away: Myne owne brethren passe ouer by me as the water broke, that hastely runneth thorowe the valleyes. But they that feare the hore frost, the snowe shall fall vpon them.
When their tyme commeth, they shall be destroyed and perysshe: and when they be set on fire, they shalbe remoued out of their place for the pathes that they go in, are croked: they haste after vayne thinges, and shall perysshe.
Considre the pathes of Theman, & the way-
es of Saba, wherin they haue put their trust.
Confounded are they, that put any confidẽce in them: for when they came to obtayne the D thinges they loked for, they were brought to confusion.
Euen so are ye also come vnto me: but now that ye se my myserye, ye are afrayde. Dyd I desire you, to come hyther? Or, to gyue me any of your substaunce? To delyuer me from the ennemyes hande, or to saue me frome the power of the myghty? Teache me and I wil holde my tongue: and yf I do erre, shewe me wherin.
Wherfore blame ye then the wordes, that are well and truely spoken? which of you can reproue them? Sauynge only that ye are so-tyll to check mens sayenges, and can speake many wordes in the wynde. Ye fall vpon the fatherlesse, and go about to ouerthrowe your owne frende. Wherfore loke not onely vpon me, but vpon your selues: whether I lye, or no. Turne into your own selues (I pray you) be indifferẽt iudges, and consydre myne vngyl
tynes: whether there be any vnryghtousnesse in my tongue, or vayne wordes in my mouth.

¶ Job sheweth that this lyfe is but a battayle, or warfare.

CAPI. VII.

Awar

A A Warrefare is the lyfe of man vpon
earthe, and his dayes are lyke the dayes of an hyred seruaunte: For lyke as a bonde seruaunt desyreth the shadowe, and as an hyrelynge wolde fayne haue an ende of his worke: euen so haue I laboured hole mone-thes longe (but in vayne) and many a carefull nyght haue I tolde. When I layd me downe to slepe, I sayde: O when shall I aryse? A-gayne, I longed sore for the nyghte. Thus am I replete with sorowes, tyll it be darke. My flesshe is clothed with wormes, filthinesse and dust: my skynne is withered and crompled togither: my dayes passe ouer more hastyly, then a weauer can weaue oute his webbe: and are B gone or I am ware. O remembre, that my lyfe is but a wynde, and that myne eye shall no more se the pleasures therof, and that none other mannes eye shall se me any more. For yf thou fasten thyne eyes vpon me, I come to nought, lyke as a cloude is consumed and vanisshed awaye: euen so he that goeth downe to hell, commeth no more vp, ne turneth again in to his house, neither shall his place knowe him any more.
C Therfore I wyll not spare my mouthe, but wyll speake in the trouble of my spiryte, in the bytternesse of my mynde wyll I talke. Am I a see or a Whale fysshe, that thou kepest me so in pryson? When I saye: my bed shall com forte me: I shall haue some refresshynge by talkynge by my selfe vp on my couche: Then troublest thou me with dreames, and makest me so afrayde thorowe visyons, that my lyfe wyssheth rather to be strangled, and my bones
to be deed.
D I can se no remedye, I shall lyue no more:
O spare me then, for my dayes are but vayne.
What is man, that thou haste him in suche re-garde, and settest so moche by hym? Thou ta-kest diligente care for him, and sodeynly doest thou trye him.
Why goest thou not fro me, ne lettest me alone, so longe tyll I swalowe downe my spettle? I haue offended, what shall I do vn to the, O thou preseruer of men? Why haste thou made me to stande in thy waye, and am so heuye a burthen vnto my selfe? Why doest thou not forgyue me my synne? Wherfore takest thou not awaye my wyckednesse? Be-holde, nowe muste I slepe in the duste: and yf thou sekest me to morowe in the mornynge, I shall be gone.

¶ Job is reprehended and noted to haue deserued his payne. A descrypcion of hypocresye.

CAPI. VIII.

A THen answered Baldad the Suhite, and sayd: Howe longe wylte thou talke of suche thynges? howe longe shall thy mouth speake so proude wordes? Dothe God peruerte the thynge that is lawfull? Or dothe
the almyghty destroy the thyng that is right?
When thy sonnes synned agaynst him, did not he punysshe theym for their wyckednesse? Yf thou woldest now resorte vnto God by tymes and make thyne humble prayer to the almygh-tye: yf thou woldest lyue a pure and a godlye
lyfe: sholde he not wake vp vnto the forthewith, and gyue the, the beautye of ryghtous-nesse agayne? In so moche, that wherin so euer thou haddest a lytle afore, thou sholdest nowe haue a greate aboundaunce. Enquyre B of theym that haue bene before the, searche dylygentlye amonge thy forefathers. (For Psal. cxliii. a.
we are but of yester daye, and we knowe not, that our dayes vpon earthe are but a verye shadowe.) They shall shewe the, they shall tell the, yea they shall gladlye confesse
the same.
Maye a russhe be grene without moysture?
maye the grasse growe withoute water? No, (but or euer it be shot forthe, and or euer it be gathered) it withereth, before any other herbe.
Euen so goeth it with all theym that forget
God, and euen thus also shall the hypocrites Hypocrysye.
hope come to nought. His confidence shall be C destroyed, for he trusteth in a spyders webbe.
He leaneth him vpon his house, but he shal not stand: he holdeth him fast by it, yet shal he not endure. Ofte tyme a thyng doth florysshe, and men thynke that it maye abyde the sunne shyning: it shouteth forthe braunches in his garden, it taketh many rootes, in so moche that it is lyke an house of stones.
But yf it be taken oute of his place, eue- D
rye man denyeth it, sayinge: I knowe the not:
Lo, thus is it with him that reioyseth in his owne doinges: and agayne other growe oute of the earthe.
Beholde, God wyll not caste awaye an vpryghte man, neyther wyll he helpe the vngodlye. Thy mouthe shall he fylle with laughynge, and thy lyppes with gladnesse.
They that hate the, shall be confounded, and the dwellynges of the vngodlye shall come to noughte.

¶ Job declareth the benefytes of God, and howe mannes ryghtousnes is nothynge.

CAP. IX.

IOb answered and sayd: Certes I knowe it A
is so of a truthe, that a man compared vnto God, can not be iustifyed. Yf he wyll argue with him, he shall not be hable to aunswere him, one amonge a thousande. He is wyse of herte, and mighty in strength. Who euer prospered, that toke parte agaynste hym? He translateth the mountaynes, or euer they be a ware, and ouerthroweth them in his wrathe.
He remoueth the erth out of her place, and her pylers, he all to shaketh. He commaundeth the sonne, and it ryseth not: he closeth vp the sterres, as it were vnder a signet. He him self alone spredeth oute the heauens, and goeth vpon the waues of the see. He maketh the vaynes of he-uen, the Orions, the seuen sterres, and the secrete places of the southe. He dothe great thin-ges, suche as are vnserchable, yea and wonders without nombre.
Yf he came by me, I mighte not loke vpon B him: yf he went his waye, I shoulde not perceyue

cepte it. Yf he be hastye to take any thynge awaye, who shall make him restore it agayne?
Who shall saye vnto him: what doest thou?
He is God, whose wrathe no man can withstande: but the proudest of al must stoupe vnder him? Howe shoulde I then answere him?
or what wordes shoulde I fynde out agaynst him? Yea, thoughe I be ryghtous, yet wyll I not gyue him one worde agayne, but mekely submyt my selfe to my iudge. All be it that I call vpon him, and he heare me, yet am I not sure that he hathe herde my voyce: he shall trouble me so with the tempest, and wounde me out of measure without cause. He shal not let my spirite be in reste, but fylleth me with bitternesse.
Yf men wyll speake of strengthe, he is the strongest of all, yf men wyll speake of ryght-tousnesse, who dare be my recorde? Yf I wyll
C iustifye my selfe, my owne mouthe shall condemne me: Yf I wyll put forthe my selfe for a perfecte man, he shall proue me a wycked doer: For that I shoulde be an innocent, my conscience knoweth it not / yea I my selfe am wery of my lyfe.
This one thyng wyll I saye: He destroyeth
both the ryghteous and vngodly. And thoughe
he slee sodeynly with the scourge, yet laugheth he at the punishment of the innocent. As for the worlde, he geueth it ouer in to the power of the wicked, suche as the rulers be, wherof all landes are ful. Is it not so? where is there any but he is suche one?
My dayes haue ben more swift then a purseuant: they are gone sodeynly, and haue sene no good thynge. They are passed awaye, as the shyppes that are good vnder sayle, and as the Egle that hasteth to her praye. When I am purposed to forget my complayninges, to chaunge my countenaunce, and to comfort my selfe: then am I afrayde of all my workes,
for I knowe thou fauourest not an euyll doer.
Yf I be then a wicked one, why haue I la-D boured in vayne? Thoughe I wasshed my self with snowe water, and made myne handes neuer so clene, yet shouldest thou dyppe me in the myer, and myne owne clothes shoulde defyle
me. For he that I muste gyue aunswere vnto, and with whome I go to lawe, is not a man
as I am. Neither is there any dayesmen to re-proue both the partes, or to laye his hand bi-twene vs. Let him take his rod away fro me, yea let him make me no more afrayde of hym,
and then shall I answere him without feare.
For as longe as I am in suche fearfulnesse, I can make no answere. And why? it greueth my soule to lyue.

¶ Job is wery of his lyfe, and setteth out his frayltye before God. He desyreth time to repent. A descripcion of dethe.

CAPI. X.

A NEuerthelesse, nowe wyll I put forth my wordes: I wyll speake out of the verye heuynesse of my soule, and wyl saye vnto God: Ah doo not condemne me, but shewe me the cause why thou iudgest me on this maner? Thynkest thou it well done to oppresse me, to cast me of (beinge a worke of thy han-des) and to mayntene the counsell of the vngodlye? Hast thou fleshly eyen, or doest thou loke as man loketh? Are thy dayes as ye dayes of man, and thy yeres as mannes yeres, that thou makest suche inquiry for my wickednesse, and searchest oute my synne? where as thou knowest I am no wycked person / and that there is no mã hable to rescue me out of thyne B hande? Thyne handes haue made me, and facyoned me all togyther rounde aboute, wilt thou then destroye me sodeynly? O remembre (I beseche the) that thou madest me of the moulde of earthe, and shalte brynge me to earthe agayne. Hast thou not mylked me like mylke, and pressed lyke chese? Thou haste co-uered me with skynne and fleshe, and ioyned me togyther with bones and synowes. Thou C hast graunted me life, and done me good: and the diligẽt hede that thou takest vpon me, hath preserued my spirite.
Though thou hydest these thynges in thyne
herte: yet am I sure that thou remembrest them all. Wherfore diddest thou kepe me, whẽ
I synned, and haste not clensed me fro myne offence? Yf I do wickedly, wo is me therfore: Yf I be ryghtous, yet dare I not lyfte vp my heed: so full am I of confusion, and se myne
owne miserie.
Thou huntest me oute, oppressed with heuynesse, as it were a Lyon, and troublest me beyonde all measure. Thou bryngest false witnesses agaynst me, thy wrathe increasest thou vpon me: full many are the plages that I am in. Wherfore haste thou broughte me out of my mothers wombe? O that I had pe- D risshed, and ye no eye had sene me. Yf they had caried me to my graue, as sone as I was born, then shoulde I be nowe, as thoughe I hadde neuer ben.
Shall not my shorte lyfe come soone to an ende? O holde the fro me, let me alone, that I maye ease my selfe a lytle afore I goo thither, whence I shall not retourne. Namely to that lande of darkenesse and shadowe of deth:
yea in to the darke clowdye lande and deedly shadow, where as is no order, but terrible feare continually abydeth.

¶ Job is vniustly reproued of Sophar. God is not reproueable. He is mercyfull to the repentaunt.

CAPI. XI.

THen answered Sophar the Naamathite A and said: Sholde not he that maketh many wordes be aunswered? Shoulde he that bableth moche be commended therin?
Shulde men giue eare vnto the onely? Thou wilt laugh other men to scorne, & shal no body mocke the agayne? Wilt thou saye vnto God:
the thyng that I take in hande is perfect, and I am clene in thy sighte? O that God wolde speake, and open his lyppes agaynst the, that he might shewe the out of his secret wisdome, howe manyfolde his lawe is: then shouldest
thou

knowe that God had forgotten the, by-cause of thy synnes.
Wylte thou fynde oute God with thy se-kynge? wylt thou attayne to the perfectnesse of the almyghtye? He is hygher then heuen, what wylte thou do? Deper then the hell,
how wylte thou then knowe him? His length
B exceedeth the lengthe of the earthe, and his breadth the breadth of the see. Thoughe he turne all thynges vp set downe, close them in,
or thrust them togyther, who dare checke him
therfore?
For it is he that knoweth the vanitie of men: he seeth their wyckednesse also, shoulde
he not then consider it? A vayne bodye vaun-
C teth him selfe, and the sonne of man is lyke
a wylde asses foole. Yf thou haddest nowe a ryght herte, and lyftedst vp thyne handes to-warde him: yf thou woldest put awaye the wyckednesse whiche thou haste in hande, so that no vngodlynesse dwelte in thy house:
then mightest thou lyfte vp thy face without shame, then shouldest thou be sure, and haue no nede to feare.
Then shouldest thou forget thy miserie, and D thynke no more of it then of the waters that runne by. Then shoulde thy lyfe be as clere as the noone daye, and sprynge forthe as the mornyng. Then myghtest thou haue comforte in the hope that thou hast: and slepe quietly when thou arte layde in. Then shouldest thou take thy rest, and no man to make the afrayde, yea many one shoulde set moche by the. But the eyes of the vngodlye shall be consumed, and not escape: their hope shall be misery and so-rowe of mynde.

¶ Job in shewynge his pacience declareth the might and power of God.

CAPI. XII.

A SO Job aunswered and sayde: Nowe vndoubtedly I se ye are onely men, and shal wysdom dye wt you? But I haue vnderstan ding as wel as ye, and am no lesse then ye. Yea who knoweth not these thynges? Thus he yt calleth vpon God, and whome God heareth, is mocked of his neyghbour: the godlye and gyltles man is laughed to scorne. Godlynesse is the lampe despised in the hertes of the riche, and is set for them to stomble vpon. The houses of robbers are in welthe and prosperitie,
and they that maliciously medle agaynst God,
B dwell without care: yea God gyueth al thin-ges rychely with his hande. For aske the ca-tell, and they shall enforme the: the foules of the ayre, and they shall tell the: Speake to the earthe, and it shall shewe the: Or to the fysshes of the see, and they shall certifye the.
Who is he that knoweth not that the hande
of the Lorde made all these? In whose hande is the soule of euery lyuynge thynge, and the breth of all men? Haue not the eares pleasure C in hearynge, and the mouthe in tastynge the thyng that it eateth? Among olde personnes
there is wysdome, and amonge the aged is vn derstandynge. Yea with God is wysdome and strength, it is he that hathe counsell and fore-knowlege. Yf he breake downe a thyng, who can set it vp agayne? Yf he shutte a thynge, Esaye.xxii.d
who wyl open it? yf he withholde the waters Apoca.iii.b
they drye vp: Yf he let them go, they destroye Esaye.l.a the earthe. With him is strengthe and wysdome: he knoweth bothe the disceyuer and him that is disceyued.
He carryeth awaye the wyse men, as it were a spoyle and bryngeth the iudges out of their wyttes: He looseth the bandes of kynges, and gyrdeth their loynes with a bande. He leadeth awaye the preestes in to captiuitie, and turneth
the mighty vp set downe. He taketh the trouth D out of the mouth, and disappoynteth the aged ii.Par.xviii.e
of their wysdome. He poureth out confusyon Ezech.xiiii.b
vpon prynces, and comforteth them that haue ben oppressed. Loke what lyeth hyd in darke- Luc.xii.a nesse, he declareth it openly: and the verye shadowe of deathe bryngeth he to lyghte. He bothe increaseth the people, and destroyeth theym: He maketh them to multiplye, and dryueth them awaye. He chaungeth the herte of the prynces and kynges of the earthe, and disappoynteth them: so that they goo wandryng out of the waye, and grope in the darke without lyghte, staggerynge to and fro lyke dronken men.

¶ Job reproueth his frendes with theyr owne sayinges, and condemneth hypocrysy.

CAPI. XIII.

LO, all this haue I sene with myne eye, herd with myne eare, and vnderstande it. A Loke what ye know, that same I knowe also, neither am I inferiour vnto you. Neuer-thelesse I am purposed to talke with the al-myghtye, and my desyre is to commen with God. As for you, ye are workemasters of lies, & vnprofitable phisicians all togither. Wolde God ye kepte youre tonge, that ye myghte be taken for wyse men. Therfore heare my wor-des, and pondre the sentence of my lyppes.
Wyll ye make aunswere for God with lyes, B and maynteyne him with disceyte? Wyll ye accepte the person of God, & intreate for him?
Shall that helpe you, when he calleth you to accomptes? Thynke ye to begyle him, as a mã is begyled? He shal punyshe you, and reproue you, yf ye do secretly accepte anye person.
Shall he not make you afrayde, when he sheweth him selfe? Shall not his terryble feare fall vpon you? youre remembraunce shall be lyke duste, and pryde shall be turned to claye.
Holde your tonges nowe, and let me speake,
for there is some thynge come in to my mynde.
Wherfore do I beare my fleshe in my tethe, and my soule in myne handes? Loo, there is C neither comforte or hope for me, yf he wyll slee me. But yf I vtter & reproue myne owne wayes in his syghte, he is euen the same that maketh me hole: and why? there maye no dissembler come before hym. Heare my wor-des, and ponder my sayinges with youre ea-res. Beholde, nowe haue I prepared my iudgement, and knowe that I shall be founde rightous.

ryghtous. What is he, that wyll goo to lawe with me? For yf I holde my tonge, I shall dye. Neuerthelesse graunte me two thynges, and then wyll I not hyde my selfe from the.

Withdrawe thyne hande from me, and let not the fearefull dreade of the, make me afeayde. And then lende for me to the law, that I maye aunswere for my selfe: or els, let me speake, and gyue thou the aunswere. Howe greate are my mysdedes and synnes? Let me knowe my transgressions and offences. Wherfore hydest thou thy face, and holdest me for thyne ennemye? Wylte thou be so cruell and extreme vnto a flyenge leafe, and folow vpon dyse stubble, that thou layest so sharply to my charge, and wylt vtterly vndo me for the synnes of my youthe? Thou hast put my foote in toe stockes, thou lokest narowly vnto all my pathes, & markest the steppes of my fete: where I must consume lyke a foule carcion, and as a clothe that is motthe eaten.

¶ Job declareth the lyfe of man, and prophesieth of the resurrection. Hope sustayneth the godly, tyll they haue that they loke for.

CAPI. XIIII.

MAn that is borne of a woman, hath but a shorte tyme to lyue, and is full of dyuers miseryes. He commeth vp, and falleth awaye lyke a floure. He fleeth as it were a shadowe, and neuer continueth in one state. Thynkest thou it nowe well doone, to open thyne eyes vpon suche one, and to bringe me before the in iudgement? Who can make that cleane, that commeth of an vncleane sede? No body. The dayes of man are shorte, the nombre of his monethes are knowen onely vnto the. Thou hast appointed him his bounds, he can not goo beyonde them. Goo fro me a lytle, that he maye rest a lytle: vntyll his day come wherin he lokech for, lyke as an hyreling dothe.

For a tree be cut downe, there is some hope yet that it wyll sprout and shote forthe the braunches agayne: For though the roote be waren olde and dred in the grounde, yet when the stocke getteth the sente of water, it wyll bud and bringe forth bowes, lyke as when it was first planted. But man when he is ded, perissheth and consumed awaye, what becommeth of him? The floudes when they be dryed vp, and the riuers when they be emptye, are filled agayne to grow the flowyng waters of the see: but when man sleepeth, he ryseth not agayne, vntyll the heuen perysshe: he shal not wake vp, ne ryse out of his slepe. O that thou wouldest kepe me, and hyde me in the hell, vntil thy wrathe were stylled: and to appoynt me a tyme, wherin thou mightest remembre me. May a deed man lyue agayne? All the dayes of this my pylgrymage, am I lokinge when my chaunging shall come. Yf thou wouldest but call me, I shulde obey the: only despise not the worke of thyne owne handes.

For thou hast nombred all my goinges, yet be not thou extreme vpon my synnes. Thou hast sealed vp myne offences, as it were in bagge: but be mercyful vnto my wickednesse. The mountaynes fall awaye at the laste, the rockes are remoued out of theyr place, the waters pearse thorowe the verye stones by lytle and lytell, the floudes washe awaye the grauell and earthe: Euen so destroyest thou the hope of man. Thou preuaylest agaynste him, so that he passeth a waye: thou chaungest his state, and puttest him fro me. Whether his chyldren come to worshyp or no, he cannot tell: And yf they be men of lowe degree, he knoweth not. Whyle he lyueth, his flesh must haue trauayle: and whyle the soule is in him the must be in sorowe.

¶ Eliphas reproueth Job because he ascribeth wysdome and pureness to hym selfe. He declareth the curse that tarieth on the wycked, reckenynge Job to be one of that nombre.

CAP. XV.

THen answered Eliphas the Themanite, and sayd: Wolde a wyse man aunswere as the ignorant of the wynde, and fill his belye with the wynde of the East? Thou reprouest with wordes that are nothyng worth: and speakest thynges wherin can be no good. As for shame thou hast set aside, els wolde est thou not make so manye wordes before God: but thy wyckednesse teacheth thy mouth, and so thou hast chosen the a craftie tonge. Thyne owne mouthe condemneth the, & not I: yea thyne owne lyppes shape the an aunswere. Art thou the fyrste man that euer was borne? Or wast thou made before the hylles? hast thou herd the secrete counsel of God, that al wysdome is to lyele for the? What knowest thou that we knowe not? What vnderstandest thou but we can the same? With vs are olde and aged men, yea suche as haue lined longer then thy fore fathers.

Thynkest thou it a smalle thynge of the consolacions of God? and are they with the a lyinge worde? why dost thyne hert make the so proude? Why standest thou so greatly in thyne owne conceyte? Wherfore loke thyne eyes, that thy mynde is so pulte vp against God, and letteth suche wordes goo out of thy mouth? What is man, that he shulde be clene? what hath he (whiche is borne of a woman) wherby he myght be knowen to be ryghtous? Beholde there is no trust to his sayntes: yea the very heuens are not clene in his syght. How moche more then an abhominable & vile man, whiche drynketh wickednesse lyke water? I wil tell the, heare me: I wyl shewe the a thing that I knowe, which wise men haue tolde, and hathe not ben hyd from their fathers: vnto whom only the land was geuen, that no straunger sholde come among them.

The vngodly dispayreth al the dayes of his lyfe, and the nombre of a tyrauntes yeres are vnknowen. A fearefull sounde is euer in his eares, and when it is peace, yet feareth he deception: He beleeueth neuer to be deliuered out out of darkenesse, the swerde is alway before his eyes. When he goeth forthe to get his lyuynge, he thynketh playnely that the daye of darkenesse is at hande. Sorowe and carefulnesse make him afeayde, compasse hym rounde aboute, lyke as it were a kynge with his hoste redye to the battayle. For he hathe stretched out his hande agaynst God, and armed him selfe agaynst the almyghty. He runneth proudly vpo him, and with a lyttle necke fyghteth he agaynste him: where as he couereth his face with fatnesse, and maketh his bodye well lykynge. Therfore shall his dwellynge be in desolate cities, and in houses, whyche no man inhabiteth, but are become heapes of stones.

He shall not be eyche, neither shall his substaunce continue, nor encrease vpon earthe. He shall neuer come oute of darkenesse, the flame shall drye vp his braunches, with the blaste of the mouth of God shall he be taken away. He wyll nether applye hym selfe to faythfulnesse ne truthe, for sore is he deceyued with vanite.

He shall perisshe afore his tyme be worne out, and his hande shall not be grene. He shall be plucked of as an vnripe grape from the vine, and shall let his floure fall as the olyue dothe. For the congregation of hypocrites is vnfruteful, and the fyre shall consume the houses of suche as are greedy to receyue giftes. He conceyueth trauayle, he beareth mischiefe, and his body bringeth forth deceyte.

CAPI. XVI.

IOb answered and sayd: I haue ofte times herde suche thynges. Miserable gyuers of comforte are ye, all the sorte of you. Shall not thy vayne wordes come yet to an ende? Or shall thou yet anye more to saye? I coulde speake as ye doo also. But wolde God that youre soule were in my soules steade: then shoulde I heape vp wordes agaynste you, and shake my heed at you. I wolde comforte you with my mouth, and releale your payne with the talkynge of my lyppes. But what shall I do? For all my wordes, my sorowe wyll not ease: and thoughe I holde my tonge, yet wyll it not departe fro me. And nowe that I am full of payne, and all that I haue destroyed (wherof my wyncles beare witnesse) there standeth vp a dissembler to make me aunswere with lyes to my face. He is angrye at me, he hateth me, and gnasheth vpon me with his teeth. Myne ennemye scoureth vpon me with his eyes.

They haue opened their mouthes wide vpō me, and smytten me vpon the cheke despytefully, they haue eased the selues thorow myne aduersitie. God hath giuen me ouer to the vngodly, and deliuered me in to the handes of the wicked. I was somtyme in welthe, but sodeynly he hath brought me to nought. He hath taken me by the necke, he hath rent me, and set me as it were a marke for him to shote at: he hath compassed me rounde aboute with his dartes, he hath wounded my loynes, and not spared. My bowels hath he poured vpon the grounde. He hath gyuen me one wounde vpon an other and is fallen vpon me like a giaunt. I haue sowed a sacke clothe vpon my skynne, and lye w my strength in the dust.

My face is swollen with weping, and mine eyes are waxen dymme. Howe be it there is no wyckednesse in my handes, and my prayere is cleane. O erth couer not my bloud, and let my crynge synde no rowme. For loo, my witnesse is in heauen / and he that knoweth me, is aboue in the heygthe. My frendes laughe me to scorne, but myne eye poureth oute teares vnto God. Thoughe a body myght pleat with God as one man dothe with an other, yet the nombre of my yeres are come, and I muste goo the waye, from whence I shall not turne agayne.

CAPI. XVII.

MY breth is sayleth, my dayes are shortened. I am harde at dethes doze. I haue disceyued no man, yet muste myne eye continue in heuinesse. O deliuer me and set me by the: who shall then be hable to thrust my handes together? Thou hast withholden their hertes from vnderstandynge, therfore shall they not be lette vp on hye. He promyseth his frendes parte of his good, but his owne chyldren spende it. He hathe made me as it were a by worde of the common people. I am his gestynge stocke amonge them. My countenaunce is heupe for verye anger, and the membres of my body are become lyke a shadowe. Vertuous men therfore shal wel consider this, and the innocent shall take parte agaynste the hypocrite.

The ryghtous wyll kepe his waye, and he that hathe cleane handes, wyll euer be stronger and stronger. As for you, tourne you and get you hence, for I can not se one wyse man amonge you. My dayes are past, my thoughtes are vanysshed awaye, whiche haue vexed myne herte chaungynge the nyght in to daye, and the lyghte in to darkenesse. Thoughe I tary neuer so moche, yet the graue is my house, and I muste make my bedde in the darcke. I call corruption my father, and the wormes call I my mother and my syster. What helpeth then my longe tarynge? Or who wyll fulfyll the thynge that I loke for? All that I haue shall goo downe in to the pit, and lye with me in the dust.

CAPI. XVIII.

Then

Then answered Baldad the Suhite, and sayd: when will ye make an end of your wordes? Marcke well and consider, we wyll speake also. Wherfore are we counted as beestes, and reputed so vyle in youre syght?
Why destroyest thou thy selfe with anger?
Shall the earthe be forsaken, or the stones remoued oute of their place bycause of the?
Shall not the syghte of the vngodlye be put out? yea the flame of his fyre shall not burne.
The lyght shall be darke in his dwellyng e, & his candle shall be put oute with him. His presumptuous goynges shall be kepte in, and his owne counsell shall caste him downe. For his fete shall be taken in the net, and he shall walke in the snare. His fote shall be holden in the trap, and the thirsty shal catche him. The snare is layd for him in the ground, and a pitfall in the waye.

Fearefulnesse shall make him afrayde on e-uery syde, that he shall not knowe, where to get out. Hunger shall be his subsistance, & misfortune shall hange vpon him. He shall eate the strengthe of his thynne, the fyrste borne of death shall eate his membres. All his comforte and hope shall be rooted out of his dwelling,
very fearefulnesse shal bryng him to the king.
Other men shall dwell in his house (whiche nowes none of his) and brymstone shal be scattered vpon his habitation. His rootes shall be dried vp beneth, and aboue shal his harueste be cut downe. His remembraunce shall perysshe from the erth, and his name shall not be prays-ed in the streetes: he shal be driue from light en to darkenesse, and be caste clene oute of the worlde, he shal neither haue children nor kynffolkes amonge his people, no, ne any posterite
in his countrey: youth and olde shall be astonished at his death. Suche are now the dwel-lynges of the wicked, and this the place of him that knoweth not God.

¶ Job complayneth his myseryes and grieuous paynes. The Prophesyeth of the generall resurrection.

CAPI. XIX.

Iob answered and sayde: howe longe wyll
ye vexe my myndy, and trouble me with wor des? Loo, ten tymes haue ye reproued me:
are ye not ashamed to laughe me to scorne? yf
I go wronge, I go wronge to my selfe. But yf ye wyll exhaunce youre selues agaynste me,
and accuse me to be a wycked person bycause
of the shame that is come vpon me: knowe
this then, that it is God which hath handled me so violently, and hath compassed me about with his scourges. Beside, though I crye, yet violence is done vnto me, I can not be herde:
Though I complayne, there is none to gyue sentence with me. He hathe hedged vp my pathe, I can not get awaye, he hathe set darke-nesse in my gate. He hath spoyled me of myne honoure, and taken the crowne awaye fro
my heed. He hathe destroyed me on euerye syde, and I am vndone: my hope hathe he taken awaye from me, as it were a tree pluckt vp by the roote. His wrathe is kyndled a-gaynst me, he taketh me as though I were his ennemye.

His men of warre came togyther, whiche made theyr waye ouer me, and besyeged my dwellynge rounde aboute. He hathe put my brethren farre awaye fro me, and suche as were of myne acquayntaunce, are become straungers vnto me. Myne owne kynfolkes haue forsaken me, and my frendes haue put me out of remembraunce. The seruauntes and maydens of myne owne house, take me for a straunger, and I am become as an aleaunte in their syght.

When I call vpon my seruaunt, he geueth me no answere: no though I praye him with my mouth. Myne owne wyfe maye not abyde my breth, I am fayne to speake fayre vnto the chyldren of myne owne bodye. Yea the very fooles despyse me, and when I am gone from them, they speake euyll vpon me. All suche as were my moost familiars abhorre me: & they whome I loued beste, are tourned agaynste me. My bone hangeth to my skynne, and my flesshe is away, onely there is left me the skyn aboute my teth, haue pitye vpon me, haue pi-tye vpon me (O ye my frendes) for the hande of the Lorde hathe touched me. Why wyll ye persecute me as God, and are not satisfyed of my flesshe?

O that my wordes were wrytten, O that they were put in a booke: wolde God they were grauen with an yron penne in leed or in stone. For I am sure that my redemer lyueth, and that I shall ryse out of the earthe in the latter daye: that I shall be clothed agayne
with this skynne, and se God in my flesshe.
Yea I my selfe shall beholde hym, not with other, but with these same eyes. My reynes are consumed within me, when ye saye: Why do not we persecute him? we haue founden occasion agaynste him. But beware of the swerde, for the swerde wyll be auenged of wyckednesse, and be sure that there is a iudge-ment.

¶ Sophar sayeth, that the vnfaythfull, the ioye-rouse, and the wycked, shall haue a shorte ende.

CAPI. XX.

Then aunswered Sophar the Naama-thite, and sayde: For the same cause do my thoughtes compell me to answer.
And why? my mynde is tossed here and there.
I haue sufficiently herde thy checkynge and re-proue, therfore am I purposed to make aunswere after myne vnderstandynge. Knowest thou not this, namely that frome the begynninge (euer sithens the creation of man vpon erth) the prayse of the vngodly hath ben shor and that the ioye of hypocrites continued but the twynklynge of an eye? Though he be magnified vp to the heuen, so that his heed reacheth vnto the cloudes: yet he perysheth at the last like dong: in so moche that they whiche haue sene him, saye: Where is he? He haueth as a dreame, so that he can no more be found, and passeth awaye as a vision in the night.

nyght. So that the eye whiche sawe him before, getteth now no syght of him, & his place knoweth him no more. His chyldren goo
a begging, their handes bryng them to sorow and beggarye.

From his youth his bones are full of vice,
whiche shall lye downe with him in the earth.
When wickednesse is swete in his mouth, he hydeth it vnder his tonge. That he fauoureth that will he not forsake, but kepeth it close in his throte. The meate that he eateth shall be turned to the poyson of serpentes within his body. The ryches that he deuoureth, shall he perforce take agayn, for God shal draw them out of his belye, he shall sucke the serpentes heed, &
the adders tong shall slee him: so that he shal
no more se the ryuers and brookes of hony and butter: But labour shall he, and yet haue no-thynge to eate. Greate trauayle shall he make for ryches, but he shall not enioye them. And why? he hath oppressed the poore, and not helped them: houses hath he spoyled, & not builded them. His belye could neuer be filled, therfore shall he perysshe in his couetyse. He deuou red so greedyly that he left not hyng behynde:
therfore his goodes shal not prospere. Though he hadde foyson of euerye thynge, yet was he poore, and therfore he was but a wretche on euery syde.

For thoughe the wycked haue neuer so moche to fyll his belye, yet God shall sende
his wrathe vpon him, and cause his battayle to rayne ouer him: so that yf he flee the yron weapons, he shall be shotte with the stele bowe. The arowe shall be taken forthe, and go oute at his backe, and a glysteryuge swerde throwe the gall of him, feare shall come vpon him. There shall no darckenesse be hable to hyde him. And vnkyndled fyre shall consume him, and loke what remayneth in his house, it shall be destroyed. The heauen shall declare his wyckednesse, and the earthe shall take parte agaynste him. The substaunce that he hathe in his house, shall be taken awaye
and perisshe, in the daye of the Lordes wrath.
This is the portion that the wicked shal haue
of God, and the heritage that he mays lohe for of the Lorde.

¶ Job reciteth the prosperite of the wicked, and after declareth their lothsome ruyne & destruction.

CAPI. XXI.

Iob answered and said: O heare my wordes and amende youre selues. Suffre me a litle, &
I may speake also, and then laugh my wor-des to scorne yf ye will. Is it with a man that I make this disputation? Which if it were so,
holde not my spirite be then in sore trouble?
Marke me well, be abashed, & laye youe hand
vpon youe mouth. For when I ponder and cōsyder this, I am afrayde, and my flesh is fast
ten with feare. Wherfore do wycked men liue in healthe and prosperite come to their olde age, and increase in rychesse? Their children children lyue in their syght, and their generacion before their eyes. Their houses are safe frome all feare, for the rod of God dothe not smyte them. Their bullocke gendreth, & that not oute of tyme: their cowe calueth, and is not barreteefull.

They sende forth their children by flockes,
and their sonnes leade the daunce. They beare with them tabrettes and harpes, and haue instrumentes of musyke at their pleasure. They spende their dayes in welthe: but sodenlye
they goo downe to hell. They saye vnto God:
goo frome vs, we desyre not the knowlege of thy wayes. What maner felowe is the almightye, that we shoulde serue him? What profyte shoulde we haue to submyt our selues vnto him? Lo, there is vtterly no goodnesse in them, therfore will not I haue to do with the counsel of the vngodly. How oft shal the candle of the wicked be put out? how oft cōmeth their destruction vpon them? O what sorowe shall God gyue theym for their parte in his wrathe? Yea they shall be as chaffe before the wynde, and as duste that the storme carryeth
awaye.

And though God saue their chyldren from suche sorow, yet will he so rewarde them selues that they shall knowe it. Their owne destruction and miserye shal they se with their eyes,
and drinke of the fearful wrath of the almigh
tye. For what careth he what becommeth of his household after his death? whose monethes passe away swifter then an arowe. In as moch then as God hath the hyeth power of al, who can teache him any knowlege? One dieth now when he is mightye, and at his best, riche, and in prosperite: euen when his bowelles are at the fattest, & his bones full of mary. An other dyeth in sorowe and heuynesse, and neuer had good dayes: Nowe slepe they bothe alyke in the earthe, and the wormes couer them. But I know what ye thynke, yea & what ye ymaggin agaynste me vnryghteously. For ye saye:
where is the Princes palace? Where is the dwellyng of the vngodly? Aske any man that goeth by the waye, and (yf ye will not regarde their tokens and dedes) he shall tell you, that the wicked is kepte vnto the daye of destruction, and that the vngodly shalbe brought forth in the daye of wrathe. Who dare reproue him for his wayes to his face? who rewardeth him for the vngracefulnesse that he dothe? Yet shall he be brought to his graue, and watche among the heape of the dead. Then shall he be fayne to be buryed amonge the stones by the brooke syde. All men muste folowe hym, and there are innumerable gone before him. O howe vayne is the comforte that ye gyue me?
Are not youre aunswheres cleane contrarye to syght and trueth?

¶ Eliphas reprehendeth Job of wronges falsely

CAPI. XXII.

Then Eliphas the Themanite gaue answere
and sayd: Maye a man be compared vnto God in his doynge, thoughe he seme to be wyse

him selfe for to be lyke hym? What pleasure hath God in that thou art rightous: Or what dothe it profyte him, that thy wayes are per= fect? Is he afrayde to reproue the, and to step forthe with the in to iudgement? Commeth not this for that greate wyckednesse, and for thyne vngracious dedes, whiche are innume= rable? Thou hast taken the pledge frome thy brethren for noughte, and robbed the naked of their clothynge: To suche as were wery, hast thou gyuen no water to drynke, thou haste withdrawen breed from the hungrye: Sholde
B suche one then as vseth vyolence, wronge,
and oppression (doynge all thynge of parcia= litie, and hauynge respecte of personnes) dwell in the lande? Thou haste sente wydo= wes awaye emptye, and oppressed the poore
fatherlesse.

Therfore arte thou compassed aboute with snares on euery syde, and sodeynly vexed with feare. Shouldest thou then se no darckenesse?
Sholde not the water floude runne ouer the?
Nowe bycause that God is hyer then the he= uēs, and bicause thou seest that the sterres are so hye, wylte thou therfore saye: Tusshe how shoulde God knowe? Dothe his domynion reache beyonde the cloudes? Tusshe the clou= des couer him that he may not se, for he dwel= leth in heuen. Well, thou wylte kepe the olde waye that all wycked men haue gone: bothe
C olde and younge, whose foundacion is a run= nynge water, which saye vnto God: go from vs, and after this maner: Tush, what wil the almighetye do vnto vs? where as he (notwith= standynge) filleth their houses with all good.
Whiche meaninge of the vngodly be farre fro me. For with ioye shal the godly, & with glad= nesse shall the innocente se, that their increase shal be hewen downe, and their posteritie con= sumed with fyre.

Therfore reconcyle the vnto God, and be content, so shal all thynges prospere with the ryght well. Receyue the lawe at his mouthe, and laye vp his wordes in thyne herte. For yf thou wylt tourne to the almyghty, thou shalt D stand faste, and all vnryghtousnesse shall be farre from thy dwellynge: He shall gyue the an haruest, whiche in plenty and aboundaunce shall excede the duste of the earthe, and the golde of Ophir lyke ryuer stones. Yea the al= myghtye his owne selfe shall be thyne har= uest, and the heape of thy moneye. Then shalte thou haue thy delyte in the almyghtye, and lyfte vp thy face vnto God. Then shalte thou make thy prayer vnto him, and he shall heare the, and thou shalte kepe thy promy=
ses. Then, loke what thou takest in hande, he shall make it to prospere with the, and the lyghte shall shyne in thy wayes. For who so humbleth him selfe, hym shall he set vp: and who so loketh mekely, shall be healed. Yf thou be innocent, he shall saue the: and tho=
rowe the vngyltynesse of thyne handes shalte
thou be delyuered.

¶ Job affyrmeth that he both knoweth and feareth
the power and sentence of the iudge, and sayth that he hath walked in his ryghtousnes.

CAPI. XXIII.

Job answered and sayd: My sayinge is yet
this daye in bytternesse, and my hande he= uye amonge my gronynges. O that I might se him and fynde him: O that I myght come before his seat, to pleade my cause before him,
and to fyll my mouth with argumentes, that I myght knowe what answere he wold giue me: and that I mighte vnderstande, what he wolde saye vnto me. Wyll he pleade agaynst me with his great power and strength, or wil he leane him self vtterly vpon me? Oh no, let him not doo so with me. But let him gyue me B lyke power to go to the lawe, then am I sure to wynne my matter. For though I go before I fynde him not: Yf I come behynde, I can gette no knowlege of him: Yf I goo on the lefte syde to ponder his workes, I can not atteyne vnto theym. Agayne, yf I goo on the ryghte syde, he hydeth hym selfe that I can not se him: but as for my way he knoweth
it, and trieth me as the golde in the fyre.

Neuerthelesse my fete kepe his pathe, his hyghe strete haue I holden, and not gone oute of it: I haue not forsaken the commaunde= C
ment of his lyppes, but loke what he charged me with his mouthe, that haue I shut vp in my herte. It is he hym selfe alone, who shall tourne hym backe? He dothe as him lusteth, and bryngeth to passe what he wyll. He re= wardeth me in to my bosome, and many other thynges mo doth he, as he mas by his power.
This is the cause that I shrinke at his presence, D
so that when I consider him, I am afrayde of him. For in so moche as he is God, he ma= keth my herte softe: and seynge that he is al= mightie, he putteth me in feare. Thus can not I get out of darckenes, the cloude hathe co=
uered my face.

¶ Job descryueth the wycked dedes of men, and she=
weth what curse belongeth to the wycked.

CAPI. XXIIII.

Consyderynge then there is no tyme hyd
from the almyghtye, how happeneth it A that they whiche knowe him, wyll not regarde his dayes? For some there be that re= B moue other mennes landemarkes: that robbe theym of their cattell, and kepe the same for their owne: that dryue awaye the asse of the fatherlesse: that take the wydowes oxe for a pledge: that thruste the poore oute of the waye, and oppresse the symple of the worlde togyther. Beholde, the wylde asses in the de= serte goo by tymes, as their maner is, to spoyle: Yea the verye wyldernesse ministreth foode for their chyldren. They repe the corne felde that is not their owne: and gather the grapes out of his vyneyarde, whom they haue oppressed by violence. They are the cause that so many men are naked and bare, hauynge no clothes to couer them: & kepe them from colde.
So that when the showers in the mountaynes
haue rayned vpon them, and they be all wet,
they haue none other succour, but to kepe them
amonge the rockes.

They spoyle the suckynge fatherlesse chyl=
dren, and put the poore in pryson: in so moche
that they let them goo naked withoute clo=
thynge, and yet the hungrye beare the sheues.
The poore are fayne to laboure in their oyle
myllęs, yea and to treade in their wyne pres= ses, and yet to suffre thyrst. The hole citye cry= eth vnto the Lorde with syghynge, the soules of the slayne, make their complaynte: But God destroyeth them not for al this, where as they (notwithstandynge) are rebellious & diso= bedient enemies, which like not his light and waye, ne turne againe in to his pathe. Timely in the mornyng do they aryse to murther the C symple and poore, and in the nyght they go a stealynge.

The eye of the vngodly is lyke the aduou= terer, that wayteth for the darckenesse, and sayth thus in him selfe: Tush, there shall no man se me, and so he disguyseth his face. In the nyght season they searche the houses, and hyde them selues in the daye tyme, but wyll not knowe the lyght. For as soone as the daye breaketh, the shadowe of deth commeth vpon
them, and they goo in horrible darckenesse.
The vngodlye is very swyfte O that his por= cion also vpon earthe were swyfter then the runnyng water, which suffereth not the hyp= man to beholde the fayre and pleasaunt vine= yardes: O that they (for the wickednesse whi= D che they haue done) were drawen to the hell soner then snowe melteth at the heate. O that all compassion vpon theym were forgotten:
that their dayntles were wormes, that they were cleane put oute of mynde, and vtterlye hewen downe lyke an vnfrutful tre. For they maynteyne the barren, & make them that they can not beare, and vnto wydowes they do no good. They plucke downe the mightye with their power, and when they them selues are gotten vp, they are neuer withoute feare, as long as they lyue. And though they might be safe, yet they wil not receyue it, for their eyes loke vpon their owne wayes. They are exalted for a litle, but shortly are they gone, broughte to extreme pouertie, and taken oute of the waye: yea and vtterly plucte of, as the eares of corne. Is it not so? Who wyll then reproue me as a lyar, and saye that my wordes are no= thynge worth?

¶ Baldad proueth that no man is cleane and with= out synne before God.

CAPI. XXV.

A Then aunswered Baldad the Suhite, and saith: Power and feare is with him aboue, that maketh peace, syttynge in his hyghnesse, whose men of warre are innu= merable, and whose light ariseth ouer al. But how may a man compared vnto God be iusti= B fyed? Or how can he be clene, that is borne of a woman? Beholde, the moone shyneth no= thing in comparison to him, and the sterres are vncleane in his sight. How moch more then man that is but corruption: and the sonne of man, whiche is but a worme?

¶ Job sheweth that men can not helpe God, and proueth it by his myracles.

CAPI. XXVI.

Job aunswered and sayde: O howe helpest A thou the weyke? what comfort giuest thou vnto him that hath no strength? Where is the counsel that thou sholdest gyue him which hath no wysdome? Wylt thou so shewe thyne excellent ryghtousnesse, before whome haste B thou spoken those wordes? Who made the brethe to come oute of the mouthe? The gy= auntes and worthyes that are slayne, and lye
vnder the worlde with their companions, yea
and all they whiche dwell benethe in the hell
are not hyd from him, and the verye destructi= C on selfe can not be kepte oute of his syght. He stretcheth oute the northe ouer the emptye, and hangeth the earthe vpon nothynge. He byndeth the water in his cloudes, that they fall not downe togither. He holdeth backe his stoole, that can not be sene, and spredeth his cloudes before it.

The wōders of God.

He hath compassed the waters with cer=
tayne boundes, vntyll the daye and nyghte come to an ende. The verye pyllers of hea= uen tremble and quake at his reprofe. He stil= D leth the see with his power, and thorowe his wysdome hath he set forthe the worlde. With his spryte hathe he garnysshed the heauens, and with his hande hathe he wounded the rebellyous serpente. This is nowe a shorte somme of his doynges. But who is hable suf= fycyently to reheарse his workes? Who can perceyue and vnderstande the thonder of his power?

¶ The constancye and perfectnes of Job, and the parte of the vnfaythfull with god.

CAPI. XXVII.

And Job went forthe in his communi= A cacion, sayinge: as truely as God ly= ueth (whiche hathe taken awaye my power fro me) and the almyghtye, that hathe vexed my mynde: my lyppes shall talke of no vanitie, and my tonge shall speake no dis= ceyte, whyle my brethe is in me, and as long as the wynde (that God hath gyuen me) is in my nostrels.

God forbyd I shoulde graunte youre cause to be right. As for me, vntyll myne ende come, wyll I neuer goo fro myne innocencye. My B ryghtous dealynge kepe I faste, whiche I wyll not forsake: my herte shall not reproue me of my dayes. Therfore myne ennemy shal be founde as the vngodly, and he that taketh parte agaynste me as the vnryghteous. What hope hathe the hypocryte, though he haue greate good, and though the God gyue him ry= ches after his hertes desire? Dothe God heare him the soner, when he cryeth vnto him in his Hh.ij. nede?

nede? Hathe he suche pleasure and delyte in the almyghtye, that he dare alwaye cal vpon God? I will teache you in the name of God, and the thynge that I haue of the almyghtye wyll I not kepe from you. Beholde ye stande in your owne conceyte, as thoughe ye knewe all thynges. Wherfore then do ye go aboute with suche vayne wordes? sayinge: This is the porcion that the wicked shal haue of God, and the heritage that tyrauntes shall receyue of the almyghtye. Yf he get manye chyldren, they shall perysshe with the swerde, and his posterite shall haue scarcenesse of breed. Loke whom he leaueth behynde hym, they shall dye and be buryed, and no man shall haue pitye of his wydowes. Thoughe he haue as moche money as the duste of the earth, and rayment as redye as the claye, he maye well prepare it: but the goulye shall put it vpon him, and the innocent shall deale oute the moneye. His house shall endure as the moth, & as a boothe that the watchman maketh. When the ryche man dyeth, he carryeth nothynge with him: he is gone with the twynckelynge of an eye. Destruction taketh holde vpon hym as a water floude, and the tempest stealeth him awaye in the nyght season. A vehement wynde caryeth him hence, and departeth: a storme plucketh him out of his place. It ruisheth in vpon him and spareth him not, he maye not escape from the power therof. Then clap men their handes at him, yea and iest of him when they loke vpon his place.

¶ Job sheweth that the wisdome of God is vnsearcheable.

CAPI. XXVIII.

THere are places where siluer is molten, and where gold is tryed: where yron is dygged oute of the grounde, and stones resolued to metall. The darkenesse shall ones come to an ende, he can seke out the ground of al thinges: the stones, the darke, and the horrible shadowe. With the ryuer of water parteth he asunder the straunge people, that knoweth no good neyghbourheed: suche as are rude, vnmanerly, and boystours. He bringeth foode oute of the earth, and that which is vnder, consumeth he with fyre. There is founde a place, whose stones are clene Saphires, and where the clottes of the erth are gold. There is a waye also that the byrdes knowe not, that no vulturs eye hathe sene: wherin the proude and hye minded walke not, and where no lyon commeth. There putteth he his hande vpon the stonye rockes, and ouerthroweth the mountaynes. Ryuers flowe oute of the rockes, and loke what is pleasaunt, his eye seeth it. Out of droppes bringeth he great floudes togyther, and the thynge that is hydde, bringeth he to lyghte. How commeth a man then by wysdome? Where is the place that men fynde vnderstandynge? Veryly no man can tell how worthy a thyng she is, neither is she founde in the lande of the lyuynge. The depe sayth: she is not in me, The see saith: she is not with me. She can not be gotten for the most fyne golde, neither maye the pryce of her be bought with anye moneye. No wedges of golde, of Ophir, no precious Onix stones, no Saphirs maye be compared vnto her. No, neither gold, ne christal, neither swete owres, ne golden plate. There is nothynge so worthy, or so excellēt, as is ones to be named vnto her: for perfect wysdome goeth farre beyonde them all. The Topas that commeth oute of Inde, maye in no wyse be lykened vnto her, yea no maner apparell, howe pleasaunte and fayre so euer it be.

Whence then commeth wysdome? & where is the place of vnderstandynge? She is hydde from the eyen of all men, yea & from the fowles of the ayre. Destruction and deathe saye: we haue herde tell of her with our eares. But God seeth her waye, and knoweth her place. For he beholdeth the endes of the worlde, and loketh vpon all that is vnder heauen. When he weyed the wyndes, and measured the waters: when he set the rayne in order, and gaue the myghty floudes a lawe, then dyd he se her, then declared he her, prepared her, and knewe her. And vnto man he sayd: Beholde to feare the Lorde is wysdome: and to forsake euyll, is vnderstandynge.

CAPI. XXIX.

SO Job proceded and wente forthe in his communicacion, sayinge: O that I were as I was in the monethes paste, and in the dayes when God preserued me: when his lyght shined vpon my heed: when I went after the same lyghte, and shynynge euen thorowe the darckenesse. As it stode with me, when I was welthye and hadde ynoughe: when God prospered my house: when the almyghtye was with me: when my housholde folkes stode aboute me: when my wayes ran ouer with butter, and when the stonye rockes gaue me ryuers of oyle: when I went thorowe the citye vnto the gate, and when they sette me a chayre in the strete: when the younge men (as soone as they sawe me) hyded themselues, and when the aged arose, and stode vp vnto me: when the Princes left of their talkynge, and layde their hande to their mouthe: when the myghtye kepte styll their voyce, and when their tonges cleaued to the rofe of their mouthes. When all they that herde me, called me happye: and when all they that sawe me, wysched me good. For I delyuered the poore when he cryed, and the fatherlesse that wanted helpe. He that shoulde haue ben lost, gaue me a good worde, and the wydowes herte praysed me. And why? I put vpon me ryghtousnesse, whiche couered me as a garmente, and equytie was my crowne. I was an eye vnto the blynde, and a fote to the lame, I was a father vnto the poore, and

and when I knewe not their causes, I soughte it oute diligently. I brake the crafte of the vnryghtous, and pluckte the spoyle oute of their tethe.

Therfore I thoughte verily, that I shoulde haue dyed in my nestle: and that my dayes shoulde haue ben as manye as the sondes of the see. For my roote was spredde oute by the water syde, and the dewe laye vpon my corne. Myne honour encreased more and more, and my bowe was euer the stronger in my hande. Vnto me men gaue eare, me they regarded, and with sylence they taryed for my counsell. Yf I hadde spoken, they wolde haue it none other wayes, my wordes were so well taken amonges them. They wayted for me as the earthe dothe for the rayne: and gaped for me, as the grounde dothe to receyue the latter showe. When I laughed, they knewe well it was not earnest: and this testimonye of my countenaunce fell not to the earth. When I agreed vnto their waye, I was the chyefe, and sate as a kynge amonge his seruauntes: or as one that comforteth suche as be in heuynesse.

CAPI. XXX.

BVt nowe they that are myne inferyours and yonger then I, haue me in derysyon: yea euen they, whose fathers I wold haue thoughte scorne to haue set with the dogges of my cattell. The power and strengthe of their handes myghte do me no good, and as for their age, it is spente and passe awaye without anye profyte. For verye mysery and honger, they wente aboute in the wildernesse lyke wretches and beggers, pluckynge vp herbes amonge the bushes, and the Juniperes roote was their meate. And when they were dryuen forth, men cryed after them, as it had ben after a theefe. Their dwellynge was beside foule brookes, yea in the caues and dennes of the earthe. Vpon the bryre bethe wente they aboute cryinge, and in the bryme hylles they gathered them togyther. They were the chyldren of fooles and vylaynes, which are deed alwaye from the worlde. Now am I their songe, and am become their tessting stocke: they abhorre me, they flee farre fro me, and spayne my face with spettle. For the Lorde hathe opened his quyuer, he hathe hyt me, and put my bridle in my mouthe. Vpon my ryghte hande they rose togyther agaynste me, they haue hurte my feete, made awaye to destroye me, and my pathe haue they clene marred. It was easye for them to doo me harme, that they neded no man to helpe them. They fell vpon me, as it hadde ben the breakynge in of waters, and came in by heapes to destroye me. Fearefulnesse is tourned agaynde me.

Myne honoure vanysheth awaye more swyftly then wynde, and my prosperitie departeth hence lyke as it were a cloude. Therfore is my mynde poured full of heuynesse, and the dayes of my trouble haue taken holde vpon me. My bones are pearsed thorowe in the nyghte season, and my synowes take no reste. With all their power haue they chaunged my garment, and gyrded me therwith as it were with a cote. I am euē as it were claye, and am become like asshes and dust. When I crye vnto the, thou doest not heare me: and thoughe I stande before the, yet thou regardest me not. Thou art become myne enemy, and with thy violent hande, thou takest parte agaynst me. In tymes past thou dyddest set me vp on hye, as it were aboue the wynde, but nowe hast thou gyuen me a verye sore fall. Sure I am that thou wylt delyuer me vnto deth: where as a lodgynge is prepared for all thynge lyuynge. Now vse not men to do violence vnto them that are destroyed all redye: but where hurte is wonne, there vse they to helpe. Dyd not I wepe in the tyme of trouble? hadde not my soule compassion vpon the poore? Yet neuertheles, where as I loked for good, euyl happened vnto me: and where as I waited for lyghte, there came darckenesse. My bowelles sethe withyn me, and take no reste, for the dayes of my trouble are come vpō me. Mekely and lowly came I in, yea and without anye displeasure: I stode vp in the congregacion and communed with them. But nowe, I am a companion of Dragons, and a felowe of Estriches. My skynne vpon me is tourned to blacke, and my bones are brent th heate: my harpe is tourned to sorow, and my ppe to weppynge.

CAPI. XXXI.

I Made a couenaunt with myne eyes, that I wolde not loke vpon a damosell. For howe greate a porcion shall I haue of God from aboue? and what enheritaunce frome the almyghtye on hye? As for the vngodlye, and he that torneth him selfe to the company of wicked doers, shall not destruction and mysery come vpon him? Dothe not he se my wayes, and tell all my goynges? Yf I haue cleued vnto vanite, or yf my fete haue runne to disceyuelette me be weyed in an euen balaunce, that God maye se myne innocencye. Yf so be that I haue withdrawen my foote out of the right waye: yf myne herte hath folowed myne eye syght, yf I haue stayned or defyled my handes: O then is it reason, that I sowe, and an other eate / yea that my generacion and offsprynge be cleane rooted oute. Yf myne herte hathe lusted after my neyghboures wyfe, or yf I haue layde wayte at his wore: O then lette my wyfe be an other mannes harlot, and let other lye with her. For this is a wyckednesse and synne that is worthy to be punished, yea a fyre that vtterly shold consume me, and rote oute all my substaunce. Dyd I euer thynke scorne to do ryghte vnto my seruauntes and maydens, when they had any matter agaynst me? But seynge that God wyll syt in iudgement what shall I doo? And for so mothe as he wyll nedes vysyt me, what answere shall I gyue him? He that fashioned me in my mothers wombe, made he not him also? were we not bothe shapen alyke in oure mothers bodyes? When the poore desyreth any thyng at me, haue I denyed it them? Haue I caused ỹ wydowe stande waytynge for me in vayne? Haue I eaten my porcion alone, that the fatherlesse hath had no part with me? for mercy grewe vp with me fro my youth, and compassion fro my mothers wombe. Haue I sene any man perisshe thorow nakednesse and want of clothyng? Or any poore man for lacke of rayment, whose syds thanked me not, bicause he was warmed with the wolle of my shepe?

Dyd I euer lyfte vp my hande to hurte the fatherlesse? yea in the gate where I sawe my selfe to be in authorite: then let myne arme fall fro my shoulder, and myne arme holes be broken frome the ioyntes. For I haue euer feared the vengeaunce and punyshement of God, and knewe weepe well, that I was not able to beare his burthen. Haue I put my trust in golde? Or haue I sayde to the fyneste golde of all: thou arte my confidence? Haue I reioyced bycause my substaunce was greate, and bicause my hande gat so moche? Dyd I euer greatly regarde the sylynge of the sonne? or hadde I the goynge downe of the moone in greate reputacion? Hathe my herte medled priuyly with any discepte? Or dyd I euer kisse myne owne hande? that were a wyckednesse for whyche I shulde be punyshed, for then shoulde I haue denyed the God that is above. Haue I euer reioyced at the hurte of myne ennemye? Or was I euer glad that anye harme happened vnto him? Oh no. I neuer suffered my mouthe to wo suche a synne as to wysshe him cursyll. Yet they of myne owne housholde saye: who shall lette vs to haue oure bellye full of his flesshe? I haue not suffered a straunger to lye without, but opened my doores vnto him. Haue I euer done anye wicked dede, where thorowe I shamed my selfe before men: or anye abhominacion, that I was fayne to hyde it? For yf I hadde feared anye greate multytude of people: or yf I hadde ben despysed of the symple: O then shoulde I haue bene afrayde. Thus haue I quietly spente my lyfe, and not gone out at the doore. O that I hadde one whiche wolde heare me. Loo, this is my cause. Lette the almyghtye gyue me answere: and let him that is my contrarye parte, sue me with a lybell. Then shall I take it vpon my shoulder, and as a garlande aboute my heed. I haue tolde the nombre of my goinges, and delyuered them vnto him as to a prynce. But yf case be that my lande crye agaynste me, or that the forowes therof make anye complaynte: Yf I haue eaten the fruites therof vnpayed for, yea yf I haue greued anye of the plowemen: then lette thystles growe in stede of my whete, and thornes for my barleye.

There ende the wordes of Job.

Eliu after the other had fynyshed their communycacyon, reproueth them of folishnes. Ieg maketh not a mens wyse, but the spirite of God.

CAPI. XXXII.

So these thre men wolde stryue no more with Job, bycause he helde him selfe a ryghteous man. But Eliu the sonne of Barachell the Busite of the kynred of Ram, was very sore displeased at Job, that he called him selfe iust before God. And vp Jobs three frendes he was angrye also, bicause they hadde founde no reasonable aunswere to ouercome hym. Nowe taryed Eliu tyll they hadde ended their communicacion with Job, for why they were elder then he. So when Eliu the sonne of Barachell the Busite sawe that these thre men were not able to make Job answere, he was mysconteut, so that he gaue answere him selfe and sayde: Lonly be yonge that I am younge, and ye be men of age, I was afrayde, & durste not shewe forthe my mynde, for I thoughte thus within my selfe: It becommeth olde men to speake, and the aged to teache wysdome. Euery man (no doubte) hathe a mynde, but it is the inspiracion of the almyghtye that giueth vnderstandynge. All men are not wyse, neither dothe euerye aged man vnderstande the thynge that is lawfull. Therfore wyll I speake also (in so farre as I maye be herde) and wyll shewe you myne opinion. For whan I hadde wayted tyll ye made an ende of your talkynge, and herde youre wysdome, what argumentes ye made in your communicacion: yea when I hadde diligently pondred what ye sayd: I founde not one of you that made any good argument agaynste Job, or that directly coulde make answere vnto his wordes: leste sholde prayse your selues to haue founde oute wysdome: bycause it is God that hathe cast hym oute, and no man. Neuertheles seynge he hathe not spoken vnto me, therfore wyll not I answere hym as ye haue done (for they were so abasshed, that they coulde not make answere, nor speake one worde) but seynge wyll not speake, standynge styll lyke dombe men, and makinge no answere: I haue a good hope for my parte to shape him an answere, and to shewe him my meanyng. For I am full of wordes, and the spirite that is within me, compelleth me.

Beholde, I am as the newe wyne, whiche hath no vente, and bursteth the newe bottels in sunder. Therfore wyl I speake, that I may haue a vente: I wyll open my lyppes, and make answere. I wyll regarde no manner of personne, no man wyll I spare. For yf I wold go aboute to please men, I knowe not howe sone my maker wolde take me awaye.

Elyu sheweth wherin Job offendeth. With God maye we not stryue, nor curyously searche oute his workes.

CAPI. XXXIII.

Wherfore heare my wordes (O Job) and herken vnto me all that I wyll saye: Beholde, I wyll open my mouthe, and my tonge shall speake oute of my chawes. My herte shall ordre my wordes a ryght, and my lyppes shall talke of pure wysdome. The spirite of God hath made me, and the breth of the almyghty hath gyuen me my life. Yf thou canst, then gyue me answere: prepare thy selfe to stande before me face to face. Beholde before God am I euē as thou, for I am fashioned and made euen of the same moulde. Therfore thou nedest not be afrayde of me, neither nedeth thou to feare, that my authorytye shalbe to heuy for the. Nowe haste thou spoken in myne eares, and I haue herd the voyce of thy wordes: I am clene without any faute, I am innocent, and there is no wyckednes in me. But lo, he hath pyked a quarell agaynste me, and taketh me for his ennemye: he hath put my fote in the stockes, and loketh narowlye vnto all my pathes. Beholde, vnto these vnreasonable wordes of thyne wyll I make aunswere.

Sholde God be reproued of man? Why dost thou then stryue agaynst him bicause he giueth the no accomptes of all his doinges? For when God doth ones commaūde a thing there shold no man be curious, to serche whether it be right. In dreames and visions of the night season (when slombring commeth vpon men that they fall a slepe in their beddes) he rowneth them in the eares, he informeth the and theweth them playnely that it is he whiche withdraweth man from euill, deliuereth him from pryde kepeth his soule from destruction, and his lyfe from the swerde. He chastneth him with sycknesse, and bringeth him to his bed: he layeth sore punishment vpon his bones, so ỹ his lyfe may awaye with no bred, and his soule abhorreth to eate anye dayntye meat: in so moche that his body is clene consumed awaye, and his bones appere no more. His soule draweth on to destruction, and his lyfe to deth. Now if there be a messenger (one amonge a thousande) sent for to speake vnto man, and to shewe him the ryght waye: then the Lorde is mercyfull vnto him, and sayth: he shall be deliuered, that he fall not downe to destruction. for I am sufficiently reconcyled. Then his flesshe (whiche hath ben in misery & trouble) shal be as it was in his youth. For yf he yelde him selfe vnto God, he is gracyous, and sheweth him his countenaūce toforfully, and rewardeth man for his righteousnesse. Suche a respecte hathe he vnto men. Therfore let a man confesse (and saye) I offended, but he hathe chastened and reformed me: I did vnrightoutly, neuertheles he hath not recompenced me therafter. Yea he hath deliuered my soule from destruction, and my lyfe that it seeth the light. Lo, thus worketh God alwaye with man, that he kepeth his soule frome perysshynge, and letteth him enioye the lyghte of the lyuynge. Marke well (O Job) and heare me: holde the styll, vntyll I haue spoken. But yf thou hast any thynge to saye, then answere me, and speake, for thy answere pleaseth me. Yf thou hast nothing, then heare me, & holde thy tonge, so shall I teache the wysdome.

Elyu prayseth the iustice of God, whiche iudgeth the worlde, and gouerneth all.

CAP. XXXIIII.

Eliu proceadinge forth in his communicacion, sayd: heare my wordes (O ye wyse men) herken vnto me, ye that haue vnderstandynge. For lyke as the mouth tasteth the meates, so the eare proueth and discerneth the wordes. As for the iudgement, let vs seke it out amonge oure selues, that we may knowe what is ryght. And why? Job hath sayde: I am ryghteous, but God dothe me wronge. I muste nedes be a lyer, thoughe my cause be ryghte, and vyolently I am plaged where as I made no faute: where is there suche one as Job, that drynketh vp scornefulnesse like water? whiche goeth in the company of wycked doers, and walketh with vngodly men? For he sayth: Thoughe a man be good, yet is he nought before God. Therfore herke vnto me ye that haue vnderstandyng.

Farre be it from God, that he shold medle with wickednes: and farre be it from the almighty, that he shold medle with vnrighteous dealyng: but he rewardeth the workes of mā and causeth euery man to fynde accordinge to his wayes. For sure it is that God condēneth no man wrongfully, and the iudgemēt of the almighty is not vnryghteous. Who ruleth the earthe in his stede? Or whome hathe he set to gouerne the hole worlde? To whome hathe he giuen his hert, for to drawe his spirite and breth vnto him? All flesshe shall come together vnto nought, and all men shall turne agayne vnto earthe. Yf thou now haue vnderstandyng, heare what I say, and harken to the voyce of my wordes.

Maye he be made whole, that loueth no ryghte? Yf thou were a very innocent man, shuldest thou then be punyshed? For he is cuē the same, that knoweth the rebellyons kynges, and sayth to Princes: Vngodlye men are ye. He hath no respecte vnto the personnes of the lordlye, and regardeth not the ryche more then poore. For they be all the worcke of his handes. In the twinclynge of an eye shall they be slayne: and at mydnyght, when the people and the tyrauntes rage, then shall they perisshe and be taken awaye without handes. And why? his eyes loke vpon the wayes of man, and he seeth all his goynges. There is no darcknesse nor thycke shadowe, that can hyde the wycked doers frome hym. For no man shal be suffered to go in to iudgement with God.

Many one, yea innumerable dothe he punysshe, and setteth other in their stedes. For he knoweth their cuyll and darke workes, therfore shall they be destroyed. They that were in the stede of Scars, dealte lyke vnbodlye men. Therfore turned they backe crapterously and vnfaythfully from him, and wold not receyue his his wayes. In so moch þ they haue caused þ voyce of the poore to come vnto him, & nowe he heareth the complainte of suche as are in necessitie. Yf he delyuer and graunte pardon, who will iudge or condemne? But yf he hyde awaye his countenaunce, who will turne it about agayne, whether it be to the people or to any man? For the wyckidnesse and synne D of the people, he maketh an hypocrite to reygne ouer them. For so moche then as I haue begon to talke of God, I will not hyndre þ. Yf I haue gone a mysse, enfourme me: yf I haue done wronge, I wil leaue of. Wilt thou not gyue a reasonable answere? Art thou afrayed of any thinge, seynge thou begannest first to speake, and not I? For els the men of vnderstandinge and wysdome, that haue herd me, myght saye: What canst thou speake? As for Job he hath neyther spoken to the purpose nor wysely. O father, let Job be well tryed, because he hath turned him selfe to the wycked: yea aboue his synnes he hathe blasphemed, which offence he hath done euen before vs, in that he stryueth against God with his wordes.

CAPI. XXXV.

A ELiu spake more ouer, and sayde: Thinkest thou it ryght that thou sayest: I am ryghteous before God? Seinge thou sayest so, howe wilt thou knowe it? What thinge hast thou more excellent then I, that am a synner? Therfore will I gyue answere vnto the and thy frendes: loke vnto the heauen, and beholde it: consydre the cloudes, how B they are hygher then thou. Yf thou synnest, what doest thou vnto him? Yf thyne offences be many, how gettest thou his fauoure? Yf thou be ryghteous: what gyuest thou him? Or what receyueth he of thy handes? Of suche an vngodly personne as thou, and of the sonne of man that is righteous as thou pretendest to be: there is a great crye and complaynt made by them that are oppressed with violence, yea euery man complayneth vpon þ cruell arme of tyrauntes. For suche one neuer sayth: Where is God that made me? & that shyneth vpon vs, that we myght prayse him C in the nyght? Which gyueth vs more vnderstandinge, then he doeth the beastes of the earth, and teacheth vs more then the foules of heauen.

If any suche complayne, no man gyueth aunswere, and that because of the wyckednesse of proude tyrauntes. But yf a man call vpon God, doeth not he heare hym? Doeth not the almyghty accepte his crye? When thou speakest then, shulde not he pardon the, D yf thou open thy selfe before him, and put thy trust in him? Then doeth he no vyolence in his wrathe, neyther hath he pleasure in curyous and depe inquysicions. Therfore hath Job opened his mouth but in vayne, and foolyshly hath he made so many wordes.

CAPI. XXXVI.

ELiu proceded forthe in his talkynge and sayde: Holde the styll a lytle, and I shal A shewe the, what I haue yet to speake on Gods behalfe. I will open vnto the yet more of myne vnderstanding, and proue my maker ryghteous. True are my wordes, and no lyes: and the knowledge, wherwith I argue agaynst the, is perfect. Beholde, God casteth not away the myghty, for he him self is myghty in power and wysdome.

As for the vngodly, he preserueth them not but helpeth the poore to their right. He turneth not his eyes awaye frome the ryghtous he setteth vp kynges in their trone, and stablysheth them, so that they alwaye sit therin. But yf they be layde in pryson and cheynes, B or bounde with the bondes of pouertie: then sheweth he them their workes and dedes and the synnes wherwith they haue vsed cruell vyolence.

He with punysshyng and nurtring of the, roundeth them in the eares, warneth them to leaue of frome their wyckednesse, and to amende. Yf they now will take hede and be obedient, they shall weare out their dayes in prosperitie, and their yeres in pleasure & ioye. But yf they will not obeye, they shall go thorowe the swearde, and perysshe, or they be ware. As for suche as be fayned, dissemblers, and hypocrites, they heape vp wrath for them selues: for they call not vpon him, thought they be his prysonners. Thus their soule perysheth in folye, and their lyfe with the condemned. The poore delyuereth he out of his straytnesse, and comforteth suche as be in necessitie and trouble. Euen so shall he kepe the (yf thou wilt be content) frome the bottomlesse pytte that is beneth: and yf thou wilt holde the quyete, he shall fyll thy table with plentye.

Neuerthelesse thou hast condemned the iudgement of the vngodly, yea euen suche a iudgement C and sentence shalt thou suffre. For the shall not thy cause be stylled with crueltie, nor pacyfyed with many gyftes. Hath God ordened then, that the glorious lyfe of the, and all suche myghty men, shoulde not be put downe? Prolonge not thou the tyme, tyll there come a nyght for the, to set other people in thy steade. But beware that thou turne not asyde to wyckednesse and synne, which hytherto thou hast chosen more then mekenesse. Beholde, God is of a myghty hyghe power: Where is suche a gyde and lawegyuer as he? Who shal reproue him of his wayes? Who wyll saye vnto hym: thou hast doone wrong?

O consydre how gret and excellent his workes D be, whome all men loue and prayse: yea and wonder at him, and yet they se hym but a farre of. Beholde, so great is God, that he passeth our knowledge, neyther are we hable to come to the experience of his yeres. He turneth the water to small droppes, he dryueth his cloudes togither for to rayne, so that they powre downe and drop vpon men. He can spreade out the cloudes (a couering of his tabernacle) and cause his lyght to shyne vpon them, and to couer the botome of the see. By these thinges gouerneth he his people, and gyueth the aboundaunce of meate. In the turnyng of an hande he hydeth the lyght, and at his commaundement it commeth agayne. The rysing vp therof sheweth he to his frendes and to the catell.

¶ Eliu proueth that the wysdome of god is vnsearcheable.

CAP. XXXVII.

A AT this, my hert is astonyed, and moued out of his place. Heare then the sounde of his voyce, and the noyse that goeth out of his mouth. He gouerneth euery thinge vnder the heauen, and his lyght reacheth vnto the ende of the worlde. A roaring voyce foloweth him: for his glorious maiestie gyueth suche a thondre clap, that (though a man heare it) yet maye he not perceyue it afterwarde. It gyueth an horrible sounde, when God sendeth out his voyce: greate thinges doth he, which we can not comprise. When he commaundeth the snowe, it falleth vpon the earth: As sone as he gyueth the rayne a charge, forthwith the showers haue their stregth and fall downe. He sendeth feare vpon euery man, that they myght knowe their owne workes. The beastes crepe into their dennes, and take their reste. Oute of the Southe, commeth the tempeast, and colde oute of the B North.

At the breth of God, the froste commeth, and the waters are shed abrode. The cloudes doo their labour in gyuynge moystnesse, the cloudes powre downe their rayne. He distributeth also on euery syde, according as it pleaseth him to deale oute his workes, that they maye do, what so euer he commaundeth them thorow the hole worlde: whether it be to punysh any lande, or to doo good vnto theym, that seke hym.

C Herken vnto this (O Job) stande styll, and consydre the wondrous workes of God. Arte thou of counsell with God, when he doeth these thinges? When he causeth the lyght to come forthe of his cloudes? Arte thou of his counsell when he spreadeth out the cloudes? Hast thou the perfect knowledge of his wonders? and howe thy clothes are warme, whe the lande is styll thorow the South wynde? Hast thou helped hym to spreade out the heauen, which is to loke vpon, as it were cast of cleare metall? Teache vs what we shall saye vnto him, for we are vnmete because of darkenesse.

Shal it be tolde him what I saye? Shuld D a man speake, or shulde he kepe it backe? For euery man seyth not the lyght, that he kepeth cleare in the cloudes, which he clenseth when he maketh the wynde to blowe. Colde is brought out of the North, but the prayse and honoure of Gods feare commeth frome God him selfe. It is not we that can fynde out the almyghty: for in power, equitie, and ryghteousnesse, he is hygher than can be expressed. Sythe then that euery body feareth him, why shoulde not all wyse men also stande in awe of him?

CAPI. XXXVIII.

THen spake the Lorde vnto Job oute of the storme, and sayde: what is he that A hydeth his mynde with folysh wordes? Gyrde vp thy loynes lyke a man, for I will question the, se thou gyue me a direct answer. Where wast thou, when I layde the foundacions of the earth? Tell playnly yf thou haste vnderstandynge. Who hath measured it, knowest thou? Or, who hath spred the lyne vpon it? Wherevpon stande the pylers of it? Or, who layd the corner stone? Where wast thou when the mornynge starres praysed me togyther, and all the children of God reioysed triumphantely? Who shut the see with dores, when it brake forth as a childe out of his mothers wombe? When I made the cloudes to be a couerynge for it, and swadled it with the darcke? When I gaue it my commaundement, makynge dores and barres for it, sayenge: Hytherto shalt thou come, but no fur- B ther, and here shalte thou laye downe thy prowde and hyghe waues? Hast thou gyuen the mornynge his charge, (as soone as thou wast borne) and shewed the daye sprynge his place, that it might take holde of the corners of the earthe, and that the vngodly myghte be shaken out? Their tokens and weapons, hast thou turned lyke claye, and set theym vp agayne as the chaungynge of a garment. Yea thou hast spoyled the vngodly of their lyght, and broken the arme of the prowde. Camest thou euer into the grounde of the see? or hast thou walked in the lowe corners of the depe? Haue the gates of death bene opened vnto þ? or hast thou sene the dore of euerlastyng treasure? Haste thou also perceyued how broade the earth is? Now yf thou hast knowledge of all, then shew me where lyght dwelleth, and where darkenes is: that thou mayste brynge vs vnto their quarters, yf thou canst tell the waye to their houses.

Knewest thou (when thou wast borne) how C olde thou shuldest be? Wentest thou euer in to the threasauries of the snowe? or hast thou sene the secrete places of the hayle, which I haue prepared against the tyme of trouble, agaynste the tyme of batayle and warre? By what

what waye is the lyght parted, and the heate dealt out vpon the earthe? Who deuideth the aboundaunce of waters into ryuers, or who maketh a waye for the stormy wether, that it watereth and moysteneth the drye and barren grounde: to make the grasse growe in places where no body dwelleth, and in the wyldernesse where no man remayneth? Who is the father of rayne? Or who hathe begotten the droppes of dewe? Out of whose wombe came the yse? Who hathe gendred the coldenes of the ayre? that the waters are as harde as stones, and lye congeled aboue the depe. Hast thou brought the seuen starres together? Or art thou hable to breake the circle of heauen? Canst thou brynge forth the mornynge
D starre or the euenynge starre at conuenient tyme, and conueye them home agayne? Knowest thou the course of heauen, that thou mayst set vp the ordinaunce therof vpon the earthe? Moreouer, canste thou lyfte vp thy voyce to the cloudes, that they maye powre downe a greate rayne vpon the? Canste thou thondre also that they maye goo their waye, and be obedient vnto the, sayenge: Lo here are we? Who geueth sure wysdome or stedfast vnderstandinge? who nombreth the cloudes in wysdome? Who stylleth the vehement waters of the heauen? Who turneth the clottes to dust, and then to be clottes agayne? Huntest thou the praye frome the Lyon? or fedest thou his whelpes lyenge in their dennes and lurkynge in their couches? Who purueyeth meat for the rauen, when his younge crye vnto God, and flycker aboute for wante of meate?

CAPI. XXXIX

A Knowest thou the tyme when the wylde gotes brynge forth their younge among the stony rockes? Or layest thou wayte when the hyndes vse to calue? reckenest thou the monethes after they engendre, that thou knowest the tyme of their bearinge? or when they lye downe, when they cast their younge, and when they are delyuered of their trauayle and payne? How their younge growe vp, and waxe great thorow good fedynge? Who letteth the wylde asse go fre? or who lowseth the bondes of the mule? Unto whom I haue geuen the wyldernesse to be their house, and the vntylled lande to be their dwellynge place. That they maye geue no force for the multitude of people in the cyties, neyther regarde the cryenge of the dryuer: but seke their pasture aboute the mountaynes, and folowe the grene grasse.
Wyll the Unicorne be so tame as to do the Unycorne. seruice, or to abyde styll by thy crybbe? Canst
B thou bynde the yocke aboute him in thy forowes, to make hym plowe after the in the valleyes? Mayste thou truste him (because he is stronge) or commyt thy laboure vnto him? Mayst thou beleue him, that he will brynge home the corne? or to carye anye thinge vnto the barne?

The Estrych (whose fethers are fayrer then the wynges of the sparowe hauke) when he hath layde his Egges vpon the grounde, he bredeth them in the dust, and forgetteth the: so that they myght be treaden with fete, or broken with some wylde beast. So harde is
C he vnto his younge, as though they were not his, & laboureth in vayne without any feare. And that because God hathe taken wysdome frome him, and hath not geuen him vnderstandinge. When his tyme is, he mounteth vpon hyghe, and careth neyther for horse ne man.

Hast thou geuen the horsse his strength, or lerned him to bow downe his neck with feare that he letteth him selfe be dryuen forth lyke a grasshopper, where as the stoute neyenge that he maketh, is fearfull: He breaketh the grounde with the hoffes of his fete cherefully in his strength, and runneth to mete the harnessed men. He layeth asyde all feare, his stomack is not abated, neyther starteth he a back for any swerde. Thoughe the quyuers rattle vpon him, though the speare and shylde glyster:
D yet russheth he in fearsly, and beateth vpon the grounde. He feareth not the noyse of the trompettes, but as sone as he heareth the shawmes blowe, tush (sayth he) for he smelleth the batayle a farre of, the noyse, the Capitaynes and the shoutinge.

Commeth it thorow thy wysdome, that the Goshauke flyeth towarde the South? Doth the Egle mount vp, and make his nest on hye at thy commaundement? He abydeth in the stonye rockes, and vpon the hyghe toppes of harde mountaynes, where no man can come. From thence maye he beholde his praye, and loke farre aboute with his eyes. His younge are fed with bloude, and where any deed body lyeth, there is he forthwith.

Moreouer, God spake vnto Job and sayd: Can he that stryueth with the almyghty, be at rest? Shulde not he which disputeth with God, geue hym an aunswere? Job aunswered the Lorde, sayenge: Beholde, I am to vyle a personne, to answere the, therfore will I laye my hande vpon my mouthe. Once or twyse haue I spoken, but I wyll saye no more.

¶ Job humbleth hym selfe vnto God, the descripcyon of an Elephant. Leuiathan.

CAPI. XL.

Then spake the Lorde vnto Job out of the storme, and sayde: Gyrde vp thy A loynes lyke a man, and tel me the thinges that I wyll aske the. Wilte thou defeate my iudgement? Or wylte thou condemne me, that thou thy selfe mayste be made ryghtous? Is thyne arme then lyke the arme of God? Maketh thy voyce suche a sounde as his doth? Then arme thy selfe with thyne owne power, arayse, decke the in thy ioly aray, powre out the indignation of thy wrathe: se
B that thou cast downe all the proude; looke thou makest all suche as be stubbourne, to obeye: Treade all the vngodly vnder thy fete cast them downe into the myre, & couer their faces with darckenesse: Then wyll I confesse also, that thyne owne ryght hande hath saued the.

Beholde, ye Behemoth (whom I made with the) whiche eateth haye as an oxe: lo, howe stronge he is in his loynes, and what power he hath in the Nauell of his bodye. He spreadeth out his tayle lyke a Cedre tree, all his vaynes are styfe. His shynnes are lyke pypes of brasse, his rygge bones are lyke staues of C yron. First when God made him, he ordeyned the wyldernesse for him, that the mountaynes shulde geue him grasse, where all the beastes of the felde take their pastyme. He lyeth amonge the redes in the Mosses, the fennes hyde him with their shadowe, and the wylowes of the broke couer him rounde aboute. Lo, without any labour may he drynk out of the hole floude, and suppe of Jordan without any trauayle. Who darre laye hand vpon him openly, and vndertake to catche him? Or, who darre put a hooke thorow his nose, and laye a snare for him?

Darrest thou drawe out ye Leuiathan with an angle, or bynde his tongue with a snare? Canst thou put a rynge in the nose of him? or bore his chaftes thorow with a naule? Wyll he make many fayre wordes with the, (thinkest thou) or flatter the? Wyll he make a couenaunt with the? Or art thou hable to compell him to do vnto the continual seruice?
D Wylt thou take thy pastyme with him as wt a byrde? or geue him vnto thy maydens, that thy companyons maye hew him in peces, to be parted amonge the marchaunt men? Cast thou fyll the net with his skynne, or the fisshpannier with his heed? Darrest thou laye hande vpon him? It is better for the to consyder what harme myght happen the there thorow, and not to touche him. For when thou thinkest to haue holde vpon him, he shall begyle the: Euery man also that seyth him, shall go backe. And why? there darre none be so bolde, as to rayse him vp.

CAPI. XLI.

A Who is hable to stande before me? Or, who hathe geuen me anye thinge afore hand, that I am bound to rewarde hym agayne? All thynges vnder heauen are myne. I feare him not, whether he threaten or speke fayre. Who lyfteth hym vp, and strypeth him out of his clothes? Or who taketh hym by ye byt of his brydle? Who openeth the dore of B

his face? for he hathe horrible teth rounde aboute. His bodye is couered with scales, as it were with shyldes, lockt in, kepte, and well compact togyther. One is so ioyned to an other, that no ayre can come in: Yea one hangeth so vpon an other, and stycketh so togyther, that they can not be sundered. His nesing is lyke a glystrynge fyre, and his eyes lyke the mornynge shyne. Oute of his mouthe go torches and fyre brandes, out of his nostrels there goeth a smoke, lyke as out of an hote sething C
pot. His breth maketh the coles burne, the flamme goeth out of his mouth. In his necke remayneth strẽgth, and before his face sorow is tourned to gladnesse. The membres of his body are ioyned so strayte one to an other, and cleue so fast togyther, that he can not be moued.

His hert is as herde as a stone, and as fast as the stithye that the hammer man smyteth vpon. When he goeth: the myghtyest of all are afrayed, and the waues heup. Yf he drawe out the swerde, there maye neyther speare, ne brest plate, abyde him. He setteth as moch by a strawe as by yron, and as moche by a rotten stocke as by metall. He starteth not away for him that bendeth the bowe: and as for slynge stones, he careth as moche for stubble as for them. He counteth the hammer no bet D ter then a strawe, he laugheth him to scorne yt shaketh the speare. He treadeth the golde in ye myre lyke the sharpe potsherdes. He maketh ye depe to sethe and boyle lyke a pot, and stereth the see togyther lyke an oyntement. The waye is lyght after him, the depe is his walkynge place. Upon earthe is there no power lyke vnto his, for he is so made that he feareth not. Yf a man wyll consydre all hyghe thinges, this same is a kynge ouer all the children of pryde.

¶ The repentaunce of Job. He prayeth for his frendes, and his goodes are restored double vnto hym.

CAPI. XLII.

Then Job answered the Lord, and sayd: A
I knowe that thou hast power ouer all Esay.xxviii.c
thinges, and that there is no thought i.Regũ.xvi.b.
hyd vnto the. For who can kepe his owne counsell so secrete, but it shall be knowen? Therfore haue I spoken vnwysely, seynge these thinges are so hygh, and passe myne vnderstandynge. O herken thou vnto me also, & let me speake: answere vnto the thinge that I will aske the. I haue geuen dylygent eare vnto the, and now I se the with myne eyes. Wherfore I geue myne owne self the blame, and take repentaunce, in the duste and asshes.

Nowe when the Lorde hadde spoken these wordes vnto Job, he sayde vnto Eliphas the B Themanite: I am displeased with ye and thy two frendes, for ye haue not spokẽ ye thyng that is ryght

is right before me, lyke as my seruaunt Job hath done. Therfore take seuen oxen and seue rammes, and go to my seruaunt Job, offre vp also for your selues a brentoffringe: and let my seruaunt Job praye for you. Him will I Marche. v.c. accepte, and not deale with you after youre fo lysshnesse: in that ye haue not spoken ye thing whiche is ryghte, lyke as my seruaunte Job hath done.

So Eliphas the Themanite, Baldad the Suhite and Sophar the Naamathite wente
their waye, and dyd accordinge as the Lorde commaunded them. The Lorde also accepted the personne of Job, and the Lorde tourned him vnto Job, when he prayed for his frende des: Yea the Lorde gaue Job twyse as moch
as he had afore.

And then came there vnto him all his bre thren, all his sisters, with all theym that had bene of his acquayntaunce afore, and ate bred with him in his house, wondringe at him, & comfortynge him ouer all the trouble, that ye Lorde hadde brought vpon him. Euery man gaue him a shepe and a Jewell of golde

And the Lorde made Job rycher then he was before: for he hadde fourtene thousande shepe, sixe thousande Camels, a thousande yoke of oxen, and a thousande asses. He had children also, seuen sonnes and three doughters. The first called Daye: the seconde pe uerte: the thirde All plenteousnes. In all the lande were none founde so fayre, as the doughters of Job, & their father
gaue them enheritaunce amõg their brethren. After this lyued Job fourtye yeres, so that he sawe
his children, and his childrens children
to the fourth generation.
And so he dyed,
beynge
old
and of a perfect age.

PSAL. L

1 BLessed is ye man, that goeth not in the counsell
of the vngodly: that abyd
eth not in the way of syn
ners, and sitteth not in ye seate of the scornefull.

2 But delyteth in the law of the Lorde, and exercy
seth him selfe in his lawe,
day and night.

3 Suche man is lyke a tre planted by the wa
tryde, that bringeth forth ye frute in due sea son.

His leaues shall not fall of, and what so
euer he doth, shall prosper.

4 Not so with the vngodly, not so but they are lyke dust, which the wynde scattereth away from of the grounde.

5 Therfore the vngodly shall not stande in ye iudgement, neyther the synners in the congre gation of the righteous.

6 For the Lorde alloweth the way of the righ teous, but the waye of the vngodly shall pe rysshe.

PSAL. II.

1 WHy do the Heythen grudge? why do the people ymagyne vayne thinges?

The kynges of the earthe stande vp, &
the rulers are come togither, against ye Lorde
and against his annointed.

2 Let vs breake their bondes asunder, and cast away their yocke from vs.

3 But he ye dwelleth in heauen, shall laughe them to scorne: the Lorde him selfe shal haue
them in derysion.

4 The shal he speake vnto them in his wrath,
and vexe them in his fore displeasure.

5 Yet haue I set my kynge vpon my holy hill of Sion.

6 As for me, I will preache the lawe, wher
of the Lorde hath sayde vnto me: Thou arte
my sonne, this daye haue I begotten the.

7 Aske of me, and I shall gyue the the Hey
then for thyne enheritaunce, Yea the vt termoste partes of the worlde for thy posses sion.

8 Thou shalt rule theym with a rod of yron,
and breake them in peces lyke an earthen ves sell.

9 Be wyse now therfore, O ye kynges, be war ned, ye that are iudges of the earth.

10 Serue the Lord with feare, and reioyse be fore him with reuerence.

11 Embrace instruction, least the Lorde be an gry, and so ye perysh from the right waye.

12 For his wrath shalbe kyndled shortly: blest
ed are all they that put their trust in him.

PSAL. III.

Ps. 3 A Psalme of Dauid when he fledde from the face of Absalom.

1 WHy are they so many, O Lord, that trou ble me? a great multitude are they that ryse against me.

2 Many there be that saye of my soule: ther
is no helpe for him in God. Selah.

3 But thou, O Lorde, art my defender, my worshyp, and the lyfter vp of my hed.

4 I call vpon the Lorde with my voyce, and he heareth me out of his holy hyll. Selah.

5 I layde me downe and slept, but I rose vp agayne, for the Lorde sustayned me.

6 I am not afrayd for thousandes of people,
that compasse me rounde about.

7 Aryse Lorde, and helpe me, O my God:
for thou smytest all myne ennemyes vpon the cheke bones, and breakest the teth of the vn godly.

8 Helpe belongeth vnto the Lorde, therfore
let thy blessynge be vpon thy people.

PSAL. IIII.

To the chaunter in Neginoth, a Psalme of Da
uid.

1 HEare me when I call, O God of my rightcousnes: thou that comfortest me in my trouble: haue mercy vpon me, &
herken vnto my prayer.

2 O ye sonnes of men, how longe wil ye blas
pheme myne honour? why haue ye such plea sure in vanitie, and seke after lyes? Selah.

3 Knowe this, that the Lord dealeth marue lously with his sayncte: and when I cal vpon
the Lorde, he heareth me.

4 Be angry, but synne not: comē with your owne hertes vpon your beddes, and remem
bre your selues. Selah.

5 Offre the sacrifice of rightcousnes, and put your trust in the Lorde.

6 There be many that saye: who will do vs any good? Lorde lyft vp vpon vs the lyght of thy countenaunce.

7 Thou reioysest myne herte, thoughe they encreace be greate both in corne and wyne.

8 Therfore will I lay me downe in peax, and take my rest: for thou Lorde only settest me in a sure dwellynge.

PSAL. V.

To the chaunter by Nehiloth, a Psalme of Da
uid.

1 HEare my wordes (O Lord) consydre my callinge.

2 Marke the voyce of my petition, my kynge and my God, for vnto the, wil I make my prayer.

3 Heare my voyce by tymes (O Lord) for ear ly in the morninge will I get me vnto the, &
that with diligence.

4 For thou art not the God that hath plea sure in wickednesse, there maye no vngodly personne dwell with the.

5 Suche as be cruell maye not stande in thy sight

ſyght, thou art an ennemye vnto all wycked doers.

Thou deſtroyeſt the lyers: the Lord abhorreth the bloudthurſty and diſceytful.

But I will come into thy houſe, euen vpon the multitude of thy mercye: and in thy awe will I worſhyp towarde thy holy temple.

Leade me (O Lorde) in thy ryghteouſnelle becauſe of myne enemyes, and make thy way playne before me.

For there is no kaythfulnelle in their mouthes: they diſſemble in their hertes: their throte is in an open ſepulchre: with their tongues they diſceyue.

Punyſh them (O God) that they may perych in their owne ymagination: caſt thē out becauſe of the multitude of their vngodlynes for they rebell againſt the.

Agayne, let all them that put their truſt in the, reioyſe: let them euer be gruynge of thākes, becauſe thou defendeſt them: that they which loue thy name, may be ioyfull in the.

For thou Lorde gyueſt thy bleſſinge vnto ſ ryghteous: and with thy fauorable kyndnes thou defendeſt him, as with a ſhylde.

PSAL. VI.

¶ To the chaunter by Neginoth vpon Sheminith, a Pſalme of Dauid.

LOrd rebuke me not in thyne anger: chaſten me not in thy wrup diſpleaſure.

Haue mercy vpon me (Oh Lorde) for I am weake: Lorde heale me, for all my bones are vexed.

My ſoule alſo is in great trouble, but Lord how longe?

Turne the (Lorde) and deliuer my ſoule: ſaue me for thy mercyes ſake.

For in death no man remembreth the: Oh who will gyue the thankes in the hell?

I am wery of gronynge: euery nyght waſh I my bedde, and water my couche with my teares.

My countenaunce is chaunged for very inward griefe, I conſume away, I haue ſo many enemyes.

Awaye from me all ye wycked workers, for the Lorde hathe heard the voyce of my weepynge.

The Lorde hath herde myne humble petitiō the Lorde hath receyued my prayer.

All myne ennemyes ſhalbe confounded and ſore vexed: they ſhalbe turned backe and put to ſhame, and that right ſone.

PSAL. VII.

O Lorde my God, in the do I truſt: ſaue me from all them that purſue, and deliuer me.

Leaſt he hanche vp my ſoule lyke a Lyon, and teare it in peces, whyle there is none to helpe.

O Lorde my God, yf I haue wrought any ſuch thinge, yf there be any vnrighteouſnes in my handes.

Yf I haue rewarded euyll vnto theym that deale frendly with me, or hurt the that without cauſe are myne ennemyes.

Then let myne enemy perſecute my ſoule, & take me: yea let him treade my lyfe downe in the earth, & laye myne honour in the duſt. Selah.

Stande vp (Lorde) in thy wrathe, lyft vp ſ thy ſelf ouer the furyous indignacyō of myne ennemyes: aryſe vp (for me) in the vengeaūce that thou haſt promyſed.

That the congregacion of the people maye come about the, for their ſakes therfore lyft vp thy ſelfe agayne.

The Lorde is iudge ouer the people: auēge me then (O Lorde) accordinge to my righteouſnes and innocency.

Let the wyckednes of the vngodly come to an ende: but mayntayne the iuſt, thou ryghteous God, that tryeſt the very hertes and reynes.

My helpe commeth of God, which preſerueth them that are true of hert.

God is a ryghteous iudge, and God is mi threatnynge.

Yf men will not turne, he bathe whet his ſwerde: he bathe bent his bowe and made it redy.

He hath prepared him the weapōs of death, and ordeyned his arowes to deſtroye.

Beholde, he trauayleth with myſchefe, he hathe conceyued vnhappynelle, and brought forth a lye.

He hath graue and dygged vp a pyt, but he ſhall fall him ſelfe into the pyt that he hathe made.

For his vnhappynes ſhall come vpon his owne hed, and his wyckednes ſhal fall vpon his owne pate.

But, I will gyue thankes vnto the Lorde for his righteouſnes ſake, and will prayſe the name of the moſt hyghe Lorde.

PSAL. VIII.

¶ To the chaunter vpon Githith, a Pſalme of Dauid.

O Lorde our gouernour: howe wonderfull is thy name in all the worlde? howe excellent is thy glory aboue the heauens?

Out of the mouth of the very babes & ſuckelynges thou haſt ordeyned prayſe, becauſe of thyne ennemyes, that thou myghteſt deſtroye the ennemy and the auenger.

For I conſyder thy heauens, euen ſ worcke of thy fingers: the mone and the ſtarres whiche thou haſt made.

What is man, that thou art ſo myndefull of hym? eyther the ſonne of man that thou viſiteſt him?

After thou haddeſt for a ſeaſon made him lowre then the aungels, thou crowneddeſt him with honour and glory.

Thou haſt ſet him aboue the worckes of thy handes: and thou haſt put al thinges in ſubiection vnder his fete.

All ſheepe and oxen, yea the beaſtes of the felde.

The foules of the ayre, the fiſſhe of the ſee, and what ſo euer walketh thorow the wayes of the ſee.

O Lorde our gouernour, how wonderfull is thy name in all the worlde?

PSAL. IX.

¶ To the chaunter vpon Muth Laben, a Pſalme of Dauid.

I Will gyue thankes vnto the (O Lorde) with my hole herte, I will ſpeake of al thy meruelous workes.

I will be glad, and reioyce in the, yea my ſonges will I make of thy name, O thou moſt hyghe.

Becauſe thou haſte dryuen myne enemyes backe, they were diſconfyted, and peryſſhed at thy preſence.

For thou haſt mayntayned my right & my cauſe: thou ſitteſt in the throne that art the true iudge.

Thou rebukeſt the heythen, and deſtroyeſt the vngodly, thou putteſt out their name for ever.

The enemyes ſwerdes are come to an ende, thou haſt ouerthrowen their cyties, their memorial is peryſſhed with them.

But the Lorde endureth for euer, he hath prepared his ſeate vnto iudgement.

He gouerneth the worlde with righteouſnes, and miniſtreth true iudgement vnto the people.

The Lorde is a defence for ſ poore, a defence in the tyme of trouble.

Therfore they ſ know thy name, put their truſt in the: for thou (Lorde) neuer forſakeſt them, that ſeke the.

Prayſe ye the Lorde, which dwelleth in Sion, ſhewe the people of his wynges.

And why? he maketh inquiſition for their bloude, and remembreth them: he forgetteth not the complaynt of the poore.

Haue mercy on me (O Lorde) conſyder the trouble that I am in amonge myne ennemyes, thou that lyfteſt me vp from the gates of death.

That I maye ſhew all thy prayſes within the gates of the doughter of Sion, and reioyce in thy ſaupnge health.

But the Heythen are ſuncken downe in the pyt that they made: in the ſame nette whiche they ſpred oute pryuely, is their owne feete taken.

Thus the Lorde is knowne to execute true iudgement, when the vngodly is trapped in the worckes of his owne handes. Selah.

The wycked muſt be turned vnto hell, and all the Heythen that forget God.

But the poore ſhall not alwaye be out of remembraunce, the patient abydinge of ſuch as be in trouble ſhal not peryſh for euer.

Aryſe Lorde, let no man haue the vpper hande, let the Heythen be condemned before the.

O Lorde ſet a ϕ ſcolemaſter ouer them, that the Heythen maye knowe them ſelues to be but men. Selah. ϕ Blawe maker.

¶ There is no Tytle in the Hebrue. Here the Hebrues begyn the tenth Pſalme. A

WHy art thou gone ſo farre of, O Lorde? wilt thou hyde thy ſelfe in tyme of trouble?

Whyle the vngodly hath the ouerhande, ſ poore muſt ſuffre perſecution.

O that they were taken in the ymaginacīō which they go about.

For the vngodly maketh booſt of his own hertes deſire, the couetous bleſſeth him ſelfe, and blaſpemeth the Lorde. B

The vngodly is ſo proude and full of indignacion, that he careth not: neyther is God before his eyes.

His wayes are alway fylthy, thy iudgemētes are farre out of his ſyght, he deſpyeth all his ennemyes.

For he ſaith in his hert: Tuſh, I ſhall neuer be caſt downe, there ſhal no harme happē vnto me.

His mouthe is full of curſinge, fraude and diſceyte: vnder his tongue is trauayle and ſorow.

He ſitteth lurkyng in the gardens, that he maye pryuely murther the innocent, his eyes are ſet vpon the poore. C

He lyeth in awayte ſecretly, as it were a lyon in his denne.

He lurketh that he maye raupſh the poore, yea to raupſh the poore, when he hathe gotten him in to his net.

Then ſmyteth he, then oppreſſeth he & caſteth downe the poore with his auctorite.

For he ſayth in his hert: Tuſh, God hath forgotten, he hath turned awaye his face, ſo that he will neuer ſe it.

Aryſe O Lorde God, lyft vp thyne hande, and forget not the poore.

Wherfore ſhoulde the wycked blaſpheme God and ſaye in his hert: tuſh, he careth not for it.

This thou ſeyſt, for thou conſidreſt the myſery and ſorow.

The poore gyueth him ſelf ouer into thy hād and committeth him vnto the, for thou art ſ D helper of the frendleſſe.

Breake thou the arme of the vngodly and malicious, ſearche out the wickednelle which he hath done, that he maye peryſh.

The Lorde is kynge for euer, the Heythen ſhall peryſh out of his lande.

Lorde, thou heareſt the deſirous longynge of the poore: their hert is ſure, that thyne eare herkeneth therto.

Helpe the fatherleſſe and poore vnto their right, that the vngodly be no more exalted vpon earth.

PSAL. X. After the Hebrues xi.

To the chaunter, of Dauid.

A In the Lorde put I my trust: how wyll ye then saye to my soule: that she shoulde fle as a byrde vpon your hyll?

For lo, the vngodly haue bent their bowe, and made redye their arowes in the quyuer, that they maye pryuely shote at them, which are true of hert.

The very foundacion haue they cast downe what can the ryghteous then do with all?

B But the Lorde is in his holy temple, yͤ Lordes seate is in heauen: he consydereth it with his eyen, his eye lyddes beholde the chyldren of men. Abac.i.d

The Lorde seyth both the ryghteous & vngodly, but who so delyteth in wickednes, him his soule abhorreth.

Upon the vngodly he shal rayne snares, fire brymstone, storme and tempest: this rewarde shall they haue to drynke.

For the Lorde is ryghteous, and he loueth ryghteousnes: his countenaunce beholdeth the thinge that is iust.

After the Hebrues.xii.

PSAL. XI.

To the chaunter vpon Sheminith, a Psalme of Dauid.

A Helpe Lorde, for there is not one saincte more: very few faithful are there amõg the children of men.

Euery man telleth lyes to his neyghbour, they do but flatter with their lyppes and dissemble in their herte.

O that the Lorde wolde rote out all disceytfull lyppes, & the tongue that speaketh proude thinges.

Which saye: our tong ue shulde preuayle we are they that ought to speake, who is lord ouer vs?

Now for the troubles sake of the oppressed
B and because of the complaynte of the pore, I will aryse (sayth the Lorde) I wil helpe thẽ and set them at rest.

The wordes of the Lorde are pure wordes: euen as the siluer, which frome earth is tryed and puryfyed seuen tymes in the fire.

Kepe them therfore (O Lorde) and preserue vs from this generacion for euer.

For when vanite and ydelnes getteth the ouerhande amonge the children of men, al are full of the vngodly.

After the Hebrues.xiii.

PSAL. XII.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

A How longe wilt thou forget me, Lorde? for euer? how longe wilt thou hyde thy face from me?

How longe shall I seke counsell in my soule? how longe shall I be so vexed in myne herte? howe longe shall myne ennemy tryumphe ouer me?

Consydre, and heare me, O Lorde my God lyghten myne eyes, that I slepe not in death,

Least myne ennemy say: I haue preuayled against him: for yf I be cast downe, they that trouble me shall reioyse at it. B

But my trust is in thy mercye, and my hert is ioyfull in thy sauinge health.

I will singe of the Lorde, that dealeth so louingly with me.

Ye I will prayse the name of the Lorde the hyghest.

PSAL. XIII.

To the chaunter, of Dauid.

The folysh bodyes saye in their hertes: there is no God. A

They are corrupt, and become abhominable in their doynges, there is not one yͭ doth good.

The Lorde loked downe frome heauen, vpon the chyldren of men, to se yf there were anye that wolde vnderstande and seke after God.

But they are all gone out of the waye, they are all togither become vnprofitable: there is none that doth good, no not one.

Howe can they haue vnderstandinge, that worke myschefe, eatynge vp my people, as it were bred, and call not vpon the Lorde? B

Therfore shall they be brought in great feare for God standeth by the generacion of the ryghteous.

As for you, ye haue made a mocke at yͤ counsell of the pore, because he putteth his trust in the Lorde.

Oh that the saluynge helth were gyuen vnto Israel out of Sion.

Oh that the Lorde wolde delyuer his people out of captiuitie.

Then shuld Iacob reioyse, and Israel shuld be ryght glad.

PSAL. XIIII.

A Psalme of Dauid.

Lorde, who shal dwell in thy tabernacle? who shall rest vpon thy holy hyll? A

Euẽ he that leadeth an vncorrupt lyfe that doth the thinge which is right, and that speaketh the truthe from his hert.

He that vseth no discept in his tongue: he that doth no euyll to his neyghbour, & slaundreth not his neyghbours.

He that setteth not by the vngodly, but maketh moche of them that feare the Lorde: he that sweareth vnto his neyghboure, and disapoynteth him not. B

He that gyueth not his moneye vpon vsurye, and taketh no rewarde against the innocent.

Who so doth these thinges, shall neuer be remoued.

PSAL. XV.

Michtam of Dauid.

Pre

A Preserue me (O God) for in the do I trust.

I haue sayde vnto the Lorde: thou art my God, my goodes are nothinge vnto the.

All my delyte is vpon the sainctes that are in the earth, and vpon suche lyke.

But they that runne after an other, shall haue great trouble.

Their sacrifices of bloude will not I offre, neyther make mencyon of their name in my mouth.

B The Lorde him selfe is my good and my porcyon, thou mayntaynest myne enheritaunce.

The lot is fallen vnto me in a fayre grounde yea I haue a goodly heritage.

I wyl thanke the Lord for gyuyng me warnynge: my reynes also haue chastened me in the nyght season.

Afore hande sawe I God allwayes before me, for he is on my righthande, that I shulde not fal.

Therfore dyd my hert reioyce, and my tongue was glad, my fleshe also shall rest in hope.

For thou shalte not leaue my soule in hell, neyther shalt thou suffre thy saynct to se corruption.

Thou haste shewed me the wayes of lyfe: thou shalt make me full of ioye with thy countenaunce.

At thy ryght hande there is pleasure & ioye for euermore.

PSAL. XVI.

A prayer of Dauid.

A Heare the ryght (O Lorde) consydre my complaynte: herken vnto my prayer, yͭ goeth not out of a fayned mouth.

Let my sentence come forth frome thy presence: and loke vpon the thinge that is equall.

Thou hast proued and vysited myne hert in the nyghte season: thou haste tryed me in the fyre: and hast founde no wyckednesse in me: for I vtterly purposed that my mouth shulde not offende.

B Because of yͤ wordes of thy lyppes, I haue kept me frome the workes of men: in yͤ waye of the murtherer.

Ordre thou my goynges in thy pathes: that my fote steppes slippe not.

For vnto the I crye: heare me O God: encline thyne eares to me: and herken vnto my wordes.

Shewe thy maruelous louynge kyndnesse, thou that sauest them which put their trust in the, frome suche as resist thy right hand.

Kepe me as the baile of an eye, defende me vnder the shadowe of thy winges.

Frome the vngodly that trouble me, from myne enemyes which cõpasse my soule round about.

Which mayntayne their owne welthynesse with oppression, and their mouth speaketh proude thinges.

They lye in wayte in our way on euery syde turnyng their eyes downe to the grounde.

Lyke a Lyon that is gredy of his pray, and as it were a Lyons whelpe lurkynge in his denne. C

Aryse Lorde, disapoynte him and cast him downe: delyuer my soule with thy swerde frõ the vngodly.

Frome the men of thy hande (O Lord) frõ the men of the worlde, which haue their porcion in this lyfe: whose belyes thou fyllest wͭ thy treasure.

They haue children at their desire, and leaue the rest of their substaunce for their babes.

But I will beholde thy presence in ryghteousnesse: and when thy glorye appeareth, I shall be satisfyed.

PSAL. XVII.

After the Hebrues. xviii.

To the chaunter of Dauid seruaunt of the Lord whiche sayde vnto the Lorde the wordes of this songe, on the daye in whiche the Lorde delyuered hym frome the hande of all his enemyes, and frome the hande of Saul, and sayde.

I Wyll loue the (O Lorde) my strength. A

The Lorde is my succour, my refuge, my Sauiour: my God, my helper in whom I trust: my buckler, the horne of my helth, and my protection. Heb.ii.c

I will prayse the Lorde, and call vpon him, so shall I be safe from myne ennemyes.

The sorowes of death compassed me, & the brokes of vngodlynes made me afrayed.

The paynes of hell came about me, yͤ snares of death toke holde vpon me.

Yet in my trouble I called vpon the Lord, and complayned vnto my God.

So he herde my voyce out of his holy temple, and my complaynte came before him, euẽ into his eares.

Then the earthe trembled and quaked, the very foundacions of the hylles shoke & were remoued, because he was wroth. B

There went a smoke out of his nostrelles & a consuminge fire out of his mouth, so that coles were kyndled at it.

He bowed the heauens and came downe, & it was darcke vnder his fete.

He rode vpon the Cherubyns and dyd fle: he came flyenge with the wynges of the wynde.

He made darknes his pauylyon roũdaboute him, with darcke water and thicke cloudes to couer him.

At the brightnes of his presence the cloudes remoued, with hayle stones and coles of fyre.

The Lorde also thondred out of the heauẽ and the heyghest gaue his thonder with hayle stones and coles of fyre.

He sent out his arowes and scatered them, he caste sore lyghtenynges, and destroyed them.

The springes of waters were sene, and the foundacyons of the rounde worlde were discouered at thy chyding (O Lorde) at the bla-flynge and byeth of thy displeasures.

He sent downe frome the beygth to fetche
E me, and toke me out of great waters.
He delyuered me frome my stronge enne-
myes, and from my foes which were to migh ty for me.
They preuented me in the tyme of my trou ble, but the Lorde was my defence.
He brought me forth also into libertie: and delyuered me, because he had a fauoure vnto
me.
The Lorde shall rewarde me after my rygh
teous dealynge, & accordinge to the clennesse
of my handes shall he recompence me.
For I haue kept the wayes of the Lord: &
haue not behaued my selfe wyckedly againste
my God.
I haue an eye vnto all his lawes, and caste
not out his commaundementes frome me.
Uncorrupt will I be before him, and wyll
F eschew myne owne wyckednes.
Therfore shall the Lorde rewarde me after my ryghtuous dealynge, and according vn
to the clennesse of my handes in his eye sight.
With the holy thou shalt be holy, & with the innocent thou shalt be innocent.
With the cleane thou shalt be cleane, and with the frowarde thou shalt be frowarde.
For thou shalt saue the poore oppressed, and bringe downe the byghe lokes of the proude.
Thou lightest my candle, O Lord my God
G thou makest my darckenes to be light.
For in the I can discomfort an host of men:
yea in my God I can leape ouer the wall.
The waye of God is a perfect waye: the wordes of the Lorde are tryed in the fyre: he is a shylde of defence, for all them that trust in him.
For who is God, but the Lorde? Or, who hath any strength, but our God?
It is God that gyrded me with strength, &
made my waye vncorrupt.
He hath made my fete lyke hertes fete, &
set me vp on byghe.
He teacheth myne handes to fight, and ma keth myne armes to breake euen a bowe of steele.
Thou hast gyuē me the defence of thy helth
thy righthande vpholdeth me, and thy louing correction maketh me great.
Thou hast made rowme ynough vnder me for to goo, that my foote steppes shoulde not slyde.
I will folowe vpon myne ennemyes, and take them: I will not turne tyll they be discomforted.
I will smyte them, they shal not be hable
to stande, but fall vnder my fete.
F Thou hast gyrded me with strength vnto
batell, thou hast throwen them al downe vn
der me, that rose vp against me.
Thou hast made myne enemyes to tourne their backes vpon me, thou hast destroyed the
that hated me.
They cryed, but there was none to helpe
them: yea euen vnto the Lorde, but he herde them not.
I will beate them as small as the dust clay
in the wynde, I will cast them out as the clay
in the stretes.
Thou shalt delyuer me from the stryuinges of the people, thou shalt make me the head of the heythen.
A people whome I haue not known shall serue me.
As sone as they heare of me, they shal obey me, but the straunge children dissemble with
me.
The straunge children are waxen olde, and go haltinge out of their pathes.
The Lorde lyueth: and blessed be my hel- G per, praysed be the God of my helth.
Euen the God which seyth that I be aue
ged, and subdueth the people vnto me.
It is he that delyuereth me frome my cruell
ennemyes: thou shalt lyft me vp frome them that ryse against me, thou shalt ryd me frome
the wycked man.
For this cause I will gyue thankes vnto
(O Lorde) amonge the gentyles, and synge prayses vnto thy name.
Great prosperitie gyueth he vnto his kynge
and sheweth louynge kyndnesse vnto Dauid his annoynted, yea and vnto his seede for euer-
more.

PSAL. XVIII.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

THe heye heauens declare the glorye of God, and the very firmament sheweth his handy worke.
One daye telleth an other, and one nyght
certifieth an other.
There is neyther speache ne language, but their voyces are herde amonge them.
Their sounde is gone oute in to all landes, and their wordes in to the endes of the worlde.
In theym hathe he set a tabernacle for the Sunne, which commeth forth as a brydgrom out of his chambre, and reioyseth as a gyaunt
to run his course.
It goeth forth from the one ende of the hea
uen, and runneth about vnto the same ende a-gayne, and there maye no man hyde him selfe frome the heate therof.
The lawe of the Lorde is a perfect lawe, it quickeneth the soule.
The testimony of the Lorde is true, and gy
ueth wysdome euen vnto babes.
The statutes of the Lorde are ryghte, and reioyse the herte: the commaundement of the Lorde is pure, and gyueth lyght vnto the eyes.
The feare of the Lorde is cleane, and endu
reth for euer: the iudgementes of the Lorde
are true and righteous all togither.
More pleasaunt are they then golde, yea
then moche fyne gold: sweeter then hony and the hony combe.
Thefe thy seruaunt keepeth, and for keping
of them there is great rewarde.
Who can tell, how oft he offendeth? clense
thou

thou me fro my secrete faultes.
Kepe thy seruaunt also frome presumptuous synnes, lest they get the dominiō ouer me:
so shall I be vndefyled, and innocent frome
the greate offence.
Yea the wordes of my mouthe, and the meditacion of my herte shall be acceptable vnto
the, o Lorde, my helper and my redemer.

PSAL. XIX.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

THe Lorde heare the in the tyme of trouble: the name of the God of Jacob defende the.
Sende the helpe frome the sanctuarye: and strengthe the out of Syon.
Remembre all thy offerynges, and accepte thy brente sacrifyce. Selah.
Graunte the thy hertes desyre, and fulfyll
all thy mynde.
We will reioyse in thy helthe, and triumphe
in the name of the Lorde our God: the Lorde performe all thy petitions.
Nowe knowe I, that the Lorde helpeth his annoynted, and wyll heare him frome his holye heauen: myghtye is the helpe of his ryghte hande.
Some put theyr trust in charettes, and some in horses: but we wyll remembre the name of the Lorde oure God.
They are broughte downe and fallen, but we are rysen and stande vpryght.
Haue Lorde, and helpe vs, o kyng, when we call vpon the.

PSAL. XX.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

LOrde, howe ioyfull is the kynge in thy strengthe? O howe exceadynge glad is he of thy saufynge helthe?
Thou haste gyuen him his hertes desyre,
and haste not put hym from the request of his lyppes. Selah.
For thou haste preuented him with lyke-
all blessynges: and sette a crowne of golde vpon his heed.
He asked lyfe of the, and thou gauest him a longe lyfe, euen for euer and euer.
His honour is great in thy saufynge helthe:
glorye and greate worshyp shalte thou laye
vpon him.
For thou shalte gyue hym euerlastynge welthe: and make him glad with the ioye of
thy countenaunce.
And why? bycause the kynge putteth his truste in the Lorde: and in the mercye of the hyest he shall not mysscarye.
Lette all thyne ennemyes fele thy hande:
let thy ryghte hande fynde oute all them that hate the.
Thou shalte make them lyke a fyre ouen
in tyme of thy wrathe: the Lorde shall de-stroye theym in his displeasure, and the fyre shall consume them.
Their frute shalte thou roote oute of the earthe: and their sede frome the chyldren of men.
For they purposed myschyefe agaynst the:
and ymagined suche deuises, as they were not hable to performe.
Therfore shalte thou put them to flyght: &
with thy stringes thou shalt make redy thyne
arowes agaynst the faces of them.
Be thou exalted, Lorde, in thyne owne strengthe: so wyll we synge and prayse thy power.

PSAL. XXI.

After the He-
brues, xxii.

To the Chaunter vpon Aieleth, of the morninge starre, a Psalme of Dauid.

MY God, my God: why hast thou forsa A ken me? the wordes of my complaynte are farre fro my helthe.
O my God, I crye in the daye tyme, but thou hearest not: and in the night season also
I take no reste.
Yet dwellest thou in the sanctuarye, o thou worshyp of Israel.
Oure fathers hoped in the: they trusted in the, and thou dyddest delyuer them.
They called vpon the, and were helped:
they put their trust in the, and were not confounded.
But as for me, I am a worme and no man:
a beeye scorne of men and the oute caste of the people.
All they that se me, laughe me to scorne: B they shoute oute their lyppes, and shake their Mat.xxvii.d heedes. Marc.xv.c
He trusted in God, let him deliuer him: let him helpe him, yf he wil haue him.
But thou art he that toke me out of my mo thers wombe: thou wast my hope, whē I han ged yet vpon my mothers brestes.
I haue ben lefte vnto the, euer sythens I was borne: thou arte my God, euen fro my mothers wombe.
Go not fro me then, for trouble is harde at C
hande, and here is none to helpe me.
Great bulles are come about me: fat oxen
close me in on euery syde.
They gape vpon me with their mou-thes: as it were a rampynge and rorynge lyon.
I am poured oute lyke water: all my bones are oute of ioynte: my herte in the myddest of my bodye, is euen lyke meltynge waxe.
My strengthe is dryed vp lyke a pottesherde, my tonge cleaueth to my gommes:
and thou haste broughte me in to the dust of deathe.
D
For dogges are come aboute me: the counsell of the wycked hathe layde siege agaynste
me.
They perseb my handes and my fete, I might Mat.xxvii.d.
haue tolde all my bones: but they stode sta- Iohn.xix.b
eynge and lokynge vpon me.
They haue parted my garmentes amonge
them, and cast lottes vpon my vesture.

But

But be not thou farre fro me, o Lord: thou art my succour, haste the to helpe me.
Deliuer my soule from the swerde, my der-lynge from the power of the dogge.
Saue me from the lyons mouth: and heare
E me betwene the hornes of the vnicornes.
So wyll I declare thy name vnto my brethren: in the middest of the congregacion wyl
I prayse the.
Prayse the Lord ye that feare him: magnifie him all ye seed of Jacob, and let all the seed of Israel feare him.
For he hath not despised ne abhorred the mi-F serable state of the poore: he hath not hyd his face fro me, but when I called vnto hym, he herde me.
I will prayse the in the great congregacion,
and performe my vowes in the sight of al the
that feare the.
The poore shall eate and be satisfied: they that seke after the Lord shal prayse him: our herte shall lyue for euer.
All the endes of the worlde shall remembre them selues, & be turned vnto the Lorde: and all the generations of the Heythen shall wor-
G shyp before him.
For the kingdom is the Lordes: and he shal
be the gouernour of the Heythen.
All suche as be fatte vpon earthe: shall eate also and worshyp: all they that lye in the dust and lyue so hardly, shall fall downe before him.
The seed shall serue him, and preache of the Lorde for euer.
They shall come and declare his righteous-nesse: vnto a people that shal be borne, whom the Lorde hath made.

brues. xxiii.

¶ A Psalme of Dauid.

A THe Lord is my shepherde: I can want nothynge.
He fedeth me in a grene pasture, and Esaye. xl. Hierem. xxiii. Ezech. xxxiiii. Johan. x a. 1. Petri. ii.
leadeth me to a fresh water.
He quickneth my soule, and bringeth me forth in the waye of righteousnesse for his names sake.
B Though I walde walke now in the valey
of the shadowe of deth, yet I feare no euyll,
for thou art with me: thy staffe and thy shep-hoke comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me agaynste myne ennemyes: thou annoyntest my heed w oyle, and fillest my cup full.
Oh let thy louynge kyndnes and mercye fo-low me all the dayes of my lyfe, that I maye dwell in the house of the Lorde for euer.

After the He-
brues. xxiii.

PSAL. XXIII.

¶ A Psalme of Dauid.

A THe erth is the Lordes, and al that therin is: the compasse of the worlde, and al
that dwell therin.
Psal. xxiiii. For he hath founded it vpon the seas: and buylded it vpon the floudes.
Who shal go vp in to the hyll of the Lord
or who shall remayne in his holy place?
Euen he that hath innocent handes and a clene hert: which lifteth not vp his mynde
to vanitie, and sweareth not to disceyue.
He shal receyue the blessing from the Lord
and mercy from God his sauyour.
This is the generacion of them that seke
him: of them that seke thy face, O Jacob.
Selah.
Open your gates (o ye princes) let the eue-
lastyng wyes be opened, that the kyng of glorye maye come in.
Who is this kyng of glory? It is the Lorde stronge and mighty, euen the Lorde mighty in battayle.
Open your gates (o ye princes) let the eue-
lasting wyes be opened, that the kyng of glory
maye come in.
Who is this king of glory? It is the Lorde of hostes, he is the king of glory. Selah.

PSAL. XXIIII.

¶ Of Dauid.

VNto the, O Lorde, I lyfte vp my soule: I my God, I truste in the, let me not be confounded, lest myne ennemyes triumphe ouer me.
For all they that hope in the, shall not be ashamed: but suche as be scornefull dispysers without cause, shall be put to confusyon.
Shewe me thy wayes (Lorde) and teache
me thy pathes.
Leade me in thy truthe, and lerne me: for thou arte the God of my helthe, and in the is my hope all the daye longe.
Call to remembraunce, O Lorde, thy tender mercyes, and thy louynge kyndenesses, which haue ben euer of olde.
Oh remembre not the synnes and offenses
of my youthe, but accordynge vnto thy mercye: thynke vpon me, O Lorde, for thy goodnesse.
O how kendly and righteous is the Lorde:
therfore wil he teache synners in the waye.
He leadeth the symple a right: and suche as
be meke, them lerneth he his wayes.
All the wayes of the Lorde, are very mercy and faythfulnesse, vnto suche as kepe his testament and couenaunt.
For thy names sake, o Lorde, be mercyfull
vnto my synne, for it is great.
What so euer he be that feareth the Lorde
he shall shewe hym the waye that he hathe chosen.
His soule shall dwell at ease: and his seed
shall possesse the lande.
The secrete of the Lorde is amonge them
that feare him: and he sheweth them his counaunt.
Myne eyes are euer lokynge vnto the Lorde: for he shall plucke my feete out of the nette.
Turne the vnto me, and haue mercye vpon
me, for I am desolate and in mysery.
The sorowes of my herte are great, bringe
D me out of my troubles.
Loke vpon myne aduersitie and woo: and forgyue me all my synnes.
Consider how myne ennemyes are many, &
beare a malicious hate agaynst me.
Kepe my soule, and delyuer me: lette me not be confounded, for I haue put my truste
in the.
Lette innocencye and righteous dealynge
wayte vpon me, for my hope is in the.
Delyuer Israell, O God, oute of all his trouble.

PSAL. XXV.

¶ Of Dauid.

A BE thou my iudge, o Lorde, for I walke
innocently: my trust is in the Lord, therfore shall I not fall.
Examin me, o Lord, and proue me: enserche
my reynes and my hert.
For thy louynge kyndnesse is before myne
eyes: and I walke in thy truthe.
B I syt not amonge vayne persons, and haue
no felawshyp with the disceptfull.
I hate the congregacion of the wicked, and
I wyll not syt amonge the vngodly.
I washe my handes with innocencye, O
Lorde, and so go I to thyne aulter.
That I may shewe the voyce of thy prayse:
and tell of all thy wonderous workes.
Lorde, I loue the habytacyon of thy house, and the place where thy honour dwelleth.
Destroye not my soule with the synners: ne
C my lyfe with the bloudthurstye.
In whose handes is wyckednesse, and their right hande is full of gyftes.
But I wyll walke innocently: deliuer me,
and be mercyfull vnto me.
My fote standeth right: I wyll prayse the (Lorde) in the congregacions.

PSAL. XXVI.

¶ Of Dauid.

A THe Lorde is my lyghte and my helthe:
whome then shalde I feare? the Lorde is the strength of my life, for whom then shalde I be afrayde?
Therfore when the wycked, euen myne
ennemies came vpon me to eate vp my flesshe,
they stombled and fell.
Though an hoste of men were layde against Hi: me, yet shal not my hert be afrayd: and though there arose vp warre agaynste me, yet wyll I put my trust in him.
One thyng haue I desyred of the Lord, whiche I wil requyre: namely, that I maye dwell in the house of the Lorde all the dayes of my life, to beholde the fayre beautie of the Lorde,
and to vysit his temple.
For in tyme of trouble he hath hyde me in his tabernacle, yea in the secrete place of his dwellyng hath he kepte and set me vp vpon a rocke of stone.
And nowe hathe he lyfte vp my heed aboue
myne ennemyes, that compassed me rounde a-boute.
Therfore wyll I offre in his dwellynge, the L oblacion of thankesgyuyng: I wyll syng and speake prayses vnto the Lorde.
Herken vnto my voyce, O Lorde, when I crye vnto the: haue mercye vpon me and heare me.
My hert speaketh vnto the: my face seketh
the: yea Lorde thy face will I seke.
Hyde not thou thy face fro me: cast not thy seruaunt of in displeasure.
Thou art my succour, leaue me not, neither forsake me, o God my sauiour.
For my father and my mother haue forsake me: but the Lorde hath taken me vp.
Shewe me thy waye, O Lorde: and leade
D me in the right pathe, because of myne enne-myes.
Delyuer me not in to the wyles of myne
aduersaryes: for there are false wytnesses risen vp agaynste me: and they ymagen myschiefe.
Neuertheless I byleue verily to se the goodnesse of the Lorde, in the lande of the lyuynge.
Tary thou the Lordes leysure: be stronge,
let thyne herte be of good comfort, and wayte
thou styll for the Lorde.

brues. xxviii.

¶ Of Dauid.

VNto the wyll I crye, O my stronge defence: thynche no scorne of me, lest yf
A thou make that as though thou herdest not, I become lyke them that go downe in to the pytte.
Heare the voyce of my humble peticyon,
when I crye vnto the: and hold vp my handes
towarde thy holy temple.
Plucke me not awaye amonge the vngod-
B ly and wicked doers, whiche speake frendly to their neighboure, but ymagen myschiefe in their hertes.
Rewarde theym accordynge to their de-des, and wyckednesse of their owne inuen-cyons.
Recompence theym after the workes of theyr handes: paye them that they haue de-serued.
For they regarde not the workes of the Lorde, ne the operacion of his handes: therfore shall he breake them downe, & not buylde them vp.
C Prayse be the Lorde: for he hath herde the voyce of myne humble peticion.
The Lorde is my strengthe and my shylde:
my hert hoped in him, and I am helped: therefore my hert daunceth for ioye, and I wil sing
prayses vnto him.
The Lorde is the strengthe of his people:
he is the defender and sauyoure of his annoynted.

Helpe

Helpe thy people, gyue thy blessynge vnto thyne enheritaunce: fede them and set them vp for euer.

¶ A Psalme of Dauid.

A Ascribe vnto the Lorde, O ye myghtye: ascribe vnto the Lorde worshipe & strengthe.

Gyue the Lorde the honoure of his name: bowe your selues to the holye maiestie of the Lorde.

It is the Lorde that commaundeth the waters: It is the gloryous God that maketh the thonder, it is the Lorde that ruleth the see.

B The voyce of the Lorde is myghtye in operation: the voyce of the Lorde is a glorypous voyce.

The voyce of the Lorde breaketh the Cedar trees: yea the Lorde breaketh the Cedars of Libanus.

He maketh them to skyp lyke a calfe: Libanus and Sirion lyke a yong vnycorne.

The voyce of the Lorde diuydeth the flames of fyre: the voyce of the Lorde shaketh the wyldernesse: yea the Lorde shaketh the wyldernesse of Cades.

The voyce of the Lorde moueth the hyndes: and discouereth the thycke bushes: in his temple shall euerye man speake of his honoure.

The Lorde sytteth the water floude: & the Lorde remayneth a kyng for euer.

The Lorde shal gyue power vnto his people, the Lorde shall gyue his people the blessynge of peace.

¶ A Psalme and songe of the dedycation of the house of Dauid.

A I Wyll magnifye the, O Lorde, for thou hast set me vp: and not suffred my foes to tryumphe ouer me.

O Lorde my God, I cryed vnto the: & thou hast healed me.

Thou Lorde hast brought my soule oute of hell: thou hast kepte my lyfe, where as they go downe to the pyt.

Sing prayses vnto the Lorde (o ye sayntes of his) gyue thankes vnto hym for a remembraunce of his holynesse.

For his wrath endureth but the twynckling B of an eye, and his pleasure is in lyfe: heuinesse maye well endure for a nyghte, but ioye commeth in the morninge.

As for me, when I was in prosperite, I sayde: tushe, I shall neuer fall more.

And why? thou Lorde of thy goodnes hadest made my hyll so stronge.

But as soone as thou turnedst thy face fro me, I was brought in feare.

C Then cryed I vnto the, O Lorde, yea vnto the Lorde made I my prayer.

What profyte is there in my bloude: yf I go downe to corruption?

Maye the dust gyue thankes vnto the? or shall it declare thy faythfulnesse?

Heare, O Lorde, and haue mercye vpon me: Lorde be thou my helper.

D And so thou hast turned my heynesse into ioye: thou hast put of my sackclothe, and gyrded me with gladnesse.

That myne honour myght synge prayses vnto the without ceasing: O Lorde my God, I wyll gyue thankes vnto the for euer.

PSAL. XXX.

¶ To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

IN the, O Lorde, is my trust: let me neuer be put to confusion, but delyuer me in thy F ryghtousnesse.

Bowe downe thyne eare to me, make haste to delyuer me: be thou my stronge rocke and a house of defence, that thou mayst saue me.

For thou arte my stronge holde and my castell: be thou my gyde, and leade me for thy names sake.

Drawe me oute of the nette that they haue layde pryuely for me, for thou arte my strengthe.

G Into thy handes I commende my spirite: thou hast delyuered me, o Lorde, thou God of trueth.

I hate them that holde of vanities: and my trust is in the Lorde,

I wil be glad and reioyce in thy mercy: for thou hast consydered my trouble, thou hast knowen my soule in aduersitie.

Thou hast not delyuered me ouer into the handes of the ennemye, but hast set my fete in a large rowme.

H Haue mercy vpon me, o Lorde, for I am in trouble, myne eye is consumed for very heuynesse, yea my soule and my body.

My lyfe is waxen olde with heuinesse: and my yeres with mournynge.

My strength faileth me because of myne aduersitie, and my bones are corrupte.

I am become a verye reproche amonge all myne ennemyes: my neyghbours and they of myne owne acquyntaunce are afrayde of me: they that se me in the strete, conuey them selues fro me.

I am cleane forgotten and oute of mynde, as a dead man: I am become lyke a broken vessell.

For I haue herde the blasphemye of D the multytude: euerye man abhorreth me, they haue gathered a counsell together agaynste me, and are purposed to take awaye my lyfe.

But my hope is in the Lorde, and I saye: thou art my God.

My tyme is in thy hande: delyuer me from the hande of myne ennemyes, and from them that pursue me.

Shewe thy seruaunt the lyght of thy countenaunce: helpe me for thy mercyes sake.

Let

F Let me not be confounded, O Lorde: for I call vpon the: let the vngodlye rather be put to confusyon, and brought vnto the pit.

Let the lyenge lyppes be put to sylence: whiche cruelly, disdaynfully, & despitefully speake agaynst the righteous.

Howe greate and manyfolde is thy good: which thou haste hydde for theym that feare the?

O what thinges bryngest thou to passe for them that put their trust in the: euen before the sonnes of men?

I Thou hydest them priuely by thyne owne presence from the proude men: thou kepest them secretly in thy tabernacle, from the strife of tonges.

Thankes be to the Lorde: for he hath shewed me excedynge great kyndnes in a stronge cyte.

For when the sodeyn feare came vpon me, I sayd: I am cast out of thy sight.

Neuertheles thou herdest myne humble prayer: when I cryed vnto the.

K O loue the Lorde (all ye his sayntes) for the Lorde preserueth the faythful, and plentiously rewardeth the proude doer.

Be stronge therfore and take good herte vnto you: all ye that put youre trust in the Lorde.

PSAL. XXXI.

¶ An instruccion of Dauid.

1 BLessed are they, whose vnryghtousnesse is forgyuen: and whose synnes are couered.

2 *Blessed is the man, vnto whom the Lorde imputeth no synne: in whose spirite there is no gyle.

3 For whyle I helde my tonge: my bones consumed awaye, thorowe my daylye complaynynges.

4 And because thy hand was so heuy vpon me both daye and nyght: my moysture was lyke the drouth in sommer. Selah.

5 Therfore I confessed my synne vnto the: & hyd not myne vnryghtousnesse.

I sayd, I wyll knowlege myne offence, and confesse my selfe vnto the Lorde: and so thou forgauest me the wyckednesse of my synne. Selah.

6 For this shall euerye sayne make his prayer vnto the in due season: therfore shall not the great water floudes come nye him.

Thou arte my defence in the trouble that is come aboute me: compasse thou me aboute also with the ioye of delyueraunce. Selah.

7 I wil enforme the, and shewe the the waye wherin thou shalte goo: I wyll fasten myne eyes vpon the.

8 Be not ye now lyke horses & mules, which haue no vnderstandyng.

Whose mouthes thou muste holde with byt and bydle, yf they wyll not obeye the.

9 Greate plages shall the vngodly haue, but who so putteth his truste in the Lorde, mercy shall compasse him on euery syde.

10 Be glad, O ye ryghtous, and reioyce in the Lorde: be ioyfull all ye that are true of herte.

PSAL. XXXII.

After the Hebrues. xxxiii.

A REioyce in the Lorde, O ye ryghtous, for it becommeth well the iuste to be thankfull.

Prayse the Lorde with harpe: synge psalmes vnto him with the lute and instrumēt of ten strynges.

Synge him a newe songe, yea sing lustely vnto him with a lusty courage.

For the worde of the Lorde is true: and all his workes are faythfull.

He loueth mercy and iudgement: the erth is full of the goodnesse of the Lorde.

By the worde of the Lorde were the heuens made: and all the hostes of them by the breth of his mouthe.

He gathereth the waters togyther as it were in a bottell: and layeth vp the depe in secrete.

Let all the earthe feare the Lorde: and let all them that dwell in the worlde, stande in awe of him.

For loke what he sayeth, it is done: and loke what he commaundeth, it standeth fast.

The Lorde bringeth the counsel of the heythen to nought, and turneth the deuises of the people.

But the counsell of the Lorde endureth and the thoughtes of his herte from generacion to generacion.

Blessed are the people that holde the Lorde for their God: and blessed are the folke whom he hath chosen to be his heritage.

The Lorde loketh downe from heuen, and beholdeth all the chyldren of men: from his D stronge seat he consydereth all them that dwell in the worlde.

He onely hath facioned al the hertes of the, and knoweth all their workes.

A kynge is not holpen by his owne greate hoste: neither is a gyaunte saued thorowe the might of his owne strength.

A horse is but a vayne thing to saue a man, it is not the power of his strength that can E deliuer him.

Beholde, the eye of the Lorde loketh vnto them that feare him, and put their trust in his mercy.

That he may deliuer their soules from deth: and to fede them in the deare tyme.

Let our soule pacyently abide the Lorde: for he is our helpe and shylde.

So shall our hertes reioyce in him: because we haue hoped in his holy name.

Let thy mercyfull kyndnesse, o Lorde, be vpon vs: lyke as we put our trust in the.

Taste and se how frendly the Lord is: blessed is the man that trusteth in him.

Feare the Lorde ye that be his sayntes: for they that feare him lacke nothing.

The riche shal want and suffre hunger: but they which seke the Lorde shall want no maner thing that is good.

Come hither, o ye children, herken unto me: C I wil teache you the feare of the Lorde.

1.Petri.iii. Who so lysteth to lyue, and wolde fayne se good dayes.

Let him refrayne his tonge from euill: and his lyppes that they speake no gyle.

Let him eschewe euyl and do good: let him Ecclesi.xv.d. seke peax and ensue it.

Hebru.iiii.c For the eyes of the Lorde are ouer the rightous: and his eares are open unto their prayers.

D But the face of the Lorde beholdeth them that do euyl, to destroye the remembraunce of them out of the erth.

When the ryghteous crye, the Lord heareth them: and delyuereth them out of all theyr troubles.

The Lorde is nye unto them that are contryte in herte, and wil helpe suche as be of an humble spirite.

Great are the troubles of the rightous, but the Lorde delyuereth them out of all.

He kepeth al their bones, so that not one of them is broken.

But misfortune shall slee the ungodly, and they that hate the rightous shall be giltye.

The Lorde delyuereth the soules of his seruauntes, and all they that put their truste in him shal not offende.

PSAL. XXXIIII.

After the Hebrues.xxxv.

Of Dauid.

A Stryue thou with them, o Lorde, y^t stryue with me: fyght thou agaynste them, that fyght agaynst me.

Laye hande upon the shylde and spere: and stande up to helpe me.

Drawe out thy swerde and stop the way agaynst them that persecute me: saye unto my soule, I am thy helpe.

Let them be confounded and put to shame, that seke after my soule: let them be turned backe and be brought to confusion, that ymagen mischiefe for me.

Lette theym be as the duste before the wynde: and the aungell of the Lorde scatteryng them.

Lette theyr waye be darcke and slyppery: and the aungell of the Lorde to persecute them.

For they haue pryuyly layde theyr net to destroye me without cause: yea & made a pyt for my soule whiche I neuer deserued.

Let a soden destruction come upon him unwares, and the net that he hathe layde pryuily catche him selfe, that he maye fall into his owne mischiefe. B

But let my soule be ioyfull in the Lorde: & reioyse in his helpe.

All my bones shal saye: Lorde who is lyke unto the? which deliuerest the poore fro those that are to stronge for him, yea the poore and the nedy from his spoylers.

False witnesses are rysen up, and lay to my charge thynges that I knowe not.

They reward me euil for good, to the great discomfort of my soule. C

Neuerthelesse when they were sycke, I put on sackclothe: I humbled my soule with fastyng, and my prayer turned in to myne owne bosome.

I behaued my self as though it had ben my frende or my brother: I went heuyly, as one that mourneth for his mother.

But in myne aduersite they reioyce & gather them togither: yea the very lame come togyther against me unwares, makinge mowes at me, and cease not.

With the gredye and scornefull hypocrites they gnasshed upon me with their teth.

Lorde whan wilt thou loke upon this?

Restore my soule from the wicked rumoure of them, my derlynge from the lyons?

So wyll I gyue the thankes in the greate congregacion: and prayse the amonge moche people.

Let them not tryumphe ouer me, that are myne ennemyes for noughte: lette them not wynke with theyr eyes that hate me without cause.

And why? their commening is not for peax, but they ymagen false wordes against y^e outcastes of the lande.

They gape upon me with their mouthes, sayinge: there, there: we se it with our eyes. D

This thou seest, o Lord: hold not thy tong then: go not farre fro me, o Lorde.

Awake Lorde and stande up: auenge thou my cause my God and my Lorde.

Judge me, o Lorde my God, accordinge to thy ryghtousnesse, that they tryumphe not ouer me.

Let them not say in their hertes, there there so wold we haue it: let them not say: we haue ouercome him.

Let them be put to confusion & shame, that reioyse at my trouble: let them be clothed w^t rebuke and dishonour, that boste them selues agaynst me.

Let

Lette them also be gladde and reioyce, that fauoure my ryghteous dealynge: yea lette them saye alwaye: blessed be the Lorde, which hath pleasure in the prosperitie of his seruaunt.

And as for my tonge, it shall be talkynge of thy ryghtousnesse and of thy prayse, al the day longe.

PSAL. XXXV.

To the chaunter, of Dauid the seruaunte of the Lorde.

A My herte sheweth me the wyckednesse of the ungodly: that there is no feare of God before his eyes.

For he dissembleth before his face, so longe till his abhominable synne be founde out.

The wordes of his mouthe are unryghtousnesse and disceyte: he wyll not be lerned to do good.

He ymagineth mischiefe upon his bed: he wil come in no good waye, he refuse the thing that is euill.

Thy mercye, O Lorde, reacheth unto the heauens: and thy faythfulnesse unto the cloudes.

Thy rightousnes standeth like the stronge mountaynes: and thy iudgementes lyke the great depe.

Thou, Lorde: preseruest bothe men and beestes.

How precious is thy mercy, o God, that the B children of men may put their trust under the shadow of thy wynges?

They shal be satisfied with the plenteousnes of thy house: and thou shalt geue them drinke of the ryuer of thy pleasures.

For by the is the well of life: & in thy light, shal we se light.

Sprede forth thy louing kindnesse unto the that know the, and thy rightousnesse unto the that are true of hert.

Lette not the foote of pryde ouertake me: let not the hande of the ungodly caste me downe.

As for wicked doers, they fall: they are cast downe, and are not hable to stande.

PSAL. XXXVI.

A Psalme of Dauid.

A Fret not thy self at y^e ungodly: be not thou enuyous agaynst the euil doers.

For they shall soone be cut downe lyke the grasse: and be withered euen as the grene herbe.

Put thou thy trust in the Lorde, and be doing good: so shalt thou dwel in the land, and verely it shall fede the.

Delite thou in the Lorde: and he shal gyue the thy hertes desyre.

Commyt thy waye unto the Lorde, sette thy hope in hym: and he shall brynge it to passe.

He shall make thy ryghtousnesse as cleare as the lyght: and thy iust dealing as the none daye.

Holde the styll in the Lorde, and abyde paciently upon him: but greue not thy selfe at one that hath prosperitie, and lyueth in abhominacion.

Leue of from wrath, let go displeasure: let not thy gelowsye moue the also to do euil. B

For wicked doers shal be roted out, but they that paciently abyde the Lorde, shal enherite the lande.

Suffer yet a lytle whyle, and the ungodlye shall be clene gone: thou shalt loke after his place, and he shall be awaye.

But the meke spirites shall possesse the erthe: and haue pleasure in moche rest. Math.v.a

The ungodly layeth wayte for the iust, and gnassheth upon him with his teth.

But the Lorde laugheth him to scorne: for he seeth that his daye is commyng.

The ungodly drawe oute theyr swerde and bende their bowe: to caste downe the symple and poore, and to slee suche as goo the ryght waye.

Neuerthelesse, their swerde shall goo thorowe their owne herte: and their bowe shall be broken. C

A small thyng that the rightous hathe: is better then great riches of the ungodly.

For the armes of the ungodlye shall be broken: but the Lorde upholdeth the ryghtous.

The Lord knoweth the dayes of the godly: and their inheritaunce endureth for euer.

They shall not be confounded in the perillous tyme: and in the dayes of dert, they shal haue ynough.

But the ungodly shal perish: and when the enemies of the Lord are in their floures, they shal consume, yea euen as the smoke shal they consume awaye. D

The ungodlye boroweth, and payeth not agayne: but the ryghtous is mercyfull and lyberall.

Suche as be blessed of him, shal possesse the lande: and they whom he curseth, shall be roted out. E

The Lord ordreth a good mans going: and hath pleasure in his way.

Though he fall, he shal not be hurt: for the Lorde upholdeth him with his hande.

I haue ben yong and now am olde: yet saw I neuer the rightous forsaken, ne his seed to seke their bread.

The rightous is euer mercifull, and lendeth gently: therfore shal his seed be blessed.

Fle from euil, and do that is good: so shalt thou dwell for euer.

For the Lorde loueth that is ryght, he forsaketh not his sayntes, but they shall be preserued for euermore: where as the seed of the ungodly shal be roted out. F

Yea the ryghtous shall possesse the lande: & dwell therein for euer.

The mouthe of the ryghtous is exercised in wysdome: and his tonge talketh of iudgement.

The law of his God is in his hert : therfore shal not his fotesteppes slyde.

The vngodly seeth the righteous, and goeth about to slee him.

But the Lorde wyll not leaue hym in his handes : ne condemne hym when he is iudged.

Hope thou in the Lorde, and kepe his way, and he shall so promote the, that thou shalte haue the lande by enheritaunce, and se when the vngodly shal perisshe.

I my selfe haue sene the vngodly in greate power : and flouryshynge lyke a grene baye tree : but when I wente by, loo, he was gone, I sought hym, but he coulde no where be G founde.

Kepe innocencye, and take hede vnto the thynge that is ryghte : for that shall brynge a man peax at last.

But the transgressours shall peryshe togyther : and the vngodlye shall be rooted out at the last.

The helpe of the ryghtous commeth of the Lorde : he is their strength in tyme of trouble.

The Lorde shall stande by them, and saue them : he shal delyuer them from the vngodly, and helpe them, bycause they put theyr truste in hym.

PSAL. XXXVII.

¶ To the chaunter, to brynge to remembraunce.

A PUt me not to rebuke, oh Lorde, in thyne anger : chasten me not in thy heuye displeasure.

For thyne arowes stycke fast in me, and thy hande presseth me sore.

There is no hole parte in my body, bycause of thy displeasure : there is no rest in my bones by reason of my synnes.

For my wyckednesses are gone ouer my heed : and are lyke a sore burthen, to heuye for me to beare.

My woundes stynche and are corrupt, tho-
B rowe my folysshnesse.

I am broughte in to so greate trouble and mysery : that I goo mournynge all the daye longe.

For my loynes are clene dryed vp : and there is no hole parte in my body.

I am feble and sore smytten : I rore for the very disquietnesse of my hert.

Lorde, thou knowest all my desyre : and my gronyng is not hyd from the.

My herte panteth, my strengthe hathe fayled me : and the lyghte of myne eyes is gone fro me.

My louers and frendes stande lokynge vpon my trouble : and my kynsmen are gone a C farre of.

They that sought after my lyfe, and to do me euyl : spake of lyes and ymagined disceyte all the daye longe.

As for me, I was lyke a deafe man and herde not : and as one that were domme, not openyng his mouthe.

I am become as a man that heareth not : and that can make no resystence with his mouthe.

For in the, o Lorde is my trust : thou shalte heare me, o Lorde my God.

My desire is that myne ennemies triumphe D not ouer me : for yf my fote slyp, they reioyse greatly agaynst me.

I am redye to suffre trouble : and my heuynesse is euer in my syght.

For I confesse my wyckednesse : & my synne greueth me.

But myne ennemyes lyue, and are mightye : and they that hate me without cause, are many in nombre.

They that rewarde me euyll for good : speake euyll of me, bycause I folowe that good is.

Forsake me not (O Lorde my God) go not farre fro me.

Haste the to helpe me : Lorde, my sauioure.

¶ To the chaunter for Iduthun, a Psalme of Dauid.

I Sayd : I will kepe my wayes that I offende A not in my tonge.

And so I shut my mouth, whyle the vngodly layd wayte for me.

I helde my tonge, I was domme, I kept silence yea euen from good wordes, but it was payne and grefe to me.

My hert was hote within me : and whyle I was thus musyng, the fyre kyndled, so that I spake with my tonge.

Lorde, let me knowe myne ende, & the nombre of my dayes : that I may be certified what I want.

Beholde, thou haste made my dayes a span B

O howe vayne, are all men lyuynge? Selah.

Yea euery mā walketh as it were a shadowe, C

And nowe Lorde, wherein shall I comforte me? my hope is in the.

Deliuer me from al myne offences : & make me not a scorne vnto the folish.

I kepe sylence, and open not my mouth : for thou hast done it.

Turne thy plages awaye fro me : for I am D consumed thorow the feare of thy hande.

When thou punisshest man for synne, thou chastenest him : so that his beautie consumeth away, lyke as it were a moth.

O how vayne are all men? Selah.

Heare my prayer, o Lorde, and consyder my callynge : shewe not thy selfe as though thou sawest not my teares.

For I am a straunger and pilgrim with the : as all my fore fathers were.

Oh spare me a lytle that I maye refresshe my selfe before I goo hence : and be no more sene.

PSAL. XXXIX.

¶ To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

A I Wayted paciently for the Lorde, whiche enclyned him selfe vnto me : and herde my callynge.

He brought me out of the horrible pit, out of the myre and claye : he set my fete vpon the rocke, and ordred my goinges.

He hath put a new song in my mouth, euen a thankesgyuing vnto our God.

Many men seing this shal feare the Lorde : and put their trust in him.

Blessed is the man that setteth his hope in the Lorde : and turneth not vnto the proude, & to suche as go about with lyes.

O Lorde my God, great are thy wonderous workes whiche thou haste done : and in thy thoughtes toward vs, there may none be lykened vnto the.

I wolde declare them and speake of them :
B but they are so manye, that they can not be tolde.

Sacrifyce and offerynge thou woldest not haue, but a body thou hast ordeyned me : burnt offerynges and sacrifyce for synne thou haste not alowed.

Then sayde I : lo I come. In the begynnynge of the boke it is wrytten of me, that I shoulde fulfyll thy wyll, o my God, and that am I content to do : yea thy lawe is within my hert.

I wyll preache of thy ryghteousnesse in the greate congregacion : loo, I wyll not refrayne my lyppes, o Lorde, and that thou knowest.

I doo not hyde thy ryghteousnesse in my herte : my talkyng is of thy truthe and sauynge helthe : I kepe not thy louynge mercye and faythfulnesse backe from the greate congregacion.

Turne not thou thy mercy fro me, o Lorde : but let thy louing kyndnes and truth alwaye
C preserue me.

For innumerable troubles are come aboute me : my synnes haue taken suche hold vpō me that I am not hable to loke vp : yea they are mo in nombre then the heeres of my heed, and my hert fayled me.

O Lorde, lette it be thy pleasure to delyuer me : make haste (O Lorde) to helpe me.

D Let them be ashamed and confounded that seke after my soule to destroye it : let them fal backwarde and be put to confusion, that wish me euyll.

Let them soone be brought to shame ŷ crye ouer me : there there.

But lette all those that seke the, be ioyfull and glad in the : and let all suche as delyte in thy sauynge helthe, saye alwaye : the Lorde be praysed.

The Lorde shall refresh him when he lyeth sicke vpon his bed, yea thou makest his bed in all his sicknesse.

I sayd : Lorde be mercyfull vnto me : heale my soule, for I haue synned agaynst the.

Myne ennemies speke euil vpon me : when shal he dye, and his name perysshe?

Thoughe he came in to se, yet meaned he B

My soule is a thurst for God, yea euen for the lyuinge God : when shal I come & beholde the face of God?

My teares are my meate daye and nyghte, while it is dayly said vnto me : where is now thy God?

Now when I thinke therupon, I poure out my hert by my self : for I wold fayne go hence with the multitude, and passe ouer with them B
vnto the house of God, in the voyce of prayse and thankesgyuinge, amonge suche as kepe holy daye.

Why arte thou so full of heuynesse (o my soule) and why arte thou so vnquiete within me?

Put thy truste in God, for I will yet gyue him thanckes for the helpe of his countenaunce.

My God, my soule is vexed within me therfore I remembre the land of Jordan, and the lytle hyll of Hermonim.

C One depe calleth an other with the voyce of the whystles: all thy waues and water floudes are gone ouer me.

The Lorde hath promised his louing kyndnesse dayly, therfore wil I prayse him in the nyghte season, and make my prayer vnto the God of my lyfe.

I wyl saye vnto God my stony rocke: why hast thou forgotten me? why go I thus heuily whyle the ennemy oppresseth me?

D Whyle my bones are brokē, and while mine ennemies cast me in the tethe dayly, saying vnto me: where is now thy God?

¶ To the chaunter an instruccion of the sonnes of Corah.

A We haue herd with our eares, o God, our fathers haue tolde vs, what thou hast done in their time of olde.

Howe thou hast dryuen oute the Heithen with thy hande, and planted them in: howe thou hast destroyed the nacyons and cast them out.

For they gat not the land in possession thorowe their owne swerde, neither was it their owne arme that helped them.

But thy right hand, thyne arme & the lyght of thy countenaunce, because thou haddest a fauour vnto them.

Thou art the kyng and my God: thou sendest helpe vnto Jacob.

Thorow the, wyl we ouer throw our ennemyes: and in thy name wil we trede them vnder that ryse vp agaynst vs.

For I will not trust in my bowe: it is not my swerde that shall helpe me.

But it is thou that sauest vs frome oure ennemies: and puttest them to confusion that hate vs.

We wil alwaye make our boste of God, & prayse thy name for euer. Selah.

But nowe thou forsakest vs, and puttest vs to confusyon, and goest not forthe with oure hostes.

Thou makest vs to turne our backes vpon our ennemyes, so ŷ they which hate vs spoyle our goodes.

Thou lettest vs be eaten vp like shepe: and scatterest vs among the Panims.

Thou sellest thy people for nought: and takest no money for them.

C Thou makest vs to be rebuked of oure neyghbours, to be laughed to scorne, and hadde in derision, of them that are rounde aboute vs.

Thou hast made vs a very byworde amonge the Heithen: and that the people shake their heedes at vs.

My confusion is daylye before me: and the shame of my face couereth me.

For the voyce of the sclaūderer and blasphemer: for the ennemy and auenger.

All this is come vpon vs: and yet haue we not forgotten the, nor behaued our selues vnfaythfully in thy couenaunt.

Our herte is not turned backe, neither oure steppes gone out of the waye.

For thou hast smitten vs in the place of dragons, and couered vs with the shadow of death.

D If we had forgotten the name of our God: and holden vp oure handes to anye straunge God.

Shold not God find it out? for he knoweth the very secretes of the herte.

But for thy sake we are kylled all the daye longe: and are counted as shepe appoynted to be slayne.

Up Lorde, why slepest thou? awake, & cast vs not of for euer.

Wherfore hydest thou thy face? wylte thou cleane forget oure myserye and oppression?

For our soule is brought low euen vnto the dust, and our bely cleueth vnto the grounde.

Arise, o Lord, helpe vs and deliuer vs for thy mercy sake.

¶ To the chaunter vpon Sosanim, an instruccion of the chyldren of Corah, a songe of loue.

A My herte is endytynge good matter: I speake of that whiche I haue made of the kynge: my tonge is the pen of a redye wryter.

Thou art the fayrest among the chyldren of men, ful of grace are thy lippes, therfore God blesseth the for euer.

Gyrde the with thy swerde vpon thy thygh (O thou myghtye) with worshyp and renowne.

B Good lucke haue thou with thyne honour, ryde on with the truthe, mekenesse and ryghteousnesse: and thy right hand shal teache wonderfull thinges.

Thy arowes are sharpe, the people shall be subdued vnto the: euen in the myddest among the kinges ennemyes.

Thy seat (God) endureth for euer: the scepter of thy kyngdome is a right scepter.

C Thou hast loued ryghteousnesse, and hated iniquite: wherfore God (whiche is thy God) hath annoynted the with the oyle of gladnes aboue thy felowes.

All thy garmentes are lyke Myrre, Aloes, & Cassia, when thou commest out of thyne yuery palaces in thy beautifull glory.

Kynges doughters go in thy goodly araye, and vpon thy right hande standeth a quene in a garment of moost pure golde.

D Harken (o doughter) consider & bowe downe thyne eare: forget thine owne people, and thy fathers house.

So shall the kynge haue pleasure in thy beautye, for he is thy Lorde, and thou shalte worship him.

The doughters of Tire shall be there with gyftes, the ryche among the people shal make their supplicacion before the.

The kynges doughter is all glorious within: her clothing is of wrought golde.

E She shall be broughte vnto the kynge in raymente of nedle worke, and maydens after her: suche as be nexte her shall be brought vnto the.

With ioye & gladnesse shal they be broughte: and go in to the kinges palace.

In stede of thy fathers thou haste gotten children, whom thou shalte make prynces in all landes.

I wyll remembre thy name frome one generacion to an other: therfore shall the people gyue thankes vnto the, worlde withoute ende.

¶ To the chaunter, a songe of the children of Corah vpon Alamoth.

A In our troubles & aduersite, we haue founde that God is oure refuge, our strength and helpe.

Therfore we wil not feare, though the erth fell, and thoughe the hylles were caryed in to the myddest of the see.

Thoughe the waters of the see raged and were neuer so troublous, and thoughe the mountaynes shooke at the tempeste of the same.

For there is a floude whiche with his riuers reioyseth the citye of God, the holy dwellyng of the hyest.

God is in the middest of her, therfore shall she not be remoued: for God helpeth her, and that ryght early.

B The Heithen are mad, the kyngdomes make moche a do: but when he sheweth his voyce, the erth melteth awaye.

The Lorde of hostes is with vs: the God of Jacob is oure defence.

Come hyther and behold the workes of the Lorde: what destructions he hathe broughte vpon the earth.

He hathe made warres to cease in all the world: he hath brokē the bow, he hath knapped the spere in sondre, and brent the charettes in the fyre.

Be styll then, and confesse that I am God: I wil be exalted amonge the Gentiles, and I wil be exalted vpon erth.

He shal subdue the people vnder vs, and the Panyms vnder our fete.

He choseth vs for an heritage the beautie of Jacob whom he loued. Selah.

B God is gone vp wt a mery noyse: & the Lord with the sounde of the trompet.

Synge prayses, synge prayses vnto God: synge prayses, synge prayses vnto our kynge.

For God is kyng of all the erth: sing prayses vnto him with vnderstanding.

God is king ouer the Heithen: God sitteth in his holy seate.

God is wel knowen in her palaces: that he is the defence of the same.

For lo, kynges are gathered, and gone by togyther.

Lyke as we haue herde, so se we in the citye of the Lorde of hostes, in the citye of oure God: God vpholdeth the same for euer. Selah.

C We wayt for thy louing kindnesse (o God) in the myddest of thy temple.

O God, accordinge unto thy name, so is thy prayse unto the worldes ende: thy right hand is full of rightousnesse.
Oh lette the mounte Sion reioyse: and the doughters of Juda be glad, bycause of iudgementes.
Walke about Sion: go rounde aboute her and tell her toures.

¶ To the chaunter, a Psalme of the children of Corah.

A HEare this, all ye people: ponder it well all ye that dwell upon the erth.
High and lowe, riche and poore: one with an other.
Psal.lxxviii. My mouth shal speake of wisdome, and my hert shall muse of understanding.
I wil enclyne myne eare to the parable, and shewe my darke speache upon the harpe.
☞ Wherfore sholde I feare euyll dayes, when the wyckednesse of my heles compasseth me round about?
B They that put theyr truste in their good: and boste theym selues in the foyson of theyr rychesse.
No man maye deliuer his brother: ne make agrement unto him for God.
For it costeth more to redeme their soules: so that he must let y alone for euer, yea though he lyue long, and se not the graue.
For it shall be sene, that suche wyse men shal dye and perysshe togyther, as well as the ignoraunt and folysshe, and leue their goodes for other.
Loke what is in their house, it continueth styll: their dwellinge places endure from one generacion to an other, & are called after theyr owne names upon erth.
C Neuerthelesse man abydeth not in suche honour, but is compared unto the brute beestes, & becommeth like unto them.
This waye of theyrs is verye foly, and yet their posteritie prayseth it with theyr mouthe. Selah.
They lye in the hell lyke shepe, death shall gnaw upon them, & the rightous shal haue domination of them in the mornynge by tymes: their strength shall consume, and hell shall be their dwellynge.
But God shall delyuer my soule frome the power of hell, when he receyueth me. Selah.
Be not thou afrayd whē one is made ryche: and the glory of his house increased.
*Job.xxvii.d D * For he shall carye nothynge awaye with him when he dyeth, neither shall his pompe folowe him.
Whyle he lyueth he is counted an happye man: and so longe as he is in prosperitie men speake good of him.
But when he foloweth his fathers generacion, he shall neuer se light any more.

¶ A Psalme of Asaph.

THe Lorde euen the mightye God hath spoken and called the worlde frome the rysinge of the sunne, unto the goynge downe of the same. A
Out of Sion appereth the gloryous beautye of God.
Oure God shall come, and not kepe sylence: there goeth before him a consumynge fyre, and a myghtye tempest rounde aboute hym.
He shall call the heuens from aboue: & the erth, that he may iudge his people.
Gather my sayntes togither unto me: those that sette more by the couenaunt then by any offerynge.
And the heauens shall declare his ryghtousnesse: for God is Judge hym selfe. Selah.
Heare, o my people: let me speake, let me testifie amonge you, o Israel: I am God, euen thy God. B
I reproue the not bicause of thy sacrifice, thy burntofferinges are alwaye before me.
I wyll take no bullockes out of thy house: ne gotes out of thy foldes.
For all the beestes of the feld are myne, and thousandes of catell upon the hylles.
I knowe all the foules upon the mountaynes: and the wylde beestes of the felde are in my sight.
Yf I be hungrye, I wyll not tell the: for the hole worlde is myne, and all that therin is.
Thinkest thou that I will eate the fleshe of oxen, or drynke the bloude of gotes?
Offre unto God prayse and thankesgyuynge: and paye thy vowes unto the moost hyest. C
And call upon me in the tyme of trouble: so wyll I heare the, that thou shalte thanke me.
But unto the ungodly saith God, why dost thou preache my lawes, and takest my couenaunt in thy mouth?
Where as thou hatest to be reformed: and castest my wordes behynde the?
Yf thou seest a thefe, thou runnest with him: and art partaker with the aduouterers.
Thou lettest thy mouth speake wickednesse, and thy tonge paynteth disceyte.
Thou syttest and speakest agaynste thy brother: yea and sclaunderest thyne owne mothers sonne. D
This thou doest, whyle I holde my tonge, and thynkest me to be euen suche one as thy selfe: but I wyll reproue the, and set my selfe agaynst the.
Consydre

Consydre this, ye that forget God: least I plucke you awaye, and there be none to delyuer you.
Who so offreth me thankes and prayse, he honoureth me: and this is the waye, wherby I will shewe him the sauinge health of God.

¶ To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid, when the Prophet Nathan came unto him, after he had lyen with Bethsabe.

A HAue mercy upon me (O God) after thy goodnes, and accordinge unto thy great mercyes, do awaye myne offences.
Washe me wel from my wyckednesse, and clense me frome my synne.
For I knowledge my fautes, and my synne is euer before me.
Against the onely, againste the haue I synned, and done euyll in thy sight: y thou myghtest be iustified in thy sayenges, and shouldest ouercome, when thou art iudged.
B Beholde, I was borne in wyckednesse, and in synne hath my mother conceyued me.
But lo, thou hast a pleasure in the truthe, & hast shewed me secrete wysdome.
Purge me with Isope, and I shal be cleane: washe thou me, and I shall be whyter then snowe.
Oh let me heare of ioye and gladnesse, that the bones whiche thou hast broken, maye reioyse.
Turne thy face frome my synnes, and put out all my misdedes.
Make me a cleane hert, O God, and renue a ryght spirite within me.
C Cast me not awaye from thy presence, and take not thy holy spirite from me.
Gyue me the comfort of thy helpe agayne, and stablysh me with thy fre spirite.
Then shall I teache thy wayes unto the wycked, that synners maye be conuerted unto the.
Delyuer me frome bloude gyltynesse, O God, thou that art the God of my healthe, that my tongue maye prayse thy ryghteousnesse.
D Open my lyppes, O Lorde, that my mouth maye shewe thy prayse.
For yf thou haddest pleasure in sacrifice, I wolde gyue it the: but thou delytest not in burntofferinges.
The sacrifice of God is a troubled spirite, a broken and a cōtrite hert, O God, shalt thou not despyse.
Be fauorable and gracious unto Sion, that the walles of Jerusalem maye be buylded.
For then shalt thou be pleased with the sacrifice of righteousnesse, with the burntofferynges and oblacions: then shall they lay bullockes upon thyne aulter.

WHy boastest thou thy selfe, thou tyraūt, that thou canst do myschefe? A
Where as the goodnesse of God endureth yet daylye.
Thy tongue ymagineth wyckednesse, and with lyes it cutteth lyke a sharpe rasoure.
Thou louest ungraciousnes more thē good, to talke of lyes more then rightousnesse. Selah.
Thou louest to speake all wordes that may do hurt, O thou false tongue.
Therfore shal God cleane destroye y, smyte the in peces, plucke the out of thy dwellyng, and rote the out of the lande of the lyuynge. Selah.
The righteous shall se this, and feare, and laughe him to scorne.
Lo, this is the man, that toke not God for his strengthe, but trusted unto the multitude of his ryches, and was myghty in his wyckednesse. B
As for me, I am lyke a grene olyue tre in y house of God: my trust is in the tender mercy of God for euer and euer.

Corrupt are they, and become abominable in their wyckednesses: there is not one, that doth good.
God loked downe frome heauen upon the children of men, to se yf there were anye that wolde understande, or seke after God.
But they are all gone out of the waye, they are all become unprofitable: there is none y doth good, no not one.
How can they haue understandinge, that are y workers of wyckednes, eatynge up my people as it were bread, and call not upon God? B
They are afrayd, where no feare is: for God breaketh the bones of them that besiege the: thou puttest them to confusion, for God despyseth them.

¶ To the chaunter in Neginoth, an inſtruccion of Dauid.

A HEare my prayer, O God, and hyde not thy ſelfe from my petition.

Take hede vnto me & heare me, howe pyteouſly I mourne and complayne.

The ennemy cryeth ſo, and the vngodly cōmeth on ſo faſt: for they are mynded to do me ſome myſcheife, ſo maliciouſly are they ſet agaiſt me.

My herte is heuy with in me, and the feare of death is fallen vpon me.

Fearfulneſſe and tremblynge are come vpō
B me, and an horrible dreade hathe ouerwhelmed me.

And I ſayde: O that I had wynges like a doue, that I myght flee ſomewhere, and be at reſt.

Lo, then wolde I get me awaye farre of, & remayne in the wyldernesse. Selah.

I wolde make haſt to eſcape, frome the ſtormy wynde and tempeſt.

Deſtroye their tongues (O Lorde) and deuyde them, for I ſe vnrighteouſnes and ſtrife in the cytie.

This goeth daye and night about the walles, myſcheife and vyce are in the myddeſt of it.

C Wyckednesse is therin, diſceyt and gyle go not out of her ſtretes.

Yf it were myne ennemye that reuyled me, I could beare it: or yf one that ought me euel wyll, dyd threaten me, I wolde hyde my ſelfe frome hym.

But it is thou my companyon, my gyde & myne owne famylier frende.

We had ſwete and ſecrete communication together in the houſe of God.

Let death come haſtely vpon them, and let them go downe quycke in to hell, for wyckednes is amonge them in their dwellynges.

But I wyll call vnto God, and the Lorde ſhall helpe me.

In the euenynge, mornynge & at none daye wyll I mourne and complayne: and he ſhall heare my voyce.

It is he that delyuereth my ſoule in peace, from them that lye in wayte for me: for they are many againſt me.

Yea euen God that endureth for euer, ſhall heare me, and brynge them downe. D

For they wil not turne: & why? they feare not God.

Yea they laye handes on ſuch as be at peace with him, and ſo they breake his couenaunt.

Their mouthes are ſofter then butter, and yet haue they battel in their mynd: their wordes are ſmoother then oyle, & yet be they very ſwerdes.

Caſt thy burthen, or care, vpon the Lorde, he ſhall norysh the, and not leaue the ryghteous in vnquyetnesse.

But as for them, thou (O God) ſhalt caſt downe into the pyt of deſtruction.

Neuertheleſſe, when I am afrayed, I put my truſt in the.

They vexe me dayly in my wordes: all that they ymagine, is to do me euell.

They holde all togither, and kepe them ſelues cloſe: they marke my ſteppes, howe they maye catche my ſoule.

But in vayne, for it ſhall eſcape them: and why? thou (O God) in thy diſpleaſure ſhalt caſt downe ſuche people.

Thou telleſt my flyttinges, thou putteſt my teares in thy bottell, and nombreſt them.

ג O that all the worlde worde worshyppe the, synge of the, and prayse thy name. Selah.

ד O come hyther and beholde the workes of God, which is so wonderfull in his doynges amonge the children of men.

ה He turned the see into drye lande, so ꝑ they went thorow the water on fote: therfore wil we reioyse in him.

ו He ruleth with his power for euer, his eyes beholde the people: the rennagates shall not be able to exalte them selues. Selah.

ז Magnifye our God, ye people, make ꝑ voyce of his prayse to be herde.

ח Which holdeth our soule in lyfe, and suffreth not our fete to slyp.

ט For thou, O God, hast proued vs, thou hast tryed vs lyke as syluer is tryed.

י Thou hast brought vs into bondage, & layd trouble vpon our loynes.

כ Thou hast suffered men to ryde ouer oure heades, we went thorowe fyre and water, but thou hast brought vs oute, and refreshed vs.

ל Therfore wyll I goo in to thy house with brent offerynges, to paye the my vowes, whiche I promysed with my lyppes, and spake with my mouthe, when I was in trouble.

מ I will offre vnto the fat brent sacrifices wt the smoke of Rammes, I will offre bullockes and gotes. Selah.

נ O come hyther and herken, al ye that feare God, I will tell you, what he hath wrought for my soule.

ס I called vnto him with my mouth, & gaue him prayses with my tongue.

ye

If I enclyne vnto wyckednesse with my herte, the Lorde will not heare me.

Therfore God hath herde me, & considred the voyce of my prayer.

Praysed be God, whiche hathe not cast oute my prayer, ne tourned his mercy frome me.

PSAL. LXVI.

To the chaunter, in Neginoth, a Psalme & songe.

1 GOd be mercyfull vnto vs, bielle vs, and shew the light of his countenaunce vpō vs. Selah.

That we maye knowe thy waye vpon earthe, thy saulynge healthe amonge all heythen.

Let the people prayse the, O God, yea let all people prayse the.

O let the people reioyce and be glad, that thou iudgest the folke righteously, and gouernest the nations vpon earth.

Let the people prayse the, O God, let all people prayse the.

God, euē our owne God, gyue vs his bielsinge, that the earth maye bringe forthe her encreasse.

God bielle vs, and let all the endes of the worlde feare him.

PSAL. LXVII.

After the Hebrues.lxviii.

To the chaunter, a Psalme and songe of Dauid.

1 LEt God aryse, so shall his ennemyes be scattered, and they that hate him, shall flee before him.

Lyke as the smoke vanyssheth, so shalt thou dryue them away: and lyke as waxe melteth at the fyre, so shall the vngodly perysshe at ỹ presence of God.

But the righteous shall be gladde and reioyse before God, they shall be merry and ioyfull.

Synge vnto God, synge prayses vnto his name: magnyfy him that ryeth aboue ỹ heauens (whose name is the Lorde) and reioyse before him.

2 He is a father of the fatherlesse, he is a defender of wydowes: euen God in his holy habitation.

3 He is the God that maketh men to be of one mynde in a house, and bryngeth the prysonners oute of captyuytie in due season, but letteth the renneagates contynue in scarcenesse.

4 O God, when thou wentest forth before ỹ people, when thou wentest thorow the wyldernesse. Selah.

The earthe shoke, and the heauens dropped at the presence of God in Sinai, at the presence of God, whiche is the God of Israel.

5 Thou O God sendest a gracious rayne vpō thyne enheritaunce, and refreshest it, when it is drye.

6 That thy beastes maye dwell therin, whiche thou of thy goodnesse hast prepared for the poze.

7 The Lorde shall gyue the worde, with great & hostes of euangelistes.

Kynges with their armyes shall flee, and they of the householde, shall dyuyde the spoyle.

8 Yf so be that ye lye amonge the pales, the wues fethers shal be couered with syluer, and her wynges of the colour of golde.

9 When the almyghtye setteth kynges vpon the earthe, it shall be cleare euen in the darknesse.

10 The hyll of Basan is Gods hyll, the hyll of Basan is a plenteous hyll.

11 Why hoppe ye so, ye great hylles? It pleaseth God to dwell vpon this hyll, yea the Lorde will abyde in it for euer.

12 The charettes of God are many thousande tymes a thousand, the Lorde is amonge them in the holy Sinai.

13 Thou art gone vp on hyghe, thou hast led captiuite captiue, and receyued gyftes for me. Yea euen for thyne enemyes, that they might dwell with the Lorde God.

14 Praysed be the Lorde dayely, euen the God which helpeth vs, and poureth his benefytes vpon vs. Selah.

15 The God that is our Sauiour, euen God the Lorde by whome we escape death.

16 The God that smyteth the enemyes vpon the heades and vpon the heary scalpes: suche as go on still in their wyckednes.

17 The Lorde hath sayde: some will I bring agayne frome Basan, some will I bringe agayne frome the depe of the see.

18 That thy fote maye be dypped in the blood of thyne ennemyes, and that thy dogges may lycke it vp.

19 It is well sene, O God, howe thou goest, how thou my God and kyng goest in the Sanctuary.

20 The syngers go before, and then the mynstrelles amonge the maydens with the tymbrels.

21 Gyue thankes vnto God the Lorde in the congregacion, for the welles of Israel.

22 There lytle Ben Jamin, the Prynces of Juda, the Prynces of Zabulon, and the Prynces of Nephthaly beare rule amonge them.

23 Thy God hathe committed strength vnto the, stablysshe the thinge, O God, that thou hast wrought in vs.

24 For thy temples sake at Jerusalem shall kynges bringe presentes vnto the.

25 Reproue the beastes amonge the reedes, the heape of bulles with the calues: those that dryue for money.

Oh scatter the people that delyte in battayle.

26 The princes shall come out of Egypte, the Morrans lande shall stretche out her handes vnto God.

27 Synge vnto God, O ye kyngdomes of the earth: synge prayses vnto the Lorde. Selah.

28 Which sitteth in the heauens ouer all from the beginnynge: Lo, he shall sende oute his voyce, and that a myghty voyce.

29 Impute the power vnto God, his glory is in Israel, and his might in the cloudes.

30 God is wonderfull in his sanctuarye, he is the God of Israel, he will gyue strength and power vnto his people. Blessed be God.

PSAL. LXVIII.

After the Hebrues.

To the chaunter vpon Solannim of Dauid.

1 HElpe me, O God, for the waters are come in euen vnto my soule.

2 I stycke fast in the depe myre, where no grounde is: I am come into depe waters, & the floudes will drowne me.

3 I am wery of crying, my throte is drye, my sight fayleth me, for waytinge so longe vpon my God.

4 They that hate me without cause, are mo then the heares of my head: they ỹ are myne ennemyes and wolde destroye me gyltelesse are myghty: I am fayne to paye the thynges that I neuer toke.

5 God thou knowest my simplenesse, and my faultes are not hyd from the.

6 Let not them ỹ trust in the, O Lorde God of hostes, be ashamed for my cause: let not those that seke the, be confounded thorow me O God of Israel.

7 And why? for thy sake wo I suffer reproze, shame couereth my face.

8 I am become a straunger vnto my brethren, and an aleaunt vnto my mothers children.

9 For the zele of thyne house hath euen eaten me, and the rebukes of them that rebuked ỹ, is fallen vpon me.

10 I wept and chastened my selfe with fasting and that was turned to my reproze.

11 I put on a sack clothe, and therfore they iested vpon me.

12 They that sate in the gate, spake against me, and the dronkardes made songes vpon me.

13 But Lorde I make my prayer vnto the in an acceptable tyme.

Heare me, O God, with thy great mercy & sure helpe.

14 Take me out of the myre, that I sinke not: Oh let me be delyuered frome them that hate me, and out of the depe waters.

15 Let the water floude drowne me, that the depe swalow me not vp, and that ỹ pyt shut not her mouth vpon me.

16 Heare me, O Lorde, for thy louynge kyndnesse is comfortable: turne the vnto me accordinge vnto thy great mercy.

17 Hyde not thy face from thy seruaunt, for I am in trouble: haste the to helpe me.

18 Drawe nyghe vnto my soule, and saue it: deliuer me because of myne ennemyes.

19 Thou knowest my reproze, my shame and my dishonour: myne aduersaries are all in thy sight.

20 The rebuke breaketh my herte, and maketh me heuy: I loke for some to haue pitie vpon me, but there is no man: and for some to comforte me, but I fynde none.

21 They gaue me gall to eate, & when I was thurstie, they gaue me vynegre to drinke. Roma.xi.9

22 Let their table be made a snare to take themselues with all, an occasion to fall and a reward vnto them.

23 Let their eyes be blynded, that they se not: and euer bowe downe their backes.

24 Powre out thyne indignacion vpon them, and let thy wrathfull displeasure take hold of them.

25 Let their habitation be voyde, and no man to dwell in their tentes. Act.i.d

26 For they persecute him whō thou hast smytten, and besyde thy woundes they haue gyuē him mo.

27 Let theym fall frome one wickednesse to an other, and not come into thy righteousnesse.

28 Let them be wyped out of the booke of the lyuynge, and not be wrytten amonge the righteous.

29 As for me, I am poze and in heuynesse, let thy helpe defende me, O God.

30 That I may prayse the name of God with a songe, and magnifye it with thankesgyuinge.

31 This shall please the Lorde better then a bullocke, that hath hornes and hoofes.

32 O consydre this and be glad (ye that be in aduersitie) seke after God, & your soule shall lyue.

33 For the Lorde heareth the poze, and despyseth not his prysoners.

34 Let heauen and earth prayse him, the see & all that moueth therin.

35 For God will saue Sion, and buylde the cyties of Juda, that men maye dwell there, & haue them in possession.

36 The sede of his seruauntes shall inheret it: and they that loue his name, shall dwell therin.

1 HAst the, O God, to deliuer me, and to helpe me, O Lorde.

2 Let them be shamed and confounded that seke after my soule: *let them be turned backwarde, and put to confusion, that wysh me euyll. *Psalm.xl.e

3 Let them sone be brought to shame, ỹ crye ouer me, there there.

4 But let all those that seke the, be ioyfull and glad in the: and let all suche as delyte in thy saulynge healthe, saye alwaye: the Lorde be praysed.

5 As for me, I am poze and in mysery, hast ỹ God for to helpe me.

6 Thou art my helpe, my redemer & my God O make no longe tarryenge.

After the Hebrues.lxx.

A IN the, O Lord, is my trust, let me neuer be put to confusion, but rydd me, & delyuer me thorow thy righteousnesse: enclyne thyne eare vnto me, and helpe me.

Be thou my stronge holde (where vnto I maye alwaye flie) thou that haste promysed to helpe me: for thou art my house of defence & my castell.

Delyuer me, O my God, out of the hande of the vngodly, out of the hande of the vnrighteous and cruell man.

For thou, O Lorde God, art the thing that I longe for, thou art my hope euen frome my youth.

I haue leaned vpon the euer sythes I was borne, thou art he that toke me out of my mothers wombe, therfore is my prayse alwaye of the.

B I am become a wonder vnto the multitude but my sure trust is in the.

O let my mouth be fylled with thy prayse and honour all the daye longe.

Cast me not awaye in myne olde age, forsake me not when my strength fayleth me.

For myne ennemyes speake against me, and they that laye wayte for my soule, take their councell togither, sayenge: God hath forsaken him, persecute him, take him, for there is none to helpe him.

Go not farre from me, O God: my God, haste the to helpe me.

Let them be confounded and perysshe, that are against my soule: let theym be couered with shame and dishonoure, that seke to do me euyll.

C As for me I will pacyently abyde alwaye, and will euer encrease thy prayse.

My mouth shal speake of thy righteousnes and sauinge helth all daye longe, for I know no ende therof.

Let me go in (O Lorde God) and I will make mencion of thy power and righteousnes onely.

Thou, O God, hast lerned me fro my youth vp vntyll now, therfore will I tel of thy wōderous workes.

Forsake me not, O God, in myne olde age, when I am graye headded: vntyll I haue shewed thyne arme vnto chylders chyldren, and thy power to all them that are yet for to come.

Thy ryghtousnesse, O God is very hyghe, thou that west great thinges: O God, whs is lyke the?

D O what great troubles and aduersities hast thou shewed me? and yet dydest thou tourne and refresh me: and broughtest me frome the depe of the earth agayne.

Thou hast brought me to great honoure, & comforted me on euery syde.

Therfore will I prayse the and thy faythfulnesse, O God, playenge vpon the lute, vnto the will I synge vpon the harpe, O thou holy one of Israel.

My lippes wolde fayne synge prayses vnto the: and so wolde my soule whom thou hast delyuered.

My tongue talketh of thy ryghteousnesse all the daye longe, for they are confounded & brought vnto shame, that sought to do me euyll.

PSAL. LXXI.

Of Salomon.

GYue the kynge thy iudgement, O God, & thy righteousnesse vnto the kynges sonne. g

That he may gouerne thy people according vnto right, and defende thy pore.

That the mountaynes maye bringe peace, & the lytle hylles righteousnesse vnto the people.

He shal kepe the symple folke by their right defende the children of the pore, and punyshe the wronges doer.

Thou shalt be feared as longe as the sonne and mone endure, from one generacion to another.

He shall come downe lyke the rayne into a flese of wolle, and lyke the droppes that water the earth.

In his tyme shall ryghteousnes flouryshe, yea and aboundaūce of peace, so longe as the mone endureth.

His dominion shall be from the one see to the other, and frome the floude vnto the worldes ende.

They that dwell in the wyldernesse shall knele before him, and his ennemyes shal lycke the dust.

The kynges of the see and of the Iles shal bringe presentes, the kynges of Arabye & Saba shall offre gyftes.

All kynges shall worshyp him, and all nacyons shall do him seruice.

For he shall delyuer the pore when he axeth, and the nedy that hath no helpe.

He shalbe fauorable to the symples poore, he shall preserue the soules of suche as be in aduersitie.

He shall delyuer their soules frome extorcion and wronge, and deare shal their blood be in his sight.

He shall lyue, and vnto him shall be gyuen of the golde of Arabia: prayer shall be made euer vnto him, and dayly shall he be praysed.

There shalbe an heape of corne in the earth hyghe vpon the hylles, his frute shall shake lyke Libanus, and shall be grene in the cytie, lyke grasse vpon the earth.

His name shall endure for euer, his name shall remayne vnder the sunne amonge the posterities, which shalbe blessed thorow him, & all the heythen shall prayse him.

Blessed be the Lorde God, euen the God of Israell, whiche onely doeth wonderous thinges.

And blessed be the name of his maiestye for euer, and all landes be fulfilled with his glorye. Amen, Amen.

Here ende the prayers of Dauid, the sonne of Jesse.

PSAL. LXXII.

A Psalme of Asaph.

1 HOw louynge is God vnto Israel, to suche as are of a cleane herte?

Neuertheles my feete were almost gone, my treadinges had well nyghe slypte.

And why? I was greued at the wycked, to se the vngodly in such welthe.

For they are in no parell of deth, but stand fast lyke a palace.

They come in no mysfortune lyke other folke, neyther are they plaged lyke other men.

And this is the cause that they be so puft vp in pryde, and ouerwhelmed with cruelte and vnrighteousnesse.

Their eyes swell for fatnesse, they do euen what they lyst.

Corrupt are they, and speake blasphemyes maliciously, proude and presumptuous are their wordes.

They stretche forth their mouthe vnto the heauen, and their tongue goeth thorowe the worlde.

Therfore fall the people vnto theym, and there out sucke they no small vauntage.

Tush (saye they) how shulde God perceyue it? is there knowledge in the most hyghest?

Lo, these are the vngodly, their prosperite in the worlde, these haue rychesse in possession.

Shoulde I then clense my herte in vayne (thought I) and washe my handes in innocency?

Wherfore shuld I be then punyshed dayely, and be chastened euery morninge?

Yea I had almost also sayde euen as they: but lo, then shulde I haue condemned the generacion of thy children.

Then thought I to vnderstand this, but it was to harde for me.

Vntyl I went into the Sanctuary of God and consydred the ende of these men.

Namely, how thou hast set them in a slypp pery place, that thou mayst cast theym downe headlynges and destroye them.

O how sodeynly do they consume, perysh, & come to a fearfull ende?

Yea euen lyke as a dreame when one awaketh, so makest thou their ymage to vanysshe out of the cytie.

Thus my herte was greued, and it went euen thorow my reynes.

So folysh was I and ignorant, and as it were a beast before the.

Neuertheles I am alwaye by the, thou holdest me by my right hande.

Thou leadest me with thy counsel, and afterwarde receyuest me vnto glory.

O what is there prepared for me in heauē? there is nothinge vpon earth, that I desire in comparyson of the.

My flesh and my herte fayleth, but God is the strength of my herte, and my porcion for euer.

For lo, they that forsake the shall perysshe: thou destroyest all them that commyt fornication agaynst the.

But it is good for me, to holde me fast by God, to put my trust in the Lorde God, and to speake of all thy workes.

PSAL. LXXIII.

A Instruction of Asaph.

O God, wherfore doest thou cast vs so cleane away? why is thy wrath so hote against the shepe of thy pasture?

O thynk vpon thyne assemble, whom thou haste purchased frome the begynnynge: the stake of thyne enheritaunce, whom thou hast redemed, euen this hyl of Sion wherin thou dwellest.

Treade vpon them with thy fete, and caste them downe to the grounde, for the ennemye hath destroyed all togyther in the Sanctuarye.

Thyne aduersaries roare in thy houses, & set vp their banners for tokens.

Men maye se the axes glysten above, lyke as those that howe in the wod.

They cut downe all the syrnge worke of the holy place with hylles and axes.

They haue set fire vpō the Sanctuary, they haue defyled the dwelling place of thy name, euen vnto the grounde.

Yea they saye in their heertes: let vs spoyle them al togither, thus haue they brent vp al the houses of God in the lande.

We se our tokes no more, there is not one Prophet more, no not one that vnderstādeth any more.

O God, how longe shall the aduersarye do this dishonoure? how longe shal the ennemy blaspheme thy name? for euer? iii. Reg. xxv. 6

Why withdrawest thou thyne hand? why pluckest thou not thy righthande out of thy bosome, to consume thyne ennemyes?

But God is my kynge of olde, the helpe is done vpon earth, he doth it him selfe.

Thou diuidest the see thorowe thy power, thou breakest the heades of the dragons in the waters.

Thou smytest the heades of Leuiathan in peces, and gyuest him to be meat for the people in the wildernesse.

Thou dryggest vp welles and brokes, thou dryest vp myghty waters.

The daye is thyne, and the nyght is thyne: thou haste prepared the lyghtes and the Sunne.

Thou hast set al the borders of the earthe, thou hast made both somer and wynter.

Remembre this, O Lorde, how the ennemy rebuketh, and how the folysh people blaspheme thy name.

O delyuer not the soule of thy turtle doue vnto the beastes, and forget not the assemble of the pore for euer.

Loke vpon the couenaunt, for the darcke houses of the earth are full of wyckednesse.

O let not the symple go awaye ashamed: for the poore and nedye gyue prayses vnto thy name.

Arise, O God, and mayntayne thyne own cause, remembre how the folysh man blaspheme th the dayely.

Forget not the voyce of thyne enemyes, for the presumption of them that hate the, increaseth euer more and more.

A VNto the, O God, will we gyue thankes, yea vnto the will we gyue thankes, and synge thy name is so nyghe, we will tell of thy wonderous workes.

When I maye get a conuenient tyme, I shall iudge accordinge vnto right.

The earth is weake and all that is therin, but I beare vp her pyllers.

I sayde vnto the mad people, waxe not so madly, and to the vngodly: set not vp youre hornes.

Set not vp your hornes on hyghe, & speake not with a styf necke.

For promocion commeth neyther from the East nor frome the west, nor yet from the wildernesse.

And why? God is the iudge: he putteth downe one, and setteth vp an other.

B For in the hande of the Lorde there is a cup full of stronge wyne, and he poureth out of the same:

As for the dregges therof, all the vngodly of the earth shall drynke them, and sucke the oute.

But I will talke of the God of Jacob, and prayse him for euer.

All the hornes of the vngodly wyl I breake and the hornes of the ryghteous shall be exalted.

¶ To the chaunter, in Neginoth, a Psalme and songe of Asaph.

A IN Juda is God knowen, his name is great in Israel.

At Salem is his tabernacle, & his dwellinge in Syon.

There breaketh he the arowes of the bowe the shylde, the swearde, and the hole battayle.

Thou art of more honour and myght then the hylles of robbers.

The proude shall be robbed and slepe their slepe, and the myghty shal be able to do nothinge with their handes.

B When thou rebukest them, O God of Jacob, both the charettes and horsemen shal fal on slepe.

Thou arte fearfull, for who maye abyde in thy sight, when thou art angry?

When thou lettest thy iudgement be herde frome heauen, the earthe trembleth and is styll.

Yea when God aryseth to gyue iudgemēte and to helpe al them that be in aduersite vpō earth. Selah.

When thou punyshest one man, he wyll knowledge that thou arte redye to punyshe other mo.

Loke what ye promyse vnto the Lorde your God, se that ye kepe it, all ye that be rounde about him: bringe presentes vnto him that ought to be feared.

Which taketh awaye the breth of Princes and is wonderfull amonge the kynges of the earth.

PSAL. LXXVI.

¶ To the chaunter, for Jduthun a Psalme of Asaph.

I Cryed vnto God with my voyce, yea vnto God cryed I with my voyce, and he heard me.

In the tyme of my trouble I sought the Lorde, I helde vp myne handes vnto him in the nyghte season, for my soule refused all other comforte.

When I was in heuynesse, I thought vpō God: when my hert was vexed, then dyd I speake. Selah.

Thou heldest myne eyes wakynge, I was so feble, that I couldo not speake.

Then remembred I the tymes of olde, and the yeres that were past.

I called to remembraunce my songe in the night, I communed with myne owne hert, & sought out my spirite.

Wyll the Lorde cast out for euer?

Will he be no more intreated?

Is his mercy cleane gone?

Is his promyse come vtterly to an ende for euermore?

Hathe the Lorde forgotten to be gracious?

Or, hath he shut vp his louynge kyndnesse in displeasure?

At the laste, I came to this poynte, that I thought: O why art thou so folysh? the right hande of the most hyghest can chaunge all.

Therfore will I remembre the workes of the Lorde, and cal to mynde thy wonders of olde tyme.

I will speake of al thy workes, and my talke shalbe of thy wonges.

Thy waye, O God, is holye: who is so great and mighty as God?

Thou arte the God that worketh wonders, thou hast declared thy power among the people.

Thou with thyne arme hast delyuered thy people, euen the sonnes of Jacob and Joseph. Selah.

The waters sawe the, O God, the waters sawe the, and were afrayed, the depthes were moued.

The thicke cloudes powred out water, the cloudes thondered, and thyne arowes went abroade.

Thy thonder was herde rounde about, the lyghtnynges shone vpon the grounde, the erth was moued and shoke withall.

Thy waye was in the see, and thy pathes in the great waters, yet coulde no man know thy foteteppes.

Thou leddest thy people lyke a flocke of shepe, by the hande of Moses and Aaron.

PSAL. LXXVII.

¶ Instruccion of Asaph.

HEare my lawe, O my people, enclyne your eares vnto the wordes of my mouth I wyll open my mouth in parables, & speake of thynges of olde.

Which we haue herde and knowen, & suche as our fathers haue tolde vs.

That we shoulde not hyde theym frome the chyldren of the generacyons to come: but to shewe the honoure of the Lorde, his myght and wonderfull workes that he hathe wrought.

He made a couenaūt with Jacob, and gaue Israel a lawe, which he cōmaunded our forefathers to teache their children.

That their posteritie myght know it, & the children which were yet vnborne.

To thintent that when they came vp, they might shewe their children the same.

That they also might put their trust i God not to forget what he had wone, but to kepe his commaundmentes.

And not to be as their forefathers, a frowarde and ouerthwarte generacion, a generacion that set not their hert a right, and whose spirite was not true towarde God.

B Lyke as the children of Ephraim, which beynge harnessed and carpenge bowes, turned them selues back in the tyme of batayle.

They kept not the couenaunt of God, and wolde not walke in his lawe.

They forgat what he hadde wone, and the wonderfull workes that he hadde shewed for them.

Marueloꝰ thinges dyd he in the sight of our fathers in the lande of Egypte, euen in the felde of Zoan.

He clouyded the see and let theym goo thorow it, and made the waters to stande lyke a wall.

In the day tyme he led them with a cloude and all the nyghte thorowe with a lyght of fyre.

He cloue the hard rockes in the wyldernes and gaue them drynke therof, as it had bene out of the great deapth.

He brought waters onte of the stony rocke, so that they gushed out lyke the ryuers.

Yet for all this they synned againste him, and prouoked the most hyghest in the wyldernesse.

They tempted God in their hertes, and required meat for their lust.

C For they spake against God, and sayde: yea, God shall prepare a table in the wyldernes, shall he?

Lo, he smote the stony rocke, that the waters gushed out, and the streames flowed with all: but how can he gyue bred & prouyde flesh for his people?

When the Lorde herde this, he was wroth so the fyre was kyndled in Jacob, and heuye displeasure against Israel. Numer. xi.b.

Because they beleued not in God, and put not their trust in his helpe.

So he commaunded the cloudes above, & opened the wes of heauen.

He rayned downe Manna vpon theym for to eate, and gaue them bred frome heauen. Exo. xvi.c. Numer. xi.b.

Then ate they aungels fode, for he sent the meat ynough.

He caused the east wynde to blow vnder the heauen, and thorow his power he brought in the south wynde. 1. Cor. x.a.

He made flesh to rayne vpō them as thicke as dust, and fethered foules lyke as the sande of the see. Numer. xi. g.

He let it fall amonge their tentes rounde about their habitations.

So they ate, and were fylled, for he gaue them their owne desire.

They were not disappointed of their lust. Numer. xi. g.

But whyle the meat was yet in their mouthes: the heuy wrath of God came vpō them D slewe the welthyest of them, & smote downe the chosen men of Israel.

But for all this they synned yet more, and beleued not his wonderous workes.

Therfore their dayes were consumed in vanitie, & sodenly their yeres were gone.

When he slewe them, they sought him, and turned them early vnto God.

They thought then that God was their succoure, and that the hyghe God was their redemer.

Neuertheless they dyd but flatter him in their mouthes, & dissembled with him in their tongues.

For their hert was not hole with him, neyther continued they in his couenaunt.

But he was so mercyfull, that he forgaue their mysdedes, and destroyed them not.

Yea many a tyme tourned he his wrathe awaye, and wolde not suffre his hole displeasure to aryse.

For he consydered that they were but flesh: euen a wynde that passeth awaye, and commeth not agayne.

O how oft haue they greued him in the wyldernesse? E

How many a tyme haue they prouoked him in the deserte?

They turned backe, and tempted God, and moued the holy one in Israel.

They thought not of his hande, in the daye when he delyuered theym frome the hande of the enemy.

How he hadde wrought his myracles in Egypte, and his wonders in the lande of Zoan. Exod. vii. a.

How he turned their waters in to bloude so that they myght not drynke of the ryuers.

How he sent lyce amonge them, to eate them vp, and frogges to destroye them. Exod. viii. a.

Howe he gaue their frutes vnto the Caterpiller, and their labour vnto the Grashopper.

Howe he bet downe their vynepardes with hayle stones, and their Mulbery trees with the frost.

Howe he smote their catell with hayle stones, and their flockes with hoote thonder bolles.

Howe he sent vpon them the fiercousnes of his wrath, anger and displeasure: with trouble and failynge in of euyll aungels.

When he made a waye to his fearefull indignacion, and spared not their soules from death, yea and gaue their catell ouer to the pestilence.

When he smote all the first borne in Egypt the most principal and mightyest in the dwellynges of Ham.

His owne people, he lead therm forth lyke shepe, and carped them in the wylderneffe like a flocke.

He brought the out safely, that they shuld not feare, and ouerwhelmed their ennemyes with the see.

He carped the vnto the borders of his Sanctuarye: euen to this hyll, which he purchased with his right hande.

He dyd cast out the Heythen before them, caused their lande to be diuyded among them for an heritage, and made the trybes of Israel to dwell in their tentes.

For all this they tempted and displeased the most hyghe God, and kept not his couenaunt.

But tourned their backes, and fell awaye lyke their forefathers, flattinge aside lyke a broken bowe.

And so they greued hym with their hyghe places, and prouoked him with their ymages.

When God herde this, he was wroth, and toke sore displeasure at Israel.

So that he forsoke the tabernacle in Silo, euen his habitation wherin he dwelt among men.

He delyuered their power into captiuite, & their glory into the ennemyes hande.

He gaue his people ouer into the swerde, for he was wroth with his heritage.

The fire consumed their yong men, & their maydens were not gyuen to mariage.

Their priestes were slayne with the swerde, and there were no wydowes to make lamentacion.

So the Lorde awaked as one oute of slepe and lyke a gyaunt refreshed with wyne.

He smote his ennemyes in the hynder parte, and put them to a perpetual shame.

Moreouer he refused the tabernacle of Joseph, & chose not the tribe of Ephraim.

But chose out the tribe of Juda, euen the hyll of Sion which he loued.

And there he built his temple on hyghe, and layde the foundacion of it lyke vnto the ground, that it might perpetually endure.

He chose David also his seruaunt, & toke him away from the shepefoldes.

As he was folowynge the yowes great with yonge, he toke hym, that he myght fede Jacob his people, and Israell his enheritaunce.

So he fed theym with a faithfull and true hert, and ruled them with al the diligence of his power.

PSAL. LXXVIII.

¶ A Psalme of Asaph.

O God, the Heythen are broke into thyne heritage: the holy temple haue they defyled, and made Jerusalem an heape of stones.

The ded bodyes of thy seruauntes haue they gyuen vnto the foules of the ayre to be deuoured, and the flesh of thy sayntes vnto the beastes of the lande.

Their bloude haue they shed lyke water on euery syde of Jerusalem, and there was no man to bury them.

We are become an open shame vnto our ennemyes, a very scorne and derision vnto them that are round about vs.

Lorde, how longe wilt thou be angry? shal thy gelousy burne lyke fire for euer?

Poure out thyne indygnacion vpon the heythen that know the not, and vpon the kyngdomes that cal not vpon thy name.

For they haue deuoured Jacob, and layde waist his dwellynge place.

O remembre not our olde synnes, but haue mercy vpō vs, and that sone, for we are come to great mysery.

Helpe vs, O God our sauiour, for the glory of thy name: O delyuer vs, & forgyue vs our synnes for thy names sake.

Wherfore shall the Heythen say: where is now their God?

O let the vengeaūce of thy seruātes blode that is shed, be openly shewed vpon the heythen in our sight.

O let the sorowfull syghynge of the prysoners come before the, and according vnto the power of thyne arme, preserue those that are appoynted to dye.

And for the blasphemye wherewith our neyghbowres haue blasphemed the, rewarde them, O Lorde, seuen folde into their bosome.

So we that be the people and shepe of thy pasture, shall gyue the thankes for euer, and will alwaye be shewynge forthe thy prayse more and more.

PSAL. LXXIX.

¶ To the chaunter, vpon Solamin, a Psalme of Asaph.

HEare O thou shepeherde of Israel, thou that leadest Jacob lyke a flocke of shepe: shewe thy selfe, thou that sittest vpon the Cherubyns.

Before Ephraim, Benjamin, and Manasses: stere vp thy power, and come helpe vs.

Turne

Turne vs agayne, O God, shewe the lyghte of thy countenaunce, and we shall be hole.

O Lorde God of hostes: howe longe wylte thou be angrye ouer the prayer of thy people?

Thou hast fed the with the breed of teares: yea thou hast gyuen them plenteousnes of teares to drinke.

Thou hast made vs a verye stryfe vnto our neyghbours: and our ennemyes laughe vs to scorne.

Turne vs agayn thou God of hostes: shew the lyghte of thy countenaunce, and we shall be hole.

Thou hast brought a vyneyarde forthe of Egypt: thou didest cast out the Heythen, and plant it.

Thou madest rowme for it, and caused it to take rote, so that it fylled the lande.

The hylles were coucred with the shadowe of it: and so were the strong Cedar trees with the boughes therof.

She stretched out her braūches vnto the see: and her boughes vnto the water.

Why hast thou then broken downe her hedge: that al they which go by, plucke of her grapes?

The wylde boze oute of the wod hathe rooted it vp: and the beestes of the felde haue deuoured it.

Turne the agayn thou God of hostes: loke downe from heuen, beholde and vysyte this vineyarde.

Mayntayn it that thy right hand hath planted: and the sonne whom thou madest so moch of for thy selfe.

For why? it is brent with fyre, and hewen: O let them perish at the rebuke of thy wrathe.

Lette thy hande be vpon the man of thy ryghte hande: and vpon the man whom thou madest so moche of, for thyne owne selfe.

And so wyll not we goo backe from the: Oh lette vs lyue, and we shall call vpon thy name.

Turne vs agayne, o Lorde God of hostes: shewe the lyght of thy countenaunce, and we shall be hole.

¶ To the chaunter vpon Gittith, of Asaph.

SYnge merply vnto God, whiche is our strength: make a cherefull noyse vnto the God of Jacob.

Take the Psalme, bryng hyther the tabret, the mery harpe and lute.

Blow vp the trompettes in the new mone: vpon our solemne feast daye.

For this is the vse in Israel: and a lawe of the God of Jacob.

This he ordeined in Joseph for a testimony, when he came out of Egypt: and had herde a straunge language.

When he eased his shoulder from the burden: & when his handes were deliuered from the pottes.

When thou calledst vpon me in trouble, I helped the & heed the, what time as the storme fel vpon the: *I proued the also at the waters of stryfe. Selah. * Num.xx.b. Exodi.xx.a

I am the Lord thy God which brought the out of the lande of Egypt: open thy mouthe wyde, and I shal fyll it.

But my people wolde not heare my voyce: and Israel wolde not obey me. Act.xiiii.c

So I gaue them vp vnto their owne hertes lust: and let them folowe theyr owne ymaginacions.

O that my people wolde obey me: for if Israel wolde walke in my wayes: Baruch.iii.b

I shoulde soone put downe theyr ennemyes: and tourne myne hande agaynst theyr aduersaries.

The haters of the Lorde shoulde mysse Israell: but theyr tyme shoulde endure for euer.

Howe longe wyll ye gyue wronge iudgement: and accept the persons of the vngodly? Selah.

Defende the pooze and fatherlesse: se that suche as be in neede and necessitie haue ryghte.

Deliuer the outcast and pooze: and saue him from the hande of the vngodly.

Neuertheleffe they wil not be learned and vnderstande, but walke on styll in darckenesse: therfore must all the foundacion of the lande be moued.

I haue sayd, ye are goddes: ye are the chyldren of the most hyest.

But ye shal dye lyke men: and fall like one of the tyraunces.

Aryse, O God, and iudge thou the earthe: for all Heythen are thyne by enheritaunce.

C Upon Githith, a Psalme of the sonnes of Corah.

A O how amiable are thy dwellinges, thou Lorde of hostes?

My soule hath a desire & longing for the courtes of the Lord: my hert and my flesshe reioyse in the liuing God.

For the sparow hath founde her an house, & ỹ swalow a nest, where she may lay her yong: euen thy aulters, o Lorde of hostes, my kynge and my God.

O howe blessed are they that dwell in thy house? they are alwaye praysynge the. Selah.

Blessed are the men whose strengthe is in Whiche goyng thorow the valey of misery vse it for a well, and the poles are fylled with water.

They goo frome strengthe to strengthe, and so the God of goddes appeareth vnto theym in Sion.

O Lord God of hostes, heare my prayer: hearken, o God of Jacob.

Beholde o God our defence, loke vpon the face of thyne annoynted.

For one daye in thy courte, is better then a thousande.

I hadde rather be a wore keper in the house of my God: then to dwel in the tentes of the vngodly.

For the Lorde God is a lyght and defence, the Lorde wyll gyue grace and worshyp, and no good thinge shall he withholde from them that liue a godly lyfe.

C To the chaunter, a Psalme of the sonnes of Corah.

L Orde, thou hast a loue vnto thy lande: thou dyddest bryng agayne the captiuitie of Jacob.

Thou dyddest forgyue the offence of thy people: and coueredest all their synnes. Selah.

Thou tokest awaye all thy displeasure, and turnedst thy selfe from thy wrathful indignacion.

Turne vs then, o God our sauyour, and let thyne angre cease from vs.

Wilt thou be displeased at vs for euer? wilt thou stretche out thy wrath from one generacion to an other?

Wilt thou not turne agayn and quicken vs, that thy people may reioyse in the?

I wyl harken what the Lord God wil say, for he shal speake peace vnto his people, and to ỹ his sayntes, that they tourne not them selues vnto folysshnesse.

For his saluacio is nye them that feare him: so that glory shal dwell in our lande.

And why? the Lorde shall shewe louynge kyndnesse: and oure lande shall gyue her increase.

Righteousnesse shall go before him, and prepare the waye for his comming.

B In the tyme of my trouble I cal vpon the, for then hearest me.

Among the goddes there is none lyke vnto the, o Lorde, there is not one that can woo as thou doest.

All nacyons whome thou hast made, shall come and worshyp before the, o Lorde, & shall glorifye thy name.

For thou art greate, thou doest wonderous thinges, thou art God alone.

Leade me in thy waye, o Lorde, that I may walke in thy truth: o let my hert delite in fearing thy name.

I thanke the, o Lorde my God: and wyll prayse thy name for euer.

For great is thy mercye towarde me: thou hast delyuered my soule frome the nethermost hell.

C O God, the proude are ryssen agaynste me, and the congregacion of the myghtye seketh after my soule, and sette not the before their eyes.

But thou, o Lorde God, art full of compassion and mercy, long sufferinge, great in goodnes and truth.

O tourne the then vnto me, haue mercye vpon me: gyue thy strengthe vnto thy seruaunte, and helpe the sonne of thyne handmayde.

C A Psalme and songe of the sonnes of Corah, to be chaunted vpon Mahalath, for affliction, an instruction of Heman the Ezrahyte.

O Lorde God my sauiour, I crye daye and night before the: oh let my prayer entre in to thy presence, enclyne thyne eare vnto my callyng.

For my soule is full of trouble, and my lyfe draweth nygh vnto hell.

I am counted as one of the that go downe vnto the pit: I am euen as a man that hath no strength.

Free amonge the dead, lyke vnto them that lye in the graue: whiche be oute of remembraunce, and are cutte awaye frome thy hande.

Thou hast layde me in the lowest pit, in the B darcknesse, and in the depe.

Thyne indignacyon lyeth harde vpon me: and thou vexest me with all thy floudes. Selah.

Thou hast put awaye myne acqueyntaunce farre fro me: and made me to be abhorred of them: I am so faste in prysson, that I can not get forth.

My sight fayleth for very trouble: Lorde I cal dayly vpon the, and stretche out my handes vnto the.

Doest thou shewe wonders amonge the dead?

Can the Philicions rayse them vp agayne, that they may prayse the?

Maye thy louynge kyndnesse be shewed

Maye thy wonderous workes be knowen in the darcke? or the rightousnesse in the lande where all thynges are forgotten?

Vnto the I cry, o Lord, and early commeth my prayer before the.

Lorde, why puttest thou awaye my soule? wherfore hydest thou thy face fro me?

D Thy strengthe is gone for very sorowe and miserye: with fearfulnesse doo I beare my burthens.

Thy wrathfull displeasure goeth ouer me: the feare of the oppresseth me.

Thy seed wyll I stablysshe for euer, and set vp thy throne frome one generacyon to an other.

O Lorde, the verye heuens shall prayse thy wonderous workes, yea and thy faythfulnesse in the congregacion of the sayntes.

For who is he among the cloudes, that may be compared vnto the Lorde?

Yea what is he amonge the goddes, that is lyke vnto the Lorde?

God is greatly to be feared in the counsel of the sayntes, & to be had in reuerence of al them that are aboute him.

O Lorde God of hostes, who is lyke vnto the in power? thy truthe is rounde aboute the.

Thou abatest the raginge of the see: thou stylest the waues therof, when they aryse.

Thou breakest the proude lyke one that is wounded, thou scatterest thyne enemies abrode with thy mighty arme.

Genesis.i.a The heuens are thyne, the erth is thyne: thou hast layd the foundacion of the round worlde, and all that therin is.

Thou hast made the North and the South: Tabor and Hermon shall reioyse in thy name.

Thou hast a myghtye arme, stronge is thy hande, and hye is thy right hande.

Righteousnesse and equitie is the habitacion of thy seate: mercye and truthe goo before thy face.

Blessed is ye people, o Lord, that can reioyse in the, and walketh in the lyght of thy countenaunce.

Their delyte is in thy name all the daye long, and thorow thy righteousnesse they shall be exalted.

For thou arte the glorye of their strengthe and thorowe thy fauoure shalte thou lyfte vp our hornes.

The Lorde is our defence: and the holy one of Israel is our kyng.

Thou spakest somtimes in visions vnto thy sayntes, and sayedst: I haue layde helpe vpon one that is mighty, I haue exalted one chosen out of the people.

I haue found Dauid my seruaunt: with my holy oyle I haue annoynted him.

My hande shall holde him fast: and myne arme shall strengthen him.

The ennemye shall not ouercome hym: and the sonne of wickednesse shall not hurte hym.

I shal smyte downe his foes before his face: and plage them that hate him.

My truthe also and my mercye shall be with him: and in my name shall his horne be exalted.

I wil set his hande in the see: and his right hande in the floudes.

He shall call me: thou arte my father, my God, and the strengthe of my saluacion.

And I will make him my fyrstborne: hyer then the kynges of the erth.

My mercye will I kepe for him for euermore: and my couenaunte shall stande faste with him.

His seed wil I make to endure for euer, yea and his trone as the dayes of heuen.

But yf his children forsake my lawe: and walke not in my iudgementes.

Yf they breake mine ordinaunces: and kepe not my commaundementes.

I wil visit their offences with the rod: and their synnes with scourges.

Neuertheles my louynge kyndnesse will I not vtterly take from him: ne suffre my truth to fayle.

My couenaunt will I not breake: nor disanulle the thynge that is gone oute of my lyppes.

I haue sworne ones by my holynesse, that I wil not fayle Dauid.

His sede shall endure for euer, and his seate also lyke as the sunne before me.

He shall stande faste for euermore as the moone: and as the faythfull witnesse in heuen. Selah.

But now thou forsakest and abhorrest thine annoynted: and art displeased at him.

Thou haste tourned backe the couenaunte of thy seruaunte: and caste his crowne to the grounde.

Thou hast ouerthrowen al his hedges: and brosken downe his strong holdes.

Al they that go by, spoyle him: he is become a rebuke vnto his neyghbours.

Thou settest vp the ryghte hande of his enemyes: and makest all his aduersaryes to reioyse.

Thou haste taken awaye the strengthe of his swerde: and gyuest him not victorye in the battayle.

Thou hast put out his glorye: and cast his trone downe to the ground.

The dayes of his youthe haste thou shortened: and couered him with dishonoure. Selah.

Lorde, howe longe wylte thou hyde thy selfe? for euer? shall thy wrathe burne lyke fyre?

O remembre howe shorte my tyme is: haste thou made all men for nought? what man is he that lyueth, and shall not se deathe?

Maye a man deliuer his owne soule frome the hande of hell? Selah.

* Lorde, where are thy olde louynge kyndnesses, which thou sworest vnto Dauid in thy truthe?

Remembre, Lorde, the rebuke that the multytude of thy people doo vnto thy seruauntes, and howe I haue borne it in my bosome.

Wherwith thyne ennemyes blaspheme the: and sclaūder the foteteppes of thyne annoynted.

Thankes be to the Lorde for euermore: Amen, Amen.

A prayer of Moses the man of God.

LOrde, thou art oure refuge frome one generacion to an other.

Before the mountaynes were brought forthe, or euer the earthe and the worlde were made, thou art God from euerlasting & worlde without ende.

Thou tournest man to destruction: & agayne thou sayest: come agayne ye children of men.

For a thousande yeres in thy syghte, are but as yesterdaye that is past, and lyke as it were a nyght watche.

As soone as thou scatterest them, they are euen as a slepe: and fade awaye sodeynly lyke the grasse.

In the mornynge it is grene and groweth vp: but in the euenynge it is cut downe and withered.

For we consume awaye in thy displeasure: and are afrayde at thy wrathfull indignacion.

Thou settest our mysdoedes before the: and our secrete synnes in the lyght of thy countenaunce.

For when thou art angrye, all our dayes are gone: we bringe oure yeres to an ende, as it were a tale that is tolde.

The dayes of oure age are three score yeres and ten: and thoughe men be so stronge that they come to foure score yeres, yet is their strength then but labour and sorowe: so soone passeth it awaye and we are gone.

But who regardeth the power of thy wrathe, thy fearefull and terrible displeasure?

O teache vs to nombre oure dayes, that we maye applye oure hertes vnto wysedome.

Turne thee agayne, o Lorde, at the last: and be gracious vnto thy seruauntes.

O satisfie vs with thy mercy, and that sone: so shall we reioyse and be glad all the dayes of our lyfe.

Comfort vs agayn now after the time that thou hast plaged vs: and for the yeres wherin we haue suffered aduersitie.

Shewe thy seruantes thy worke: and their children thy glorye.

And the glorious maiestie of the Lorde our God be vpon vs: O prospere thou the worke of our handes vpon vs: o prospere thou oure handy worke.

A Psalme of the songe for the Saboth daye.

IT is a good thing to giue thankes vnto the Lorde: and to sing prayses vnto thy name, o moost hyest.

To tell of thy louynge kyndnesse early in the mornynge: and of thy truthe in the nyghte season.

Upon an instrumente of tenne strynges: vpon the Lute, and with the songe vpon the harpe.

For thou Lorde hast made me glad thorowe thy workes: and I wil reioyse ouer ye operacion of thy handes.

O Lorde, how glorious are thy workes, thy thoughtes are very depe.

An vnwise man wyl not knowe this: and a fole will not vnderstande it.

That the vngodly are greene as the grasse: & that all the workes of wyckednesse do florisshe to be destroyed for euer.

But thou Lord, o moost hyest, abidest worlde without ende.

For loo, thyne ennemyes, O Lorde, loo, thyne ennemyes shall perysshe: and all the workes of wyckednesse shall be scattered abrode.

But my horne shal be exalted like the horne of an Vnicorne, and shall be annoynted with freshe oyle.

Myne eye also shall se his lust of his ennemyes: and myne eare shall heare his desire of the wicked that rise vp agaynst me.

The

The righteous shall florysche lyke a palme tree, and grow lyke a Cedre of Libanus.

Such as be planted in the house of ꝑ Lord, be frutefull, plenteous and greene.

That they may shewe, how true the Lorde my strength is, & that there is no vnrighteousnesse in him.

PSAL. XCII.

After the Hebrues. xciii. A

THe Lorde is kinge, and hath put on glorious apparell: the Lorde hathe put on his apparell: and gyrded him selfe with strength: he hath made the rounde worlde so sure, that it can not be moued.

From that time forth hath thy seat ben prepared: thou art from euerlastyng.

The floudes aryse (O Lorde) the floudes lyft vp their noyse, the floudes lyfte vp theyr waues.

The waues of the see are mighty, and rage horribly: but yet the Lorde that dwelleth on hye, is mightyer.

Thy testimonyes, O Lorde, are verye sure: holynesse becommeth thyne house for euer.

PSAL. XCIII.

After the Hebrues. xciiii. A

O Lord God, to whom vengeaunce belongeth: thou God to whom vengeaunce belongeth, shewe thy selfe.

Aryse thou iudge of the world, and rewarde the proude after their deseruing.

Lord how long shal the vngodly, how long shal the vngodly tryumphe?

Howe long shall all wycked doers speake so disdaynfully: and make suche proude boastynge?

They smyte downe thy people, o Lord, and trouble thyne heritage.

They murther the widow and the straūger: B and put the fatherlesse to deth.

And yet they saye, tushe, the Lorde seeth not: the God of Jacob regardeth it not.

Take hede ye vnwise amonge the people: o ye fooles, when wil ye vnderstande?

He that planteth the eare, shal he not heare? he that made the eye, shal he not se?

He that nourtureth the Heythen: and teacheth a man knowlege, shall he not punyshe?

The Lorde knoweth the thoughtes of men that they are but vayne.

Blessed is the man whome thou lernest (O Lorde) and teachest him in thy lawe.

That thou mayst geue him patience in time C of aduersitie, vntyll the pyt be digged for the vngodly.

For the Lorde wil not fayle his people, neither wil he forsake his inheritaunce.

And why? iudgement shal be turned agayne vnto righteousnesse, and all suche as be true of herte shall folowe it.

Who ryseth vp with me agaynste the wycked? who taketh my parte agaynst the euyll doers?

If the Lorde had not holped me, my soule had almost ben put to sylence.

Whē I said: my fote hath slipped, thy mercy (o Lorde) helde me vp.

In the multitude of the sorowes that I had in my herte, thy comfortes haue refreshed my soule.

Wylt thou haue any thyng to do with the stole of wickednes, which ymagineth mischief in the lawe?

They gather them together agaynst ꝑ soule of the ryghtous, and condemne the innocent bloude.

But the Lorde is my refuge, my God is the strength of my confidence.

He shall recompence them their wickednesse: and destroye them in their owne malyce: yea the Lorde oure God shall destroye them.

PSAL. XCIIII.

O Come let vs prayse the Lord, let vs hertely reioyse in the strengthe of oure saluacion.

Let vs come before his presence with thankesgyuynge, and shewe our selfe glad in him with psalmes.

For the Lorde is a greate God, and a greate kynge, aboue all goddes.

In his hande are all the corners of the earthe: and the strengthe of the hylles is his also.

The see is his, for he made it, and his handes prepared the drye lande.

O come, let vs worshyp and bowe downe our selues: let vs knele before the Lorde our maker.

For he is oure God: and we are the people of his pasture, and the shepe of his handes.

To day if ye wil heare his voyce, harden not your hertes, as when ye prouoked in tyme of temptacion in the wildernesse.

Where youre fathers tempted me: proued me, and sawe my workes.

Fourtye yeres longe was I grieued with that generacion, and sayde: they erre euer in their hertes, they veryly haue not knowen my wayes.

Therfore I sayd vnto thē in my wrath: that they sholde not entre in to my rest.

PSAL. XCV.

O Synge vnto the Lorde a newe songe: synge vnto the Lorde all the hole earth.

Syng vnto the Lorde, and prayse his name: be tellynge of his saluacion from daye to daye.

Declare his honour among the heithē, and his wonders amonge all people.

For the Lorde is greate, and can not worthely be praysed: he is more to be feared then all goddes.

As for all the goddes of the Heythen: they be but ydols: but it is the Lord that made the heuens.

Thankesgyuynge and worshyp are before him: power and honoure are in his sanctuary.

Ascrybe vnto the Lorde (O ye kynredes of the heithen) ascrybe vnto the Lorde worshyp and strength.

Ascrybe vnto the Lorde the honoure of his name: bringe presentes, and come in to his courte.

O worshyp the Lorde in the beautye of holynesse: let the hole earthe stande in awe of him.

Tell it oute amonge the heithen: that the Lorde is kyng: and that it is he whiche hathe made the rounde worlde so fast, that it can not be moued, and how that he shal iudge the people ryghtously.

Let the heuens reioyse, and let the earth be glad: let the see make a noyse, yea and al that therin is.

Lette the felde be ioyfull, and all that is therin: let all the trees in the wodde leape for ioye.

Before the Lorde, for he commeth: for he commeth to iudge the earth: yea with righteousnes shall he iudge the worlde, and the people with his truthe.

PSAL. XCVI.

THe Lorde is kyng, the erth may be glad therof: yea the multitude of ꝑ yles may be glad therof.

Cloudes and darcknesse are rounde aboute him: righteousnesse and iudgement are the habitacion of his seate.

There goeth a fyre before him, to burne vp his enemyes on euery syde.

His lightenynges gaue shine vnto ꝑ worlde: therwith seeth it, and is afrayde.

The hilles melt lyke waxe at the presence of the Lord of the hole erth.

The very heuens declare his righteousnesse: and all the people se his glory.

Confounded be all they that worshyp ymages, and delite in their ydols: worshyp him all ye goddes.

Sion heareth of it, and reioyseth: yea and al the doughters of Juda are glad because of thy iudgementes, o Lorde.

For thou Lorde arte the most hyest ouer all the earth: thou art exalted farre aboue al goddes.

Oye that loue the Lorde, se that ye hate the thyng whiche is euyll: the Lorde preserueth the soules of his sayntes, he shall deliuer them from the hande of the vngodly.

There is spronge vp a lyghte for the ryghteous: and a ioyfull gladnesse for suche as be true herted.

Reioyse therfore in the Lorde ye ryghteous: and geue thankes for a remembraunce of his holynesse.

PSAL. XCVII.

A Psalme.

OSynge vnto the Lorde a new songe: for A he hath wone maruelous thynges.

With his owne ryghte hande, and with his holye arme he hathe gotten the victorye.

The Lorde hath declared his sauing helth, & his righteousnes hath he openly shewed in the sight of the Heithen.

He hath remembred his mercye and truthe towarde the house of Jsrael: * so ꝑ al the ende of the worlde se the sauynge helthe of our God. Esaye. lii. c. B. xv. b Shewe youre selues ioyfull vnto the Lorde all ye landes: synge, reioyse, and geue thankes. B.

Prayse the Lorde vpon the harpe: synge to the harpe with a Psalme of thankesgyuynge.

With trompettes also and shawmes: O shewe youre selues ioyfull before the Lorde the kynge.

Let the see make a noyse, and all that therin is: yea the hole worlde, and all that dwell therin.

Let the floudes clap their handes: and let all the hylles be ioyfull together:

Before the Lorde, for he is come to iudge the earthe.

Yea with ryghtousnesse shall he iudge the worlde, and the people with equitie.

PSAL. XCVIII.

After the Hebrues. xciv. A

THe Lorde is kynge, be the people neuer so vnpacyent: he sytteth vpon the Cherubyns, be the earthe neuer so vnquiet.

The Lorde is great in Sion, and hye aboue all people.

O let men giue thankes vnto thy great and wonderfull name, for it is holy.

The kynges power loueth iudgement, thou preparest equitie, thou executest iudgemēt and righteousnes in Jacob.

O magnifie the Lorde our God: fal downe before his fotestole, for he is holy.

Moyses and Aaron amonge his Preestes: and Samuel amonge suche as call vpon his B name: these called vpon the Lorde, and he herde them.

He spake vnto them out of the cloudy piller for they kepte his testimonies, and ꝑ law that he gaue them.

Thou herdest them, o Lorde our God, thou forgauest them, o God, & punishedst their owne inuencions.

O magnifie the Lord our God, and worshyp him vpon his holy hyll, for the Lord our God is holye.

A Psalme of prayse.

OBe ioyfull in God (all ye landes) serue the Lorde with gladnesse, come before C his presence with ioye.

Be ye sure that the Lorde he is God: It

Hym is he is he that hath made vs, and not we oure selues: we are but his people, and the shepe of his pasture.

O go youre waye in to his gates then with thanckesgyuynge, and in to his courtes with prayse, be thankful vnto him, and speake good of his name.

For the Lord is gracious, his mercy is euerlastynge: and his trueth endureth from generacion to generacion.

A Psalme of Dauid.

A MY songe shall be of mercye and iudgement: yea vnto the (O Lorde) will I synge.

O let me haue vnderstandynge in the waye of godlynesse, vntyll the tyme that thou come vnto me: and so shall I walke in my house with an innocent hert.

I will take no wycked thyng in hande: I hate the synne of vnfaythfulnesse, it shall not cleue vnto me.

A frowarde hert shal depart from me: I will not knowe a wicked person.

B Who so priuely slaundereth his neighbour, hym will I destroye: who so hathe a proude loke, and an hye stomacke, I maye not awaye with him.

Myne eyes shall loke for suche as be faythfull in the lande: that they maye dwell with me: and who so leadeth a godly lyfe, shal be my seruaunt.

There shall no deceytfull person dwell in my house: he that telleth lyes shall not tarye in my syght.

I shal soone destroye all the vngodly of the land: that all wicked doers may be rooted oute of the citie of the Lorde.

PSAL. CI.

A prayer of the afflict, when he was in woo, and powred out his complaynte before the Lorde.

A HEare my prayer, o Lord, and let my crienge come vnto the.

Hyde not thy face fro me in the time of my trouble: enclyne thyne eares vnto me when I call, O heare me, and that tyghte soone.

For my daies are cõsumed away like smoke: and my bones are brent vp as it were a fyre brande.

My herte is smytten downe, and withered lyke grasse: so that I forget to eate my breed.

For the voyce of my groning: my bone will scarce cleue to my flesshe.

I am become lyke a Pellycane in the wyldernesse: and lyke an howle in a broken wall.

I wake, and am euen as it were a sparowe sytting alone vpon the house top.

B Myne enemyes reuyle me all the day long: they laugh me to scorne, and are swome together agaynst me.

I eate ashes with my breed, and mingle my drynke with wepinge.

And that because of thyne indignacion and wrath, for thou hast taken me vp, and cast me awaye.

My dayes are gone like a shadowe: and I am withered lyke grasse.

But thou, O Lorde, endurest for euer: and thy remembraunce throwe oute all generacyons.

Aryse therfore and haue mercy vpon Sion: for it is tyme to haue mercy vpon her, yea the tyme is come.

And why? thy seruauntes haue a loue to her stones: and it pityeth them to se her in the duste.

The Heythen shall feare thy name, O Lorde, and all the kynges of the earthe thy maiestye.

For the Lorde shall buylde vp Sion, & shal appere in his glory.

He tourneth hym vnto the prayer of the poore destitute: and despyseth not their desyre.

This shal be written for those that come after: that the people which shal be borne, may prayse the Lorde.

For he loketh downe from his sanctuary: out of the heuen dothe the Lorde beholde the earthe.

That he may heare the mourninges of suche as be in captiuitie: and delyuer the children of dearthe.

That they maye preache the name of the Lorde in Syon: and his worshyp at Ierusalem.

When the people are gathered together: and the kyngdomes also to serue the Lorde.

He hath brought downe my strength in my iourney: and shortened my dayes.

Yet will I saye, O my God, take me not awaye in the myddest of myne age: as for thy yeres, they endure throwe oute all generacions.

Thou Lorde in the begynning hast layd the foundacion of the erth, and the heuens are the workes of thy handes.

*They shal perishe, but thou shalt endure: they all shall ware olde as doth a garment, & as a vesture shalte thou chaunge them, & they shall be chaunged.

But thou art the same, and thy yeres shall not fayle.

The children of thy seruauntes shall continue: and their sede shall prospere in thy syght.

PSAL. CII.

Of Dauid.

PRayse the Lorde, O my soule, and all that is within me, prayse his holy name.

Prayse the Lord, o my soule, and forget not all his benefites.

Whiche forgiueth all thy synnes: and healeth all thyne infirmities.

Which saueth thy lyfe from destruction: & crowneth the with mercy, and louynge kyndnesse.

Whiche satisfyeth thy desyre with good thynges: makynge the yonge and lusty as an Egle.

The Lorde executeth righteousnesse & iudgement for all them that suffre wronge.

B He shewed his wayes vnto Moses: and his workes vnto the chyldren of Israel.

The Lorde is full of compassion and mercye: longe sufferynge, and of greate goodnesse.

He wil not alwaye be chiding: neither will he kepe his anger for euer.

He hathe not dealte with vs after oure synnes: ne rewarded vs accordynge to oure wickednesse.

For loke how hye the heuen is in comparisõ of the erth: so great is his mercy also towarde them that feare him.

Loke howe wyde the East is frome the West: so farre hathe he sette oure synnes from vs.

Yea like as a father pitieth his owne children: euen so is the Lorde mercyful vnto them that feare him.

For he knoweth whereof we be made: he remembreth that we are but dust.

That a man in his tyme is but as is grasse: and flourisheth as a floure of the felde.

For as soone as the wynde goeth ouer it, it is gone: and the place therof knoweth it no more.

But the mercyful goodnesse of the Lord, endureth for euer and euer, vpon them that feare him. and his righteousnesse vpon their children children.

Suche as kepe his couenaunte: and thynke vpon his commaundementes, to doo them.

The Lorde hath prepared his seat in heuen: and his kyngdome ruleth ouer all.

O prayse the Lord ye aungels of his, ye that be mighty in strengthe: fulfyllynge his commaundement, that men may heare the voyce of his wordes.

O prayse the Lorde all ye his hostes, ye seruauntes of his, that do his pleasure.

O speake good of the Lorde all ye workes of his, in euery place of his dominion: prayse thou the Lorde, o my soule.

PSAL. CIII.

PRayse the Lorde, o my soule: o Lorde my God, thou arte become exceadynge glorious, thou arte clothed with maiesty and honoure.

Thou wrappest thy self with light, as it were with a garment, thou spredest out the heuen like a curtayne.

Thou beltest it aboue with waters, the makest the cloudes thy charet, and goest vpon the wynges of the wynde.

*Thou makest thyne aungels spirites: and thy ministres flames of fyre. Hebr.i.

Thou hast layde the erth vpon her foundacion, that it neuer moueth at any tyme.

Thou couerest it with the depe like as with a garment: so that the waters stande aboue the hylles.

But at thy rebuke they flee, at the voyce of thy thonder they are afrayde.

(Then are the hylles sene aloft, and the valeys beneth in their place which thou hast appoynted for them.)

Thou hast set them their boundes, whiche they may not passe, that they turne not agayn to couer the erth.

Thou causest the welles to springe vp amonge the valeys, and the waters to runne amonge the hylles.

That al beastes of the feld may haue drinke, and that the wylde asses maye quenche their thirst.

Aboue vpon the hylles haue the foules of the ayre their habitacion, & sing among the braunches.

Thou waterest the hylles frome aboue: the earthe is fylled with the frutes of thy workes.

Thou bryngest forth grasse for the catel, and greene herbes for the seruice of men.

Thou bringest bode out of the erth: wine to make glad the hert of man, oyle to make him a chereful countenaunce, and breed to strengeth mans herte.

The trees of the Lorde are full of sape: euen the trees of Libanus which he hath planted.

There make the birdes their nestes: and the fyre hylles are a dwellynge for the Storcke.

The hylles are a refuge for the wylde gotes: and so are the stonye rockes for the conyes.

Thou hast appoynted the Moone for certayne seasons, the Sunne knoweth his going downe.

Thou makest darcknesse, that it maye be nyght: wherin all the beastes of the forest wo moue.

Yea and the younge Lyons whiche roze after their praye: and seke their meate at God.

But when the sunne aryseth, they get them awaye together, and lye them downe in their dennes.

Then goeth man forth to his worke, and to tyll his lande vntyll the euenyng.

*O Lorde, how manyfolde are thy workes, right wisely hast thou made them all: yea the erth is full of thy ryches. Psalm.xiii.

So is this great and wyde see also, wherin are thinges creping innumerable, bothe small and great beastes.

There go the shippes ouer, and there is that Leuiathan, whom thou hast made to take his pastyme therin.

They wayte all vpon the, that thou mayste

grue them meate in due season.

When thou gyuest it them, they gather it: when thou openest thyne hand, they are filled with goods.

But when thou hydest thy face, they are sorowfull: yf thou takest awaye their breathe, they dye, and are tourned againe to their dust.

Againe, whē thou lettest thy breth go forth, they are made: and so thou renuest the face of the earthe.

The glorious maiestye of the Lorde endureth for euer: and the Lorde reioyseth in his workes.

The earthe trembleth at the loke of him: he bothe but touche the hylles, and they smoke.

I wyll synge vnto the Lorde as longe as I lyue: I wyll prayse my God whyle I haue my beynge.

O that my wordes might please him, for my ioye is in the Lorde.

As for synners, they shall be consumed oute of the earth: and the vngodly shal come to an ende: but prayse thou the Lorde, o my soule. Prayse the euerlastynge.

O Geue thankes vnto the Lorde: and cal vpon his name: tell ỹ people what thinges he hath done.

1.Paral.xvi.b Psalm.xcvi.a

O let your songes be of hym: prayse him, and let your talkyng be of all his wonderous workes.

Glorye ye in his holy name a good repoyt, let their hertes reioyse that seke the Lorde.

Seke the Lorde and his strength: seke his face euermore.

Remembre the meruelous workes that he hath done, his wonders and the iudgementes of his mouth.

O ye sede of Abraham his seruaunt, ye children of Jacob his chosen.

He is the Lord our God, whose punishmentes are throwe out all the worlde.

He is alwaye myndefull of his couenaunt, and promyse that he made to a thousand generations.

Yea the couenaunte that he made with Genes.xvii.b Abraham: and the othe that he sware vnto Isaac.

And appoynted the same vnto Jacob for a lawe: and to Israell for an euerlastynge testament.

Sayinge: vnto the will I giue the lande of Canaan, the lot of your heritage.

When there was yet but a fewe of them: & the straungers therin.

What tyme as they went from one nacion to an other: from one kyngdome to an other.

1.Par.xvi.d He suffred no man to hurt them, but reproued euen kynges for their sakes.

Touche not myne annoynted, no my Prophetes no harme.

4.Reg.i.a Moreouer he called for a dearthe vpon the lande: and destroyed all the prouysion of breed.

But he had sente a man before them, euen Joseph: whiche was solde to be a bonde seruaunt.

They hurt his fete in the stockes: the yron pearsed his hert.

Vntyll the tyme that his worde came: and tyll the worde of the Lorde had tryed hym.

Then sent the kynge, and caused him to be delyuered: the prynce of the people bade lette him goo.

He made him Lorde of his house: and ruler of all his substaunce.

That he myght enforme his princes after his wyll: and teache his senatours wysedome.

Israel also came in to Egypt: & Jacob was a straunger in the lande of Ham.

But he increased his people exceedingly: and made them stronger then their ennemies.

Whose herte tourned so, that they hated his people: and dealte vntruly with his seruauntes.

Then sent he Moses his seruaunt, & Aaron whom he had chosen.

These dyd his tokens among them, & wonders in the land of Ham.

He sente darcknesse, and it was darcke: for they were not obedient vnto his worde.

He turned their waters in to bloud, & slewe their fyshe.

Exod.vii.a Their landes brought forth frogges: yea euen in their kynges chambres.

He spake the worde: and there came all manner of flyes and lyce in all their quarters.

He gaue them hayle stones for rayne: and flames of fyre in their hande.

He smote their vineyardes and figge trees: and destroyed the trees that were in their coastes.

He spake the worde, and there were grashoppers and caterpyllers innumerable.

These ate vp all the grasse in their land, and deuoured their frutes of the grounde.

He smote all the first borne in the land, euen the chefe of al their substaunce.

He brought them forth with siluer & golde: there was not one feble person among their trybes.

Egypt was glad of their departing, for they were afrayde of them.

He spredde out a cloude to be a couerynge: and fyre to gyue lyght in the nyght season.

At their desire there came quayles: and he filled them with the breed of heuen.

He opened the rocke of stone, and the waters flowed oute: so that ryuers ranne in the wyldernesse.

For why? he remembred his holye promyse whiche he hadde made vnto Abraham his seruaunt.

Thus he brought forth his people with ioye: and his chosen with gladnesse.

And gaue them the landes of the Heythen: where they toke the labonres of the people in possession.

That they myghte kepe his statutes: and obserue his lawes. Prayse the euerlastynge.

Confitemini.

O Geue thankes vnto the Lorde: for he is gracyous, and his mercye endureth for euer.

Who can expresse the noble actes of ỹ Lord, or shewe forth all his prayse?

Blessed are they that alway kepe iudgemēt, and do righteousnesse.

Remembre vs, o Lorde, according to the fauour that thou bearest vnto thy people: o visite vs with thy sauing helth.

That we myght se the pleasure of thy chosen, that we myghte reioyse in the gladnesse of thy people, and gyue thankes with thyne inheritaunce.

We haue synned with our fathers, we haue done amysse, we haue dealt wickedly.

Our fathers regarded not thy wonders in Egypt, they kepte not thy greate goodnesse in remembraunce: but were disobedient at the see, euen at the red see.

Neuertheles he helped them for his names sake: that he myghte make his power to be knowen.

He rebuked the red see, and it was dryed vp: so led them throwe the depe, as in the wildernesse.

Thus he saued them from the hande of the hater: and delyuered them from the hande of the ennemye.

As for those that troubled them, the waters ouerwhelmed them, there was not one of them lefte.

Then bileued they in his worde, and sange prayse vnto him.

But within a while they forgat his workes, and wolde not abyde his counsell.

A lust came vpon them in the wyldernesse: so that they tempted God in the desert.

Yet he gaue them their desire, and sent them ynough at their wyshes.

They angred Moses in the tentes, and Aaron the sayne of the Lorde.

So the earthe opened and swalowed vp Dathan: and couered the congregacion of Abiram.

The fyre was kindled in their company, the flame burnt vp the vngodly.

They made a calfe in Horeb, and worshipped the molten ymage.

Thus they turned their glory in to the similitude of a calfe that eateth haye.

They forgat God their sauiour, whiche had done so great thinges in Egypt.

Wonderous workes in the land of Ham: & fearfull thinges in the red see.

So he sayde he wolde haue destroyed them, had not Moses his chosen stande before him in the gappe: to tourne awaye his wrathfull indignacion, leest he shoulde destroye them.

Yea they thoughte scorne of that pleasaunte lande, and gaue no credence vnto his worde.

But murmured in their tentes, and harkened not vnto the voyce of the Lorde.

Then lyft he vp his hande against them, to Numer.xiiii.b ouerthrowe them in the wyldernesse.

To cast out their sede among the nations, & to scatter them in the landes.

They ioyned them selues vnto Baal Peor: & ate the offerynges of the ded.

Thus they prouoked him vnto anger with their owne inuencions, & the plage was great amonges them.

Then stode vp Phinehes and executed iustice, and so the plage ceased. Numer.xxv.b

And that was counted vnto him for righteousnesse: amonge all posterities for euermore.

They angred him also at the waters of Numeri.xx.a strife: so that Moses was punished for their sakes.

Because they prouoked his spirite, & he told them playnly with his lyppes.

Neither destroyed they the Heithen: as the Lorde commaunded them.

But were myngled amonge the Heithen: & lerned their workes.

In so moche that they worshypped their ymages: whiche tourned to their owne decaye.

Yea they offred their sonnes and doughters vnto deuyls.

And shed the innocent bloud of their sonnes and of their doughters, whom they offred vnto the ymages of Canaan: so that the lande was defyled with bloude.

Thus were they stayned with their owne workes, and went a hooring with their owne inuencions.

Therfore was the wrath of ỹ Lord kindled against his people, in so moche that he abhorred his owne inheritaunce.

And gaue the ouer in to the hand of the Heithen: and they that hated them, were lordes ouer them.

Their ennemies oppressed them, & had them in subiection.

Many a tyme dyd he delyuer them: but they prouoked hym with their owne inuencions, and were broughte downe for their wickednesse.

Neuertheles when he sawe their aduersite: he herd their complaynt.

He thought vpon his couenaunt, and pytyed them: accordynge vnto the multitude of his mercyes.

Yea he made all those that had led them awaye captiue, to pitie them. Deuter.xxx.a

Deliuer vs, o Lord our God, and gather vs from amonge the Heithen: that we may geue thankes to thy holy name, and make our bost of thy prayse.

Blessed be the Lorde God of Israel from euerlastyng and worlde without ende, and let all people saye: Amen, Amen. Prayse the euerlastynge.

A Judith.xiii.c.

OGyue thankes vnto the Lorde: for he is gracyous, and his mercy endureth for euer.

Let them gyue thankes whome the Lorde hath redemed: and delyuered from the hande of the ennempe.

And gathered them out of the landes, from the East, from the West, from the North, and from the South.

They wente astraye in the wyldernesse in an vntroden waye: and founde no citye to dwell in.

Hongry and thyrsty: and theyr soule faynted in them.

So they cryed vnto the Lorde in theyr trouble: and he delyuered them frome theyr distresse.

He ledde them forthe by the ryghte waye: that they myghte goo to the citye where they dwelte.

O that men wolde prayse the goodnesse of the Lorde: and the wonders that he doth for ỹ chyldren of men.

For he satisfied the empty soule: and filled the hongry soule with good.

Suche as sate in darknesse, and in the shadowe of deathe, being fast bounde in miserye and yron.

Because they were not obedient to the commaundement of God, but lightly regarded the counsell of the most highest.

Their herte was vexed with laboure: they fell downe, and there was none to helpe them.

So they cryed vnto the Lorde in theyr trouble: and he delyuered them oute of theyr distresse.

He brought them forthe of darknesse, and from the shadow of deth: and brake their bonds in sonder.

O that men wolde prayse the goodnesse of the Lorde: and the wonders that he doothe for the children of men.

For he hath broken the gates of brasse, and smitten the barres of yron in sonder.

Folysh men were plaged for their offence, & because of their wickednesse.

Their soule abhorred all manor of meat, they were euen nard at dethes doze.

So they cryed vnto the Lorde in theyr trouble: and he delyuered them oute of theyr distresse.

He sent his worde and healed them, & saued them from their destruction.

O that men wolde prayse the goodnesse of the Lorde: and the wonders that he dothe for the children of men.

That they wolde offre vnto him the sacrifice of thanckesgyuyng, & tell out his workes with gladnesse.

They that goo downe to the see in shyppes: and occuppe theyr busynesse in great waters.

These men se the workes of the Lorde, and his wonders in the depe.

For at his worde, the stormy wynde ariseth: and lifteth vp the waues therof.

They are caried vp to the heuen, and downe agayne to the depe: their soule melteth away in the trouble.

They rele to & fro, they stacker like a dronke man: and are at their wittes ende.

So they crye vnto the Lorde in theyr trouble: and he delyuereth them out of their distresse.

He maketh the storme to cease: so that the waues are styll.

Then are they glad because they be at reste: and so he bringeth them vnto the haue where they wolde be.

O that men wold prayse the goodnesse of ỹ Lorde: and the wonders that he doth for the children of men.

That they wold exalte him in the congregacion of the people: and loue him in the seat of the elders.

Whiche turneth the floudes in to dry land, and driueth vp the water springes.

A frutefull land maketh he barayn, for the wickednesse of them that dwell therin.

Agayne, he maketh the wyldernesse a standynge water: and water springes of a dry grounde.

There he setteth the hongry, that they may buylde them a city to dwell in.

That they may sow their ground, plãt vineyardes to yelde them frutes of increase.

He blesseth them, so that they multiplye exceedyngly, and suffereth not theyr cattell to decrease.

When they are minished and brought low thorowe oppression: thorowe anye plage or trouble.

Though he suffre them to be euil entreated thorow tyrauntes, or let them wandre out of the waye in the wildernesse.

Yet helpeth he the poore oute of misserye (at the last) and maketh him an housholde lyke a flocke of shepe.

The righteous wil consider this & reioyse, the mouth of all wickednesse shal be stopped.

Who so is wise, and pondreth these thinges wel, shal vnderstande the louing kyndnesses of the Lorde.

A songe of a Psalme of Dauid.

O God, my herte is redy to synge, and to gyue prayse.

Awake, o my glorye, awake lute and harpe, I my selfe wil awake right early.

I wil giue thankes vnto the, o Lord, among the people, I wyll synge prayses vnto the among the heithen.

For the greatnesse of thy mercy is higher then the heuens, and thy faithfulnesse reacheth vnto the cloudes.

Set vp thy self, o God, aboue the heuens: and thy glory aboue all the erth.

That thy beloued maye be delyuered: help them with thy righthande and heare me.

God hath spoken in his sanctuary, whiche thinge reioyseth me.

I will diuide Sichem, & meate out the valley of Suchoth.

Galaad is myne, Manasses is myne, Ephraim is the strength of my head, Juda is my capitayne.

Moab is my washpot, ouer Edom will I stretche out my shue, Philistea thal be glad of me.

Who shall leade me into the stronge cytie? Who shall bringe me into Edom?

Shalt not thou (O God) whiche hast cast vs out: thou God, that wentest not forth with our hostes?

O be thou our helpe in trouble, for vayne is the helpe of man.

Thorow God we shall do great actes, for it is he that shall treade downe oure ennemyes.

PSAL. CVIII.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

HOlde not thy tongue, O God of my prayse.

For the mouth of the vngodly, ye and the mouthe of the disceytfull is opened vpon me, and speake agaynste me with falsse tongues.

They compase me aboute with wordes of hatred, and fyghte agaynste me without a cause.

For the loue that I hadde vnto them, they take now my cõtrary part, but I gyue my selfe vnto prayer.

Thus they rewarde me cupll for good, and hatred for my good will.

Set an vngodly man to be ruler ouer him, & let Satan stande at his righthande.

When sentence is gyuen vpon him, let him be condemned, and let his prayer be turned in to synne.

Let his dayes be fewe, and his bysshoprike let an other take.

Let his childre be fatherlesse, and his wyfe a wydowe.

Let his children be vagabounds, and beg their bred: let them seke it, as they that be vnhoped.

Let the extorcioner consume all that he hathe, and let straungers spoyle his laboure.

Let there be no man to pitye, ner to haue compassyon vpon his fatherlesse children.

Let his ende be destruction, and in the next generacyon, his name be cleane put out.

Let the wyckednesse of his fathers be had in remembraunce in the sight of the Lorde, and let not the synne of his mother be done awaye.

Let them alwaye be before the Lorde, but as for the memoryall of them selues, let it perysh from out of the earth.

And that because his mynde was not to do good, but persecuted the poore helpelesse, and him that was vexed at the herte, to slaye hym.

His delyte was in cursing, and therfore shal it happen vnto him: he loued not blessing, & that shall be farre from him.

He clothed him selfe with cursinge lyke as with a rayment: yea it wente into his bowelles lyke water, and lyke oyle into his bones.

Let it be vnto him as ỹ cloke that he hath vpon him, and as the gyrdle that he is gyrded withall.

Let it thus happen frome the Lorde vnto myne enempes, and to thole that speake cuyl against my soule.

But deale thou with me, Oh Lorde God, accordynge vnto thy name, for swete is thy mercy.

O delyuer me, for I am helpelesse and poore, & my hert is wounded within me.

I goo hence lyke the shadowe that departeth, and am dryuen awaye as the grashoppers.

My knees are weake thorow fastinge, my flesh is dryed vp for want of fatnesse.

I am become a rebuke vnto them, they loke vpon me and shake theyr heades.

Helpe me, O Lorde my God, oh saue me for thy mercyes sake.

That they may know, how that this is thy hande, and that thou hast done it.

Though they curse, yet blesse thou: and let them be confounded, that ryse vp against me, but let thy seruaunt reioyse.

Let myne aduersaries be clothed with their owne shame, as with a cloke.

Certes, I will gyue thankes vnto ỹ Lord with my mouth, and prayse him amonge the multitude.

For he standeth at the righthande of the poore, to saue him frome suche as condemne his soule.

Thou hast geuen strayt charge to kepe thy commaundementes.

O that my wayes were stablysshed to kepe thy statutes.

So should I not be confounded, whyle I haue respect vnto all thy commaundementes.

I will thanke the with an vnfayned herte, because I am lerned in the iudgemētes of thy righteousnesse.

I will kepe thy statutes, O forsake me not vtterly.

BETH.

Where withall shall a yonge man amende his waye? Euen by rulyng him self after thy worde.

With my hole herte do I seke the, O let me not go wronge oute of thy commaundementes.

Thy wordes haue I hyd within my herte, that I shulde not synne against the.

Praysed be thou, O Lord, O teache me thy statutes.

With my lyppes will I be tellynge out all the iudgementes of thy mouth.

I haue as great delyte in the waye of thy testimonies, as in all maner of ryches.

I will exercyse my selfe in thy commaundementes, and haue respecte vnto thy forewayes.

My delyte shalbe in thy statutes, I will not forget thy wordes.

GIMEL.

O do well vnto thy seruaunt, that I maye lyue and kepe thy wordes.

Open thou myne eyes, and so shall I spye out wonderous thinges in thy lawe.

I am a straunger vpon earthe, O hyde not thy commaundementes frome me.

My soule breaketh out, for the very feruent desire that I haue allwaye vnto thy iudgementes.

Thou rebukest the proude, cursed are they that departe frome thy commaundementes.

O turne frome me shame and rebuke, for I kepe thy testimonies.

Princes also sit and speake against me, but thy seruaunt is occupyed in thy statutes.

In thy testimonies is my delyte, they are my counceilers.

DALETH.

My soule cleaueth to the dust, O quycken thou me accordinge to thy worde.

Make me to vnderstande the waye of thy commaundementes, and so shall I talke of thy wonderous workes.

My soule melteth awaye for very heuynesse, Oh set me vp accordynge vnto thy worde.

Take frome me the waye of lyenge, and graunte me thy lawe.

I haue chosen the waye of truth, thy iudgementes haue I layde before me.

I stycke vnto thy testimonies, O Lorde confounde me not.

I will runne the waye of thy commaundementes, when thou hast comforted my herte.

HE.

Teache me O Lorde the waye of thy statutes, and I shall kepe it vnto the ende.

O gyue me vnderstanding, and I shall kepe thy lawe, yea I shall kepe it with myne hole herte.

Leade me in the path of thy commaundementes, for that is my delyte.

Enclyne myne herte vnto thy testimonies, and not to couetousnes.

Oh tourne awaye myne eyes, lest they beholde vanytye, and quycken me in thy waye.

O stablysh thy worde in thy seruaunt, that I maye feare the.

Take awaye the rebuke that I am afrayde of, for thy iudgementes are amiable.

Beholde, my delyte is in thy commaundementes, Oh quycken me in thy righteousnesse.

VAV.

Let thy louynge mercy come vnto me, Oh Lorde, and thy sauynge health accordyng vnto thy worde.

That I maye geue answere vnto my blasphemers, for my trust is in thy worde.

O take not the word of truthe vtterly out of my mouthe, for my hope is in thy iudgementes.

So shall I allwaye kepe thy lawe, yea for euer and euer.

And I will walke at lybertie, for I seke thy commaundementes.

I will speake of thy testimonyes euē before kynges, and will not be ashamed.

My delyte shalbe in thy commaundemētes which I loue.

My handes also will I lyft vp vnto thy cōmaundementes which I loue, and my talking shalbe of thy statutes.

ZAIN.

O thinke vpon thy seruaunt as concerning thy worde, wherin thou hast caused me to put my trust.

I make hast, and prolonge not the tyme, to kepe thy commaundementes.

The congregacions of the vngodly haue robbed me, but I forget not thy lawe.

At myd nyght stande I vp, to gyue thankes vnto the, for the iudgementes of thy righteousnesse.

I am a companion of all them that feare & kepe thy commaundementes.

The earthe, O Lorde, is full of thy mercy, O teache me thy statutes.

TEH.

O Lorde, thou hast dealt frendely with thy seruaunt, accordinge vnto thy worde.

O learne me thy kyndnesse, nourture and knowledge, for I beleue thy commaundementes.

Before I was troubled, I went wronge, but now I kepe thy worde.

Thou art good & frendly, O teache me thy statutes.

The proude ymagen lyes vpon me, but I kepe thy commaundementes with my hole herte.

Their hert is as fat as brawne, but my delyte is in thy lawe.

It is good for me that I haue bene in trouble, that I may lerne thy statutes.

The lawe of thy mouth is dearer vnto me then thousandes of golde and syluer.

IOD.

Thy handes haue made me and fashyoned me, O gyue me vnderstandinge, that I maye learne thy commaundmentes.

They that feare the, wyll be gladde when they se me, because I put my trust in thy worde.

I know, O Lord, that thy iugementes are right, and that thou of very faithfulnesse hast caused me to be troubled.

O let thy mercyfull kyndnesse be my comfort, accordinge to thy promes that thou hast made vnto thy seruaunt.

O let thy louynge mercyes come vnto me, that I maye lyue, for thy lawe is my delyte.

Let the proude be confounded, which handle me so falsly.

But let suche as feare the, and knowe thy testimonies, be turned vnto me.

O let myne herte be vndefyled in thy statutes that I be not ashamed.

CAPH.

My soule longeth for thy sauinge helth, for my trust is in thy worde.

Myne eyes longe sore for thy worde, sayenge: O when wilt thou comfort me?

For I am become lyke a botel in the smoke, yet do not I forget thy statutes.

How many are the dayes of thy seruaunt? When wilt thou be auenged of myne aduersaries?

The proude haue dygged pyttes for me, wht are not after thy lawe.

All thy commaundmētes are true, they persecute me falsly, O be thou my helpe.

They haue almost made an ende of me vpon earth, but I forsake not thy commaundmentes.

O quycken me after thy louynge kyndnesse, and so shall I kepe the testimonyes of thy mouth.

LAMED.

Oh Lorde, thy worde endureth for euer in heauen.

Thy truth also remayneth frome one generacion to another: thou hast layd the foundacion of the earth, and it abydeth.

They continue this day accordyng to thyne orordinaunce, for all thinges serue the.

Yf my delyte were not in thy lawe, I should perysh in my trouble.

I will neuer forget thy commaundementes for with them thou quickenest me.

I am thyne, Oh helpe me, for I seke thy commaundementes.

The vngodly laye wayte for me to destroye me, but I consydre thy testimonies.

I se that all thinges come to an ende, but thy commaundement is exceadinge broade.

M MEM.

O what loue haue I vnto thy lawe? all ye daye longe is my talkinge of it.

Thou throwest thy commaundement haste made me wyser then myne enemies, for it is euer by me.

I haue more vnderstandinge then all my teachers, for thy testymonies are my studyes.

Yea I am wyser then the aged, for I kepe thy commaundementes.

I refrayne my fete frome euery euyll waye, that I maye kepe thy wordes.

I wyncke not frome thy iudgementes, for thou teachest me.

Oh howe swete are thy wordes vnto my throte?

Yea more then hony vnto my mouth.

Through thy commaundementes I get vnderstandyng, therfore I hate all false wayes.

N NVN.

Thy worde is a lanterne vnto my fete and a lyght vnto my pathes.

I haue sworne and am stedfastly purposed, to kepe the iudgementes of thy ryghteousnesse.

I am troubled aboue measure, quicken me, O Lorde, accordinge vnto thy worde.

Let the free wyll offeringes of my mouthe please the, O Lorde, and teach me thy iudgementes.

My soule is alway in my handc, yet do not I forget thy lawe.

The vngodly haue layd a snare for me, but yet swarue not I frome thy commaundementes.

Thy testimonies haue I claymed as myne heritage for euer: and why? they are the very ioye of my herte.

I applye myne herte to fulfill thy statutes alwaye, euen vnto the ende.

S SAMECH.

I hate the vngodlye, but thy lawe do I loue.

Thou art my defence and shylde, my trust is in thy worde.

Awaye frome me ye wycked, I will kepe ꝑ commaundementes of my God.

O stablysh me accordynge vnto thy worde, that I maye lyue, and let me not be disappointed of my hope.

Holde thou me vp, and I shall be safe: yea I shall euer be talkinge of thy statutes.

Thou treadest downe all them that depart frome thy statutes, for they ymagen but deceyte.

Thou puttest awaye all the vngodly of the earth lyke drosse, therfore I loue thy testimonies.

My flesh trembleth for feare of the, and I am afrayed of thy iudgementes.

A AIN.

I deale with the thinge that is lawful and ryght, O gyue me not ouer vnto myne oppressours.

Be thou suertye for thy seruaunt to do him good, that the proude do me no wronge.

Myne eyes are wayted away with loking for thy health, and for the worde of thy righteousnesse.

O deale with thy seruaunt accordinge vnto thy louynge mercye, and teache me thy statutes.

I am thy seruaunte, O graunte me vnderstandinge, that I maye knowe thy testimonies.

It is tyme for the (Oh Lorde) to laye to thyne hande, for they haue destroyed thy lawe.

For I loue thy commaundementes aboue golde and precious stone.

Therfore holde I streyght all thy commaundementes, and all false wayes I vtterly abhorre.

P PHE.

Thy testimonies are wonderfull, therfore doth my soule kepe them.

When thy worde goeth forthe, it giueth lyght and vnderstandinge, euen vnto babes.

I open my mouthe and drawe in my breth, for I desire thy commaundementes.

O loke thou vpon me, and be mercyfull, as thou vsest to doo vnto those that loue thy name.

Order my goynges after thy word that no wyckednesse raygne in me.

O delyuer me frome the wrongeous dealynges of men, and so shall I kepe thy commaundementes.

Shewe the lyght of thy countenaunce vnto thy seruaunt, and lerne me thy statutes.

Myne eyes gusshe out with water, because men kepe not thy lawe.

Z ZADE.

Ryghteous arte thou, O Lorde, and true is thy iudgement.

The testimonies that thou hast commanded are exceadinge, righteous and true.

My zele hathe euen consumed me, because myne enemyes haue forgotten thy wordes.

Thy worde is tryed to the vttermost, and thy seruaunt loueth it.

I am small and of no reputacion, yet do not I forget thy commaundementes.

Thy righteousnesse is an euerlastinge righteousnesse, and thy lawe is true.

Trouble and heynesse haue taken holde vpon me, yet is my delyte in thy commaundementes.

The righteousnesse of thy testimonies is euerlastinge, O graunte me vnderstandinge, & I shall lyue.

K KOPH.

I call with my hole herte, heare me, O Lorde I will kepe thy statutes.

Yea euen vpon the do I call, helpe me, and I shall kepe thy testimonies.

Early in the morynge do I crye vnto the, for in thy worde is my trust.

Myne eyes preuente the nyght watches, ꝑ I myght be occupyed in thy wordes.

Heare my voyce, O Lorde, accordynge vnto thy louynge kyndnesse, quicken me accordinge as thou art wont.

They drawe nygh that of malice persecute me, and are farre frome thy lawe.

Be thou nyghe at hande also, O Lorde, for thy promyses are faithfull.

As concernynge thy testimonies, I haue knowen euer sens the begynnyng, that thou hast grounded them for euer.

R RES.

Consydre myne aduersite, and delyuer me for I do not forget thy lawe.

Mayntayne thou my cause and defende me quycken me accordinge vnto thy worde.

Health is farre frome the vngodly, for they regarde not thy statutes.

Great is thy mercy, O Lorde, quycken me as thou art wont.

Many there are that trouble me, and persecute me, yet do not I swarue frome thy testimonies.

It greueth me, when I se, that the transgressours kepe not thy lawe.

Consydre, O Lorde, howe I loue thy commaundementes, O quycken me with thy louynge kyndnesse.

Thy worde is true frome euerlastynge, all the iudgementes of thy ryghteousnesse endure for euermore.

S SIN.

The princes persecute me without cause, but my herte standeth in awe of thy wordes.

I am as glad of thy worde, as one that fyndeth great spoyles.

As for lyes, I hate and abhorre them, but thy lawe do I loue.

Seuen tymes a daye do I prayse the, because of thy righteous iudgementes.

Great is ꝑ peax that they haue which loue thy lawe, and they are not offended at it.

Lorde, I loke for thy sauynge health, and do after thy commaundementes.

My soule kepeth thy testimonies, and loueth them exceadyngly.

I kepe thy commaundementes and testimonies, for all my wayes are before the.

T THAV.

Let my complaynte come before the. Oh Lorde, gyue me vnderstandinge, accordinge vnto thy worde. Y

O let my supplicacion come before the, delyuer me accordinge to thy promes.

My lyppes shall speake of thy prayse, seing thou hast taught me thy statutes.

Yea my tongue shal synge of thy worde, for all thy commaundementes are ryght.

Let thyne hande helpe me, for I haue chosen thy commaundementes.

I longe for thy sauynge health, O Lorde, and in thy lawe is my delyte.

Oh let my soule lyue and prayse the, that thy iudgementes maye helpe me.

I go astraye, lyke a shepe that is lost: Oh seke thy seruaunt, for I do not forget thy commaundementes.

O let not myne herte be enclyned to any euell thinge, to be mynded as the vngodly or wycked men, least I eate of suche thinges as please them.

B Let the righteous rather smyte me frendly and reproue me: so will I take it, as though he had powred oyle vpon my heade: it shall not hurt my heade, yea I will praye yet for their wyckednesse.

Their iudges stomble at the stone, yet heare
they my wordes, that they be ioyful.

Our bones lye scattered before the pyt, lyke as when one graueth and dyggeth vp the grounde.

But myne eyes loke vnto the, Oh Lorde God: in the is my truste, Oh cast not out my soule.

Kepe me frome the snare whiche they haue
layde for me, and frome the trappes of ye wycked doers.

Let the vngodly fall into their owne net-
tes togither, vntyll I be gone by them.

¶ The instructiō of Dauid, a prayer when he was in the caue.

I Crye vnto the Lorde with my voyce, yea
euen vnto the Lorde do I make my suppli cation.

I powre out my complaynte before him, &
shewe him of my trouble.

When my spirite is in heuynesse, for then knowest my pathe: in the waye wherein I walke haue they prpuely layd a snare for me.

I loke vpon my righthande, and se, there is no man that will know me.

I haue no place to flie vnto, no man careth
for my soule.

Therefore do I crye vnto the, O Lorde, and saye: thou art my hope and my portion in the lande of the lyuynge.

Consydre my cōplaynte, for I am brought very lowe.

O delyuer me fro my persecuters, for they are to stronge for me.

Bringe my soule out of prison, that I may geue thankes vnto thy name: whiche thinge yf thou wilt graunte me, then shall ye righteous resorte vnto my company.

PSAL. CXLI.

¶ A Psalme of Dauid.

HEare my prayer, O Lorde, consydre my desire: answere me for thy truthe and righteousnesse sake.

And entre not into iudgement with thy ser-uaunt, for in thy sight shall no man lyuynge be iustified.

For the ennemye persecuteth my soule, he smyteth my lyfe downe to the grounde, he lay eth me in the darknesse, as the deed men of worlde.

Therfore is my spirite verey vnquyet within me, and my herte within me is desolate.

Yet do I remembre the tymes past, I muse
vpon all thy workes, yea I exercyse my selfe
in the workes of thy handes.

I stretche forth myne handes vnto the, my soule crepeth vnto the out of the thirsty lande.
Selah.

Heare me, O Lorde, and that sone, for my spirite waxeth faynte: hyde not thy face fro

O let me heare thy louyng kyndnesse by tymes in the morynyng, for in ye is my truste: shew thou me the waye that I shulde walke in, for
I lyfte vp my soule vnto the.

Deliuer me, o Lorde fro myne ennemies, for
I resorte vnto the.

Teache me to wo the thynge that plea-seth the, for thou art my God: let thy louyng spirite leade me forth vnto the lande of righteousnesse.

Quicken me, o Lorde for thy names sake, & for thy righteousnesse sake bringe my soule out of trouble.

And of thy goodnesse scatter myne ennemies
abrode, & destroye all them that vexe my soule,
for I am thy seruaunt.

a Lorde what is man, that thou hast suche respect vnto him? or the son of man, that thou regardest him?

Man is like a thing of naught, his time pas
seth awaye lyke a shadow.

Bowe thy heuens, o Lorde, & come downe touche the mountaynes, that they may smoke with all.

Sende forthe the lyghtenynge and scatter

them.

Sende downe thyne hande frome aboue,
delyuer me and take me oute of the greate waters: frome the hande of straunge chyldren.

Whose mouth talketh of vanitie, and theyr
right hande is a right hande of falsehed.

That I may synge a newe song vnto the, o
God, and synge prayses vnto the, vpon a ten stringed lute.

Thou that geuest victory vnto kynges, and hast deliuered Dauid thy seruaunt from the pe
ryll of the swerde.

Haue me and deliuer me from the hande of straunge chyldren, whose mouthe talketh of vanitie, and their right hande is a right hande
of falsehed.

That oure sonnes maye growe vp as the younge plantes: and that oure doughters maye be as the polyshed corners of the temple.

That our garners may be ful and plentious
with all maner of store: that our sheepe maye bringe forth thousandes, and hundreth thousandes in our villages.

That our oxen maye be stronge to labeure,
that there may be no mischaunce, no decay, & no
complayning in our stretes.

I Wyll magnifie the, o God my kyng, I will prayse thy name for euer and euer.

A Euerye daye wyll I geue thankes vnto the: and prayse thy name for euer and euer.

Great is the Lorde, and marueylous worthy to be prayed, there is no ende of his great-
nesse.

One generation shal prayse thy workes vn
to an other, and declare thy power.

As for me I wyll be talkynge of thy worshyp, thy glorye, thy prayse, and wonderous workes.

So that men shall speake of the myghte of thy marueylous actes: and tell of thy great-
nesse.

The memoriall of thyne aboundaunt kyndnesse shall be shewed, and men shal synge of thy righteousnesse.

The Lorde is gracious and mercyfull, long suffering, and of great goodnesse.

The Lorde is louyng vnto euery men, & his mercy is ouer all his workes.

All thy workes prayse the, o Lorde, and thy sayntes geue thankes vnto the.

C They shewe the glory of thy kyngdome, and talke of thy power.

That thy power, thy glorye and myghtynesse, of thy kyngdome, might be knowen vn-
to men.

Thy kyngdome is an euerlastynge kyngdome: and thy dominion endureth throwe out all ages.

The Lorde vpholdeth all suche as shoulde fall: and lyfteth vp all those that be downe.

The eyes of all wayte vpon the: and thou geuest them their meate in due season.

D Thou openest thyne hande, & fyllest al thin-
ges liuing with plenteousnesse.

The Lorde is righteous in all his wayes: &
holy in all his workes.

The Lorde is nye vnto them that call vpon him: yea all suche as call vpon him fayth-fully.

He fulfylleth the desyre of them that feare him: he heareth their crye, and helpeth
them.

The Lord preserueth al them that loue him,
but scattereth abrode all the vngodly.

THE PROVERBES OF SALOMON.

CAPI. I.

A THe Proverbes of Salomon the sonne of Dauid kynge of Israel: to learne wysdome, instruction, vnderstandynge, prudence, ryghtousnesse, iudgement and equitie.

That the very babes might haue wit, & that yonge men mygbt haue knowlege and vnderstandynge.

By hearynge, the wyse man shall come by more wysdome: and by experience he shall be more apte to vnderstande a parable, and the interpretacyon therof: the wordes of the wyse, and the darcke speaches of the same.

The feare of the Lorde is the begynnynge of wysdome: but fooles despyse wysdom and instruction.

My sonne heare thy fathers doctrine, & forsake not the law of thy mother: for that shal bringe grace vnto thy heed, & shall be a cheyne about thy necke.

Psalme .cx. d Ecclesiast. b B My sonne, consent not vnto synners, if they entyse the, and saye: come with vs, lette vs laye wayte for bloude, and lurke priuely for the innocent without a cause: lette vs swalowe them by lyke the helle, let vs deuoure them quycke and hole, as those that go downe in to the pyt.

So shal we fynd all maner of costly riches, and fyll our houses with spoyles.

C aste in thy lot amonge vs: we shall haue all one purse.

My son, walke thou not with them, refrayn thy fote from their wayes.

For their fete runne to euyll, and are hasty to shed bloude.

Esaye.lix. b It ys but in vayne the net layde forthe before the byrdes eyes.

C Yea they them selues laye wayte one for an others bloude: and one of them weld slee an other.

These are the wayes of all suche as be couetous: that one wolde rauysshe an others lyfe.

Wysdome. Wysdom crieth without, and putteth forth her voyce in the stretes.

She calleth before the congregacion in the open gates, and sheweth her wordes therowe the city, sayinge:

O ye children, how longe wyl ye loue childyshnesse? How longe wyll the scorners delite in scornynge, and the vnwyse be enamoures vnto knowlege?

O turne you vnto my correction: lo I wyll expresse my mynde vnto you, and make you vnderstande my wordes.

Proverb.i.c * Seynge then that I haue called, and ye refused it: I haue stretched oute my hande, and no man regarded it, but all my counsailes haue ye despysed, and lee my corrections at nought.

Therfore shall I also laughe in your destruction, and mocke you, when the thynge that ye feare commeth vpon you: euen when the thynge that ye be a frayde of, falleth sodeynly lyke a storme, and your mischefe lyke a tempest: yea when trouble and heynesse commeth vpon you.

Then shal they call vpon me, but I wil not heare: they shall seke me early, but they shall not fynde me.

And that bycause they hated knowlege and receyued not the feare of the Lorde, but abhorred my counsell, and despysed my correction.

Therfore shal they eate of the frutes of their owne waye, and be fylled with their owne counsels.

For the turning away of the vnwise shall slee them: and the prosperite of fooles shal bring their owne destruction.

But who so harkeneth vnto me, shall dwell safely, and haue ynoughe without anye feare of euill.

CAPI. II.

MY sonne, yf thou wylt receyue my wordes, and kepe my commaundements by the: that eyne eare maye harken vnto wysdome, applye eyne herte vnto vnderstandynge.

For yf thou cryest after wysdome, and callest for knowlege: yf thou seekest after her as after money, and dyggest for her as for treasure: then shalte thou vnderstande the feare of the Lorde, and fynde the knowlege of God.

For it is the Lord that giueth wysdom, out of his mouth commeth knowlege and vnderstandynge.

He preserueth the welfare of the ryghtous, & defendeth them that walke innocently: he kepeth them in the right path, and preserueth the waye of his sayntes.

Then shalt thou vnderstande ryghtousnesse, iudgement and equitie, yea and euerye good pathe.

Yf wysdome entre in to thyne herte, and thy soule delyte in knowlege: then shall counsell preserue the, and vnderstandynge shall kepe the.

That thou mayst be deliuered from the euil waye, and frome the man that speaketh frowarde thynges.

Frome suche as leaue the hye strete, and walke in the wayes of darcknesse: which reioyse in wicked euill, and delyte in wicked thynges: whose wayes are croked, & their pathes sclaundrous.

That thou mayst be deliuered also from the straunge woman, & from her that is not thyne owne: which speaketh swete wordes, forsaketh the husbande of her youth, and forgetteth the couenaunt of her God.

For her house is enclyned vnto deth, & her pathes vnto hell.

D All they that goo in vnto her, come not agayne, neither take they holde of the waye of lyfe.

That thou mayste walke in the good waye: and kepe the pathes of the ryghtous.

For the iuste shall dwelle in the lande, and the innocentes shall remayne in it: but the vngodly shall be rooted oute of the lande, and the wycked doers shall be taken oute of it.

CAPI. III.

A MY sonne, forget not my lawe: but se that thyne hert kepe my commaundementes.

For they shal prolonge the dayes and yeres of thy lyfe, and bring the peax.

Let mercy and faythfulnesse neuer go from the: bynde them about thy necke, and wryte them in the tables of thyne herte.

So shalte thou fynde fauoure and good vnderstandynge in the syghte of God and men.

Put thy truste in the Lorde with all thyne herte: and leane not vnto thyne owne vnderstandynge.

In al thy wayes haue respect vnto him, and he shall ordre thy goinges.

Be not wyse in thyne owne conceyte, but feare the Lorde, and departe frome euyll: so shall thy nauell be hole, and thy bones stronge.

Honoure the Lorde with thy substaunce, and with the fyrstlinges of all thyne increase: so shall thy barnes be fylled with plentcousnesse, and thy pressis shall flowe ouer with swete wyne.

My sonne despyse not the chastening of the Lorde, neither faynt when thou art rebuked of him.

Hebr.xii.b * For whom the Lorde loueth, him he chastneth: and pet delyteth in him euen as a father in his owne sonne.

Prouerb.viii.b Well is hym that fyndeth wysdome, and getteth vnderstandynge, for the getynge of it, is better then anye marchaundise of syluer, and the profyte of it is better then golde.

Wysdome is more worth then precious stones: and al the thynges that thou canst desyre are not to be compared vnto her.

C Vpon her ryghte hande is longe lyfe: and vpon her lefte hande is ryches and honoure.

Her wayes are pleasaunt wayes, and al her pathes are peaceable.

She is a tree of lyfe to them that laye holde vpon her, and blessed are they that kepe her fast.

With wysdome hathe the Lorde layde the foundacyon of the earthe: and therowe vnderstandynge he hathe stablyshed the heuens.

Therowe his wysdome, the deapthes breake vp: and the cloudes drop downe of the dewe.

My sonne, let not these thinges departe fro thyne eyes, but kepe my law and my counsel: so shall it be lyfe vnto thy soule, and grace to thy mouth.

Then shalt thou walke safely in thy way, and thy fote shall not stomble.

Yf thou slepest, thou shalte not be afrayde: but shalt take thy rest, and slepe swetely.

Thou nedest not to be afrayde of anye sodayne feare: neyther for the violente rushynge in of the vngodlye, when it commeth.

For the Lorde shal besiege the, and kepe thy fote that thou be not taken.

Refuse not to do good vnto him that ought haue it: so longe as thyne hande is able to do it.

Saye not vnto thy neyghboure: goo thy waye, and come agayne, to morowe I will gyue the: where as thou haste nowe to gyue him.

Intende no hurt vnto thy neyghbour, seing he hopeth to dwell in rest by the.

Striue not lightly with any man, where as he hath done the no harme.

Folowe not a wycked man, and chose none of his wayes: for the Lord abhorreth the frowarde, but his secrete is amonge the ryghtous.

The curse of the Lord is in the house of the vngodly: but he blesseth the dwellynges of the ryghtous.

As for the scornefull, he shall laughe them to scorne: but he shall gyue grace vnto the lowly.

The wyse shall haue honour in possession: but shame is the promocion that fooles shall haue.

CAPI. IIII.

HEare, o ye children the fatherly exhortacion: and take good heed that ye may learne wysdome.

A Yea I shall gyue you a good rewarde, yf ye wyll not forsake my lawe.

For when I my selfe was my fathers dere sonne: and tenderly beloued of my mother, he taught me also, sayinge:

Lette thyne herte receyue my wordes: kepe my commaundementes, and thou shalte lyue.

Get the wysdome, get the vnderstandynge forget not the wordes of my mouth, & swarue not from them.

Forsake not her, and she shall preserue the: loue her, and she shall kepe the.

The chefe poynte of wysdome is, that thou be wyllynge to obteyne wysdome, and before all thy goodes, to get the vnderstandynge.

B Make moche of her, & she shal promote the: yea yf thou imbrace her, she shal bringe the vn to honour.

She shall make the a gracyous heed: & garnysshe the nyshe the with a crowne of glorye.

Heare my sonne, and receyue my wordes: that the yeres of thy lyfe maye be manye.
I will shewe the, the waye of wysdome, and lede the in the ryght pathes.
So that yf thou goest therin, there shall no straytnesse hyndre the: and whē thou runnest, thou shalt not fall.
Take fast holde of doctryne, let her not go: kepe her, for she is thy lyfe.
Come not in the pathe of the vngodly, and
C walke not in the waye of the wicked.
Eschew it, and go not therin: depart asyde, and passe ouer by it.
For they can not slepe, excepte they haue fyrst done some myschefe: neither take they anye rest, excepte they haue fyrste done some harme.
For they eate the breed of wickednesse, and drynke the wyne of robbery.
The pathe of the rightous shyneth as the lyght, and is euer brighter and bryghter vnto the perfect daye.
But the waye of the vngodlye is as the D darcknesse, wherin men fall or they be aware.
My sonne, marke my wordes, and enclyne thyne eare vnto my sayinges.
Let them not departe frome thyne eyes: kepe them euen in the myddest of thyne herte.
For they are lyfe vnto all those that fynde them: and helthe vnto all theyr bodyes.
Kepe thyne hert with al diligence: for, ther vpon hangeth lyfe.
Put awaye frome the a frowarde mouthe and let the lyppes of sclaunder be farre frome the.
Let thyne eyes beholde the thynge that is ryght: and let thyne eye lyddes loke streyght before the.
Ponder the path of thy fete: so shal all thy wayes be sure.
Turne not a syde, neyther to the ryghte hande, ne to the lefte, but withholde thy fote frome euyll.

CAPI. V.

A O My sonne, gyue hede vnto my wysdom, and bowe thyne eare vnto my prudence: that thou mayste regarde good counsell, and that thy lyppes may kepe nourtoure.
Hor: dome. For the lyppes of an harlot are a droppynge honye combe, and her throte is softer then oyle.
But at the laste, she is as bytter as wormewod, and as sharpe as a two edged swerde.
Her fete go downe vnto deth, and her steppes pearse thorowe vnto hell.
She regardeth not the pathe of lyfe, so vnstedfast are her wayes, that thou canste not
B knowe them.
Heare me therfore (o my sonne) and departe not from the wordes of my mouth.
Kepe thy waye farre from her, and come not nye the dores of her house.
That thou gyue not thyne honour vnto an other, and thy yeres to the cruell.
That other men be not fylled with thy goodes: and that thy laboures come not in a straunge house.
Yea that thou mourne not at the last (when thou hast spent thy body and goodes) and then saye:
Alas, why hated I nourtoure? why did my herte despyse correction?
Wherfore was not I obedient vnto ŷ voice C
of my teachers: and harkened not vnto them that informed me?
I am come almoost in to all mysfortune: in the myddest of the multitude and congregacion.
Drynke of the water of thyne owne well: Pro.
and of the ryuers that run out of thyne owne sprynges.
Let thy welles flowe out abrode, that there maye be ryuers of waters in the stretes: but let them be onely thyne owne, and not straungers with the.
Let thy well be blessed, and be glad with ŷ the wyfe of thy youth.
Louynge is the hynde, and frendly is D
the Roo: lette her brestes alwaye satysfye the, and holde the euer content with her loue.
My sonne, why wylte thou haue pleasure in an harlot, and imbrace the bosome of another woman?
* For euery mannes wayes are open in the syght of the Lorde, and he pondreth all theyr goynges.
The wyckednesses of ŷ vngodly shal catche him self, and with the snares of his owne synnes shall he be trapped.
Bycause he wolde not be reformed he shall dye: and for his greate folyshnesse he shall be destroyed.

CAPI. VI.

My sonne, yf thou be surety for thy neighboure, thou hast fastened thyne hande with an other man: yea thou art bounde with their owne wordes: & taken with thyne owne speche. A Therfore, my sonne, do this: discharge thy selfe, for thou arte come in to thy neyghbours daunger.
Goo thy waye then soone, and intreate thy neyghboure: let not thyne eyes slepe, ne thyne eye lyddes slomber.
Saue thy selfe as a Doo from the hande, and as a byrde frome the hande of the fouler.
Go to the Pysmere (thou sluggarde) consydre her wayes, and lerne to be wyse.
She hathe no gyde, no teacher, no leader: yet in the Sommer she prouydeth her meate, and gathereth her fode togyther in the haruest.
B * Howe longe wylte thou slepe thou sluggysshe man?
When wylte thou aryse oute of thy slepe?
Yea slepe on styl a litle slombre a lytle, fold thyne handes togyther yet a lytle, that thou mayst slepe.
So shal pouerte come vnto the, as one that trauayleth by the waye, and necessitie lyke a weaponed man.
A dissemblynge person, a wycked man goeth with a frowarde mouth, he winketh with his eyes, he tokeneth with his fete, he poynteth with his fyngers, he is euer ymagenynge mischiefe and frowardnesse in his herte, and causeth discorde.
Therfore shall his destruction come hastely vpon him: sodenly shall he be all to broken, and not be healed.
There be sixe thynges whiche the Lorde hateth: and the seuenth he vtterly abhorreth.
A proude loke, a dissemblynge tonge, handes that shede innocent bloude, an herte that goeth aboute with wycked ymagynacions, fete that be swyfte in rennynge to do myschiefe, a false wytnesse that bryngeth vp lyes, and suche one as soweth discorde amonge brethren.
C My sonne, kepe thy fathers commaundementes, and forsake not the lawe of thy mother.
Put them vp togyther in thyne herte: and bynde them aboute thy necke.
That they maye leade the where thou goest, preserue the when thou art a slepe, and that when thou awakest, thou mayste talke of them.
For the commaundement is a lanterne, and the lawe a lyght: yea chastenynge and nourtour is the waye of lyfe, that they maye kepe the from the euil woman, and from the flatterynge tong of the harlot: that thou lust not after her beautye in thyne herte, and lest thou be taken with her fayre lokes.
An harlot wyll make a man to begge his breed: but a maryed woman wyll hunte for the precious lyfe.
Maye a man take fyre in his bosome, & his clothes not be brent?
Or can one go vpon hote coles, and his fete not be burte?
D Euen so, who so euer goeth in to his neyghbours wyfe, and toucheth her, can not be vngyltye.
Men do not vtterly despyse a thefe that stealeth to satisfye his soule, when he is hongrye: but yf he maye be gotten, he restoreth agayne seuen tymes as moche, or elles he maketh recompence with all the good of his house.
But who so committeth aduoutrye with a woman, he is a foole, and bryngeth his lyfe to destruction.
He getteth him selfe also shame & dishonoure, suche as neuer shall be put out.
For the gelousye and wrathe of the man wil not be intreated: no though thou woldest offre him greate gyftes to make amendes, he wyll not receyue them.

CAPI. VII.

My sonne, kepe my wordes, and laye vp A my commaundementes by the.
Kepe my commaundementes, and my lawe euen as the apple of thyne eye: and thou shalt lyue.
Bynde them vpon thy fyngers: and wryte them in the table of thyne herte.
Saye vnto wysdome, thou arte my syster, and call vnderstandynge thy kynswoman: Pro.ii.b.v.a
* that she maye kepe the frome the straunge woman, and frome the harlot whiche gyueth swete wordes.
For oute of the wyndowe of my house I lo- B
ked thorowe the trealesse, and behelde the symple people: and amonge other yonge folkes, I spyed one yonge foole goinge ouer the stretes: by the corner in the waye towarde the harlottes house in the twylyght of the euenynge, when it began nowe to be nyghte and darcke.
And beholde, there met him a woman in an Gene.xxxviii.
harlots apparel (a disceytful womā, wanton & The harlot.
vnstedfast womā, whose fete could not abide in the house: now is she without, now in the stretes, and lurketh in euery corner) she caught the yonge man, kyssed him, and was not ashamed, saying: I had a vow to paye, & this daye C
I performe it.
Therfore came I forthe to mete the, that I myght seke thy face: and so I haue founde the.
I haue deckte my bed with couerynges and clothes of Egypt.
My bed haue I made to smell of Myrre, Aloes, and Cynamon.
Come let vs lye togyther, and take our pleasure tyll it be daye lyght.
For the goodmā is not at home: he is gone farre of.
He hathe taken the bagge of moneye with hym: who can tell when he commeth home?
Thus with many swete wordes she ouer- D
came him: and with her flatteryng lyppes she wan him.
Immediatly he folowed her, as it were an oxe ledde to the slaughter (and lyke as it were to the stockes where fooles are punysshed) so long tyll she had wounded his lyuer with her darte: lyke as yf a byrde hasted to the snare, not knowynge that the peryl of his lyfe lyeth therypon.
Heare me now therfore, o my sonne, & marke the wordes of my mouth.
Let not thyne herte wander in her wayes, & be not thou disceyued in her pathes.
For many one hathe she wounded and caste downe: yea manye a stronge man hathe she slayne.

Her houses is the way vnto hell, where men go downe in to the chambres of death.

CAPI. VIII.

a Dothe not wysdome crye? dothe not vnderstandynge put forth her voyce?

Standeth she not in the hye places in the streetes and wayes? dothe she not crye before the whole cite, and in the gates where men go out and in?

It is you, o ye men (sayth she) whome I call.

Vnto you (o ye children of men) lyfte I vp my voyce.

b Take hede vnto knowlege, o ye ignorante: be wyse in deede, o ye fooles.

Geue eare, for I will speake of great materes, and open my lyppes to tell thynges that be right.

For my throte shal be talking of the truthe, and my lyppes abhorre vngodlynesse.

All the wordes of my mouthe are righteous: there is no frowardnesse nor falsehed therin.

They are all playne to suche as will vnderstand: and right to them that fynde knowlege.

Receyue my doctryne therfore, and not syluer: and my knowlege, more then fyne golde.

For wysdome is more worth then precyous stones: yea all the thinges that thou canst desire, are not to be compared vnto it.

c I wysdome haue my dwellynge with knowlege: and prudente counsell is myne owne.

With me is the feare of the Lorde, and the eschewynge of cuyll.

As for pryde, disdayne, and cuyl waye, and a mouth that speaketh wicked thinges, I vtterly abhorre them.

I can gyue counsell and be a guyde: I haue vnderstandyng, I haue strength.

Thorow me, kynges reygne: thorowe me, princes make iust lawes.

Thorow me, lordes beare rule: and all iudges of the erth execute iudgement.

I am louing vnto those that loue me: and they that seke me early, shall fynde me.

Ryches and honour are with me: yea excellent goodes and righteousnesse.

My fruite is better then golde and precyous stone: & myne encrease more worth then fyne syluer.

I walke in the waye of righteousnesse: and in the strete of iudgement.

That I maye fynde prosperitie to those that loue me: and to encrease theyr treasure.

Sapie.8.b The Lorde him selfe had me in possession in the beginning of his wayes, or euer he began his workes afore tyme.

I haue ben ordeyned from euerlasting: and from the begynnynge or euer the earthe was made.

When I was borne, there were neyther depthes nor spynges of water.

Before the foundacyons of the mountaynes were layde, yea before all hylles was I borne.

The earthe, and all that is vpon the earth d was not yet made: no not the grounde it selfe.

For when he made the heuens, I was present, when he set vp the depthes in ordre: whe he hanged the cloudes aboue, when he fastned the spynges of the depe.

When he shut the see within certayne boundes, that the waters sholde not go ouer theyr markes.

When he layde the foundacyons of the earthe, I was with him, ordeynge all thynges: delyghtynge dayly, and reioysynge alwaye before hym.

As for the round compasse of his worlde, I make it ioyfull: for my delyte is to be among the children of men.

Therfore harken vnto me, o ye children, for blessed are they that kepe my wayes.

O gyue eare vnto nourtour, be wise, and refuse it not.

e Blessed is the man þ heareth me, watching dayly at my gates: and gyuing attendaunce at the postes of my doores.

For who so fyndeth me, fyndeth lyfe: and shal obteyn fauour of the Lorde.

But who so offendeth agaynste me hurteth his owne soule.

All they that hate me, are the louers of deathe.

CAPI. IX.

Wysdome hath buylded her self an house, & hewē oute seuen pylers: she hathe killed her vitayles, poured out her wine and prepared her table.

She hath sent forthe her maydens to crye vpon the hyest place of the citye: who so is ignorante, let him come hyther.

And to the vnwise she said: O come on your b waye, eate my breed, & drynke my wyne which I haue poured out for you.

Forsake ignorance, and ye shall lyue: and se that ye goo in the waye of vnderstandynge.

Who so reproueth a scornefull person, getteth hym selfe dishonoure: and he that rebuketh the vngodlye, spotteth hym selfe.

Reproue not a scorner, leest he owe the evil wyll: but rebuke a wyse man, and he will loue the.

Shue a discrete man but an occasion, and he wyl be the wyser: teache a righteous man and he wil encrease.

c The feare of the Lorde is the begynnynge of wysdome: and the knowlege of holy thynges is vnderstandynge.

For thorowe me thy dayes shall be prolonged: and the yeres of thy lyfe shall be manye.

Yf thou

Yf thou be wyse, thy wysdome shall do thy selfe good: but if thou thinkest scorne therof, it shall be thyne owne harme.

A folysshe restlesse woman, full of wordes, p and suche one as hath no knowlege, syteeth in the dores of her house vpon a stoole, aboue in the cyty to cal suche as go by, & walke streyght in theyr wayes.

Who so is ignorante (sayth she) let him come hyther, and to the vnwyse she saith: stolen watters are swete, and the breed that is pryuily eaten, hath a good taste.

But they consydre not that deth is there, and that her gestes go downe to hell.

CAPI. X.

The parables of Salomon.

a A Wyse son, maketh a glad father: but an vndiscrete sonne is the heuynesse of his mother.

Treasures that are wickedlye gotten, profyte nothyng, but righteousnesse, deliuereth from deth.

The Lorde wyl not let the soule of þ righteous suffre hongre: but he putteth the vngodly from his desire.

An ydle hande maketh poore: but a quycke labouring hand maketh ryche.

Who so gathereth in sommer, is wyse: but he that is sluggish in harueste bringeth him selfe to confusion.

b Louynge and fauourable is the face of the righteous, but the forehed of the vngodlye is full shame and presumptuous.

The memoryall of the iust, shal haue a good reporte, but the name of the vngodlye shall rotte.

A wyse man wyll receyue warnynge: but a foole wyll sooner be smytten in the face.

He that leadeth an innocent lyfe, walketh surely: but who so goeth a wrong waye, shall be knowen.

He that winketh with his eye, will do same harme: but he that hath a foolysh mouth, shal be beaten.

The mouth of a righteous man is a well of lyfe: but the mouthe of the vngodlye is full shame, and presumptuous.

Cyuyl wil stereth vp strife, but loue couereth c the multitude of synnes.

In the lyppes of hym that hathe vnderstandynge a man shall fynde wysdome: but the rodde belongeth to the backe of the foolysshe.

Wyse men laye vp knowlege: but the mouthe of the foolysshe, is nyghe destruction.

The riche mans goodes, are his strong hold: but pouerte oppresseth the poore.

The righteous laboureth to doo good: but the vngodlye vseth his encrease vnto synne.

To take hede vnto the chastenyng of nourtour, is the waye of lyfe: but he that refuseth to be reformed goeth wronge.

Dyssemblynge lyppes kepe hatred secretly: and he that speaketh any sclaunder, is a foole.

Where moche babblynge is, there must nedes be offence: he that refrayneth his lyppes, is wyse of all.

An innocent tonge is a noble treasure: but the herte of the vngodlye is nothynge worthe.

The lyppes of the righteous fede a hole multytude: but fooles shal dye in theire owne folye.

The blessynge of the Lorde maketh ryche men: as for carefull trauayle, it doth nothing therto.

A foole doothe wickedly, and maketh but a sporte of it: neuertheless it is wysdome for a man to beware of suche.

The thyng that the vngodly are afrayde of shall come vpon them: but the righteous shall haue theire desire.

The vngodly is lyke a tempest that passeth ouer, and is no more sene: but the righteous remayneth sure for euer.

As vynegre is to the teethe, and as smoke is vnto the eyes: euen so is a sluggish person to them that sende him forth.

The feare of the Lorde maketh a longe lyfe: but the yeres of the vngodlye shall be shortened.

The patient abydinge of the righteous shall be turned to gladnesse: but the hope of þ vngodly shal perysshe.

The waye of the Lorde geueth a courage vnto the godly: but it is a feare for wycked doers.

The righteous shall neuer be ouerthrowen: but the vngodly shall not remayne in þ lande.

The mouthe of the iuste wyll be talkynge of wysdome: but the tonge of the frowarde shall perysshe.

The lyppes of the righteous are occupied in acceptable thynges: but the mouth of the vngodly taketh them to the worst.

CAPI. XI.

A Falce balaunce is an abhominacion vn- A to the Lorde: but a true weyght pleaseth him.

Where pryde is, there is shame also, and confusion: but where as lowlynesse is, there is wysdome.

The innocent dealynge of the iust shal leade them: but the vnfaythfulnesse of the rebellers shall be their owne destruction.

* Ryches helpe not in the daye of ven- Prouer.x.a geaunce: but righteousnesse deliuereth from Eccleu.v.c
deathe.

The righteousnesse of the innocent ordreth his waye: but the vngodly shall fall in his owne wickednesse.

The ryghtousnesse of the iust, shall delyuer them: but the delyysers shal be taken in their owne vngodynesse.

Sapien. v. b. * When an vngodly man dyeth, his hope is gone: the confydence of rychesse shall perysshe.

The ryghtous shall be delyuered oute of trouble: and the vngodlye shall come in his stede.

Thorowe the mouthe of the dissembler is his neyghboure destroyed: but thorowe knowlege, shall the iuste be delyuered.

When it goeth wel with the ryghtous, the city is mery: and when the vngodly perysshe, there is gladnesse.

When the iuste are in welthe, the citye prosperyth: but when the vngodly haue the rule it decayeth.

A foole bryngeth vp a sclaunder of his neyghboure: but a wyse man wyll kepe it secrete.

A dissemblynge person wyl discouer priuye thinges: but he that is of a fayethful hert, will kepe counsel.

C Where no good counsell is, there the people decaye: but where as manye are that can gyue counsell, there is welth.

He that is suretye for a straunger: hurteth him selfe: but he that medleth not with suretyshyp is sure.

A gracyous woman mayntayneth honestye: as for the myghtye, they mayntayne rychesse.

He that hath a gentle lyberall stomacke: is mercyful: but who so hurteth his neyghbour is a tyraunt.

The labour of the vngodly prosphereth not: but he that soweth ryghtousnesse, shal receyue a sure rewarde.

Lyke as righteousnesse bringeth life: euē so to clene vnto euyll bryngeth deth.

The Lorde abhorreth a fayned herte: but he hathe pleasure in theym that are vndefyled.

Yt shall not helpe the wycked, though they laye all their handes together: but the seed of the ryghtous shall be preserued.

A fayre woman without discrete maners: is lyke a ryng of golde in a swynes snoute.

The iust labour for pear and tranquillitie: but the vngodly for disquietnesse.

Some man gyueth out his goodes, and is the rycher: but the nygard (hauyng ynough) wil departe from nothynge, and yet is euer in pouertie.

He that is lyberall in gyuynge, shall haue D plentye: and he that watereth, shall be watered also hym selfe.

Who so hoordeth vp his corne, shal be cursed among the people: but blessing shal lyght vpon his heed that selleth it.

He that laboureth for honestie, fynderh his desire: but who so seketh after mischiefe, it shall happen vnto him.

He that trusteth in his rychesse, shall haue a fall: but the ryghtous, shal florysshe as the grene leafe.

Who so maketh disquietnesse in his owne house, he shall haue wynde for his heritage: and the foole shall be seruaunt to the wyse.

The frute of the ryghtous, is as the tree of lyfe: a wyse man also, wynneth mens soules.

* Yf the ryghtous be recompensed vpon earthe: howe moche more then the vngodlye and the synner?

CAPI. XII.

Who so loueth wysdome, will be content to be reformed: but he that hateth to be reproued, is a foole. F

A good man is acceptable vnto the Lorde: but the wicked wil he condemne.

A man can not endure in vngodlynesse: but the roote of the ryghtous shal not be moued.

A stedfast woman is a crowne vnto her husbande: but she that behaueth her selfe vnhonestly, is a corruption to his bones.

The thoughtes of the ryghtous are ryght: but the ymagination of the vngodly, are disceptfull.

The talkynge of the vngodly is howe they may laye wayte for bloude: but the mouth of the ryghtous wyll delyuer them.

Ouerthrowen thou canst turne the about, the vngodly shall be ouerthrowen: but the house of the ryghtous shall stande. B

A man shal be commended for his wisdome: but a foole shal be despised.

A symple man whiche laboureth and worketh: is better then one that is gorgious and wanteth breed.

A ryghtous man regardeth the lyfe of his catell: but the vngodlye haue cruell hertes.

He that tylleth his lande, shall haue plenteousnesse of breed: but he that followeth vnthryftynesse, is a very foole.

The desire of the vngodly hunteth after mischiefe: but the rote of the ryghtous bryngeth forth frute.

The wicked falleth in to the snare, thorowe the malyce of his owne mouth: but the iuste shall escape out of peryll.

Euerye man shall inioye good, accordynge to the innocencye of his mouthe, and after the workes of his handes shall he be rewarded.

Loke what a foole taketh in hand, he thinketh it well done, but he that is wyse, wyll be counselled.

A foole vttereth his wrath in all the haste: but a discrete man forgyueth wronge.

A iust man wyll tell the truthe: and shewe the tryynge that is tryght: but a false witnesse disceyueth.

A sclaunderous person pryeketh lyke a swerde: but a wyse mans tong is wholsome. E

A true mouth is euer constaunt: but a lyenge tonge is soone chaunged.

The

They that ymagen euil in their mynde, wil disceyue: but the counselloues of peax shall haue ioye folowynge them.

There shall no myschefe happen vnto the iust: but the vngodly shall be fylled with misery.

The Lorde abhorreth disceptfull lyppes: but they that laboure for truthe, please him.

He that hath vnderstandynge, can hyde his wysdome: but an vndiscrete herte telleth out his folysshnesse.

A diligent hande shall beare rule: but the idel shall be vnder tribute.

Heuynesse discourageth the herte of man: but a good worde maketh it gladde a- D gayne.

The ryghtous is lyberall vnto his neyghboure: but the waye of the vngodly will disceyue them selues.

A disceptfull man shall fynde no bauntage: but he that is content with that he hathe, is more worthy then golde.

In the waye of ryghteousnesse there is lyfe: as for anye other waye, it is the pathe vnto deathe.

CAPI. XIII.

A Wyse sonne wyll receyue his fathers warnynge, but he that is scorneful, wyl not heare when he is reproued. a

A good man shall enioye the frute of his mouthe: but he that hath a frowarde mynde shall be spoyled.

He that kepeth his mouthe, kepeth his lyfe: but who so speaketh vnaduysed, findeth harme.

The sluggarde wolde fayne haue, and can not get his desire: but the soule of the diligēt shall haue plentye.

A ryghtous man abhorreth lyes: but the vngodlye shameth bothe other and hym selfe.

Ryghtousnesse kepeth the innocent in the waye: but vngodlynesse shal ouerthrowe the synner.

Some men are ryche, though they haue nothynge: agayne, some men are poore, hauynge great rychesse.

With goodes euerye man delyuereth his lyfe: and the poore wyll not be reproued. b

The lyghte of the ryghtous maketh ioyfull: but the candle of the vngodlye shall be put out.

Amonge the proude there is euer stryfe: but among those that do all thinges with aduisement, there is wysdome.

Hastly gotten goodes are sone spent: but they that be gathered togyther with the hand shall increase.

Longe tarrynge for a thynge that is desired, greeueth the hert: but when the desire commeth, it is a tree of lyfe. c

Who so despyseth the worde, destroyeth him selfe: but he that feareth the commaundemēt shall haue peax.

The lawe is a well of lyfe vnto the wyse: that it maye kepe hym frome the snares of deathe.

Good vnderstandynge gyueth fauour: but harde is the waye of the despysers.

A wyse man dothe all thynges with discrecyon: but a foole wyll declare his folye.

An vngodlye messanger dyngeth myschefe: but a fayethfull ambassadour is holsome.

He that thynketh scorne to be reformed, commeth to pouertie and shame: but who so receyueth correction, shall come to honoure.

When a desyre is brought to passe, it delyteth the soule: but fooles abhorre hym that eschueth euyll. D

He that goeth in the company of wise men, shall be wyse: but who so is a companyon of of fooles, shall be hurte.

Myschiefe folowyth vpon synners, but the ryghtous shall haue a good rewarde.

Which theyr chyldren shall haue in possession: for the richesse of the synner is layd vp for the iust.

There is plentyousnesse of foode in the feldes of the poore: and shall be encreased out of measure.

He that spareth the rodde, hateth his sonne: but who so loueth him, holdeth him euer in nourture.

The ryghteous eateth, and is satisfyed: but the belye of the vngodlye hathe neuer ynough.

CAPI. XIIII.

A Wyse woman vpholdeth her house, but a foolysshe wyfe plucketh it downe. A Job.xii.a.

Who so feareth the Lorde, walketh in the ryght path: and regardeth not him that abhorreth the wayes of the Lorde.

In the mouth of the foolysshe is the bosling of Lordshyp: but the lyppes of the wyse, wil beware of suche.

Where no oxen are, there the cryb is empty: but where the oxen laboure, there is moche frute.

A fayethfull witnesse will not dissemble, but a false recorde wyll make a lye.

A scornefull body seketh wysdome, and fyndeth it not: but knowlege is easy to come by, vnto him that wyl vnderstande.

Be that thou medle not with a foole: and doo as thoughe thou haddest no knowlege.

The wisdome of him that hath vnderstanding, is, to take hede vnto his waye, but the folysshnesse of the vnwyse disceyueth.

Fooles make but a sporte at synne, but there is fauourable loue among the ryghteous.

The herte of him that hath vnderstanding will neither dispayre for anye sorowe, ne be to presumptuous for any sodeyn ioye.

The houses of the vngodly shall be ouer- B

throwen: but the tabernacles of the ryghteous shall florishe.
There is a waye, whiche some men thynke to be ryght, but the ende therof leadeth vnto dethe.
The herte is sorowfull, euen in laughter, & the ende of myrth is heuynesse.
An vnfaythfull person shal be filled with his owne wayes, but a good man wyll beware of suche.
An ignoraunt bodye beleueth all thynges: but who so hath vnderstandynge, loketh well to his goynges.
A wyse man feareth, and departeth from euyll: but a foole goeth on presumptuously.
An vnpacyent man dealeth folysshely: but he that is well aduysed, doeth other wayes.
The ignoraunte haue folysshenesse in possession, but the wyse are crowned with knowlege.
The euyll shall bowe them selues before
C the good, and the vngodly shall wayte at the dores of the ryghteous.
The poore is hated euen of his owne neyghboures: but the ryche hathe manye frendes.
Who so despyseth his neyghbour, dothe a mysse: but blessed is he that hathe pytye of the poore.
They that ymagen wyckednesse, shall be disappoynted: but they that muse vpon good thynges, vnto suche shall happen mercye and faythfulnesse.
Diligent laboure bryngeth ryches, and where many vayne wordes are, truely there is scarcenesse.
Rychesse is an ornament vnto the wyse: but the ignoraunce of fooles is verye folyshnesse.
A faythfull witnesse delyuereth soules, but a lyar discyueth them.
The feare of the Lorde is a strong hold, for vnto his he wyll be a sure defence.
The feare of the Lorde is a well of lyfe, to D auoyde the snares of deth.
The encreace and prosperitie of the comens, is the kynges honoure: but the decaye of the people, is the confusyon of the Prynce.
Pacyence is a token of wysdome: but wrathe and hasty displeasure is a token of folyshnesse.
A mery herte is the life of the body: but rancoure consumeth awaye the bones.
He that doth a poore man wrong, blasphemeth his maker: but who so hath pytye of the poore, doth honoure vnto God.
The vngodlye is afrayde of euerye peryll: but the ryghteous hathe a good hope euen in deathe.
Wysdome resteth in the herte of hym that hath vnderstandynge, and he wyll teache them that are vnlearned.
Ryghteousnesse setteth vp the people: but vngracyousnesse bryngeth folke to destrucion.

A discrete seruaunte is a pleasure vnto the kynge: but one that is not honest, prouoketh him vnto wrath.

CAPI. XV.

A Softe answere putteth downe displeasure: but frowarde wordes prouoke vnto angre. A
A wyse tonge commendeth knowlege: a folysshe mouthe blabbeth out nothynge but folysshenesse.
The eyes of ÿ Lord loke on euery place, both vpon the good and bad.
A holsume tonge is a tree of lyfe: but he that abuseth it, hath a broken mynde.
A foole despiseth his fathers correction: but he that taketh hede when he is reproued, shall haue the more vnderstandyng.
In the house of the ryghtous are greate ryches, but in ÿ increase of the vngodly there is mysordre. B
A wyse mouth poureth out knowlege: but the herte of the folysshe doth not so.
The Lorde abhorreth the sacrifice of the vngodly: but the prayer of the ryghteous is acceptable vnto him.
The waye of the vngodly is an abhominacion vnto the Lorde: but who so foloweth ryghtousnesse, him he loueth.
He that forsaketh the right strete, shall be sore punisshed: and who so hateth correction, falleth into deth.
The hell with her payne is knowen vnto the Lorde: how moche more then the hertes of men?
A scornefull body loueth not one that rebuketh him: neyther wyl he come among the wyse.
A merye herte maketh a cherefull countenaunce: but an vnquyet mynde maketh it heuy.
A wyse herte wyll seke after knowlege: but the mouthe of fooles medleth with foolishnesse.
All the dayes of the poore are myserable: but a quyete herte is as a contynuall feast.

The Lord abhorreth the ymaginacions of the wycked, but pure wordes are pleasaũt vnto him.
The couetous man troubleth vp his owne house, but who so hateth rewardes, shal lyue.
A ryghteous mã museth in his mynde how to doo good, but the mynde of the vngodly ymagineth, how he may do harme.
The Lorde is farre frome the vngodly, but he heareth the prayer of the ryghtous.
Lyke as the clearnesse of the eyes reioyseth the herte, so doth a good name fede the bones.
The eare that harkeneth vnto a holsom warnynge, and enclyneth therto, shall dwell amonge the wyse.
He that refuseth to be refourmed, despyseth his owne soule: but he that submitteth him selfe to correction, is wyse.

CAPI. XVI.

A The feare of the Lorde is the right sciẽce of wysdome, and lowlynes goeth before honoure.
A man maye well purpose a thinge in his herte, but the answere of the tonge commeth of the Lorde.
A man thinketh all his wayes to be cleane but it is the Lorde that fasshioneth the myndes.
Committe thy workes vnto the Lord, and loke what thou deuysest, it shall prospere.
The Lorde doeth all thinges for his owne sake, yea and when he kepeth the vngodly for the daye of wrath.
The Lorde abhorreth all presumptuous & proude hertes, there maye neyther strengthe ner power escape.
With louynge mercy and faythfulnesse synnes be forgyuen, and who so feareth ÿ Lorde escheweth euyll.

Yf thou wilt saye: I knewe not of it, thinkest thou that he which made the hertes, doth not consydre it? and that he which regardeth thy soule, seyth it not?

Shall not he recompence euery man accordinge to his workes?

My son, thou eatest hony and the swete hony combe, because it is good and swete in thy mouth.

Euen so shall the knowledge of wysdome be vnto thy soule, as sone as thou hast gotten it.

And there is good hope, yea thy hope shall not be in vayne.

Laye no preuye wayte wickedly vpon the house of the righteous, and disquiete not his restinge place.

For a iust man falleth seuen tymes, and ryseth vp agayne, but the vngodly fal in to wickednes.

Reioyce not thou at the fall of thyne enemye, and let not thyne herte be glad when he stombleth.

Lest the Lorde (when he seyth it) be angry and turne his wrathe frome him vnto the.

Let not thy wrathe and gelousy moue the, to folow the wycked and vngodly. C

And why? the wycked hathe nothinge to hope for, and the candle of the vngodly shall be put out.

My sonne, feare thou the Lorde & the kyng and kepe no companye with the slaunderous: For their destruction shall come sodenlye, and who knoweth the fall of them both?

These are also the sayenges of the wyse.

It is not good, to haue respect of any person in iudgement.

He that sayth to the vngodly: thou arte righteous, him shall the people curse, yea the comen shall abhorre him.

But they that rebuke the vngodly shalbe commended, and a ryche blessynge shall come vpon them.

He maketh him selfe to be well loued, that geueth a good answere.

First make vp thy worke that is without, & loke wel vnto that which thou hast in ÿ felde then buylde thyne house.

Be no false wytnes against thy neyghbour and hurt him not with thy lyppes. D

Saye not: I will handle him, euen as he hath dealt with me, and will rewarde euery man accordinge to his dedes.

I went by the felde of the slouthfull, and by the vyneyardes of the folysh man.

And lo, it was all couered with nettels, & stode full of thistels, and the stone wall was broken downe.

This I sawe, and consydered it well: I loked vpon it, and toke it for a warnynge.

Yea slepe on styll a lytle, slombre a lytle, folde thyne handes togyther yet a lytle: so shall pouerte come vnto the as one that trauayleth by the waye, and necessite lyke a weapened man.

CAPI. XXV.

¶ These

¶ These also are the sayenges of Salomon, whiche the men of Ezekiah kyng of Iuda gathered to gether.

A IT is the honour of God to kepe a thynge secrete, but the kynges honour is to searche out a thing.

The heauen is hye, the earth is depe, and the kynges herte is vnsearcheable.

Take the drosse from the syluer, and there shalbe a cleane vessell therof.

Take awaye vngodlynesse from the kyng, and his seate shall be stablysshed with ryghtousnes.

Put not forthe thy selfe in the presence of the kynge, and preace not in to the place of greate men.

Better is it that it be sayde vnto the: come vp hyther, then thou to be sette downe in the presence of the prynce whome thou seyst with thyne eyes.

Be not hasty to go to the lawe, lest happly
B thou ordre thy selfe so at the laste, that thy neyghbour put the to shame.

Handle thy mater with thy neyghbour hym selfe, and dyscouer not another mans secrete, leste when men heare therof, it turne to thy dishonoure, and lest thyne euell name do not ceasse.

A worde spoken in due season, is lyke apples of golde in a syluer dysshe.

The correction of the wyse is to an obedient eare, a golden cheyne and a Iewell of golde.

Lyke as the wynter coole in the haruest, so is a faythfull messaunger to hym that sent him, and refressheth his maysters mynde.

C Who so maketh great boostes and geueth nothynge, is lyke cloudes and wynde without rayne.

With pacience maye a prynce be pacifyed, and with a softe tonge maye rygorousnesse be broken.

Yf thou fyndest hony, eate so moche as is sufficient for the: lest thou be ouer full, & perbreake it out agayne.

Withdrawe thy foote frome thy neyghboures house, leste he be wery of the, and so abhorre the.

Who so beareth false wytnesse agaynste his neyghbour, he is a very speare, a swearde, and a sharpe arowe.

The hope of the vngodlye in tyme of nede is lyke a rotten toth and a slyppery foote.

Who so syngeth a songe to a wycked hert, clotheth hym with ragges in the colde, and poureth vyneger vpon chalke.

Yf thyne enemye honger, fede hym: yf he thyrste, geue hym drynke: for so shalte thou heape coles of fyre vpon his heade, and the Lorde shall rewarde the.

The Northe wynde dryueth awaye the rayne, euen so doth an earnest sober countenaunce a backbyters tonge. D

It is better to sytte in a corner vnder the rofe, then with a braulyng woman in a wyde house. Prouer.xxi.b

A good reporte out of a farre countree, is lyke colde water to a thyrstie soule.

A ryghtous man fallynge downe before the vngodlye, is lyke a troubled well and a sprynge that is destroyed.

Lyke as it is not good to eate to moch hony, euen so he that wyll searche out hye thynges, it shall be to heuy for hym.

He that can not rule hym selfe, is lyke a cytie whiche is broken downe, and hathe no walles.

CAPI. XXVI.

LYke as snowe is not mete in sommer, nor rayne in haruest: euen so is worshyp vnsemely for a foole. A

Lyke as the byrde and the swalowe take their flyghte and fle here and there, so the curse that is geuen in vayne, shall not lyght vpon a man.

Unto the horse belongeth a whyppe, to the Asse a brydle, and a rodde to the fooles backe.

Geue not the fole an answere after his foolyshnesse, leste thou become lyke vnto hym: but make the foole an answere to his foolyshnesse, leste he be wyse in his owne conceate.

He is lame of his fete, yea dronken is he in vanite, that committeth any thynge to a foole.

Lyke as it is an vnsemely thynge to haue legges, and yet to halte, euen so is a parable B in the fooles mouth.

He that setteth a foole in hye dignite, that is euen as yf a man dyd caste a precious stone vpon the galous.

A parable in a fooles mouthe is lyke a thorne that prycketh a dronken man in the hande.

A man of experience discerneth all thynges well, but who so hyreth a foole, hyreth soche one as wyll take no hede.

Lyke as the dogge turneth awaye to his vomyte, euen so a foole begynneth his folyshnesse agayne a fresh.

Yf thou seest a man that is wyse in his C
owne conceate, there is more hope in a foole then in hym.

The slouthfull sayeth: there is a leoparde in the waye, and a lyon in the myddest of the stretes.

Lyke as the dore turneth aboute vpon the thresholde, euen so doth the slouthfull welter hym selfe in his bedde.

Prou.xix.c * The slouthfull body thrusteth his hand in to his bosome, and it greueth hym to put it agayne to his mouth.
The sloggarde thynketh hym selfe wyser, then .vij. men, that syt and teache.
Who so goeth by and medleth with other mens stryfe, he is lyke one that taketh a dog by the eares.
Lyke as one shoteth deadly arowes and dartes out of a preuy place, euen so doth a dissembler with his neyghboure.
And then sayth he: I dyd it but in sporte.
Where no wod is, there ỹ fyre goeth oute, and where the bacbyter is take awaye, there the stryfe ceaseth.
Eccl.xxviij.b * Coles kyndle heate, and wod the fyre: euen so doth a brawlynge felowe stere vp varyaunce.
A sclaunderers wordes are lyke flatterye, D but they pearse the inwarde partes of the body.
Venymous lyppes and a wycked herte, are lyke a potsherde couered with syluer drosse.
An ennemye dissembleth with his lyppes, and in the meane season he ymagineth myschefe: but when he speaketh fayre, beleue him not, for there are seuen abhominacions in his herte.
Who so kepeth euell wyll, secretlye to do hurte, his malyce shall be shewed before the whole congregacion.
* Eccles.x.b. Eccle.xxvij.d * Who diggeth vp a pyt, shall fall therin: and he that weltreth a stone, shall stomble vpon it hymselfe.
A dissemblynge tonge hateth one that rebuketh hym, and a flatterynge mouthe worketh myschefe.

CAPI. XXVII.

A Make not thy boost of to morowe, for thou knowest not what maye happen to daye.
Let an other man prayse the, and not thyn owne mouthe, yea other folkes lyppes, and not thyne.
The stone is heuye, and the sande weyghtye, but a fooles wrathe is heuyer then they bothe.
Wrath is a cruell thynge, and furiousnesse is a verye tempest: yea who is hable to abyde enuye?
An open rebuke is better then a secrete loue.
Faythfull are the woundes of a louer, but the kysses of an enemye are dysceatfull.
Job.vi.b He that is full, abhorreth an hony combe, but vnto hym that is hongrye, euerye sower B thynge is swete.
He that ofte tymes flytteth, is lyke a byrde that forsaketh her neste.
The herte is glad of a swete oyntment and sauoure, but a stomacke that can geue good councell, refressheth a mans neyghboure.
Thyne owne frende and thy fathers frende se thou forsake not, but go not into thy brothers house in tyme of thy trouble.
Better is a frende at hande, then a brother farre of.
My sonne, be wyse, and thou shalte make me a glad herte: so that I shal make answere vnto my rebukers.
A wyse man seynge the plage, wyll hyde hym selfe, as for fooles they go on styll, and suffer harme.
* Take his garmente that is suertye for a straunger, and take a pledge of hym for the vnknowen mans sake. Prou.xx
He that is to hastye to prayse his neyghboure aboue measure, shall be taken as one C that geueth hym an euell reporte.
A brawlynge woman and the rofe of the house droppynge in a rayny daye, maye well be compared together.
He that refrayneth her, refrayneth the wynde, and holdeth oyle fast in his hande.
Lyke as one yron whetteth another, so doth one man comforte another.
Who so kepeth his fygge tre, shall enioye the frutes therof: he that wayteth vpon his mayster, shall come to honoure.
Lyke as in one water there appeare dyuerse faces, euen so dyuerse men haue dyuerse hertes.
Lyke as hell and destruccion are neuer full, euen so the * eyes of men can neuer be satisfyed. Eccl.
Syluer is tryed in the moulde, and golde in the fornace, and so is a man, when he is openly praysed to his face.
Though thou shuldest braye a fole with a pestell in a morter lyke otemele, yet wyll not D his foolyshnesse go from hym.
Se that thou knowe the nombre of thy catell thy selfe, and loke well to thy flockes.
For ryches abyde not alway, & the crowne endureth not for euer.
The hey groweth, the grasse commeth vp, and herbes are gathered in the mountaynes.
The lambes shall clothe the, and for the gotes thou shalte haue money to thy husbandry.
Thou shalt haue gotes mylcke ynough to fede the, to vphold thy houshold, and to sustayne thy maydens.

CAPI. XXVIII.

The vngodlye flyeth no man chasynge hym, but the ryghtous standeth styfe as a A lyon.
Because of synne the lande dothe ofte chaunge her prynces: but thorowe men of vnderstandynge and wysdome a realme endureth longe.
One poore man oppressynge an other by violence, is lyke a continuall rayne that destroyeth the frute.

The

They that forsake the lawe, prayse the vngodlye, but soche as kepe the lawe, abhorre them.
Wycked men discerne not the thynge that is ryght, but they that seke after the Lorde, discusse all thynges
A poore man ledynge a godlye lyfe, is better then the ryche that goethe in frowarde wayes.
Who so kepeth the lawe, is a chylde of vn-B derstandynge: but he that fedeth ryotous mē, shameth his father.
Who so increaseth his ryches by vauntage and wynnynge, let hym gather them to helpe the poore withall.
He that turneth awaye his eare frome hearynge the lawe, his prayer shall be abhorred.
Who so ledeth the ryghtuous into an euel waye, shall fall in to his awne pytte, but the iust shall haue the good in possessyon.
The ryche man thynketh hym selfe to be wyse, but the poore that hath vnderstanding, can perceaue hym well ynough.
When ryghtuous men are in prosperitie, then doth honoure floryshe: but when the vngodly come vp, the state of men chaungeth.
He that hydeth his synnes, shall not prospere: but who so knowledgeth them and forsaketh them, shall haue mercy.
Well is hym that standeth alway in awe: C as for hym that hardeneth his harte, he shall fall in to myschefe.
Lyke as a roarynge lyon and an hongry beare, euen so is an vngodly prynce ouer the poore people.
Where the prynce is withoute vnderstandynge, there is greate oppressyon and wronge: but yf he be soch one as hateth couetousnesse, he shall longe rayne.
He that by violence sheddeth any mannes bloude, shall be a rennagate vnto his graue, and no man shall be hable to succoure hym.
Who so leadeth a godly and an innocente lyfe, shalbe safe: but he that goeth frowarde wayes, shall ones haue a fall.
* He that tylleth his lande, shall haue plenteousnesse of breade: but he that foloweth ydelnesse, shall haue pouerte ynough.
A faythfull man is greatly to be commended, but he that maketh to moche haste for to be ryche shall not be vngiltie.
To haue respecte of personnes in iudgemētes not good.
And why? he wyll do wronge, yee euen for a pece of breade.
D He that wyll be ryche all to soone, hath an euell eye, and considereth not, that pouerte shall come vpon hym.
He that rebuketh a man, shall fynde more fauoure at the laste, then he that flattereth hym.
Who so robbeth his father and mother, and sayeth it is no synne: the same is lyke a mortherer.
He that is of a proude stomacke, stereth vp stryfe, but he that putteth his trust in the Lorde, shalbe well fedde.
He that trusteth in his awne herte, is a foole: but he that dealeth wysely, shalbe safe.
He that geueth vnto the poore, shall not wante: but he that turneth awaye his eyes from soch as be in necessite, shall suffer greate pouerte hym selfe. D
When the vngodly are come vp, men are fayne to hyde them selfes: but when they peryshe, the ryghtuous increase.

CAPI. XXIX.

He that is styffnecked and wyll not be refourmed, shall sodēly be destroyed without any helpe. A
Where the ryghtuous haue the ouerhand, the people are in prosperitie: but where the vngodlye beareth rule, there the people mourne.
Who so loueth wysdome, maketh his father a glad man, * but he that kepeth harlottes, spendeth awaye that he hath. * Prou.v.b Luke.xv.c
With true iudgement the kynge setteth vp the lande, but yf he be a man that taketh gyftes, he turneth it vpsyde downe.
Who so flattereth his neyghboure, layeth a nette for his fete.
The synne of the wycked is his owne snare, but the ryghtuous shall be glad and reioyse.
The ryghtuous consydreth the cause of the poore, but the vngodly regardeth no vnderstandynge.
Wycked people brynge a citie in decaye, B but wyse men set it vp agayne.
Yf a wyse mā go to law with a foole (whether he deale with hym frendly or roughly) he getteth no rest.
The bloud thyrstie hate the ryghtuous, but the iust seke his soule.
A foole poureth oute his spryte all together, but a wyse man kepeth it in tyll afterwarde.
Yf a prynce delyte in lyes, all his seruauntes are vngodly.
The poore and the lender mete together, the Lorde lyghteneth bothe theyr eyes.
The seate of the kynge that faythfully iudgeth the poore, shall contynue sure for euermore. C
The rodde and correction mynistre wysdome, but yf a chylde be not loked vnto, he bryngeth his mother to shame.
When the vngodly come vp, wyckednesse increaseth, but the ryghtuous shall se theyr fall.
Nurtoure thy sonne with correction, and he shall comforte the, yea he shall do the good at thyne herte.
Where no Prophete is, there the people peryshe: but well is hym that kepeth the lawe.
A seruaunt wyll not be the better for wordes, for though he vnderstande, yet wyll he not regarde them.

Yf thou seyst a man that is hastye to speake vnaduysed, thou mayst trust a fole more then him.

D He that delycately bringeth vp his seruaunt frome a childe, shall make him his master at length.

Iob.xxii.d An angry man stereth vp stryfe, and he that beareth euyll wyll in his mynde, doeth moche euyll.

After pryde commeth a fal, but a lowly spirite bringeth great worshyp.

Who so keepeth company with a theefe, hateth his owne soule: he heareth blaspemies and telleth it not forth.

He that feareth men, shall haue a fall: but who so putteth his trust in the Lorde shall come to honoure.

Many there be that seke the Princes fauoure, but euery mans iudgement commeth frome the Lorde.

The righteous abhorreth the vngodly: but as for thole that be in the right waye, ỹ wycked hate them.

CAPI. XXX.

The wordes of Agur the sonne of Jakeh.

A The prophecie of a true faythfull man, whome God hathe helped, whome God hath comforted and nourished.

For thoughe I am the leest of all, and haue no mans vnderstandynge (for I neuer learned wysdome) yet haue I vnderstandynge, and am well instructed in godly thynges.

Who hathe clymmed vp in to heuen? Who hath come downe frome thence? Who hathe holden the wynde faste in his handes? Who hath comprehended the waters in a garment? Who hathe sette all the endes of the worlde? What is his name, or his sonnes name? Canst thou tell?

*Psal.xix.c Deut.iiii.a.xii.d. Psal.xviii.c *All the wordes of God are pure & cleane, for he is a shyld vnto all them, that put their truste in hym.

Put thou nothynge therfore vnto his wordes, lest he reproue the, and thou be founde a lyar.

Two thynges I requyre of the, that thou wylt not denye me before I dye.

B Remoue frome me vanite and lyes: geue me neither pouerte nor ryches, onely graunte me a necessary lyuynge.

Lest yf I be to full, I denye the, and saye: what is he Lorde? And lest I beyng constrayned throw pouerte, fall vnto stealynge, and forsweare the name of my God.

Accuse not a seruaunte vnto his master, lest he speake euell of the also, and thou be hurte.

He that bringeth vp an euell reporte vpon the generacion of his father and mother, is not worthy to be commended.

The generacion that thynke themselues cleane, shal not be clensed from their filthynesse.

There are people that haue a proude loke, and cast vp their eye lydres.

This peoples teethe are swerdes, and with their chaftbones they consume and deuoure the simple of the earth, and the poore frome amonges men.

This generacion (whiche is lyke an horseleche) hath two daughters: the one is called, fetch hyther, and the other, bynge hyther.

There be thre thynges that are neuer satisfyed, and the fourth sayth neuer hoo.

The hell, a womans wombe, and the earth hath neuer water ynough.

As for fyre, it sayeth neuer, hoo.

Who so laugheth his father to scorne, and setteth his mothers commaundemente at naught: the rauens pycke out his eyes in the valleye, and deuoured be he of the ponge Aegles.

There be thre thynges to hye for me, and as for the fourth, it passeth my knowledge.

The waye of an Aegle in the ayre, the way of a serpent ouer a stone, the waye of a shyppe in the see, and the way of a man with a yong woman.

Soch is the waye also of a wyfe that breaketh wedlocke, which wipeth her mouth lyke as when she hath eaten, and sayeth: I haue done no harme.

Thorowe thre thinges the earth is disquieted, and the fourth maye it not beare.

Thorow a seruaunt that beareth rule, thorowe a foole that hath great ryches, thorowe an yll houswyfe, and thorowe an handemayden that is heyre to her maistres.

P There be foure thinges in the earthe, the whiche are verye lytle: but in wysdome they excede the wyse.

The Pysmyres are but a weake people, yet gather they their meate to gether in the harueste.

The Conyes ar but a feble folke, yet make they their couches amonge the rockes.

The grashoppers haue not a gide, yet go they forth together by heapes.

The spyder laboureth with her handes, & that in the Kynges palace.

There be thre thynges that go stylly, but the gopnge of the fourthe is the godlyest of all.

A Lyon, whiche is kynge of beastes, and geueth place to no man: A Locke readye to fyght: A ramme and a kyng that goeth forth with his people.

Yf thou be so folysh to magnifie thy selfe, or medlest with any soche thynge, then laye thyne hande vpon thy mouth.

Who

Who so chyrneth myelke, maketh butter: he that rubbeth his nose, maketh it blede: and he that causeth wrathe, bryngeth forthe stryfe.

The wordes of kynge Lamuel / and the Prophecye that his mother taught hym.

Kynges ought to iudge iustly. The propertye of an honest maryed wyfe.

CAPI. XXXI.

My sonne, thou sonne of my body: O my dere beloued sonne, gyue not ouer thy substaunce & myndе vnto wemen, which are the distruction euen of kynges.

O Lamuel, gyue kynges no wyne, gyue kynges and princes no stronge drinke: least they drynge dronken forget the lawe, and regarde not the cause of the poore, and of all suche as be in aduersitie.

Gyue stronge drinke vnto suche as are condemned to death, & wyne vnto those ỹ mourne that they maye drynke it, and forget their myserye and aduersitie.

Be thou an aduocate, and stande in iudgement, speke, to speake for all suche as be dumme and succourles.

Withe thy mouth defende the thinge that is lawfull and right, and the cause of the poore and helpelesse.

ALEPH.

Who so fyndeth an honest faythfull woman, she is moche more worthe then perles.

BETH.

The herte of her housbande maye safely trust in her, so that he shall haue no nede of spoyles.

GIMEL.

She will do him good and not euyll al the dayes of her lyfe.

DALETH.

She occupyeth woll and flaxe, and laboureth gladly with her handes.

HE.

She is lyke a marchauntes shyp, that bringeth her vitayles frome a farre.

VAV.

She is vp in the nyghte season, to prouyde meate for her household, and fode for her maydens.

ZAIN.

She considereth lande, and byeth it, and with the frute of her handes she planteth a vyneyarde.

HETH.

She gyrdeth her loynes with strength, and courageth her armes.

TETH.

And yf the perceyue that her housewyfery dothe good, her candle gooth not oute by nyght.

IOD.

She layeth her fingers to the spyndle, and her handes taketh holde of the rocke.

CAPH.

She openeth her hande to the poore, yea she stretcheth forth her handes to suche as haue nede.

LAMED.

She feareth not that the colde of wynter shall hurt her house, for all her household folkes are double clothed.

MEM.

She maketh her selfe fayre ornamentes, her clothynge is wyte silcke and purple.

NVN.

Her housbande is moche set by in the gates, when he sytteth amonge the rulers of the lande.

SAMECH.

She maketh clothe of silke and selleth it, and deliuereth a girdle vnto the marchaunt.

AIN.

Strength and honour is her clothinge, and in the latter daye she shall reioyse.

PHE.

She openeth her mouth with wysdome, & in her mouth is the lawe of grace.

ZADE

She loketh well to the wayes of her housholde, and eateth not her bred with idlines.

KOPH.

Her children aryse, and call her blessed: and her husbande maketh mocke of her.

RES.

Many daughters there be that gather riches together, but thou goest aboue thym all.

SIN.

As for fauoure, it is disceytfull, and beautye is a vayne thinge: but a woman that feareth the Lorde, she is worthy to be prayed.

THAV.

Geue her of the frute of her handes, and let her owne workes prayse her in the gates.

¶ The ende of the Prouerbes of Salomon.

¶ All that is in this worlde is vanitie.

CAPI. I.

THese are the worꝛes of the Preacher, the sonne of Dauid, kynge of Ierusalem. All is but vanitie (sayth the preacher) all is but playne vanite: for what els hath a man, of all ꝑ laboure that he taketh vnder the Sunne? One generacion passeth awaye, an other commeth, but the earth abydeth styl. The Sunne ariseth, the Sunne goeth downe, and returneth to his place, that he maye there eyse vp agayne. The wynde goeth towarde the South, and fetcheth his cõpase about vnto the North, and so tourneth in to hym selfe agayne. All floudes run into the see and yet the see is not fylled: for loke vnto what place the waters run, thence they come agayne. All thinges are so harde, that no man can expresse them. The eye is not satisfyed with sight, the eare is not fylled with hearinge.

The thinge that hath bene, commeth to passe agayne: and the thinge that hath bene done, is done agayne, there is no new thinge vnder ꝑ Sunne. Is there any thinge wherof it may be sayde: lo, this is newe? For it was longe ago in the tymes that haue bene before vs.

The thinge that is past, is out of remẽbraunce. Euen so the thynges that are for to come, shal no more be thought vpon amonge them that come after. I my selfe the Preacher, beynge kynge of Israel and Ierusalem, applyed my mynde to seke out and searche for the knowledge of all thinges that are done vnder heauen. Suche trauayle and labeure hathe God geuen vnto the children of men, to exercyse them selues therin.

Thus I haue considred al the thinges that come to passe vnder the Sunne, and lo, they are all but vanitie and veracion of mynde.

The croked can not be made straight, and the lackes can not be nombred. I cõmoned with myne owne hert, sayinge: lo, I am come to a great estate, and haue gotten more wysdome, then all they that haue bene before me in Ierusalem. Yea my hert had great experience of wysdome and knowledge, for ther vnto I applyed my mynde, that I might know what were wysdome & vnderstandinge, what were errour and folysshenes. And I perceyued that this also was but a veracion of mynde: for where moche wysdome is, there is also great trauayle and displeasaunce: & the more knowledge a man hath, the more is his care.

¶ Aboundaunce of riches, of pleasure, and of buildinges, are vayne thinges.

CAPI. II.

THen sayd I thus in my hert: Nowe go to, I will take myne ease & haue good dayes. But lo, that was vanitie also: in so moche that I sayde vnto laughter: thou art mad, and to myrth: what helpest thou?

So I thought in my hert, to withdraw my flesh frome wyne, to applye my mynde vnto wysdome, and to comprehende folysshnes vntyll the tyme ꝑ (among al the thinges which are vnder ꝑ sunne) I might se what were best for men to do, so lõge as they lyue vnder heauen. I made gorgious fayre workes. I buylded me houses, & planted vyneyardes. I made me orchardes and gardens of pleasure, and planted trees in them of all maner frutes. I made poles of water, to water the grene and frutefull trees withall. I bought seruauntes and maydens, and had a great housholde. As for catell and shepe, I had more substaũce of them, then all they that were before me in Ierusalem. I gathered siluer and golde together, euen a treasure of kynges and landes.

I prouyded me singers and women which coulde playe of instrumentes, to make men myrth & pastyme. I gat me drinkinge cuppes also and glasses. (Shortly) I was greater & in more worshyp, then all my predecessours in Ierusalem. For wysdome remayned with me and loke what so euer myne eyes desired, I let them haue it: and wherin so euer my hert delyted or had any pleasure, I withholde it not frome it. Thus my hert reioyced in all ꝑ I dyd, and this I toke for the portion of all my trauayle. But when I consydred all the workes that my handes had wrought, and all the labours that I had taken therin: lo, all was but vanitie and veracion of mynde, and nothing of any value vnder the Sunne. Then turned I me to consyder wysdome, errours & folysshnesse (for what is he amonge men, that might be compared to me the kynge in suche workes?) and I saw that wysdome excelleth folysshnesse, as farre as lyght doth darckenes. For a wyse man beareth his eyes about in his head, but the fole goeth in the darcknesse. I perceyued also that they both had one ende.

Then thought I in my mynde: Yf it happen vnto ꝑ fole as it doth vnto me, what neadeth me then to labour any more for wysdome? so I cõfessed within my hert, that this also was but vanitie. For the wyse are euer as lytle in remembraunce as the folysh, and al the dayes for to come shalbe forgotten, yea the wyse mã dyeth as well as the fole. Thus began I to be weary of my lyfe, in so moche that I could away wt nothing that is done vnder the Sun for al was but vanite & veracõ of mynde. Yea I was wery of all my labour, which I had taken vnder the sunne, because I shuld be fayne to leaue thẽ vnto an other mã, ꝑ cõmeth after me, for who knoweth, whether he shall be a wyse mã or a fole? & yet shal he be lorde of al my labours, which I wt such wysdom haue taken vnder ꝑ Sũne. Is not this a vayne thing?

So I turned me to refrayne my mynde frõ all suche trauayle, as I toke vnder the sunne

D for so moche as a man shulde werye him selfe with wysdome, with understandinge and oporturnitie, and yet be fayne to leaue his labours unto an other, that neuer swete for the. This is also a vayne thinge and a great myserye.

For what getteth a man of all the laboure and trauayle of his mynde, that he taketh under the Sunne, but heuynes, sorowe and disquyetnes al the dayes of his lyfe? In so moch that his herte can not rest in the nyght. Is not this also a vayne thinge? Is it not better then for a man to eate and drinke, and his soule to be mery in his laboure? Yea I sawe that this also was a gyfte of God: For who may eate drinke, or bringe any thinge to passe without him? And why? he gyueth unto man, what it pleaseth him: whether it be wysdome, understandinge, or gladnesse. But unto the synner he gyueth wearynes and sorowe, that he maye gather and heape togither the thinge, y aftewarde shalbe gyuen unto him whome it pleaseth God. This is now a vayne thinge, yea a very disquietnesse & vexacion of mynde.

¶ All thynges come in theyr tyme and passe away in theyr tyme.

CAP. III.

A Euery thinge hath a tyme, yea all that is under the heauen, hathe his conuenient season.

There is a tyme to be borne, and a tyme to dye.

There is a tyme to plante, and a tyme to plucke up the thinge, that is planted

A tyme to slay, and a tyme to make hole.

A tyme to breake downe, and a tyme to buylde up.

A tyme to wepe, and a tyme to laughe

A tyme to mourne, and a tyme to daunse.

A tyme to cast awaye stones, and a tyme to gather stones togither.

A tyme to enbrace, and a tyme to refrayne frome enbracynge.

A tyme to wynne, and a tyme to lese.

A tyme to spare, and a tyme to spende.

B A tyme to cut in peces, and a tyme to sowe togither

A tyme to kepe sylence, and a tyme to speake.

A tyme to loue, and a tyme to hate.

A tyme of warre, and a tyme of peax.

What hath a mā els (that doth any thing) but werynesse and laboure? For as touching the trauayle & carefulnesse which God hathe gyuen unto men, I se y he hath gyuen it them to be exercysed in it. All this hath he ordened maruelous goodly, to euery thinge his due tyme. He hath planted ignoraunce also in the hertes of men, that they shuld not fynde out the grounde of his workes, which he doth frō the begynnynge to the ende. So I perceyued,
C that in these thinges there is nothinge better for a man, then to be mery and to do well so longe as he lyueth. For all that a man eateth and drinketh, yea what so euer a man enioyeth of all his laboure, that same is a gyfte of God. I cōsidered also that what so euer God doth, it continueth for euer, and that nothing can be put unto it nor taken frome it: and y God doth it to the intente, that men shoulde feare him. The thinge that hath bene, is now and the thinge that is for to come, hath bene afore tyme, for God restoreth agayne y thing that was past. Moreouer, I sawe under the Sunne ungodlynesse in the stede of iudgemēt and iniquite in steade of rightousnesse. Then thought I in my mynde: God shal separate y rightous frome the ungodly, and then shalbe the tyme and iudgement of all councels and workes. I commened with myne owne herte also concernynge the chyldren of men: howe God hath chosen them, and yet letteth them apeare: as though they were beastes: for it D happeneth unto men as it doth unto beastes, and as the one dyeth, so dyeth the other: yea they haue both one maner of breth, so that (in this) a man hath no preeminēce aboue a beast but all are subdued unto vanitie. They go all unto one place, for as they be all of dust, so shall they all turne unto dust agayne. Who knoweth the spirite of man y goeth upwarde and the breth of the beaste that goeth downe into the earth? Wherfore I perceyue, y there is nothing better for a man, then to be ioyful in his laboure, for that is his porcion. But who wil bringe him to se the thinge that shal come after him?

¶ The myseryes of the innocent. The superfluous laboures of men. The chyld y is poore and wyse, &c.

CAPI. IIII.

SO I turned me, and consydred all the violent wronge that is done under y sunne and beholde the teares of suche as were oppressed, and there was no man to comforte them or that wolde delyuer and defende them from the violence of their oppressours. Wherfore I iudged those that are deed, to be more happy then suche as be a lyue: yea him that is yet unborne to be better at ease then they both, because he seyth not the myserable workes that are done under the sunne.

Agayne, I sawe that all trauayle and diligence of labour was hated of euery mā. This B is also a vayne thinge, and a vexacion of mynde.

The fole foldeth his handes togither, and eateth up his owne flesh. One handful (saith he) is better with rest, then both the handes full with laboure and trauayle.

Moreouer, I tourned me, and beholde yet an other vanitie under the Sunne.

There is one man, no mo but him selfe alone, hauynge nether chylde nor brother: yet is there no ende of his carefull trauayle, his eyes canne not be satisfied with ryches, (yet doeth he not remembre him selfe, and saye:) For whome do I take suche trauayle? or C whose pleasure do I thus consume away my lyfe? This is also a vayne and myserable thinge. Therfore two are better then one, for they maye well enioye the profyt of their laboure. Yf one of theym fall, his companyon helpeth him up agayne. But wo is him that is alone, for yf he fall, he hathe not an other to helpe him up. Agayn, when two slepe togither they are warm: but how can a body be warm alone? One may be ouercome, but two maye make resistence: a thre fold cable is not lightly broken. A poore chylde being wyse, is better then an olde king that doteth, and can not beware in tyme to come. Some one cōmeth out
D of prison, & is made a king: and an other which is borne in the kingdome, cōmeth unto pouertie. And I perceyued that all men lyuing under the sunne, go with the seconde chyld, that cōmeth up in the stede of the other.

As for the people that haue ben before him, and that come after him, they are innumerable: yet is not their ioye the greater thorowe him. This is also a vayne thynge, and a vexacion of mynde. When thou commest in to the house of God, kepe thy fote, & drawe nye, that thou mayste heare that is better then the offrynges of fooles. For they know not what euyll they do.

¶ An monicion to beware of rasshe communicacion. We ought not to maruell at the oppression of the poore. The couetous is not satisfyed w his ryches.

CAPI. V.

BE not hasty with thy mouth, and let not thyne herte speake any thynge rashly before God. For God is in heuen, and thou upon erth, therfore let thy wordes be few. For where moche carefulnesse is, there are manye dreames: and where many wordes are, there men may heare fooles. *Yf thou make a vowe unto God, be not slacke to performe it. As for folysshe vowes, he hath no pleasure in them. Yf thou promyse any thynge, paye it: for better it is that thou make no vowe, then y thou shouldest promyse and not paye. Use not thy mouthe to cause thy fleshe for to synne, that thou saye not before the aungell: my folysshnesse is in the faute. For then God wil be angrye at thy voyce, and destroye all the workes
B of thyne handes. And why? where as are manye dreames and many wordes, there are also dyuers vanities: but loke y thou feare God. Yf thou seest the poore to be oppressed, & wrongously dealte withall, so that equitie and the right of the law is wrasted in the lande: maruel not then at suche iudgement, for one great man kepeth touche with an other, & the mightye helpe them selues togither. The hole land also with the feldes, and all that is therin, is in subiection and bondage unto the kynge. He that loueth money, wil neuer be satisfied with money: and who so delyteth in ryches, shall haue no profyte therof. Is not this also a vayne thyng? Where as moche ryches is, there are many also that spende them awaye. And what pleasure more hath he y possesseth them, saue that he maye loke upon them with his
C eyes? A labouring man slepeth swetely, whether it be lytle or moche that he eateth: but the aboundaunce of the ryche wyll not suffre him to slepe.

Yet is there a sore plage, which I haue sene under the sunne (namely) rychesse kepte to the hurt of him that hath them in possession. For ofte tymes they perisshe with his great misery and trouble: and if he haue a chyld, it getteth nothinge. *Lyke as he came naked out of his mothers wombe, so goeth he thither agayne, & carieth nothing away w him of all his laboure. This is a miserable plage, that he shall go awaye euen as he came. What helpeth it him then, that he hath laboured in the wynde? All
D the dayes of his lyfe also muste he eate in the darcke, with great carefulnesse, sicknesse and sorowe. Therfore me thynke it a better and a fayrer thynge, a man to eate and drinke, and to be refresshed of all his laboure, that he taketh under the sunne all the dayes of his lyfe, whiche God gyueth him, for this is his porcion. For unto whome so euer God gyueth richesse, goodes and power, he gyueth it hym to enioye it, to take it for his porcion, and to be refresshed of his laboure: this is now the gyfte of God. For he thinketh not moche how long he shall lyue, for so moche as God filleth his herte with gladnesse.

¶ The mysery of the ryche and couetous. The difference of a foole and a wyse man.

CAPI. VI.

A THere is yet a plage under the sunne, and it is a generall thyng among men: whē God gyueth a man richesse, goodes and honour, so that he wanteth nothyng of al that his herte can desire: and yet God giueth him not leue to enioye the same, but an other man spendeth them. This is a vayne thynge, and a miserable plage. Yf a man beget an hundred
B chyldren, & lyue many yeres, so that his dayes are many in nombre, and yet can not enioye his good, neither be buried: as for him, I say, that an untymely byrthe is better then he. For he commeth to nought, and goeth his waye in to darcknesse, & his name is forgotten. Moreouer
C he seeth not the sunne, and knoweth of no rest neither here ne there. Yea though he liued two thousāde yeres, yet hath he no good life. Come not al to one place? All the labour that a man taketh, is for him selfe, & yet his desire is neuer
D filled after his mynde. For what hath the wise more then the fole? What helpeth it the poore that he knoweth to walke before the lyuing? The sight of the eyes is better, then that the soule shold so depart awaye. How be it this is also a vayne thing, & a disquietnesse of mynde. What is more excellent then man? yet can he not in the lawe get the victorye of him that is mightyer then he. A vaine thing is it to cast out many wordes, but what hath a man els?

¶ That whiche passeth oure strengthes and wyttes ought we not to seke after.

CAPI. VII.

A FOr who knoweth what is good for man lyuynge, in the dayes of his vayne lyfe, whiche is but a shadowe? Or who wil tell a man a man what shall happen after him vnder the sunne? A good name is more worth then a precious ointment, and the day of deth is better then the daye of byrth. It is better to go in to an house of mournynge, then in to a banketynge house. For there is the ende of all men, and he that is lyuynge taketh it to hert. It is better to be sorye then to laugh, for when the countenaunce is heuy, the hert is ioyful. The hert of the wyse is in the mourning house, but the hert of the folysh is in the house of myrth. It is better to gyue eare to the chastening of a wyse man, then to heare the song of fooles. For the laughynge of fooles is lyke the crackynge of thornes vnder a pot. And that is but a vayne thyng. Who so doeth wronge, maketh a wyse man to goo oute of his wyt, and destroyeth a gentle hert. The ende of a thyng is better the the begynnynge. The patient of spirite is better then the hye mynded. Be not hastely angry in thy mynde: for wrath resteth in the bosome of a foole. Say not thou: what is the cause that the dayes of yͤ old tyme were better then they be now? for that were no wise question. Wysdome is better then ryches, yea moche more worthy then the eye sight. For wysdome defendeth as well as money, and the excellent knowlege of wysdome giueth life vnto him that hath it in possession. Consider yͤ worke of God how that no man can make the thynge streyght, which he maketh crooked. Vse wel the tyme of prosperite, and remembre the tyme of misfortune: for God maketh the one by the other, so that a man can fynde nothyng els.

These two thinges also haue I cõsidered in the time of vanitie: that yͤ iust man perisheth for his righteousnesse sake, and the vngodly prospereth in his wickednesse. Therfore be thou neither to ryghtous ne ouer wyse, that thou perysshe not: be neither to vngeghtous also, ne to foolyshe, lest thou dye before thy tyme. It is good for the to take holde of this, and not to let that go from thy hande. For he that feareth God, shall escape them all.

Wysdome giueth more courage vnto the wyse of one, then mightye men of the citye: for there is not one iust vpon erth that doth good, and synneth not. Take not hede vnto euery word that is spoken, lest thou heare thy seruaunte curse the: for thyne owne herte knoweth that thou thy self also hast oft times spoken euil by other men. All these thinges haue I proued by cause of wisdom: for I thought to be wise, but she was farther fro me then she was before, yea and to depe yͤ I might not reache vnto her. I applied my mynde also vnto knowlege, and to vnderstande science, wysdome and vnderstandynge: to knowe the folysshnesse of the vngodly, and the errours of doteynge fooles. And I fynde that a woman is bytterer then death: for she is a deep angle, her hert is a net, and her handes are chaynes. Who so pleaseth God, shall escape from her: but the synner wyll be taken with her.

Beholde, sayth the preacher, this haue I diligently searched out and proued, that I might come by knowlege: which as yet I serche, & finde it not. Among a thousand men I haue founde one, but not one woman amonge all. Lo, this onely haue I founde, that God made man right, but they seke out many subtelties, where as no man hath wysdome and vnderstanding to gyue an answere therunto.

¶ The kinges commaundement ought to be obeyed. Gladnes is one of the chefe thinges vnder the sun.

CAPI. VIII.

Wysdome maketh a mannes face to shyne, but malyce putteth out of fauour. Kepe the kynges commaundement (I warne the) and the othe yͤ thou hast made vnto God. Be not hastye to go out of his sight, & se thou continue in no euill thinge: for what so euer it pleaseth him, that doth he. Lyke as when a kynge speaketh a charge, his commaundement is mightye: Euen so who may saye vnto hym: what doest thou? Who so kepeth the commaundement, shall fele no harme: but a wyse mannes herte discerneth tyme and maner. For euerye thynge hath opportunitie and iudgement, and this is the thynge that maketh men full of carefulnesse and sorowe. And why? a man knoweth not what is for to come, for who wyll tell hym? Neyther is there anye man that hathe power ouer the spirite, to kepe styll the spirite, ne to haue anye power in the tyme of deathe: It is not he also that can make an ende of the batayle, neither may vngodlynesse deliuer him that mightely withall.

All these thynges haue I considered, and applied my mynde vnto euery worke that is vnder the sunne: how one man hathe lordshyp vpon an other to his owne harme. For I haue oft sene the vngodly brought to their graues, & fallen downe from the hye and glorious place: in so moch yͤ they were forgotten in the cite, where they were dayly in so hye and great reputation. This is also a vayne thing. Because now that euil workes are not hastely punished, the hert of man gyueth him self ouer vnto wickednes. But thoughe an euyll person offende an hundred tymes, and haue a longe lyfe: yet am I sure that it shall go well with them that feare God, bycause they haue him before their eyes. Agayne, as for the vngodly, it shall not be well with him, neither shal he prolonge his dayes: but euen as a shadow, so shall he be that feareth not God.

Yet is there a vanitie vpon earthe: There be iuste men, vnto whome it happeneth, as thoughe they hadde the workes of the vngodly: Agayne, there be vngodly, with whome it goeth as thoughe they had the workes of the ryghteous. This me thyncke also a vayne thynge. Therfore I commende gladnesse, bycause a man hathe no better thynge vnder the sunne, then to eate and dyncke, and to be merye: for that shall he haue of his laboure all the dayes of his lyfe, whiche God gyueth him vnder the sunne. When I applyed my mynde to learne wysdome, and to knowe the trauayle that is in the worlde (and that of suche a facion, that I suffred not myne eyes to slepe neither daye ne nyght) I vnderstode of all the workes of God, that it is not possible for a mã to attayne vnto the workes that are done vnder the sunne: & though he bestow his labour to seke them out, yet can he not reach vnto the: yea thoughe a wyse man wolde vndertake to know them, yet might he not fynd them.

¶ A man woteth not, by the ryghtousenesse of his owne workes, whether he be worthy of loue or hate. A man ought to lyue merely with his wife. A prayse of wysdome.

CAPI. IX.

For all these thynges purposed I in my mynde to seke out. The ryghtous & wyse, yea and their workes also, are in the hand of God: and there is no man that knoweth wether yͤ loue or hate of the thing that he hath before him. It happeneth vnto one as vnto an other: He goeth with the ryghtous as with yͤ vngodly: with the good and clene, as with the vncleane: with him that offereth, as with him that offereth not: lyke as it goeth with yͤ vertuous, so goeth it also with the synner: As it happeneth vnto the perfayred: so happeneth it also vnto him that is afrayde to be forsworne. Amonge all thynges that come to passe vnder the sunne, this is a misorye, that it happeneth vnto all alyke. This is the cause also that the hertes of men are ful of wickednesse, and mad foolyshnesse is in their hertes as long as they lyue, vncyll they dye.

And why? As longe as a man lyueth, he is carelesse: for a quycke dog (saye they) is better then a ded lyon: for they that be lyuing, know they shall dye: but they that be ded, knowe nothynge, neither: deserue they any more. For their memorye all is forgotten, so that they be neither loued, hated, ne enuyed: neither haue they any more parte in the worlde, in all that is done vnder the sunne. Go thou thy way yͤ eate thy breed with ioye, and drynke thy wine with gladnes, for thy workes please God. Let thy garmentes be alwaye whyte, and let thy hed want none ointment. Lyue thy self to liue ioyfully with thy wyfe whom thou louest, all the dayes of thy lyfe, which is but vayne, that God hath gyuen the vnder the sunne all the dayes of thy vanitie: for that is thy portion in this life, of all thy labour and trauayle that thou takest vnder yͤ sunne. What so euer thou takest in hande to do, that do with all thy power: for among the ded where thou goest vnto, there is neither worke, counsell, knowlege, ne wysdome.

So I tourned me vnto other thynges vnder the sunne, and I sawe that in runnynge, is helpeth not to be swyft: in battell, it helpeth not to be stronge: to fedynge it helpeth not to be wyse: to ryches, it helpeth not to be subtyle: to be had in fauoure, it helpeth not to be cunning: but that all lyeth in tyme and fortune. For a man knoweth not his tyme, but lyke as the fysshe are taken with the engle, and as the byrdes are catched with the snare: Euen so are men taken in the perylous tyme, when it cometh sodenly vpon them.

This wysdome haue I sene also vnder the sunne, and me thought it a great thyng. There was a litle cite, and a fewe men within it: there came a great king, and besieged it, & layed great bulwarkes agaynste it. And in it there was founde a poore man (but he was wyse) which with his wysdome delyuered the cite: yet was there no body that had any spech vnto iuche a symple man. Then sayde I, wysdome is better then strength. Neuertheles a symple mans wysdome is despysed, and his wordes are not herde. A wyse mans counsell that is folowed in silence, is fayre above yͤ crienge of a capitayne among fooles. For wysdome is better then harnesse: but one synner alone destroyeth moche good.

¶ The difference betwyxt a fole and a wyse man. Fortunate and happye is that realme whych hath a wyse prynce.

CAPI. X.

Deed flyes that corrupt swete ointment and make it to stynke, are some tyme more worth then the wysdome and honour of a foole. A wise mans hert is vpon the right hande, but a fooles hert is vppon yͤ lyft. A dotyng foole thynketh that euery man (and as folysshly as him selfe. Yea a principall spirite be gyuē the to beare rule, be not negligent therin thyne office: for so shal great wickednesse be put downe as it were with a medicine. And other plage is there, whiche I haue sene vnder the sunne: namely the ignorauncie that is cõmenly among princes: in that a foole lyfteth in great dignitie, and the ryche are set belowe benethe: I se seruauntes ryde vpon horses, & princes going vpon their fete as it were seruãtes. But he that diggeth by a pyt, shall fall therin, & whoso breaketh downe the hedge, a serpent shal byte him. Who so remoueth stones, shal haue trauayle therwith: & he that heweth wod, shal be hurt therwith.

When an yron is blont, and the poynt not sharpened, it must be wher agayne, and yͤ with might: Euen so dothe wysdome folowe diligence. A babler of his tonge is no better then a serpent yͤ stingeth without hyssing. The wordes of a wise mans mouthe, are gracious, but the lyppes of a foole will destroye him selfe. The begynnyng of his talking is foolyshnesse, & the last word of his mouth is great madnesse. A foole is so full of wordes, that a man can not tel what ende he wil make: who wil the warne him to make a conclusion? The labour of the foolish is greuous vnto them, while they know not how to go in to the cite.

Wo be vnto the (o thou realme and lande) whose kyng is but a chylde, and whose princes are early at their banketes. But well is the (o thou realme and lande) whose kynge is come of nobles, and whose princes eate in due season, for strength and not for lust. Therfore slouthfulnesse the walles shal downe, and throwe yͤle handes it rayneth in at the house.

Meate

Meate maketh men to laugh, & wyne maketh them merye: but vnto money are all thynges obedient. Wisse the kinge no euil in thy thought and speake no hurte of the ryche in thy priuye chambre: for a byrde of the ayre shall betraye thy voyce, and with her fethers shall she bewraye thy wordes.

¶ Wycheffe ought to be destrybuted vnto the nedy.

CAPI. XI.

A SEnde thy vytayles ouer the waters, and so shalte thou fynde them after many yeres. Dyuyde it awaye among seuen or eight, for thou knowest not what misery shall come vpon earthe. When the cloudes are full, they poure out rayne vpon the earthe. And when the tree falleth (whether it be towarde the southe or northe) in what place so euer it fall, there it lyeth. He that regardeth the wynde, shall not sowe: and he that hath respect vnto the cloudes shal not reape. Now lyke as thou knowest not the waye of the wynde, ne how the bones are fylled in a mothers wombe: Euen so thou knowest not the workes of God, whiche is the workemaister of all.

B Cease not thou therfore with thy handes to sowe thy seed, whether it be in the morning or in the euenyng: for thou knowest not whether this or that shall prospere, and yf they bothe take, it is the better. The lyght is swete, and a pleasaunt thynge is it for the eyes to loke vpon the sunne. Yf a man lyue many yeres, & be glad in them all, let him remembre the dates of darcknesse, which shall be many: and when they come, all thinges shal be but vanitie. Reioyce then (o thou yonge man) in thy youthe, and let thyne hert be merye in thy yong dayes: folow the wayes of thyne owne hert, and the lust of thyne eyes: but be thou sure that God shall bringe the in to iudgement for all these thynges.

¶ From our youth ought we to consider and regarde the godnesse of God.

CAPI. XII.

A PUt awaye displeasure out of thyne herte, and remoue euil from thy body: for childhode and youthe is but vanitie. Remember thy maker in thy youthe, or euer the dayes of aduersitie come, and or the yeres drawe nye when thou shalte saye: I haue no pleasure in them before the sunne, the lighte, the moone & sterres be darckned, and or the cloudes tourne agayn after the rayne: when the keepers of the house shall tremble, and when the stronge men shal bow them selues whe the millers stande B still, because they be so few and when the light of the wyndowes shall wexe dymme: when the dores in the stretes shal be shut, and when the voyce of the myller shall be layde downe: when men shal rise vp at the voyce of ỹ byrde, and when al the doughters of musyke shall be brought low: when men shal feare in hyeplaces, and be afrayde in the stretes: when the almonde tree shall be despised, the grashopper bosne out: and when great power shal breke in: when man goeth to his longe home, & the mourners go about the stretes. Or euer the siluer lace be taken awaye, & or the golden bande C be broken: or the pot be broken at the well, & the whele vpon the cesterne: or dust be turned agayne vnto the erth from whence it came, & or the spirite returne vnto God, whiche gaue it. All is but vanitie (sayth the Preacher) all is but playne vanitie.

The same Preacher was not wyse alone, but taught the people knowlege also: he gaue good hede, sought out ỹ grounde, and set forth many parables. His diligence was to fynd out D acceptable wordes, eyght scripture, & the wordes of truthe. For the wordes of the wyse are lyke pryckes & nayles that go thorowe, wherwith men are kept togither: for they are gyuē of one shepherde onely. Therfore beware (my sonne) that aboue these thou make the not many and innumerable bokes, nor take diuers wrytinges in hand, to werye thy body withall.

Let vs heare the conclusion of all thinges: feare God, and kepe his commaundementes, For that toucheth all men: for God shal iudge all workes and secrete thynges, whether they be good or euil.

THE BALLET OF BALLETES OF SALOMON: CALLED IN LATYNE, Canticum Canticorum, ¶ Mystically deuice of the spirituall and godly loue betwene Chryste the spouse, and the churche or congregacion his spousesse. Salomon made this Balade or longe by him selfe and his wyfe the doughter of Pharao, vnder the shadowe of him selfe figurynge Chryst, and vnder the person of his wyfe the church.

CAPI. I.

☞ The voyce of the churche.

A  That thy mouth wold gyue me a kysse, for thy brestes are more pleasaūt then wyne, and that bycause of the good and pleasaunt sauoure. Thy name is a swete smellyng oynemēt, therfore do the maydens loue the: yea that same moueth me also to runne after the.

☞ The spousesse to her companyons.

The kynge hath brought me in to his priuy chambre. We wyll be glad and reioyce in the, we thinke more of thy brestes then of wyne: well is them that loue the.

☞ The voyce of the church in persecucion.

B I am blacke (o ye doughters of Jerusalem) lyke as the tentes of the Cedarenes, and as the hangynges of Salomon: but yet am fayre and welfauoured withal. Maruell not at me that I am so blacke, and why? the sun hath shyned vpon me.

☞ The voyce of the Synagoge.

For when my mothers childrē had euil wyl at me, they made me ỹ keper of the vineyarde. Thus was I fayne to kepe a vineyard, which was not myne owne.

☞ The voyce of the churche to Chryste.

Tel me (o thou whō my soule loueth) where thou feedst, where thou restest at the none day: lest I go wrong, and come vnto the flockes of thy companions.

☞ Chryst to the churche.

C Yf thou knowe not thy selfe (o thou fayrest among women) then go thy waye forth after the fotesteppes of the shepe, as thoughe thou woldest fede the gotes beyde the shepeherdes tētes. There wil I tary for ỹ, my loue, wt myne host and with my charettes, whiche shal be no fewer then Pharaos. Then shall thy chekes & thy necke be made fayre, and hanged with spāges and goodly iewels: a neckbande of golde wyl we make the, with siluer borons.

☞ The voyce of the churche.

When the kyng sytteth at the table, he shal smel my Nardus: for a bundel of Myrre (o my D beloued) lyeth betwixt my brestes. A cluster of grapes of Cypers, or of the vineyardes of Engaddi art thou vnto me, o my beloued.

☞ Chryst to the churche.

O how fayre arte thou, my loue, how fayre art thou? thou hast doues eyes.

☞ The churche to Chryst.

O how fayre arte thou, my beloued, howe welfauoured art thou? Our bed is decke with floures, the sylinges of our houses are of Cedre tree, and our balkes of Cypresse.

CAPI. II.

☞ The voyce of Chryste.

A I Am the floure of the felde, and lyly of ỹ valeys: as the rose amonge the thornes, so is my loue among the doughters.

☞ The voyce of the churche.

Lyke as the apple tree amonge the trees of the wod, so is my beloued among the sonnes. My delite is to syt vnder his shadowe, for his fruite is swete vnto my throte. He bringeth me in to his wyne seller, and loueth me specially well. Refreth me with grapes, comforte me wt apples, for I am sycke of loue. His lefte hande lyeth vnder my heed, and his ryght hand embraceth me.

☞ The voyce of Chryste.

I charge you (o ye doughters of Jerusalem) B by the Roes and hyndes of the felde, that ye wake not vp my loue, nor touche her, tyl she be content her selfe.

☞ The voyce of the churche.

Me thinke I heare the voyce of my beloued: lo, there commeth he hopping vpon the mountaynes, and leaping ouer the litle hylles. My C beloued is lyke a roo or a yong hart. Beholde he standeth behynde oure wall, he loketh in at the wyndowe, and pepeth thorowe the greate. My beloued answered and sayd vnto me.

☞ The voyce of Chryste.

O stand vp my loue, my doue, my beautiful, and come: for lo the wynter is now past, and D the rayne is awaye and gone. The floures are come vp in the felde, the twistling time is come, the voyce of the turtle doue is herd in our lāde. the fig tree bryngeth forth her frygges, the vynes beare blossoms, and haue a good smell. O stande vp my loue, my beautifull, and come (o my doue out of the caues of the rockes, out of the holes of the wall: O let me se thy countenaunce, and heare thy voyce: for swete is thy voyce, and fayre is thy face.

☞ The voyce agaynste the heretykes.

Get vs the foxes, yea the lytle foxes ỹ hurt the vines, for our vines beare blossomes.

☞ The voyce of the churche.

My loue is myne, & I am his, which fedeth among the lilyes vntyl the daye breke, and tyl the shadowes be gone. Come agayne prayly (o my beloued) lyke as a Roo or a yong hart, vnto the mountaynes.

CAPI.

CAPI. III.

☞ The voyce of the churche whiche is chosen out of the Heathen.

A BY nyght in my bed I sought him whome my soule loueth: yea diligently sought I him, but I founde him not. I will get vp (thought I) and go about the city, vpon the market, and in all the streetes will I seke hym whom my soule loueth: but when I sought him, I found hym not. The watchmen that go about the city, founde me.

B Saw ye not him whome my soule loueth? So when I was a litle past them, I found him whome my soule loueth. I haue gotten holde vpon him, & will not let him go, vntil I bringe him in to my mothers house, and in to her chābre that bare me.

☞ The voyce of Christ.

I charge you, o ye doughters of Jerusalem, by the Roes and Hyndes of the felde, that ye wake not vp my loue, ne touche her, tyl she be content her selfe.

☞ The voyce of the Synagog, marueylynge in it selfe at the churche of Christe.

C Who is this that commeth out of the wildernesse like pilers of smoke, as it were a smell of Myrre, frankencense, and all maner spices of the Apotecary?

☞ The voyce of the churche.

Beholde, aboute Salomons bedstede there stand .lx. valeaunt me of the mighty in Israel. They holde swordes euery one, and are expert in warre. Euery mā hath his sworde vpon his thygh, because of feare in the night. King Salomon hathe made him a litle bedstede of the wod of Libanus, the pylers are of syluer, the couerynge of golde, the seate of purple, the ground pleasauntly paued for the doughters of Jerusalem.

☞ The churche speakynge of Christ.

Go forth, o ye doughters of Sion, & beholde king Salomon in the crowne wherwith his mother crowned hym in the daye of his marriage, and in the daye of the gladnesse of his hert.

CAPI. IIII.

☞ The voyce of Christe.

A HOw fayre art thou, my loue, how fayre art thou? thou hast dues eyes, beside ꝑ which lyeth hyd within. Thy heery lockes are lyke a flocke of shepe that be clypped, whiche go forth vp from the washynge place: where euery one beare two twynnes, and not one vnfruitfull amonge them. Thy lyppes are lyke a rose coloured rybande, thy wordes are louely: thy chekes are like a pece of a pomegranet, beside that whiche lyeth hyd within. Thy B necke is like the tower of Dauid builded with bulwarkes, wherupon there hang a thousande shyldes, yea all the weapons of the gyauntes. Thy two brestes are lyke two twyns of yong Roes which fede among the lilyes.

☞ The spouse speaketh to hym selfe.

O that I myght goo to the mountayne of Myrre, and to the hyll of frankencense: tyll the daye breake, and tyll the shadowes be put awaye.

☞ The voyce of Christe speakynge to the church.

Thou art al fayre, o my loue, and no spot is C there in thee. Come to me from Libanus, o my spouse, come to me from Libanus: come fone the next waye from the top of Amana, frō the top of Sanir and Hermō, from the lyons dennes, & from the mountaynes of the leopardes. Thou hast wounded my hert, o my sister, my spouse, thou hast wounded my hert with one of thyne eyes, and with one cheyne of thy necke. O how fayre and louely are thy brestes, my sister, my spouse? Thy brestes are more pleasaūt then wyne, and the smell of thyne ointmētes passeth all spices. Thy lippes, o my spouse, drop as the hony combe, yea mylke and hony is vnder thy tonge, and the smell of thy garmentes is lyke the smell of frankencense. Thou art a D wel kepte garden, o my sister, my spouse, thou art a well kepte waterspryngе, a sealed well. The frutes that sproute in the, are lyke a very Paradise of pomegranettes, with swete frutes: as Cypresse, Nardus, Saffron, Calmus, and all the trees of Libanus: Myrre, Aloes, & all the best spices. Thou art a wel of gardens, a well of lyuynge waters, whiche ren downe from Libanus.

☞ Christ calleth the Heythen.

Up thou north wynde, come ꝑ south wynde, & blowe vpon my garden, that the smell therof may be caried on euery syde: yea that my beloued may come in to my garden, and eate of the frutes and apples that growe therin.

CAPI. V.

☞ Christe speaketh to the churche.

COme in to my garden, o my sister, my A spouse: I haue gathered my Myrre with my spyce. I will eate my hony, and my hony combe, I will drynke my wyne and my mylke.

☞ Christe speaketh to the Apostles.

Eate, o ye frendes, drynke and be mery, o ye beloued.

☞ The voyce of the churche.

As I was a slepe and my herte wakynge, I herde the voyce of my beloued, whenge knocked.

☞ Christe to the churche.

Open to me (sayd he) o my sister, my loue, my doue, my deerlynge, for my hed is full of dewe, and the lockes of my heere are ful of the night droppes.

☞ The voyce of the spouselesse.

I haue put of my cote, how can I doo it on agayne?

agayne? I haue washed my fete, how shall I fyle them agayne?

B ☞ The voyce of the churche speakynge of Christe.

But when my loue put in his hande at the hole, my hert was moued towarde him: so ꝑ I stode vp to open vnto my beloued. My handes dropped with Myrre, and the Myrre ran downe my syngers vpon the locke. Neuertheles, when I had opened vnto my beloued, he was departed and gone his waye.

Now like as a foze tyme when he spake, my hert could not longer refrayne: Euen so now I sought hym, but I coulde not fynde him: I cryed vpon him, neuertheles he gaue me no answere.

☞ The churche complaynyth of her persecutours.

So the watche men that went aboute the city found me, smote me, and wounded me, yea they that kepte the walles, toke away my garment fro me.

☞ The spouselesse speaketh to her companions.

I charge you therfore, o ye doughters of Je C rusalem, yf ye find my beloued, that ye tell him how that I am sicke for loue.

☞ The voyce of the Synagoge.

Who is thy loue aboue other louers, o thou fayr among women? Or what can thy loue do more then other louers, that thou charyest vs so straytly?

☞ The churche, answeryng of Christe.

As for my loue, he is whyte and red coloured, a syngular person amonge many thousandes: his hed is the most fine golde, the lockes of his heere are bushed, blowne as the ravē: his eyes are as ꝑ eyes of doues vp ꝑ riuer brokes, washen with mylke, and remaynyng in a plenteous place: his chekes are like a garden bed, where the apotecaryes plante all maner of swete spyces: his lyppes drop D as the flowers of that most principall Myrre, his handes are full of golde rynges & precious stones. His body is as the pure yuory, set ouerwith Saphirs: His legges are as the pylers of marble, set vpon sockettes of gold. His face is as Libanus, and as the beaute of the Cedre trees: His throte is swete, yea he is all together louely. Such one is my loue, o ye doughters of Jerusalem, such one is my loue.

☞ The voyce of the Synagoge speakynge to the churche.

Whyther is thy loue gone then (o thou fayrest among women)? whyther is thy loue departed, that we may seke hym with the.

CAPI. VI.

☞ The voyce of the churche.

A MY loue is gone downe in to his garden, vnto the swete sauerynge beddes, that he maye refreshe him selfe in the gardens and gather flowres. My loue is myne and I am his, whiche feedeth amonge the lylyes.

☞ Christe to the churche.

Thou art pleasaunt (o my loue) euē as Ie- B rusalē it selfe, thou art fayre as Jerusalē, glorious as an army of men with their banners. (Turne away thine eyes fro me, for they make me to proude) Thy heery lockes are lyke a flok of gotes vpon the mount of Galaad. Thy teth are like a flocke of shepe that be clipped, which go out of ꝑ washing place: where euerye one beareth two twynnes, and not one vnfruitful amonge them. Thy chekes are lyke a pece of a pomegranet, besides that which lyeth hid within. There are thre score quenes, foure score concubynes, and yong womē without nombre. But C one is my doue, my derlinge. She is the onely beloued of her mother, and dere vnto her that bare her. When the doughters sawe her, they sayd she was blessed: yea the quenes and concubynes prayse her.

☞ The voyce of the Synagoge

What is she this that peepeth out as ꝑ morninge? fayre as the moone, excellent as the sunne, glorious as an armye men with theyr banners.

☞ Christe to the Synagoge.

I went do wne in to the nutte garden, to se what grew by the brokes, to loke yf the vineyard flourished, and if the pomegranettes were shot forth.

☞ The voyce of the Synagoge.

Then the charettes of the prynce of my peo D ple, made me sodeynly afrayde.

☞ The voyce of the churche callynge agayne the Synagoge.

Turne agayne, turne agayne, o thou Sulamite: turne agayn, turne agayn, that we may loke vpon the.

CAPI. VII.

☞ Christe to the Synagoge

WHat pleasure haue ye more in the Sula- A mite, then when she daunseth among the men of warre?

☞ Christe to the churche.

O how pleasaunt are thy treadinges with thy shoes thou princes doughter? thy thighes are like a fayre iewell, which is wrought by a cunning workmaister: thy nauel is lyke a rounde goblet whiche is neuer without drynke: Thy wombe is lyke an hepe of whete, set about with lilyes: thy two brestes are lyke two ewynnes of yonge Roes: Thy necke is as it were a to- B wer of yuory: thyne eyes are lyke the water poles in Hesebon, beside the port of Bathrabbim: Thy nose is lyke the tower of Libanus, which loketh towarde Damascus: That heed that standeth vpon the, is lyke Carmel: the heere of thy heed is lyke the kynges purple folden vp in plates.

O how fayre & louely art thou, my derling, in pleasures? Thy stature is like a date tree, & C thy brestes lyke the grapes.

☞ The spouse speakynge of the crosse.

I sayde

I sayd: I wyl clym vp in to the date tree, & take hold of his braunches.

☞ The spouse speakynge to the spouselesse.

Thy brestes also shal be as the vine grapes, the smell of thy nostrels lyke the smell of apples, and thy throte lyke the best wyne. This shall be pure and clere for my loue, his lyppes and tethe shall haue their pleasure. There wil I turne me vnto my loue, and he shall tourne him vnto me.

☞ The churche speakynge to Christ.

O come on my loue, let vs go forth in to the felde, and take our lodgynge in the villages. In the mornyng wil we ryse betymes, and go le the vineyarde, yf it be spronge forthe, yf the grapes be growen, and yf the pomegranettes be shot out. There wyl I gyue the my brestes: there shal the Mandragoras gyue their smell beside oure doores: there, o my loue, haue I kepte vnto the all maner frutes, bothe newe and olde.

CAPI. VIII.

☞ The voyce of the Patriarches speakynge of Christe.

O That I might fynde the without & kisse the, whom I loue as my brother whiche suckte my mothers brestes: and yf thou woldest not be offended, if I toke the & brought the in to my mothers house: yf thou myghtest teache me, and that I might giue the drinke of spyced wyne, & of the swete sape of my pomegranettes. His left hand lieth vnder my heed, and his right hand embraceth me.

☞ The voyce of Christe.

I charge you, o ye doughters of Ierusalem, that ye wake not vp my loue, ne touche her, til she be content her selfe.

☞ The Synagog speakyng of the churche.

What is he this that commeth vp frō the wildernesse, and leaneth vpon her loue.

☞ The voyce of the spouse, before the speckled.

I am the same that waked the vp among the apple trees, where thy mother bare the, where thy mother brought the in to the worlde.

☞ The churche speakynge to Christ.

O set me as a seale vpon thyne hert, and as a seale vpon thyne arme: for loue is myghtye as the deth, and gelously as the hell. Her coles are of fyre, and a very flame of the Lorde: for many waters are not able to quenche loue, neither may the stremes drowne it. Yea if a man wolde gyue all the good of his house for loue, he sholde count it nothyng.

☞ Christ speaking of the churche to the Synagog.

When oure loue is tolde, oure ponge sister whose brestes are not yet growen, what shall we do vnto her?

☞ The answere of Christe for the churche.

Yf she be a wall, we shal buyld a syluer house worke therupon: yf she be a tower, we shal fasten her with bordes of Cedre tree.

☞ The churche answereth to the Synagoge.

Yf I be a wall, and my brestes lyke towres, then am I as one that haue founde fauour in his syght.

☞ The Synagog speakynge to the churche

Salomon had a vineyard at Baal Hamon, this vineyarde delyuered he vnto the kepers: that euery one for the frute therof sholde gyue him a thousand peces of syluer.

☞ The voyce of Christe.

But my vineyard, o Salomon, gyueth thee a thousande, and two hundred to the kepers of the frute. Thou that dwellest in the gardens, o let me heare thy voyce, that my companions may harken to the same.

☞ The voyce of the churche, speakynge to Christ.

O get the awaye, my loue, as a Roo or a ponge hart vnto the swete smelynge mountaynes.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE ESAYE.

¶ Esaye prophecyeth that the anger of God shall come vpon Ierusalem because of theyr synnes

CAPI. I.

A The vysyon of Esay the son of Amos, whiche he sawe vpon Iuda and Ierusalem. In the tyme of Ozias, Ioatham, Achaz, & Ezechias kynges of Iuda. Heare, o heuens, harken, o erth, for the Lord speaketh: I haue nouryshed and brought vp chyldren, and they are fallen awaye fro me. An oxe knoweth his Lorde, and an asse his masters stal, but Israel knoweth nothyng, my people
B hath no vnderstanding. Wo be to this synfull people, whiche are expert in blasphemyes, a frowarde generacion, vnnaturall chyldren. They haue forsaken the Lorde, they haue prouoked the holy one of Israel vnto angre, and are gone backewarde. Wherfore shoulde ye be plaged anye more? For ye are euer fallynge awaye. The hole heed is sycke, and the herte is very heuye. From the sole of the fote vnto the heed, there is no hole parte in all youre bodye: but all are woundes, botches, sores and strypes, whiche can neyther be helped, bounde vp, mollified, ne eased with anye oyntment.

Youre lande lyeth waste, youre cityes are
C brente vp, youre ennemyes deuoure youre lande, and ye muste be fayne to stande, and loke vpon it: and it is desolate, as it were with ennemyes in a batell. Moreouer the doughter of Sion is lefte alone lyke a cotage in a vyneyarde, lyke a watchehouse in tyme of warre, lyke a besieged city. And excepte the Lorde of hostes had left vs a fewe aliue: we shold haue ben as Sodoma, and like vnto Gomorra.

Heare the worde of the Lorde ye tyrauntes of Sodoma, and harken vnto the lawe of oure God, thou people of Gomorra. Why offre ye so many sacryfices vnto me? I am stuffed with the brent offerynges of wethers, and with the fatnesse of fed beestes. I haue no pleasure in the bloude of bullockes, lambes and gotes. When ye appeare before
D me, who requyreth these thinges of your handes, that ye sholde walke in my courtes. Offre me no mo oblacyons, for it is but lost laboure. I abhorre youre incense. I maye not awaye with youre Newe moones, youre Sabbothes and solemne dayes. Youre assemblees are also in vayne. I hate youre newe holydayes and fastynges, euen fro my verye herte. They make me werye, I can not abyde them. Though ye holde out your handes, yet tourne I myne eyes frome you. And though ye make manye prayers, yet heare I nothynge at all, * For youre handes are full of bloude.

Washe you, make you cleane, put awaye youre euyll thoughtes out of my syght, E ceasse frome doynge of euyll and vyolence. Lerne to do ryghte, applye youre selues to equitie, delyuer the oppressed, helpe the fatherlesse to his ryghte, lette the wydowes complaynte come before you. Nowe goo to (sayeth the Lorde) we wyll talke togyther. Is it not so? Thoughe youre synnes be as rede as scarlet, shall they not be whyter then snowe? And though they were like purple, shall they not be lyke whyte wolle? is it not so? Yf ye be louynge and obedient, ye shall enioye the beste thynge that groweth in the lande. But yf ye be obstinate and rebellious, ye shal be deuoured with the swerde: for thus the Lorde hathe promysed with his owne mouth.

How happeneth it then that the ryghtous citye F (whiche was full of equitie) is become vnfaythful as an hoore? rightousnes dwelte in it, but nowe murther. Thy syluer is tourned to drosse, and thy wyne myxed with water. Thy princes are traytours and companyons of theues. They loue gyftes all togyther and folowe rewardes. As for the fatherlesse, they helpe him not to his ryght, neyther wyl they let the widowes causes come before the.
Therfore speaketh the Lorde God of hostes, Iere.v.g
the myghty one of Israel: Ah, I muste ease me of myne ennemyes, and auenge me vpon them. And therfore shal I laye my hand vpon the, and burne out the drosse frome the fynest and purest, and put out all the leade, and set thy iudges agayne as they were sometyme, & thy senatours as they were from the begynnynge. Then shalte thou be called the ryghtous city, the faythfull citye. But Syon shall be redemed with equitie, and her captiuitie G with ryghtousnesse. For the transgressoures & vngodly, and suche as are become vnfaythful vnto the Lorde, must all togyther be vtterly destroyed.

And onlesse ye be ashamed of the oketrees wherin ye haue so delyted, and of the gardens y ye haue chosen: ye shal be an oke, whose leaues are fallen away, and as a garden that hath no moysture. And the glory of these thinges shall be tourned in to drye strawe, and he that made them to a sparke. And they shal bothe burne togyther, so that no man shal be hable to quenche them.

¶ Of the commynge and deth of Chryst: and of the callynge of the Heathen.

CAPI. II.

Moreouer this is the worde that was A opened vnto Esaye the sonne of A- Mich.iiii.a mos, vpon Iuda and Ierusalem. It wyll be also in the last dayes: That the hyll where the house of the Lorde is buylded, shal be the chyefe amonge hylles, and exalted aboue all litle hylles. And all the heathen shal please vnto him, and the multitude of ẏ people shall go vnto him, speakynge thus one to an other: aryse, let vs goo to the hyll of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob: that he may shewe vs his waye, and that we maye walke in his pathes. For the lawe shal come out of Syon, and the worde of God from Jerusalem, and shall gyue sentence amonge the heathen, and shall refourme the multytude of people: So that they shall breake theyr swerdes and speres, to make sythes, sicles and sawes therof. From that time forth shall not one people lyft vp weapen agaynste an other, neither shall they learne to fight frome thence forth. It is to the that I

B crye (o house of Jacob) aryse, let vs walke in the lyghte of the Lorde. But thou arte scattered abrode with thy people (o house of Jacob) for ye goo farre beyonde youre fathers, whether it be in sorceres (whome ye haue as the Philistines hadde) or in calkers of mennes byrthes, wherof ye haue to manye. As soone as your lande was full of syluer and golde, and no ende of your treasure: so soone as youre lande was full of stronge horsses, and no ende of youre charettes: Immediatly was it full of ydolles, also, euen workes of youre owne handes, whiche ye youre selues haue facyoned, and youre fyngers haue made. There kneleth the man, there falleth the man downe before them, so that thou canste not brynge hym awaye thence.

C And therfore gette the soone in to some rocke, and hyde the in the grounde from the syght of the fearfull iudge, and frome the glory of his maiestye: Which casteth downe the hyghe lokes of the presumptuous persones, and bryngeth lowe the pryde of man, and he onely shall be exalted in that daye. For the daye of the Lorde of hostes shall goo ouer all pryde and presumpcion, vpon all them that exalte them selues, and shall brynge them all downe: vpon hyghe and stoute Cedre trees of Libanus, and vpon all the okes of Basan, vpon all hyghe hylles, and vpon all stoute mountaynes, vpon all costly towres, and vpon all stronge walles, vpon all shyppes of the see, and vpon euery thyng that is gloryous and pleasaunt to loke vpon.

And it shall brynge downe the pryde of man, and laye mans presumpcion full lowe, and the Lorde shall onely haue the victorye in that daye. But the ydolles shall vtterly be rooted oute. Men shall crepe in to D holes of stone, and in to caues of the earthe, frome the syghte of the fearfull iudge, and from the glorye of his maiestye: what tyme as he shall aryse to shake the erth. Then shal man cast awaye his gaddes of syluer & golde, (which neuertheles he had made to honour them) vnto mowles and backes: that he may the better crepe in to the caues and rockes, & in to the clyffes of harde stones, frome the syght of the fearfull iudge, and frome the glorye of his maiestie.

¶ He [illegible] that at the commynge of Christe all strength and power shall be put forth of Jurye.

CAPI. III.

EVerye man can eschewe a person moued in angre, for what dothe he wisely? Euen so shall the Lorde of hostes take awaye from Jerusalem and Juda all possessions and power, all meate and drynke, the capitayne and the souldyour, the iudge and the Prophete, the wyse and the aged man, the worshipful of fiftie yeres olde, and the honourable: the senatours & men of vnderstanding: the masters of craftes and oratours. And I shall gyue you chyldren to be youre prynces (saythe the Lorde) and babes shall haue the rule of you. One shall euer be doing violence and wronge to another. The boye shall presume agaynste the elder, and the vyle person agaynst the honourable. Yea one shall take a frend of his owne kynred by the bosome, and saye: thou hast clothynge, thou shalte be our heed, for thou mayste kepe vs frome this fall and peryll.

Then shall he swere and saye, I can not helpe you. Moreouer there is neither meate ne clothynge in my house, make me no ruler of the people. For Jerusalem and Juda must decaye, bycause that bothe theyr wordes and counsels are agaynste the Lorde, they prouoke the presence of his maiestie vnto anger. The chaungynge of theyr countenaunce bewrayeth them, yea they declare theyr owne synnes them selues, as the Sodomites, and hyde them not. Wo be vnto theyr soules, for they shal be heuily rewarded. Then shal they saye: O happye are the godly, for they maye enioye the frutes of theyr studyes. But woo be to the vngodly and vnryghtous, for they shall be rewarded after theyr workes. O my people, ẏ rybaudes oppresse the, and women haue rule of the.

O my people, thy leaders disceyue the, and treade out the waye of thy fotesteppes. The Lorde is here to common of the matter, and standeth to gyue iudgement with the people. The Lorde shall come forthe to reason with the senatours and prynces of his people, and shal saye thus vnto them: It is ye that haue burnt vp my vyneyarde, the robberye of the poore is in your house. Wherfore doo ye oppresse my people, and marre the faces of the innocentes? thus shall the God of hostes vyse them.

Moreouer thus saythe the Lorde: Seynge the doughters of Syon are become so proude, and come in with stretched oute neckes, and with vayne wanton eyes: seynge they come in tryppynge so nycely with theyr feete: Therfore shall the Lorde shaue the heedes of the doughters of Sion, and make theyr beautye bare in that daye. In that daye shall the Lorde take awaye the gorgeousnesse of theyr apparell, and spanges, cheynes, partlettes, collers, & bracelettes and hoodes, the goodly floured, wyde and brodered rayment, brusshes and hedbandes, rynges and garlandes, holy daye clothes and vales, kerchues and pynnes, glasses and smockes, bonettes and taches.

And in stede of good smell there shall be stynche amonge them. And for theyr gyrdles there shall be loose bandes. And for well set heere, there shal be baldnesse. In stede of a stomacher, a sacke cloth, and for their beauty wetherednesse and sunneburning. Their husbandes, and their mightye men shall perysh with the swerde in batell.

¶ For wante of men seuen women desyre to haue one man.

CAPI. IIII.

AT that tyme shall theyr gates mourne and complayne, and they shall syt as desolate folke vpon the earthe. Then shal seuen wyues take holde of one man, and saye: we wyll laye all oure meate and clothynge togither in common, onely that we may be called thy wiues, and that this shamefull reprofe may be taken from vs. After that tyme shal the braunche of the Lorde be beautyfull and myghtye, and the frute of the erth shall be fayre and pleasaunt for those Israelites that shall sprynge therof. Then shal the remnaunt in Syon and the remnaunt at Jerusalem be called holy: namely all suche as are wrytten amonge the lyuynge at Jerusalem: what tyme as the Lorde shall washe awaye the desolacion of the doughters of Sion, and pourge the bloud out frō Jerusalem with the wynde of his smoke and fyre. Moreouer vpon all the dwellynges of the hyll of Sion, and vpon their hole congregacion, shal the Lord prouyde a cloude and smoke by daye, and the shynynge of a flamyng fyre by night: for all theyr glorye shall be preserued. And Jerusalem shall be a tabernacle for a shadowe, bicause of heate in the daye tyme, a place and refuge where a man maye kepe him for wether and rayne.

¶ Of Christ and his vyneyarde, with an execraciō of couetousnesse and of dronkennes.

CAPI. V.

NOw well then, I wyll synge my beloued frende a songe of his vyneyarde. My beloued frende hathe a vyneyarde in a very frutefull plenteous grounde. This he hedged, this he walled rounde about, and planted it with goodly grapes. In the myddest of it buylded he a towre, and made a wyne presse therin. And afterwarde when he loked that it shoulde brynge him grapes, it brought forth thornes. I shew you now my cause (o ye cytezyns of Jerusalem and hole Juda:) Judge I praye you bytwene me and my vyneyarde. What more coulde haue ben done for it, that I haue not done? Wherfore then haue it gyuen thornes, where I loked to haue had grapes of it?

Well I shal tell you how I wyl do with my vyneyarde: I wyll take the hedge frome it, that it maye perysshe, and breake downe the wall, that it maye be troden vnder foote. I wyll laye it waste, that it shall neyther be twysted nor cut, but beare thornes and breres. I wyll also forbyd the cloudes, that they shall not rayne vpon it. As for the vyneyarde of the Lorde of hostes, it is the house of Israell, and hole Juda his fayre plantynge. Of these he loked for equitie, but se there is wronge: for ryghtousnesse, loo, it is but miserye.

Woo be vnto you that ioyne one house to an other, and brynge one lande so nygh vnto an other, tyll ye can gette no more grounde. Wyl ye dwell vpon the earthe alone? The Lord of hostes rowndeth me thus in the eare: shal not manye greater and more gorgyous houses be so waste, that no man shal dwel in them? And ten akers of vynes shal gyue but a quarte, and thirty busshels of sede shal gyue but thre.

Wo be vnto them that ryse vp earlye to vse them selues in dronckennesse, and yet at nyghte are more superfluous with wyne. In their companyes are harpes and lutes, tabrettes and pypes, and wyne. But they regarde not the worke of the Lorde, and consydre not the worke of his handes. Therfore commeth my folke also in captiuitie, bycause they haue no vnderstandynge. Theyr glorye shall be myxte with hunger, and theyr pryde shall be marred for thyrste. Therfore gapeth hell, and openeth her mouth marueylous wyde: that pryde, bostyng and wisdome with suche as reioyse therin, may descende in to it.

Thus shall man haue a fall, he shall be broughte lowe, and the hyghe lokes of the proude layd downe. But the Lord of hostes, that holy God, shall be exalted, and vntouched, when he shall declare his equitie and ryghtousnesse after this maner: Then shall the lambes eate theyr appoynted fodder, and shall fede plenteouslye in the mountaynes. Woo be vnto vayne persons that draw wickednesse vnto them, as it were with a corde, and synne, as it were with a cart rope, which vse to speake on this maner: lette hym make haste now, and go forth with his worke, that we may se it. Let the counsel of the holy one of Israel come and drawe nye, that we maye knowe it.

Wo be vnto them that call euyl good, and good euyll: whiche make darckenesse lyghte, and lyghte darckenesse: that make sower swete, and swete sower. Woo be vnto them that are wise in their owne syght, and thynke them selues to haue vnderstandynge. Woo be vnto them that are cunnynge men to suppe out wyne, and experte to set vp dronkennesse. These gyue sentence with the vngodly for rewardes, but condemne the iuste cause of the ryghtous.

Prouer.iii.b
Roma.xii.b

Therfore lyke as fyre licketh vp the strawe, and as the flame consumeth the stubble: euen so (when theyr roote is full) theyr blossome shall vanysshe awaye lyke dust or smoke: for they despise the lawe of the Lorde of hostes, and blaspheme the worde of the holy maker of Israel.

F Therfore is the wrathe of the Lorde kindled also agaynste his people, and he hath stretched his hande at them: yea he hath smyte so that the hylles shall tremble. And their carkases shall lye in the open stretes lyke myre. After all this, the wrathe of God shall not cease, but he shall stretche his hande wider. And he shall sprue a token vnto a straunge people, & call vnto them in a farre countrey: and behold they shall come hastely wt spede. There is not one feynt nor feble amonge them, no not a sluggish nor slippery person. There shal not one of them put of the gyrdle from his loynes, ne lose his latchet of his shoo. Their arowes are sharpe, and their bowes bente. Their horses hoses are lyke flynt, and their cart wheles lyke a stormye wynde. Their cry is as it were of a lyon, and the rorynge of them lyke lyons whelpes. They shall rore & hunche vp the pray, and no man shall recouer it, or get it from them. In that daye they shall be so fearce vpon them as the see. And yf we loke vnto the lande, beholde it shal be all darcknesse and sorowe. Yf we loke to heuen: beholde, it shall be darcke with careful desperation.

¶ Esay sawe the glorye of the Lorde, and was sente to prophecye the desolation of Iurye.

CAPI. VI.

A IN the same yere that kynge Oziah dyed, I sawe the Lorde sytyng vpon an hygh and glorious seate, and his trayne fylled the palace. From about hym stode the Seraphins, whereof euery one had sixe wynges. With twayne eche couered his face, with twayne his fete, and with twayne dyd he flye. They cried also eche one to other on this maner: holy holy holy, is the Lorde of hostes. The hole worlde is ful of his glory. Yea the gestes and dorschches moued at their crienge, and the house was full of smoke. Then I sayde: O wo is me, for I was astonyed: that I (seynge I am a man of vncleane lyppes, and dwell amonge people that haue vncleane lippes also) should se the kynge and Lorde of hostes with myne eyes.

Apocalyp. xiiii.

B Then flewe one of the Seraphins vnto me hauynge a hote cole in his hande, whiche he had taken from the aulter with the tonges, and touched my mouthe, and sayd: loo, this hath touched thy mouth, and thyne vnrighteousnesse is taken awaye, and thy synne forgiuen. After this I herd the voyce of ℣ Lorde sayeng: whome shall I sende, and who wyll be oure messenger? Then I sayd: here am I, send me. And he sayd: go and tell this people: * ye shal heare in dede, but ye shall not vnderstande, ye shall playnely se, and not perceyue. Harden the herte of this people, stoppe their eares, and shute their eyes: that they se not with their eyes, heare not with their eares, and vn-

C derstande not with their hertes, and conuerte and be healed.

D Then spake I: Lorde, how longe? till the cyties be vtterly without inhabitours, and the houses without men, & the land be also desolate, and lye vnburyded. For the Lorde shall take the men farre awaye, so that the lande shall lye waste. Neuertheles, the tenth part shal remayne therin, for it shall conuerte and be frutefull. And lyke wyse as the Terebynthes and okeirees bryng forth their frutes, so shal the holy seede haue frute.

¶ The Syrians moue battayle agaynste Ierusalem. A vyrgyn shall beare a chylde.

CAPI. VII.

A IT happened in the time of Achaz the sonne of Ioatham, whiche was the sonne of Oziah kynge of Iuda: that Rezin the kyng of Syria, and Phaketh the sonne of Romelias kynge of Israel, wente vp towarde Ierusalem to besiege it, but wanne it not. Now when the house of Dauid (that is Achaz) herde worde therof, that Syria and Ephraim were confederate togyther: his herte quaked (yea, and the hertes also of his people) lyke as a tree in the felde that is moued with the wynde.

B Then said God vnto Esay: go meete Achaz (thou and thy sonne Sear Iasub) at the ende of the ouer pole, in the fote pathe by the fullers grounde, and saye vnto him, take hede to thy selfe, and be stil, but feare not, neither be faynt herted, for these two tables, that is, for these two smokynge fyre brandes, the wrath and furiousnesse of Rezin the Syrian, and Romelias sonne: bicause that the kyng of Syria Ephraim and Romelias sonne haue wickedly conspired agaynst the, saying: We wyl go downe in to Iuda, vexe them, & bryngē them vnder vs, and set a kyng there, euen the sonne of Tabeel. For thus saythe the Lorde God therto: It shall not so go forth, neither come so to passe: for the heed cītye of the Syrians is Damascus, but the heed of Damascus is Rezin. And after fyue and thre score yere, shal Ephraim be no more a people. And the cheefe cītye of Ephraim is Samaria, but the heed of Samaria is Romelias sonne. And yf ye beleue not, there shall no prompte be kept with you.

C Moreouer, God spake vnto Achaz, saying: requyre a token of the Lorde thy God, whether it be towarde the depth beneethe, or towarde the heygth aboue. Then sayde Achaz: I wyll requyre none, neyther wyll I tempte the Lorde. The Lorde answered: Then hear to ye of the house of Dauid: Is it not inough for you that ye be greuous vnto men, but ye muste greue my God also? And therfore the Lorde shall geue you a token of hym selfe: Beholde, a virgin shall conceyue and beare a sonne, and shall call his name ℣ Emanuel. Butter and honye shall he eate, that he may knowe the cuyll, and chose the good. For or D ere that chylde come to knowledge, to eschue the euell and chose the good. The lande (that thou art so afeayde for) shalbe desolate of both her kynges.

E The Lorde also shall sende a tyme vpon the, vpon thy people, and vpon thy fathers house (such as neuer came sence the tyme that Ephraim departed from Iuda,) thorowe the kynge of the Assirians. For at the same tyme shall the Lorde whistle for the flies that are about the water of Egipt, and for the Bees in the Assirians lande. These shall come, and shall lyght all in the valleyes, in the bawtes of stone, vpon all grene thynges, and in all corners.

F At the same tyme shall the Lorde shaue the heare of the heade and the fete and ℣ beerde cleane of, with the rasoure that he shall paye them withall beyonde the water, namelye, with the kynge of the Assirians. At the same tyme shall a man lyue with a cowe, and two sheep. Then because of the aboundaunce of mylke, he shall make butter and eate it. So that euery one whiche remayneth in the land shall eate butter and honye. At the same tyme all vyneyardes (though there be a thousande vynes in one, and were solde for a thousande syluerlynges,) shall be turned to briers and thornes. Lyke as they shall come in to the land with arowes and bowes, so shall all the lande become briers and thornes. And as for all hylles that nowe are hewen downe, thou shalt not come vpon them, for feare of briers and thornes. But the catell shalbe dryue thyther, and the sheep shall fede there.

¶ The delyueraunce of the land by Emanuel. The stone of offence, at whiche many shall stomble.

CAPI. VIII.

A MOreouer the Lorde sayde vnto me: Take the a great leaf, and wryte in it, as men do with a penne, that ye spede hym to robbe, and haste hym to spoyle. And immediatly I called vnto me taythfull witnesses: Uriah the preste, and Zacharyah the sonne of Barachiah. After that went I vnto the prophetisse, that nowe had conceyued & borne a sonne. Then sayde the Lorde to me: geue hym this name: Maherschalal hasbbas (that is: a spedy robber, an hasty spoyler.) For why, or euer the chylde shall haue knowledge to saye: Abi and Imi, (that is father and mother,) shall the ryches of Damascus and the substaunce of Samaria be taken awaye, thorowe the kynge of the Assirians.

B The Lorde spake also vnto me, saying: for so moche as the people refuseth the styll renninge wacer of Silo, and put their delyte in Rezin and Romelias sonne. Beholde, the Lorde shall bringe vpō them, namelye, the kynge of the Assirians with all his power. Whiche shall poure oute his furiousnes vpon euery man, and renne ouer all their bankes. And shall breake in vpon Iuda, increasynge in power, tyll he get him by the throte. He shall fyll also the wydenesse of thy lande with his brode wynges, O Emanuel. Go together ye people, and gather you, herken to all ye of farre countrees. Muster you, and gather you: muster you, and gather you, take youre councell together, yet must youre councell come to nought: go in hande withall, yet shall it not prospere. Except Emanuel, (that is God) be with vs. For the Lorde chastised me, and toke me by the hande, and warned me, sayeng vn to me: that I shulde not walcke in the waye of this people. He sayde moreouer: rounde with none of them, who so euer saye: ponder people are bound together. Neuertheles feare them not, neyther be afrayd of them, but sanctifye the Lorde of Hostes, let hym be youre feare and drede. For he is the sanctifyeng, and stone to stomble at * the rocke to fall vpon, a snare and net to both the houses: to Israel, and the inhabitours of Ierusalem. And many shall stomble, fall, and be broken vpon hym: yea they shalbe snared and taken. Luc.ii.e Roma.ix.g 1.Petri.ii.b

C Nowe saye the wytnesses together (sayde the Lorde) and seale the lawe with my disciples. Thus I wayte vpon ℣ Lorde that hath turned his face from the house of Jacob, and I loke vnto hym. But lo, as for me, and the cyldren which the Lorde hath geuen me: we are a token and a wonder in Israell, for the Lorde of Hostes sake, whiche dwelleth vpon the hyll of Syon. Hebr.ii.d

D And therfore yf they saye vnto you: aske councell at the sothesayers, wytches, charmers and conuiters, then make them this answere: Is there a people any where, that asketh not councell at his God, whether it be cō cernynge the dead, or the lyuynge. Yf any mā wante lyght, let hym loke vpon the law and testimony, whether they speake not after this meanyng: Yf ye do not this, he stombleth and suffreth hunger. And yf he suffre hunger, he is out of pacience, and blaspheme his kynge & his God. Then loketh he vpwarde, & downe warde to the earth, and beholde there is trouble and darkenesse, vexacion is rounde about hym, and the cloude of errour. And oute of soche aduersite, shall he not escape.

¶ The prophecyeth of Christes natyuytye and dominyon.

CAPI. IX.

A EVen lyke as in tyme paste it hathe bene well sene, that the lande of Zabulō and the lande of Nephtali (whiche thorowe the see waye goeth ouer Jordane in to ℣ land of Galilee) was at the fyrst in lyttle trouble, but afterwarde sore vexed.

B Neuertheles the people that haue dwelte in darkenesse, shall se a great lyght. Yis for the that dwell in the lande of the shadowe of death, vpon them shal the lyght shyne. Shalt thou multiplye the people, and not increase the ioye also? They shal reioyse before the e as men make merry in harueste, and as me that haue gotten the victory, when they deale the spoyle. For thou shalt breake the yocke of the peoples peoples burthen: the staf of his sholder and the rod of his oppressoure, as in the * daye at Madian.

Judi.vii.f

B Moreouer all temerations and seditious power, (yea where there is but a cote spied with bloude) shalbe burnt, and fede the fyre. For vnto vs a chylde shalbe borne, and vnto vs a sonne shalbe geuen: Upon his shoulder shall the kyngdome lye, and he shalbe called with his owne name. The wonderous geuer of councell, the myghty God, the euerlastyng father, the prynce of peace, he shall make no ende to encrease the kyngdome and peace, and shall syt vpon the seate of Dauid and in his kyngdome, to set vp the same, to stablyshe it with equite and ryghtousnesse, frome thence forth for euermore. This shall the gelousy of the Lorde of Hostes brynge to passe.

The Lorde sente a worde in to Jacob, the C same is come into Israell. And the people also of Ephraim, and they that dwell in Samaria, can saye with pryde and hye stomackes, on this maner. The tyle work is falle down, but we wyll buylde it with harder stones. The Molbery tymbre is broken, but we shall sette it vp agayne with Cedre. Neuerthelesse, the Lorde shall prepare Razin the enemye agaynst them, and so styre theyr aduersaryes, that the Sirians shall laye holde vpon them before, and the Philistines behynde, and so deuoure Israell with open mouth.

After all this, the wrath of the Lorde shall not cease, but yet his hande shall be stretched oute styll. For the people turneth not vnto hym, that chastyseth them, neyther doo they seke the Lorde of Hostes. Therfore the Lord shall rote oute of Israell bothe heade & tayle, braunche and twigge in one daye.

By the head, is vnderstande the Senatour and honorable man, and by the tayle, the prophete that preacheth lyes. For all they which enfourme the people that they be in a ryghte case, such be discyuers. Suche as men thynke also to be perfecte amonge these, are but caste awaye.

Therfore shall the Lorde haue no pleasure in theyr yonge men, neyther fauoure theyr fatherlesse and wydowes. For they are all toge-
D ther ypocrites and wycked, & all theyr mouthes speake foly. After all this shall not the Lordes wrath cease, but yet his hande shall be stretched out styll. For the vngodly burne, as a fyre in the bryers and thornes. And as it were out of a fyre in a wod or a redde busshe, so ascendeth the smoke of theyr pryde.

For this cause shall the wrath of the Lorde of Hostes fal vpon the lande, and the people shalbe consumed, as it were with fyre, no mā shall spare his brother. If a mā do turne hym to the ryght hande, he shall famysh, or to the lefte hande to eate, he shal not haue ynough. Euery man shall eate the fleshe of his owne arme, Manasses shall eate Ephraim, and Ephraim Manasses, and they bothe shall eate Juda. After all this shall not the Lordes wrath cease, but yet shall his hande be stretched out styll.

¶ He threateneth the oppressoures of the poore, and prophecyeth agaynste Sennacherib.

CAPI. X.

WO be vnto you that make vnryghtous lawes, and deuyse thynges, which be to harde for to kepe: wherthorow ÿ poore are oppressed on euery syde, and the innocentes of my people are therwith robbed of iudgement, that wydowes maye be your praye, and that ye may robbe the fatherlesse. What wyll ye do in tyme of the visitacion and destruction, that shall come from farre? To whō wyll ye renne for helpe, or to whome wyll ye geue your honoure, that he maye kepe it, that ye come not amonge the presoners, or lye amonge the deade? After all this shall not the wrath of the Lorde cease, but yet shall his hande be stretched oute styll. A B

Wo be also vnto Assur, whiche is a staf of my wrath, in whose hand is the rod of my punyshmente. For I shall sende hym amonge those ypocrytysh people, amonge the people that haue deserued my disfauoure, shall I sende hym, that he maye vtterly robbe them, spoyle them, and treade them downe lyke the myre in the strete. Howe be it, his meanynge is not so, neyther thynketh his herte of this fasshyon. But he ymagyneth onely, howe he maye ouerthrowe and destroye moch people, for he sayeth: are not my prynces all kynges. Is not Calno as easye to wynne, as Charchamis? Is it harder to conquere Antiochia then Arphad? Or is it lyghter to ouercome Damascus then Samaria? As who saye: I were hable to wynne the kyngedome of the Idolaters and theyr goddes, but not Jerusalem and Samaria. Shall I not do vnto Jerusalem and theyr ymages as I dyd vnto Samaria and theyr ymages? C

Wherfore the Lorde sayeth: As soone as I haue perfourmed my hole worke vpon the hyll of Syon and Jerusalem, then wyll I also vpset the noble and stoute kynge of Assiria, with his wysdome and pryde. For he standeth thus in his owne concepte. This do I, thorowe the power of myne owne hande, and thorowe my wysdome. For I am wyse, I am he that remoue the landes of the people, I robbe theyr prynces, and (lyke one of the worthyes) I dryue them frome theyr hye seates. D My hande hath founde out the Hostes of the people, as it were a nest. And lyke as egges that were layde here and there, are gathered together. So do I gather all countrees. And there is no man, that darre be so bolde, as to touche a fether, that darre open his mouth, or ones whysper.

But doth ÿ axe boost it selfe, agaynste hym that heweth therwith, or doth the sawe make any krackynge, agaynste hym that ruleth it? That were euen lyke, as yf the rod dyd ryse it selfe agaynste hym that beareth it, or as thoughe the staf shulde magnifye it selfe, as who sayeth it were no wod. Therfore shall the E Lorde of Hostes sende hym pouerte in his ryches, and burne vp his power, as it were with

with a fyre. But the lyght of Israel shall be that fyre, & his Sanctuary shalbe the flamme and it shall kyndle, and burne vp his thornes and bryers in one day, yea all the glory of his wodes and feldes shalbe consumed with body and soule. As for hymself, he shalbe as one chased away. The trees also of his felde shal be of soche anombre, that a chylde maye tell them.

After that daye shall the remnaunt of Israell, and soch as are escaped out of the house of Jacob, seke no more comforte at hym that smote them, but shal cōfort themselues with faythfulnesse and trouth in the Lorde, the F holy one of Israell. The remnaunt, yea and the posteritie of Jacob, shall conuerte vnto God the myghty one. For thoughe thy people (O Israell) be as the sande of the see, yet shall but the remnaunt of them onely conuerte vnto hym. Perfect is the iudgemēt of hym that floweth in ryghtousnesse, and therfore the Lorde of Hostes shall perfectlye fulfyll the thynge, that he hath determined in the myddest of the hole worlde. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God of Hostes: Thou my people, that dwellest in Sion, be not afrayed for the kynge of the Assirians, he shall wag his staf at the, yea and beate the with the rod, as the Egyptians dyd some tyme. But soone after, shall my wrath and myne indignacion be fulfylled agaynst theyr blasphemyes.

Moreouer the Lorde of Hostes shall prepare a scourge for hym, lyke as was the punysshment of Madian vpon the mounte of Oreb. And he shall lyfte vp his rod ouer the see, as he dyd sometyme ouer the Egypciās. Then shall his burthen be taken frō thy shoulders, & his yocke frō thy necke, yea the same yocke shall be corrupte for very fatnesse. He shall come to Aiath, and go thorowe toward Migron. But at Machmas shall he muster his hoste, & goo ouer the forde. Gabaah shall be theyr restynge place, Rhamah shall be afrayed, Gabaah Saul shall fle awaye. The voyce of the noyse of thy horses (O daughter Gallim) shalbe herde vnto Lais and to Anathoth, which also shalbe in trouble. Madmena shall tremble for feare, but the cytezins of Gabin are māly, yet shall he remayne at Nob that daye. After that, shal he lyft vp his hand agaynste the mounte Sion, and agaynste the hyll of Jerusalem. But se, the Lorde God of Hostes shal take away the proude frō thence with force. He shall hewe downe the proude and fell the hye mynded. The thornes of the wod shalbe roted out with yron, and Libanus shall haue a myghty fall.

¶ He prophecyeth of the natyuyte of Christe, and of his people: of the remnaunt of Israel, and of the fayth of the Heathen or gentyles.

CAPI. XI.

A AFter this there shall come a rod forthe of the kynrede of Jesse, and a blossome out of his rote. The spret of the Lord shall lyght vpon it, the spret of wysdome & vnderstandynge: the spret of councell, and strength: the spret of knowledge, and of the feare of God: and shall make hym feruent in the feare of God

For he shall not geue sentence, after the thynge that shall be brought before his eyes, neyther reproue a mater at the fyrst hearyng: but with ryghtousnesse shall he iudge ÿ pore, and with holynes shall he refourme the symple of the worlde.

He shall smyte the worlde with the staf of his mouth, and with the breath of his mouth ii.Thessa.ii.c
shall he slaye the wycked. Ryghtousnesse shal Esaye.lxv.d
be the gyrdle of his loynes, trouth and faythfulnesse, the gyrdynge vp of his raynes. Then shall the wolfe dwell with the lambe, and the Leoparde shall lye downe by the gote. Bullockes, Lyons, and catell shall kepe company together, so that a lytle chyld shal dryue them forth. The cowe and the bere shall fede B together, and theyr yonge ones shall lye together. The lyon shall eate strawe lyke the oxe, or the cow. The chylde whyle he sucketh, shall haue a desyre to the serpentes neste, and when he is weaned, he shall put his hande in to the Cockatryce denne. No man shall do euell to another, no man shall destroye another, in all the hyll of my Sanctuary. For the earthe shall be full of the knowledge of the Lorde, euen as though the water of the see flowed ouer the earth.

Then shall the Gentyles enquere after the Romano.xv rote of Jesse (which shalbe set vp for a token C vnto the Gentyles) for his dwellynge shalbe glorious. At the same tyme shall the Lorde take in hande agayne, to conquere the remnaunt of his people, (which are lefte alyue.) From the Assirians, Egypciās, Arabians, Morians, Elamites, Caldees, Antiochians, and Ilandes of the see. And he shall set vp a toke amonge the Gentyles, and gather together the dispersed of Israell, yea and the outcastes of Juda from the foure corners of the world. The hatred of Ephraim and the enmite of Juda shall be cleane roted oute. Ephraim shall beare no euell wyll to Juda, and Juda shall not hate Ephraim: but they bothe together shall flye vpon the shoulders of the Philistines towarde the West, and spoyle them toge- D ther that dwell towarde the East. The Idumytes and the Moabites shall let theyr handes fall, and the Ammonites shalbe obedient vnto them.

The Lorde also shall cleue the tunges of the Egypcyans see, and with a myghty wynd shall he lyfte vp his hande ouer Nilus, and shall smyte his seuen streames and make men go ouer drye shod. And thus shall he make a Exodi.xiiii way for his people, that remayneth from the Assirians, lyke as it happened to the Israelites, what tyme they departed oute of the lande of Egypte.

¶ The [illegible] for the obteynynge of the vyctory and [illegible]

CAPI. XII.

A SO that then thou shalt saye: O Lorde, I thanke the, for thou wast displeased at me, but thou hast refrayned thy wrath, & hast mercy vpon me. Beholde, God is my health, in whom I trust, and am not afrayde. For the Lorde is my strength, and my prayse, he also shall be my refuge. Therfore with ioye shall ye drawe water out of the welles of the Sa-
B uioure, and then shall ye saye: Lette vs geue thankes vnto the Lorde, and call vpon his name, and declare his councelles amonge the people, and kepe them in remembraunce, for his name is excellente. O synge prayses vnto the Lorde, for he doth greate thynges, as it is knowen in all the worlde. Crye oute, and be glad, thou that dwellest in Sion, for great is thy prynce, the holy one of Israell.

¶ He prophecyeth the destruction of Babilon, the captyuytye, and the commyng agayne of the people.

CAPI. XIII.

A THis is the heuye burthen of Babylon, which Esay the sonne of Amos dyd se. Make some tokens to the hye hylles, call vnto them, holde vp youre hande, that the prynces maye go in at the dore. For I wyll sende for my debites and my graunces (sayth the Lorde) and in my wrathe I wyll call for suche, as triumphe in my glorye.

With that, me thought I hearde in the mountaynes a noyse, lyke as it had bene of a greate people: and a russhynge, as though the kyngdomes of all nacions had come together. (And the Lorde of Hostes was the Captayne of the hole armye.) As they had come not only out of farre countrees, but also from the endes of the heauens. Euen the Lorde hymselfe with the ministers of his wrath, to destroye the hole lande. Mourne therfore, for the daye of the Lorde is at hande, and commeth as a destroyer frome the Almyghtye. Then shall all handes be letten downe, and all mens hartes shall melte awaye, they shall stande in feare, carefulnesse and sorowe shall come vpon them, and they shall haue payne, as a woman that trauayleth with chylde. One shall euer
B be abasshed of another, and theyr faces shall burne lyke the flamme.

For lo, the daye of the lorde shall come, terrible, full of indignacion and wrath, to make the lande waste, and to roote oute the synne therof. For the starres and planetes of heauen shall not geue theyr lyght, the sunne shall be quenched in the rysynge, and the moone shall not shyne with his lyght. And I wyll punysh the wyckednesse of the worlde, and the synnes of the vngodly, sayeth the Lord. The hye stomackes of the proude wyll I take awaye, and wyll laye downe the bostynge of tyraun-
C tes. I wyll make a man dearer then fyne gold, and a man to be more worthe, then a golden wedge of Ophir. Moreouer I wyll shake the heauen, that the earthe shall remoue oute of her place.

Ezechi.xxxii. Math.xxiiii.c Marck.xiii. Luc.xx.

Thus shal I go with Babylon, in the wrath of the Lorde of Hostes in the daye of his fearfull indignacion. And Babylon shall be as an hunted or chased Do, & as a flocke without a shepeherde. Euery man shal turne to his owne people, and flee echone in to his owne lande. Who so is founde alone, shalbe shot thorow. And who so gather together, shalbe destroyed with the swearde. * Theyr chyldren shalbe slayne before theyr eyes, theyr houses spoyled, and theyr wyues rauysshed. For lo, I shall brynge vp the Medes agaynste them, whiche D shall not regarde syluer, nor be desyrous of golde. Then shall yong mens bowes be knapped asunder. The Medes shall haue no pytie vpon wemen with chylde, & theyr faces shall not spare the chyldren. *And Babylon (that glorye of kyngdomes and bewtye of the Caldees honour) shalbe destroyed, euen as God destroyed Sodome and Gomorra. It shal neuer be more inhabited, neyther shall there be any more dwellynge there, frome generacion to generacion.

The Arabians shall make no mo tentes there, neyther shall the shepeherdes make theyr foldes there any more, but wyld beastes shall lye there, and the houses shalbe full of greate Oules. Estriches shall dwell there, & Apes shall daunse there: the lytle Oules shal crye in the palaces, one after another, & Dragons shalbe in the pleasaunte parlours. And as for Babylons tyme it is at hande, and her dayes maye not be longe absent.

¶ The retourne of the people from captiuitye. The prosperytye of the people of God, and afflyction of theyr ennemyes. The pryde of Babilon.

CAPI. XIIII.

BUt the Lorde wyll be mercyfull vnto Iacob, & wyll take vp Israell agayne, & set them in theyr owne lande. Straungers shall cleaue vnto them, and get them to the house of Iacob. They shall take the people, and carye them home with them. And the house of Israell shall haue them in possession for seruauntes and maydens in the lande of the Lorde. They shall take those prysoners, B whose captyues they had bene afore, & rule those that hadde oppressed them. When the Lorde nowe shall brynge the to rest, from the trauayle, feare, and harde bondage that thou wast laden withall, then shalt thou vse this mockage vpon the kynge of Babylon, & saye: Howe happeneth it that the oppressour leaueth of? Is the golde tribute come to an ende? Doubtlesse the Lorde hath broken the staf of the vngodlye, and the scepter of the lordlye. Whych when he is wroth, smyteth the people with durable strokes, and in his wonders he persecuteth them, and tameth them contynually. And therfore the hole worlde is now at reste and quyetnesse, and men synge for ioye.

Yea euen the Fyrre trees and Cedres of Li- C
banus reioyse at thy fall, sayenge: Nowe that thou arte layde downe, there come no mo vp to destroye vs. Hell also trembleth at thy comynge, all myghtye men and prynces of the earth, earthe, steppe forth before the. All kynges of the earthe stande vp from theyr seates, that they maye all (one after another, synge and speake vnto the: Arte thou wounded also as we? arte thou become lyke vnto vs? Thy pompe and thy pryde is gone downe to hell. Mothes shalbe layd vnder the, and wormes shalbe thy couerynge.

How art thou fallen from heauen (O Lucifer) thou fayre mornynge chylde? hast thou gotten a fall euen to the grounde, thou that (not withstandyng) dyddest subdue the people? And yet thou thoughtest in thyne herte: I wyll clyme vp into heauen, & make my seate
D aboue the starres of God, I wyl syt vpon the glorious mounte towarde the North, I wyll clyme vp aboue the cloudes, and wylbe lyke the hyghest of all. Yet darre I say, that thou shalte be brought downe to the depe of hell. They that se the, shall narowlye loke vpon the, and thynke in them selues, sayenge: Is this the man, that brought all landes in feare, and made the kyngdomes afrayde? Is this he that made the worlde in a maner waste, and layde the cyties to the ground, which let not his prysoners go home?

Howe happeneth it, that the kynges of all people lye, euery one at home in his owne palace, with worshyp, and thou art cast oute of thy graue lyke a wylde braunch, lyke as dead
E mens rayment that are shot thorow with the swearde, as they that go downe to the stones of the depe, as a deade coarse that is troden vnder fete, & art not buried with them? Euen
F because that thou haste wasted thy lande, and destroyed thy people. For the generacion of the wycked shalbe without honour, for euer. There shal a waye be sought to destroy theyr chyldren, for theyr fathers wyckednes, they shal not come vp agayne to possesse the land, and fyll the worlde full of castels & townes.

I wyll stande vp agaynst them (sayeth the Lorde of Hostes) & root out the name and generacion of Babylon (sayeth the Lorde) and G wyll geue it to the Otters. and wyll make water poddels of it. And I wyll swepe them out wyth the besome of destruction, sayeth the Lorde of Hostes. The Lorde of Hostes hath sworne an othe, sayeng: It shall come to passe as I haue determined, and shalbe fulfylled, as I haue deuysed. The Assirians shalbe destroyed in my lande, and vpon my mountaynes wyll I treade them vnder fote. Wherthorowe his yocke shall come frome you, and his burthen shalbe taken from your shoulders. This deuyse hathe God taken thorowe the hole worlde, and thus is his hande stretched out ouer all people. For yf the Lorde of Hostes determen a thynge, who wyll dysanulle it? And yf he stretch forth his hande, who wyl holde it in agayne?

H The same yere that kinge Achaz dyed, God threatened by Esaye on this maner: Reioyse not (thou hole Palestyna) as though the rod of hym that beateth the were broken, for out of the serpentes rote, there shall ware a kocatrice, and the frute shalbe a fyre worme. But the poore shall fede of the best thynges, and the symple shall dwell in safetye. Thy rotes wyl I destroye with honger, and it shal slaye thy remnaunt. Mourne ye portes, wepe ye cyties, & feare thou (O hole Palestyna) for there shal com fro the North a smoke, whose power no man maye abyde. Who shall then maynteyne the messages of the Getyles? But the Lorde stablysheth Sion, and the poore of my people shall put theyr trust in hym.

¶ A prophecye agaynste Moab.

CAPI. XV.

THis is the heuye burthen vpon Moab, A Ar of Moab was destroyed. (as me thought) in the nyght season. The walles of Moab peryshed in the nyght, and vanysshed awaye. They went to Baith and Dibon in the hye places, for to wepe. Moab dyd mourne frome Nebo to Medba. * All theyr heades were polled, and all theyr beardes shauen. In theyr stretes were they gyrded about with sack clothe. In all the toppes of theyr B houses and stretes was there nothynge, but mournynge and weppynge. Hesebon and Eleale cryed, that theyr voyce was hearde vnto Iahaz. The worthyes also of Moab bleated and cryed for verye sorowe of theyr myndes. Wo is my herte for Moabs sake. They fled vnto the cytie of Zoar, whiche is lyke a fatte frutefull bullock, they wente vp to Luhith, C weppynge. The way towarde Horonaim was full of lamentacion for the hurte. The waters of Nimrim were dryed vp, the grasse was wythred, the herbes destroyed, and what necessarye grene thynge there was besyde. In lyke maner the thynges that was lefte them of theyr substaunce, they caryed it by water to Araby. The crye went ouer the hole lande of D Moab, frome Eglaim vnto Beer, was there nothynge but mournyng. The waters of Dimon were full of bloude, for the enemye hath sent thyther a bonde of men, which as a lyon laye a wayte for the remnaunt of the lande, and for them that were escaped.

Iere.xlviii. Ezec.vii.e

¶ The destruction of Moab.

CAPI. XVI.

THen sent the Lordes of the lande a man of warre, frome the rocke that lyeth towarde the deserte, vnto the hyll of the daughter Syon. (For as for the daughters of Moab, they were as it had bene a tremblyng byrde, that is put oute of her neste, by the fery of Arnon.) whiche messaunces [illegible] youre counsell, come together, [illegible] youre shadowe in the myddaye, as the nyght doth: hyde the chased, and bewraye not them that are fled. lette the persecuted [illegible] dwel among you, be our [illegible] the destroyer, for the [illegible] vs, the robber vndothe vs, and the tyraunte [illegible]neth vs oute of oure lande. [illegible] youre kyngdome is full [illegible] that sytteth vpon it [illegible]

trouthe in the house of Dauid, knowe the thynge, and do his diligence to helpe shortly, accordynge to equite and ryghteousnes. As for Moabs pryde (shall they answere) it is well knowen. And all thoughe they be excellent, proude, arrogant, and hye mynded, yet is theyr strength nothynge lyke. And therfore Jere.xlviii.c. Moab complayneth vnto Moab, wher thorowe they come all to mourne, and now that they be smytten, they take theyr deuyce be=nethe by the brickwall, and make theyr complaynte.

The suburbes also of Hesebon were made C wast, and the Prynces of the Gentyles hewed downe the vyneyardes of Sibma, whiche were planted with noble grapes, and spred vn to Jazer, and wente vnto the ende of the deserte, whose braunches stretched theyr selues forthe beyonde the see. Therfore I mourned for Jazer, and for the vyneyardes of Sibma with greate sorowe I poured my teares vpon Hesebõ and Eleale, for all theyr songes were layde downe, in theyr haruest and gatherynge of theyr grapes. Myrth and chere was gone out of the felde and vyneyardes, in so moche, that no man was glad nor songe. There wét D no treader into the wynepresse, theyr merye chere was layde downe. Wherfore my belye sounded (as it had bene a lute) for Moabs Jere.xlviii.e. sake, & myne inward membres, for the brickwalles sake. For it happened thus also, when Moab sawe that she was turned vp lyde downe, she wét vp on hye in to her Sanctuarye, to make her prayer there, but she myght not be helped. This is the deuyce, whiche the Lorde toke in hande at that tyme agaynste Moab. But nowe the Lorde sayth thus: In thre yere shal the power of Moab with theyr pompe (which is greate) be minished, lyke as the burthen of an hyred seruaunt. And as for the remnaunt of them, they shalbe lesse then a fewe, and not rekened moch worth.

CAPI. XVII.

A This is the heuy burthen vpon Damascus. Beholde, Damascus shall be no more a cytie, but an heape of broken stones. The cyties of Aroer shalbe waste: the catell shall lye there, & no man shall feare them awaye. Ephraim shall no more be strong, and Damascus shall no more be a kyngdom. And as for the glorye of the remnaunt of the Sirians, it shalbe as the glory of the chyldren of Israell, sayth the Lorde of Hostes. At that tyme also shall the glorye of Jacob be verye poore, and his fatnes leane. It shall happen to them, as when one shereth in haruest, which catcheth his hande full with the sickle, and when one gathereth the eares together in the valleye, of Raphaim, there remayneth B yet some eares ouer. Or as when one shaketh an olyue tree, whiche fyndeth but two or thre olyue beryes aboue in the toppe, and foure or fyue in the braunches. Thus the Lorde God of Israell hath spoken.

Then shall man conuerte agayne vnto his maker, and turne his eyes to the holy one of Israell. And shall not turne to ẏ aulters that are the worke of his owne handes, neyther shall he loke vpon groues and ymages, which his fyngers haue wrought. At the same tyme shall theyr stronge cyties be desolate, lyke as C were ones the forsaké plowes & corne, which they forsoke, for feare of ẏ chyldren of Israell.

So shalt thou (O Damascus) be desolate, because thou haste forgotten God thy Sauyoure, and hast not called to remembraunce the rocke of thy strength. Wherfore thou halt also set a fayre plát, & graffed a straúge braúch. In the daye when thou dyddest plante it, it was great, & gaue soone the frute of thy sede. But in the daye of haruest, thou shalt reape an heape of sorowes and miseryes.

Wo be to the multitude of moche people, D that rush in lyke ẏ see, & to the heape of folke, that renne ouer all lyke greate waters. for though so many people increase as ẏ flowing waters, & though they be armed, yet they flee farre of, and vanysh away lyke the dust with the wynde vpon an hyll, and as the whyrle wynd thorow a storme. Though they be fearfull at nyght, yet in the mornynge it is gone with them. This is theyr porcion, that do vs harme, and heritage of them, that robbe vs.

¶ A prophecye agaynste Egypte.

CAPI. XVIII.

WO be to the lande of flyenge shyppes, which is of this syde ẏ floude of Ethiopia, A which sendeth her message ouer the see in shyppes of redes vpon the water, and sayth: go swyfte, and do youre message vnto a straunge and harde folke, to a fearful people, and to a people that is further then this, to a desperate and pylled folke, whose lande is de-B uided from vs with ryuers of water. Yea all ye that syt in the compasse of the worlde, and dwell vpon the earth, when the token shalbe geuen vpon the mountaynes, then loke vp, & when the horne bloweth, then herken to, for thus hath the Lorde sayde vnto me. I layde me downe, & pondred the matter in my house, at the Noone daye when it was hote. And there fell a myslynge shower, lyke a dewe, as it happeneth in Haruest. But the frutes were not yet rype cut of, and the grapes were but yonge and grene. Then one smote of the grapes with an hoke, yea he hewed downe also the boughes and the braunches, and dyd cast them awaye. And thus they were layd waste, C for the foules of the mountaynes, and for the beastes of the earthe togyther. So that the foules sat thervpon, and the beastes of the earthe wintered there. Then shall there be a present broughte vnto the Lorde of Hostes: euen that harde folke, that fearful folke: and that further is then this: that desperate and pylled folke (whose lande is deuyded frõ vs with floudes of water) vnto the place of the name of the Lorde of Hostes: euen vnto the hill of Syon.

¶ He prophecyeth styll agaynste Egypte.

CAPI. XIX.

A This is the heuye burthen vpon Egypt. Beholde, the Lorde wyll ryde vpon a swyfte cloude, & come into Egypt. And the goddes of Egypte shall tremble at his commyng, & the herte of Egypt shal quake within her. For thus sayth the Lorde: I wyll stere vp the Egyptiãs one agaynst another among them selues, so that one shalbe euer agaynste his brother & neyghboure, yea one cyte against another, & one kyngdõ agaynst another. And Egypt shalbe choked in her selfe. When they aske councell at theyr goddes, at theyr prophetes, at theyr sothsayers and wytches, then wyll I brynge theyr councell to naught.

I wyll delyuer Egypte also in to the handes of greuous rulers, and a cruell kyng shall haue the rule of them. The water of the see shalbe drawen out. Nilus shall synke awaye, and be dronken vp. The ryuers also shall be drawen oute, the welles shall decrease & drye awaye. Rede and rush shall fayle, the grasse B by the waters syde, or vpõ the ryuers banke, yea and whatsoeuer is sowen by the waters, shalbe wythered, destroyed, and broughte to naught. The fysshers shall mourne, all suche as cast angles in the water, shall complayne, & they that sprede theyr nettes in the water, shalbe faynt herted. Suche as labour vpon flax and sylck, shall come to pouerte, and they also that weaue fyne workes. All ẏ poundes of Egypte, all the pollicye of theyr Hostes and dyches shall come to naught.

Yea the vndiscrete Prynces of Zoan, the councell of the wyse Senatoures of Pharao, shall turne to foolyshnesse. Those that darre boste and say of Pharaos behalf, I am come of wyse people, I am come of the olde regall progenye. But where are now thy wyse men? Let them tell the & shewe the, what the Lord of Hostes hath také in hande agaynst Egypt. Fooles are those Prynces of Zoan, & proude are the prynces of Noph, yea they disceyue E-C gypte with the nobilite of theyr stocke. For the Lorde hath made Egypte dronken with the spirite of erroure, & they shall vse it in all matters, euen lyke as a dronken man goeth spuynge aboute. For Egypte shall lacke good councell, so that they shall not knowe what to do, neyther begynnyng nor ende, neyther vpon the lande ne water. Then shal the Egyptians be lyke vnto women, afrayde and astonyed, at the lyfting vp of the head, which the Lorde of Hostes shall lyft vp ouer them. The land of Juda also shall make the Egyptians afrayde, who so doth but speake vpon it, shall put them in feare. And that because of the coúcell, which the Lord of hostes hath deuysed agaynste them. Then shall the fyue cyties of Egypte speake with the Cananytes tunge, and sweare by the Lorde of Hostes, & Heliopolis shall be one of them. At the same tyme shall the Lorde of Hostes haue an aulter in the myddest of the lande of Egypt, with this tytle therby: Unto the Lorde. This shal be a token or testimony vnto the Lorde of Hostes in the lande of Egypte, when they shall crye vnto hym, because of those that oppresse D them, that he shall sende them a capytayne & a Sauyoure to delyuer them.

Moreouer, Egypte shall be broughte vnto the Lorde, & the Egypcyans also shall knowe the Lorde at the same tyme, they shal do him reuerence with peace offrynges, & with meatoffrynges, they shall promyse hym offrynges, yea & paye hym also. Thus the Lorde shall smyte Egypt, & heale it agayne, & so shal they turne to the Lorde, & he also shall haue mercy vpõ them, & saue them. Then shall there be a cõmen waye out of Egypte in to Assyria. The Assyriãs shall come into Egypte, & the Egypcyans into Assyria. The Egyptians also and the Assyrians shall both haue one Gods seruyce. Then shall Israell with honoure be the thyrde to Egypte & Assur. And ẏ Lorde of Hostes shall blesse them, sayenge: Blessed is my people of the Egypcyãs, Assur is the worke of my hãdes, but Israell is myne enheritaunce.

¶ Agaynste Egypt and Ethiopia.

CAPI. XX.

IN the same yere that Tharthan came to A Asdod, where Sargon the kyng of the Assyrians sent hym, what tyme as he also beseged Asdod, & wanne it the same season. Then spake the Lorde vnto Esaye the sonne of Amos, sayenge: go & lose of that sack from thy loynes, & put of thy shoes frõ thy fete. And so he dyd, goynge naked & barefote. Then sayde the Lorde: where as my seruaút Esaye goeth naked & barefote, it is a token & signifyeng of the thyng, that after thre yere shall come vpõ Egypte and Ethiopia. For euen thus shal the kynge of the Assyrians dryue both yonge and B olde; as presoners naked and barefote, out of Egypte and Ethiopia. And shall discouer the shame of Egypte. They shalbe also at theyr wittes ende, and ashamed one of another, the Egypcyans of the Morians, and the Morians of the Egypcyans, at the syghte of theyr glory. Moreouer they that dwell in the Iles shall se euen the same daye: beholde, this is our hope, to whom we fled to seke helpe, that we myght be delyuered from the kyng of the Assirians. Howe wyll we escape?

¶ Agaynst Babylon, Idumea, and Arabia.

CAPI. XXI.

This is the heuy burthẽ of the waste see. A A greuous visiõ was shewed vnto me, lyke as when a storme of wynde and Abacuc.iii. rayne russheth in from the wyldernesse, that terrible lande. Who so maye disceyue (sayde the voyce) let hym disceyue. Who so may destroye, let hym destroye. Up Elam, besege it O Madai, for I wyll styll all theyr gronynges. With this, the reynes of my backe were B full of payne. Panges came vpon me, as vpon a woman in her trauayle. When I herde it

I was abasshed: and whē I loked vp, I was afrayde. Wyne heete panted, I trembled for feare. The darkenesse made me fearfull in my mynde.

Yea soone make ready the table (sayde this watche) kepe the watche, eate and drynke. Vp ye captaynes, take you to youre shyldes, for thus the Lorde hath charged me, go thy way, and set a watchman, that he maye tell what he seeth. And whē he had wayted deligently, he sawe two horsmen, the one rydynge vpon an Asse, the other vpon a Camel. And ℣ lyon cryed: Lorde, I haue stande waytynge all the hole daye, and haue kepte my watche all the nyght. With that came there one rydyng vpō a charet, which answered, and sayd: Babylon is fallen, she is turned vpside downe, and all the ymages of her goddes are smytten to the grounde. This (O my felowe thrasshers and fannes) haue I hearde of the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israell, to shew it vnto you.

¶ The heuy burthen of Duma.

One or Seir cryed vnto me: Watche man, what halle thou espyed by nyght, watche mā, what hast thou espyed by nyght? The watche men answered: The day breaketh on, and the nyght is commynge. If youre requeli be earnest, then aske and come agayne.

¶ The heuy burthen of Arabia.

At euen ye shal abyde in the wod, in ℣ way toward Dedanim. Mete the thirsty with water (O ye cytesyns of Hema) mete those with breas that are fled. For they shal runne away from the weapen, from the drawen swearde, from the bent bowe, and from the greate battell. For thus hath the Lorde spoke vnto me, ouer a yere shall all the power of Cedar be gone, lyke as when the office of an hyred seruaunte goeth oute. And the remnaunte of the good Archers of Cedar, shalbe very fewe. For the Lorde God of Israell hath spoken it.

CAPI. XXII.

The heuye burthen vpon the valleye of visions. What halle thou there to doo, that thou clymmeste vp in to the house toppe, O thou cyte of myracles, sedycyous & wylfull? Seinge thy slayne men are neyther killed with swearde, nor dead in battell? For all thy Captaynes gat them to theyr horses from the ordynaunce, yea they are all together rydden awaye, and fled farre of. When I perceyued that, I sayde: awaye fro me, that I maye wepe bytterly. Take no laboure for to comforte me, as touchynge the destruccion of my people. For this is the daye of the Lord of Hostes, wherin he wil plage, treade down, and wore out the valley of visyons, & breake downe the walles, with suche a crach, that it shall geue a sounde in the mountaynes.

I sawe the Elamytes take the quyuers to warre and to horse, and that the walles were bare from harnesse. The goodly valleys were full of charettes, the horse men made them soone to besege the gates. Then was the couering of Juda put from thence, & then was sene the sege of the cytye of Dauid, wherof there shall be many. Ye shall gather together ℣ waters of the lowe pole, and tell the houses of Ierusalem, and breake of some of them to kepe the walles. And ye shall make a pyt betwyxt the two walles of the water of the olde pole, & nothyng regard hym, that toke it in hande, and made it. And at the same tyme shall the Lord of Hostes call men to weppynge, mournyng, to baldnesse and puttyng on of sack cloth. But they to fulfyll theyr lustes & wylfulnes, slaughter oxen, they kyll sheepe, they eate costly meate, and drynke wyne, + let vs eate & drinke, for to morowe we shall dye. Neuertheselle when the Lorde of hostes heareth of it, he sayd: yea, yf this wyckednes of yours shalbe remitted, ye must dye for it. This hath the Lorde God of hostes spoken.

Thus sayth the Lorde God of hostes: Go in to the treasury vnto Sobna the gouernour and saye vnto hym: What halle thou here to do? and from whence comeste thou? that thou hast made the a graue here? For he had caruen a costly tombe of stone to be made for hym selfe, and a place to lye in to be hewen oute of a rock. Beholde, the Lorde shall caste the oute by violence, he wyll decke the of another fashyon, and put vpon the a straunge cloth. He shall cary the into a farre countre, lyke a ball with his handes. There shalt thou dye, there shal the pompe of thy charettes haue an ende, thou bylleyne of the house of the Lorde. I wyll shutte the oute of thyne office, and put the from thyne estate.

After this wyll I call my seruaunte Eliakim, the sonne of Hilkiah, & araye hym with thy cote, and gyrde hym with thy gyrdle, and I wyll geue thy power in to his hande. He shalbe a father of the cytesyns of Ierusalem, and of the kynred of Juda. I wyll also laye the + kepe of Dauids house vpon his shoulders, and yf he open, no man shall shut, & yf he do shut, no mā shall open. I wyll fasten him to a nayle in the place of the most bygo fayth fulnesse, & he shalbe vpon the glorious seate of his fathers house. They shall hange vpon hym all the glory of his fathers house, of the chyldren & chylders chyldre, all apparell small and great, all instrumentes of measure & musyke. This shall come to passe (sayeth ℣ Lorde of Hostes,) when the nayle that is fastened to the place of the bygheli faythfulnesse, shalbe pluckt of. And when the weyght that hāgeth vpon it, shall fall, be broken, and hewen in peces. For the Lorde hym selfe hath sayd it.

¶ A prophecye agaynste Tyrus, and apromyse to restore it agayne.

CAPI. XXIII.

An heuy burthen vpō Tyrus. Mourne ye shippes of Tharsis, for she is throwen downe to the grounde, & conquered of them that are come from Cethim.

The inhabiters of the Ilandes, the marchantes of Sidon, and they that occupye the see, (of whome thou wast full somtyme) are at a poynte. For by see were there frutes brought vnto the, and all maner of corne by water. Thou wast the comen market of all people. Sidon is sory for it, yea and all the power of the see complayneth, and sayth: O that I had neuer trauayled with chylde, that I had neuer borne any, that I had neyther nourished dope, nor broughte vp daughter. As soone as Egypte perceyueth it, she wyll be as sorye as Tirus it self. Go ouer the see, mourne ye that dwell in the Iles. Is not that the glorious cyte, whiche hath bene of longe antiquite? whose natiues dwellynge farre of, commend her so greatly? Who hath deuised such thynges vpon Tirus the crowne of all cytes, whose marchauntes and captaynes were the bryghtt and pyncipall of the worlde? Euen the Lorde of Hostes hath deuysed it, that he maye put downe all pompe, and myndishe all the glory of the worlde. Go thorow thy land (O thou daughter of the see) as men go ouer the water, and there is not a gyrdle more.

Thus the Lorde that remeuyth the kyngdomes, and hath taken in hande agaynst that myghty Canaan to roote it out, hath stretched out his hande ouer the see, and sayde: From hence forth shalte thou make no more myrth (O thou daughter of Sidon,) for thou shalt be put downe of the Cethens. Stand vp then fore, and go where the enempe wyll cary the, where thou shalt also haue no reste. Beholde, (for thyne ensample.) The Chaldees were suche a people, that no man was lyke them, Assur buylded them, he set vp his castels and palaces, and broke them downe agayne. And therfore mourne (ye shyppes of the see,) for your power shalbe throwen downe.

After that, shall the. lxx. peres of Tirus (euen as longe as theyr kynges lyke was) be forgotten. And after. lxx. peres, it shall happē to Tirus as with an harlot that playeth vpō a lute. Take thy lute (saye men to her) & go about the cyte, thou arte yet an vnknowen wenche, make pastyme with diuerse balettes, wherby thou mayst come in to acqueyntaūce. Thus shall it happen after. lxx. peres. The Lorde shall vysyt the cyte of Tyrus, & it shal come agayne to her marchaundyse, & shal occupye with all the kyngdomes that be in the worlde. But all her occuppeng and wynnyng shalbe halowed vnto the Lord. For then shal they laye vp nothynge behynde them nor vpō heapes, but the marchaundyse of Tirus shall belonge vnto the cytesyns of the Lord, to the sedynge and sustenynge of the hongrye, and to the clothynge of the aged.

¶ A prophecye vpon the tribulacion that shall fall vpon the worlde, because of synne.

CAPI. XXIIII.

Beholde, the Lorde shall waste & plage the worlde, he shall make the face of the earth desolate, and scatter abrode the inhabitours therof. Then shall the preste be as the people, the master as the seruaunte, the dame lyke the mayde, the seller lyke the byer, he that lendeth vpon vsurye, lyke vnto hym that borowyth vpon vsury, the creditoure, as the detter. Yea myserably shall the worlde be wasted & clene destroyed. For the Lorde hath so determined in hym selfe. The earth shalbe heuye and decaye. The face of the earth shall perysh and fall awaye, the proude people of the world shal come to naught. For the earth is corrupte of her indwellers.

For why? they haue offended the law changed the ordinaunces, and made the euerlastynge testamente of none effecte. And therfore shall the curse deuoure the earth, for they that dwel theron haue synned, wherfore they shalbe brent also, and those that remayn shal be very fewe. The swete wyne shall mourne, the grapes shall be weake, and all that haue bene merye in herte, shall sygh. The myrth of tabrettes shalbe layd downe, the cheere of the ioyfull shall cease, and the pleasure of lutes shall haue an ende, there shall no more wyne be dronke with myrth, the beere shalbe bytter to them that dryncke it, the wycked cytes shalbe broken downe, all houses shalbe shut, that no man maye come in.

In the stretes shall there be lyfte vp a crye because of wyne, all mens chere shall vanysh awaye, and all ioye of the earthe shall passe. Desolacion shall remayne in the cytes, and the gates shalbe smyten with wastnesse. For it shall happē vnto all landes and to all people, lyke as when a man smyteth downe the olyues, that are lefte vpon the tree, or seketh after grapes, when the wyne gatheryng is oute. And those same (that remayne) shall lyfte vp theyr voyce, and be gladde, and shall magnifye the glorye of the Lorde, euen from the see, and praysle the name of the Lord God of Israell, in the valeys and Ilandes. We haue longes longe to the praysle of the ryghtous, from all the endes of the worlde. Therfore I must speake: O myne vnfrutefulnesse, O my poucrte. Wo is me, all is full of synners, whiche offende of purpose and malyce. And therfore (O thou that owellest vpon the earth) there is at hande for the, feare, pyt, and snare. Who so escapeth the terrible crye, shall fall into the pyt. And yf he come oute of the pyt, he shall be taken with the snare. For the wyndowes aboue shalbe opened, and the foundacion of the earthe shall moue. The earthe shall geue a greate crack, it shall haue a sore rupne, and take an horrible fall. The earthe shall stacker lyke a dronken man, and be taken awaye lyke a tente. Her mysdoers shall lye so heuye vpon her, that she muste fall, and neuer ryse vp agayne. At the same tyme shall the Lorde muster together the hye hoostes of heuen, and the kynges of the worlde vpon the earth. These shalbe coupled together as prysoners be, and shall be shut in ouer wardes and punyshed innumerable dayes. The Moone & the Sunne shalbe ashamed, when the Lord of Hostes shall rule the at Ierusalē vpō ℣ mount Sion, before, & with his excellent councell.

❡ A thankesgyuynge to god for his workes,

CAPI. XXV.

A O Lorde, thou arte my God, I wyll prayse the, and magnify thy name. For thou bryngeste maruelous thynges to passe, accordyng to thyne olde councels, truelye and stedfastlye. Thou makest of townes, heapes of stone, and of deade cyties, broken walles. The palaces of the wycked destroyest thou out of the cytie, that they shall neuer be buylded agayne. Therfore the very rude people must magnifye the, and the cyties of the cruell Hethen muste feare the. For thou arte the poore mans helpe, a strength for the nedefull in his necessite.

Thou art a defence agaynste euell wether, B a shadowe agaynst the hete. But vnto the presumptuous, thou arte lyke a stronge whyrle wynde, that casteth downe the bostynge of the vngodly, thou kepest men frõ heate, with the shadowe of the cloudes, thou cuttest of the braunches of tyrauntes.

Moreouer the Lorde of Hostes shall ones prepare a feast for all people vpon the hyll. A C plenteous, costly, pleasaunte feast, of fat and well fed beastes, of swete & most pure thynges. Upon the hyll shall he take awaye the syde vale that hangeth before the face of all people, and the couerynge wherwith all Gentyles are couered. As for death, he shall vtterly consume it. The Lorde God shall wype awaye the teares frõ all faces, & take awaye the confusion of his people thorowe the hole worlde. For the Lord hym selfe hath sayd it.

Apoca.vii.d and.xxi.b

At the same tyme shall it be sayde: lo, this D is our God in whome we put oure trust, and he hath healed vs. This is the Lord that we haue wayted for. Let vs reioyse and delite in his health. For the hande of the Lord resteth vpon this hyll. But Moab shall be threshen downe vnder hym, lyke as the straw is trodẽ vnder fete in a donge hyll. For he shall stretch oute his handes vpon hym, lyke as a swymmer doth to swymme. And with the power of his handes shall he caste downe hys hye pompe. As for his strong holdes and hye walles, he shall bowe them, caste them downe, & fell them to the grounde in to dust.

❡ A songe for the delyueraunce of the people,

CAPI. XXVI.

A Then shall this songe be songe in the lande of Iuda: We haue a stronge cytie, the walles and the ordinaunce shall kepe vs. Open the gates, that the good people may go in, which laboureth for ye trouth. And thou, which art the dore, & hast the matter in hande, shalt prouyde for peace, euen the peace that men hope for in the. Hope styll in the Lord, for in the Lord God is euerlastyng strength. For why, it is he, that bryngeth low the hye mynded cytezyns, & casteth downe the proude cities. He casteth them to the ground, yea euen into the myre, that they may be troden vnder the fete of the symple, & with the steppes of the poore. Thou (Lorde) considrest B the path of ye ryghteous, whether it be ryght, whether ye way of ye ryghteous be ryght. Therfore (Lord) we haue a respecte vnto the way of thy iudgementes, thy name and thy remembraunce reioyse the soule. My soule lusteth after the all the nyght longe, and my mynde hasteth frelye to the. For as soone as thy iudgement is knowen to the worlde, then the inhabitours of the earthe lerne ryghtousnesse. But the vngodly (thoughe he haue receaued grace) yet lerneth he not ryghtousnesse, but in that place where he is punysshed, he offendeth, and feareth not the glory of the Lorde.

Lord, they wyll not se thyne hye hand, but they shall se it, & be confounded, when thou shalt deuoure them with ye wrath of thy people, & with the fyre of thyne enemyes. But vnto vs, O Lorde, prouyde for peace, for thou workest in vs all our workes. O Lorde oure God, though suche lordes haue dominacion C vpõ vs as knowe not the, yet graunt that we may hope onely in the, & kepe thy name in remẽbraunce. The malicious Tyrauntes when they dye, are neyther in lyfe nor in the resurrection, for thou vysytest them & rootest them oute, & destroyest all the memoriall of them. Agayne, thou increasest the people, (O Lord) thou encreasest the people, thou shalte be praysed and magnified in all the endes of the world. The people that seke vnto the in trouble, that same aduersite whiche they cõplayne of is vnto them a chastening before the. Lyke as a wyfe with chylde (when her trauayle cõmeth vpõ her) is ashamed, cryeth, & suffereth the payne. Euen so are we, O Lorde, in thy syght. We are with chylde, we trauayle, and D beare, & with the spirte we bryng forth health where thorowe the earth is vndestroyed, and the inhabitours of the worlde perysshe not.

But as for thy dead men & oures, that be departed, they are in lyfe & resurrection. They lye in the earthe, they wake, & haue ioye, for thy dew is a dew of lyfe and lyght. But the place of the malicious tyrauntes is fallen awaye. So go nowe my people into thy chambre, and shut the dore to the, & suffre nowe the twynckling of an eye, tyll the wrath be ouer past. [illegible] For behold, the Lord wyll go out of his habitaciõ, and vyset the wyckednesse of them that dwell vpon earth. He wyll dyscouer the bloude that she hath deuoured, she shall neuer hyde them, that she hath murthered.

❡ He prophecyeth that all realmes shal be destroyed aboute the commynge of Christe.

CAPI. XXVII.

Then the Lorde with his heuy, greate, & A longe swearde shall visete Leuiathã that inuincible serpẽt, euen Leuiathan that croked serpente, and shall slaye the whalfysh in the see. At the same tyme shall men synge of the vyneyerde of Muscatell. I the Lorde kepe it, and water it in due season. I watche daye and nyght, that no man breake into it. I beare no euell wyll in my mynde. Who wyll compell me, that I greatly forgettynge all B all faythfulnesse, shulde burne it vp at ones with thornes and busshes? Or who wyll enforce me to kepe or make peace? It wyll come to this poynt, that Iacob shalbe roted agayn and Israell shalbe grene, and beare flowres, and they shall fyll ye hole worlde with theyr frute. Smyteth he not his smyter, as euell as he is smyten hymselfe. Destroyeth he not the murtherers, as he is murthered? Euerye man recompenseth with the measure that he receaueth: he museth vpon his sore wynde, as vpõ the dayes of extreme heate. And therfore shal C the iniquite of Iacob be thus reconcyled. And so shall he take away all the frute of his synnes.

As for aulter stones, he shall make them al as stones beaten to poulder, the groues and Idols shall not stande. The stronge cyties shalbe desolate, and the fayre cyties shall be lefte lyke a wyldernes. The catell shall fede and lye there, and the shepe shall eate it vp. Theyr haruest shall be brente, theyr wyues whiche were theyr bewtie when they came D forth, shalbe defyled. For it is a people without vnderstandyng, & therfore he that created them, shall not fauoure them & he that made them shall not be mercyfull to them. In that tyme shall the Lorde shute frõ the swyft water of Euphrates, vnto the ryuer of Egypte. And there shal the chyldren be chosen out one by one. Then shal ye great trompet be blowẽ, so that those which haue ben destroyed in the Assirians lande, and those that be scatred a brode in Egypt, shall come & worshyp ye Lord at Ierusalem, vpon the holy mounte.

❡ Agaynste the pryde of Ephraim, and agaynste false Preastes and preachers.

CAPI. XXVIII.

A Wo be to the crowne of pryde, to the dronken Ephraemytes, and to the fadyng floure, to the glory of his pompe, that is vpon the toppe of the plenteous valleye, whiche men be ouerladen with wyne. Behold, the strength and power of the Lord shall breake into the lande on euery syde, lyke a tẽpest of hayle, that beareth downe stronge holdes, and lyke an horrible, myghtye, & ouer flowynge water. And the proude crowne of the dronken Ephraemites, shall be troden vnder fote. And as for the fadynge floure, the glorye of his pompe, whiche is vpon the toppe of the plenteous valley, it shal happen vnto him, as to an vntymely frute before the B haruest come. Whiche as soone as it is sene, is by and by deuoured, or euer it come well in a mans hande.

And then the Lorde of Hostes shall be a ioyfull crowne, and a glorious garlande vnto the remnaunte of his people. Unto the lowly, he shalbe a sprete of iudgemente, and vnto them that dryue awaye the enemyes frõ the gates, he shalbe a sprete of strength. But they go wronge by the reason of wyne, they fall and stacker because of strong drynke. Yea euen the prestes and prophetes them selues go amisse, they are dronken with wyne, and weake brayned thorow stronge drynke. They erre in seynge, & in iudgemẽt they fayle. For C all tables are so full of vomite & fylthynes, that no place is cleane. What is ye amonge them, that can teache, instruct or enfourme the chyldren, which are weened frõ suck or taken frõ the brestes, of any other fashion then. Cõmaunde that maye be cõmaunded, byd that may be bydden, forbyd that maye be forbydden, kepe backe that maye be kept backe, here a lytle, there a lytle. And therfore the Lorde also shall speake with lispyng lyppes & with a straunge language vnto this people, to whõ he spake afore of this maner. This shal bryng reste, yf one refresshe the wery, yea this shall brynge reste. But they had no wyll to heare. And therfore the Lorde shall answere theyr stubbournes. (Cõmaunde that maye be commaunded, byd that maye be bydden, forbyd that maye be forbydden, kepe backe that may be kept backe, here a lytle, there a lytle) That they may go forth, fall backward, be brosed, snared & taken. Wherfore heare the worde of D the Lorde, ye mockers that rule the Lordes people, which is at Ierusalẽ. For ye comforte your selues thus: Tush, death & we are at a poynt, & as for hell, we haue made a condiciõ with it, as though there breake oute any sore plage, it shal not come vpon vs. For with disceyte wyll we escape, & with nymblenes wyll we defende oure selues. Therfore sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyll laye a stone in Sion, a greate stone, a costly corner stone for a sure foundacion, that who so putteth his trust in hym, shall not be confounded. Ryghtousnes wyll I set vp agayne in ye balaunce, E and iudgemẽt in the weyghtes. The tempest of hayle shall take away your refuge, that ye haue to deceaue withall, & the ouerflowynge waters shall breake downe your stronge holdes of dissimulaciõ. Thus the appoyntmente that ye haue made with death, shalbe done away, & the condicion that ye made with hel, shall not stand. When the greate destruction goeth thorowe, it shall all to treade you. It shall take you quyte awaye before it. For it shall go forth early in the mornyng, & cõtynue onely that daye and that nyght. And the very feare onely shall teach you, when ye heare it. For the bed shalbe so narowe that a man can not lye vpõ it. And ye couerynge so small, that a man maye not wynde hym selfe therin. For the Lorde shall steppe forthe as he dyd vpon the mount ✠ Perazim, & shall take on as he dyd F vpõ the ✠ vale of Gabaõ, that he may bryng forth his deuyce, his straung deuyce, & fulfyll his worke, his wonderfull worke. And therfore make no mockes at it, that your captiuite increase not, for I haue herde the Lorde of Hostes saye, that there shall come a soden destructiõ & plage vpõ ye hole earth. Take hede, & heare my voyce, pondre & marke my wordes well. Goeth not the housbande man euer in due season earnestly to his lande? he moweth & ploweth his grounde to sowe. And when he hath made it playne, he soweth it with fetches G or commyn, he soweth the wheate and Bar-lye in their place, Cillium & Rye also in their place. And that he maye do it right, his God teacheth him and sheweth him. For he treadeth not the fytches out with a wayne, neither bringeth he the carte here & there ouer the comin but he threscheth the fytches out with a flayle and the comyn with a rod. But the wheate he grindeth to make bread therof: In as moch as he can not bring it to passe with treadyng ouer. For neither the droppyng that ꝧ cart wheles make, ne his beastes can grynde it. This and suche lyke thinges come of the Lorde of hostes, whiche is maruelous in counsell, and great in ryghteousnesse.

¶ The destruction of Jerusalem. Agaynste the commaundementes of men.

CAPI. XXIX.

A WO be vnto the, o Ariel, thou citye that Dauid wan. Take yet some yeres, and let some feastes yet passe ouer: thē shal Ariel be distreged, so that she shall be heuye & sorowful, and shall be vnto me cuē as a lyon. For I wyll laye syege to the rounde about, & kepe the in with towres, and graue vp dykes agaynste the. And thou shalte be droughte lowe, and speke out of the erth, and thy wordes shal go humbly out of the grounde. Thy voyce shal come out of the erth, like ꝧ voyce of a wytche, and thy talking shall grone out of the myre. For the multitude of thyne ennemies shal be like moledust. And the nombre of tyrauntes shal be as the dust that the wynde B taketh awaye sodeynly. Thou shalt be visited of the Lord of hostes with thonder, erthquake, and with a great crasshe, & the whirle winde, tempest, and with the flame of a consumynge fyre. But now the multitude of all the people that wer out agaynst Ariel eue hole holte, the strong holdes and syege is lyke a dreme which appereth in the nyght. It is lyke as when an C hungry man dreameth ꝧ he is eating, and whē he awaketh, he hath nothyng: lyke as when a thirsty man dreameth that he is drinkinge, & when he awaketh, he is faynt, and his soule vnpacient.

So is the multytude of all people that muster them selues agaynst the hyll of Sion. But ye shall be at your wyttes ende, ye shall be ashamed, ye shall stacker and rele to & fro. Ye shall be dronken, but not of wyne. Ye shal fall, but not throughe dronkennesse. For the Lorde shall spue you an harde slepynge spirite, & holde downe your eyes: namely youre Prophetes and heades which holde se, them shall he couer. And all visions shall be vnto you, as the wordes that stande in a sealed letter, when one offereth it to a man that is learned, and sayth: rede vs this lettre. Then he answereth: I can not rede it, for it is shut. But ꝧ it be gyue to one that is not learned, & sayth vnto him: rede this lettre: Then sayth he: I can not rede.

Matth.xv.a Marck.vii.b

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: For as moche as the people draweth nye me with their mouth, and honoreth me byghly w their lyppes (where as their herte neuertheles is farre fro me, and ꝧ feare which they owe vnto me, that turne they to mens lawes and doctrines) therfore wyll I also shewe vnto this people a maruelous terrible & great thynge. (Namely this:) I will destroye the wysdome of their wise, and the vnderstanding of their learned men shall perysshe. Wo be vnto them E that seke so depe, to hyde their ymagynation Esay.xxx.b before the Lorde, whiche reherse their counsels in the darcknesse, & saye: who seeth vs, or who knoweth vs? Whiche ymaginacyon of yours is euen as whē the potters clay taketh aduysement, as though the worke might saye to the workmaster: make me not, or as when an erthen vessell sayth of the potter: he vnderstandeth not. Se ye not that it is harde by, that Libanus shalbe turned into Charmell, and that Charmell shall be taken as a wod? Then shall deaf men vnderstande the wordes of the boke, and the eyes of the blynd shall se without any cloude or darkenes. The oppressed shal reioyse a mery feast in the Lord, and the poore people shall reioyse in the holy one of Israell.

Then shall the furyous people ceasse, and the mockers shall be put awaye, and all they that do wronge shalbe plucked out, suche as laboure to draw men vnto synne, and that disceaue hym, which reproued them in the gate and suche as turne good persones to vanite. And therfore the Lorde (euen the defender G of Abraham) sayth thus vnto the house of Iacob. Nowe shall not Iacob be ashamed, nor his face confounded, when he seeth amonge his children (whome my handes haue made) such as halowe my name amonges them, that they may sanctify the holy one of Jacob, and feare the God of Israell, & that they which afore tyme were of an erroneous spirite, haue now vnderstandyng, and that suche as before coulde not speake, are now learned in my law.

¶ Curse agaynste them that forsake the counsell of God and seke vnto the counsel of man. He threatneth the rest of the people, whiche after the destruction of Jerusalem wente into Egypt.

CAPI. XXX.

WO be to those sturnynge children (sayth the Lorde) which take counsell, but not at me, which take a webbe in hande, but not after my wyll, that they maye heape one synne vpon another. They go downe in to Egypte, (and aske me no counsell) to seke helpe at the power of Pharao, and comforte in the shadowe of the Egyptians. But Pharaos helpe shall be youre confusion, and the comforte in the Egyptians shadowe shalbe youre owne shame. Your rulers haue ben at Zoan, and youre messaungers came vnto Hanes. But ye shall al be ashamed of the people that maye not helpe you, whiche shall not bringe you strength or comforte, but shame and confusion.

Youre beastes haue borne burthens vpon ꝧ

they backes towarde the south, thorowe the waye that is full of perill and trouble, because of the lyon and lyonesse, of the cockatrice and flyenge dragon. Yea the Mules bare youre substaunce, & the Camels brought your treasure vpon their croked backes, vnto a people that can not helpe you. For the Egyptians helpe shall be but vayne and losse. Therfore I tolde you also that youre pryde shoulde haue an ende. Wherfore goo hence and wryte them this in their tables, and note it in a boke: that it maye remayne by their posterite, and be syll kepte. For it is an obstinate people, vnkapthfull children, children that wyll not heare the lawe of the Lorde.

They dare say to the Prophetes: Meddle with nothyng, and vnto the sothsayers, tell vs of nothyng for to come, but speake frendly wordes vnto vs, and preache vs false thinges. Trede out of the waye, go out of ꝧ path, turne the holy one of Israel fro vs. Therfore thus sayth the holy one of Israel: forasmoch as ye haue cast of youre beaute, and comforted your selues with power and nimblenesse, and put your confidence therin: therfore shal ye haue this mischiefe agayne for your destruction and fall, lyke as an hygh wal that falleth because of some eyse (or blast) whose breaking commeth sodeynly.

And your destruction shall be as an erthen pot, whiche breaketh, no man touchyng it, yea and breaketh so soore, that a man shall not fynd a sheuer of it to fetche fyre in, or to take water therwith out of the pyt. For the Lorde God, euen the holy one of Israel hath promysed thus: With syll sytynge and rest shall ye be healed, in quietnesse and hope shal your strengthe lye. Notwithstandynge ye re- D garde it not, but ye wyll saye: No, for thus are we constrayned to flee vpon horses. And therfore shal ye flee, we must ryde vpon swift beastes, and therfore your persecuters shal yet be swifter. A thousande of you shall flee for one, or at the most for fyue, which do but onely gyue you euil wordes: til ye be desolate as a shyp mast vpon an hye mountayne, and as a token vpon an hyll.

Yet standeth the Lorde waytynge, that he maye haue mercye vpon you, and lyfteth hymselfe vp, that he maye receyue you to grace. For the Lorde God is ryghtous, happye are all they that wayte for hym. For thus (o thou people of Syon, and ye citye- E zens of Jerusalem) shall ye neuer be in heuynesse, for doubtlesse he wyll haue mercye vpon the. As soone as he heareth the voyce of thy crye, he wyll helpe the. The Lorde gyueth you the breed of aduersitie, and the water of trouble. But thyne instructer seeth not farre frome the, yf thyne eyes loke vnto thyne instructer, and thyne eares harken to his worde, that cryeth after the, and sayinge: this is the waye, goo this, and turne neyther to the ryght hand neyther to the lefte.

Moreouer yf ye destroye the syluer workes of your idolles, and caste awaye the golden copes that ye deck them with (as fylthynesse) an saye, get you hence: Then wyll he gyue rayne to the sede that ye shall sowe in the earthe, and gyue you breed of the increase of the earthe, so that all shall be plenteous and aboundaunt. Thy catell also shall he fede in the brode medowes, yea thyne oxen and Mules that tyll the grounde shall eate good fodder, whiche is pourged with the fanne. Goodly ryuers shall flowe ouer of F all his mountaynes and hylles. In the daye of the greate slaughter when the towres shall fall, the moone shall shyne as the sunne, and the sunne shyne shall be seuen fold and haue as moche shyne as in seuen dayes beside.

In that daye shall the Lorde bynde vp the brooslid sores of the people, and heale their wounds. Beholde, the glorye of the Lorde shall come frome farre, his face shall burne that no man shall be able to abyde it, his lyppes shall wagge for very indignation, and his tonge shall be as a consumynge fyre. His breth lyke a behement floude of water, whiche goeth vp to the throte. That he maye take awaye the people, whiche haue tourned them selues to vanite, and for hyde of ertoure, that lyeth in other folkes chawes.

But ye shall synge, as the vse is in the nyght of the holy solemnitie. Ye shall reioyse from your hert, as they that come with the pype, when they goo vp to the mounte of the Lorde, vnto the roche of Israell. The Lorde also shall sette vp the power of his voyce, and declare his terrible arme, with his angrye countenaunce, yea and the flame of the consumynge fyre, with earthequake, tempest of wynde and hayle stones. Then shall the Assirians feare alle, because of the voyce of the Lorde, whiche shall smyte hym with the rodde. And the same rod whiche the Lorde wyll sende vpon him, shall mowe the hole foundacion: with trompet, with noyse of warre and battayle to destroye. For he hath prepared the fyre of papas from the begynning, yea euen for kynges also. This hath he made depe & wyde, the nourishyng therof is fyre and wod innumerable, which ꝧ breth of the Lorde kyndleth as it were a match of brymstone.

¶ He curseth them that forsake God, and seke for the helpe of men.

CAPI. XXXI.

WO be vnto them that goo downe in to A Egypte for helpe, and trust in horses, & comforte them selues in charettes, because they be many, and in horsemen, because they be lustye and stronge. But they regarde not the holy one of Israell, and they aske no question at the Lorde. Where as he neuertheles plageth the wycked, and yet moueth not from his worde, when he stepeth forthe and taketh the victorye agaynst the houshold of the frowarde, and agaynst the helpe of euil

doers

doers. Now the Egyptians are men, and not God, and their horses flesshe, and not spirite. And as soone as the Lorde stretcheth out his hande, then shall the helper fall, and he that holde haue ben helped, and shall all together be destroyed. For thus hathe the Lorde spoken vnto me: Lyke as the lyon or lyons whelpe roreth vpon the praye that he hathe gotten, and is not afrayde, thoughe the multitude of shepherdes crye oute vpon him, neither abaished for all the noyse of them: So shall the Lorde of hostes come downe from the mounte of Sion, and defende his hyll. Lyke as byrdes flutter about their nestes, so shall the Lorde of hostes kepe, saue, defende and delyuer Jerusalem. Therfore, O ye children of Israel, turne agayne, lyke as ye haue exceded in your goynge backe. For in that day euery man shall caste oute his ydolles of syluer and golde, whiche ye haue made with youre synnefull handes. Assur also shall be slayne with the swerde, not with a mannes swerde. A swerde shall deuoure hym, but not a mannes swerde. And he shall flee from the swerde, and his seruauntes shall be taken prysoners. He shall go for feare to his strong holdes, and his princes shall flee from his badge. This hath the Lorde spoken, whose lyght burneth in Sion, and his fyre in Hierusalem.

CAPI. XXXII.

BEholde, the kynge shall gouerne after the rule of rightousnesse, and the princes shal rule according to the ballaunce of equitie. Ye shall be vnto men as a defence for the winde, & as a refuge for the tempest, lyke as a ruer of water in a thirsty place, & the shadow of a great rok in a dry land. The eyes of them that beare, shal take diligent hede. The hert of the vnwyse shal attayn to knowlege, and the tonge of the dombe shall speke playnely & distinctly. Then shal the nyggarde be no more called gentle, ne the churle lyberall. But the churle will be churlysshly mynded, and his hert will work, be cruel and playe the hypocrite, and ymagin abhominacions against God, to make the hungrye leane, and to withholde drynke from the thyrsty: These are the perylous weapons of the couetous, these be his shamefull counsels: that he maye begyle the poore with disceptfull workes, yea euen there as he sholde gyue sentence with the poore. But the lyberal person ymagineth honest thinges, and continueth vp with honestly.

Arise (ye ryche and ydle ones) harken vnto my voyce. Ye careles ones, marke my wordes. After yeres and dayes shall ye be brought in feare, O ye careles ones. For harueste shall be oute, and the grape gatheringe shall not come. O ye ryche ydle ones, ye that feare no peryll, ye shall be abashed and remoued; when ye se the barennesse, the nakednesse and preparynge to warre. Ye shall knocke vpon your breestes, because of the pleasaunt felde, and because of the fruitfull vineyarde. My peoples felde shall bringe thornes and thystles, for in euery house is dysluxurousnesse, and in the cityes wylfulnesse. The palaces also shall be broken, and the greatly occupyed cityes desolate. The towres and bulwarkes, shall become dennes for euermore, the pleasure of mules shall be tourned to pasture for shepe: vnto the tyme that the spirite be powred vpon vs from aboue.

Then shall the wyldernesse be a frutefull felde, and the plenteous felde shall be reckened for a wodde. Then shall equitie dwell in the deserte, and rygtousnesse in a frutefull lande. And the reward of rygtousnesse shall be peace, and her fruite, rest, and quyetnesse for euer. And my people shall dwell in the Innes of peace, in my tabernacle and pleasure where there is ynoughe in the mean. And when the hayle falleth, it shal fal in the wod and in the cite. O howe happye shall ye be when ye shal safely sowe your sede beside all waters, and drive thither the fete of your oxe and asses.

¶ The ruine agaynste the Assyryans. A description of them that shall be the Lordes.

CAPI. XXXIII.

THerfore wo be vnto the, o robber, shalt not thou be robbed also? and vnto the that layest wayte, as who saye, there holde no wayte be layde for the? Woo vnto the whiche doest hurte, euen so shalte thou be hurte also. And as thou layest wayte, so shall wayte be layde for the also.

Lorde be mercyfull vnto vs, we wayte for the. Thyne arme is at a poynte to spyrte vs, but be thou our helth in the tyme of trouble. Graunt that the people maye flee at the noyse of thy voyce, and that at thy vprysynge the Gentyles maye be scattered abrode, and that their spoyle maye be gathered, as the grashoppers are commenly gathered together in to the pyt. Stand vp Lorde, thou that dwellest on hye. Let Sion be fylled with equitie and rightousnesse. Let truth and faithfulnesse be in her tyme: power, helth, wisdome, knowlege, and the feare of God are her treasure. Beholde, their aungels crye without, the messingers of peace wepe bytterly. The streetes are waste, there walketh no man therin, the appoyntment is broken, the cityes are despysed, they are not regarded, the desolate earthe is in heuynesse. Libanus taketh it but for a sporte, that it is hewen downe: Saron is lyke a wyldernesse: Basan and Carmel are turned vpsyde downe. And therfore saith the Lorde: I wyll vp, nowe wyll I get vp, now wyll I aryse. Ye shall conceyue stubble and beare strawe, and youre spyrte shall be the fyre, that it maye consume you: and the people shall be burnte lyke lyme, as bushes thornes burne that are hewen of, and set in the fyre.

Now harken to ye that are farre of, howe I wyll with them, and consyder my glorye, ye that be at hande. The synners at Sion are afrayde, a sodeyne fearfulnesse are come vpon the ypocrites. What is he amonge vs, saye they, that wyll dwelle by that consumynge fyre? Whiche of vs maye abyde that euerlastynge heate? He that leadeth a godlye lyfe (saye I) and speaketh the truthe: He that abhorreth to doo violence and discepte: he that kepeth his hande that he touche no reward: whiche stoppeth his eares fro heare no counsell agaynst the innocent: which holdeth downe his eyes that he se none euyll. He it is that shall dwell on hye, whose sauegarde shall be in the true rocke, to him shall be gyuē the ryght true meat and drynke. His eyes shal se the kynge in his glorye: and in the wyde worlde, and his herte shal delyte in the feare of God. * What shall then become of the Scribe? of the Senatour? What of him that teacheth chyldren? There shalt thou not se a people of a straunge tonge to haue so diffused a language that it maye not be vnderstande: neyther so straunge a speche, but it shall be perceyued.

There shall Sion be sene, the heed citye of youre solemne feastes. There shall thyne eyes se Jerusalem, that gloryous habytacyon: the tabernacle that neuer shall remoue, whose nayles shall neuer be taken out, nor of without ende, whose cordes euerychone shal neuer corupte: for the glorious maieste of the Lorde shall there be presente amonge vs. In that place where fayre brode ryuers and streames are, shall neyther Galey rowe, ne greate shyppe sayle. For the Lorde shall be oure Capytayne, the Lorde shall be oure lawe gyuer. The Lorde shall be our kynge, and he hym selfe shall be oure Sauyoure. There are the cordes so layde abrode, that they can not be better. The maste set vp of suche a facion, that no banner nor sayle hangeth theron: but there is maled great spoyle, yea lame men runne after the praye. There syeth no man that saythe: I am sycke, but all cupll is taken away from the people that dwell there.

¶ The laste destruction of the Synagoge, in which the kingdome and preesthode of that people was translated to the Churche and congregacyon of Christe.

CAPI. XXXIIII.

COme ye heathen and heare, take hede ye people. Harken thou earth and all that is therin: thou rounde compasse & all that groweth therupon, for the Lorde is angry with all people, and his displeasure is kyndled agaynst all the multytude of them, to curse them, and to slay them. So that their slayne shall be caste oute, and their bodyes stynke: that euen the very hylles shal be wet with the bloud of them. All the sterres of heuen shall be consumed, & the heuen shall folde togyther lyke a roll, and all the sterres therof shall fall, lyke as the leaues fall from the vines and tygge trees. For my swearde (sayth he) shall be bathed in heauen, and shall immediatly come downe vpon Idumea, and vpon the people whiche I haue cursed for my vengeaunce.

And the Lordes swearde shall be full of bloude, and be ruddye with the fatnesse and bloud of lambes and gotes, with the fatnesse of the kydneys of wethers. For the Lorde shall kyll a great offeryng in Bosra, and in the lande of Idumea. There shall the Vnicornes fall with the Bulles, (that is with the gyauntes) and their land shall be walshed with bloude, and their grounde corupte with fatnesse. Vnto the also (O Syon) shall come the daye of the vengeaunce of God, and the yere when thyne owne iudgementes shall be recompensed. Thy floudes shall be tourned to pytche, and thyne earth to brymstone, and therwith shall the lande be kyndled, so that it shall not be quenched day nor nyght: But smoke euermore, and so forth to lye waste. And no man shall goo thorowe thy lande for euer: But Pellicanes, Storkes, great owles, and Rauens that haue it in possession, and dwell therin.

For God shall spreade out the lyne of desolacion vpon it, and wey it with the stones of emptynesse. When kynges are called vpon, there shall be none, and all princes shall be awaye. Thornes shall growe in their palaces, nettles and thistles in their stronge holdes, that the dragons maye haue their pleasure therin, and that they maye be a courte for Estriches. There shall straunge bulles and and monstruous beastes mete one an other, and the wylde kepe company togyther. There shall the Lamya lye, and haue her lodgyng. There shall the hedgehog buylde, bygge, be there at home, and bringe forthe his yonge ones. There shal the kites come togither eche one to his lyke.

Seke thorowe the scripture of the Lorde, and rede it. There shall none of these thynges be lefte out, there shall not one (ne suche lyke) fayle. For what his mouth commaundeth, that same dothe his spirite gather together (or fulfylleth.) Vpon whome so euer the lot falleth, or to whome he dealeth it with the lyne: those shall possesse the enherytaunce from generacion to generacyon, and dwell therin.

¶ Of the tyme and kyngdome of Christe.

CAPI. XXXV.

BVt the wyldernesse shall reioyse, the waste grounde shall be glade, and florysshe as the lylye. She shall florysshe pleasauntly, and be ioyfull, and euer be gyuynge of thankes more and more. For the glorye of Libanus, the beautye of Carmel and Saron shall be gyuen her. These shall shall knowe the honoure of the Lorde, and the maiestie of our God. And therfore strengthen the weake handes, and comforte the fe-ble knees.

Saye vnto them that are of a fearfull herte: be of good chere and feare not. Be-holde your God commeth to take vengeaunce
B and to rewarde, God commeth his own self, Math.xv.c and wyll delyuer you. Then shall the eyes of the blynde be lyghtened, and the eares of the deafe opened. Then shal the lame man leape as an harte, and the domme mans tong shall gyue thankes.
In the wyldernesse also there shall welles
sprynge, and floudes of water in the deserte.
The drye grounde shall turne to ryuers, and the thurstye to sprynges of water. Where as dragons dwelt afore, there shal growe swete
C floures and grene russhes. There shal be fote pathes and common stretes, this shall be called the holye waye. No vncleane personne shall goo thorowe it, for the Lorde him self shall goo with them that waye, and the ignoraunte shall not erre. There shall be no lyon, and no rauysshynge beest shall come D therin, nor be there, but men shall goo there free and safe. And the redemed of the Lorde shall conuert, and come to Syon with than-kesgyuynge. Euerlastyng ioye shall they haue, pleasure and gladnesse shall be among them.
And all sorowe and heuynesse, shall vanisshe
awaye.

¶ Ierusalē is assieged by Sennacherib in the tyme of kynge Ezechias.

CAPI. XXXVI.

A In the fourtenth yere of kynge Ezechias,
iiii.Re.xviii.c came Sennacherib kynge of the Assirians
downe, to laye siege vnto all the strong ciii.Par.xxxii.a tyes of Juda. * And the kynge of the Assirians sent Rabsakeh from Lachis towarde Jerusalem agaynst kynge Ezechias, with a greuous hoste, whiche set hym by the condyte of the ouerpole, in the waye that goeth thorow
the fullers lande. And so there came forth vn to him Eliakim Helkiahs son, the President, Sobna the Scribe, and Joah Asaphs sonne ÿ
Secretary.
And Rabsakeh sayd vnto them: Tell Eze
chias that the greate kynge of Assiria sayth thus vnto him: What presumpcion is this that thou trustest vnto? Thou thynkest peraduenture, thou haste counsell and power ynough to maynteyn this warre: or els whe to trustest thou, that thou castest thy selfe of fro me? lo, thou puttest thy trust in a broken staffe of reed (I meane Egypte) whiche he that leaneth vpon, it goeth in to his hande, &
shoteth him thorow.
B Euen so is Pharao the kynge of Egypte,
vnto all them that truste in hym. But yf thou woldest saye to me: we trust in the Lorde our God: A goodly God in dede: whose hye pla ces and aulters Ezechias toke downe, and cō maunded Juda and Jerusalem to worshyp onely before the aulter. Abyde the, thou hast made a condicion with my Lorde the kynge of the Assyrians, that he shoulde gyue the two thousande horsses: are thou hable to set men vpon them? Seynge nowe that thou canste not resyste the power of the smallest prynce that my Lorde hath, how darest thou truste in the charettes and horsemen of Egypte? Moreouer, thynkest thou I am come downe hyther to destroye this land without the Lordes wyll? The Lorde sayd vnto me, go downe in to ÿ land, that thou mayste de-stroye it.
Then sayd Eliakim, Sobna and Joah vn-
to Rabsakeh: Speake to vs thy seruauntes (we praye the) in the Sirians language, for we vnderstande it well: And speake not to vs in the Jewes tonge, lest the folke heare, which lyeth vpon the wall. Then answered Rabsakeh: Thyncke ye that the kynge sent me to speake this onely vnto you? Hath he not sent me to them also that lye vpō the wall: that they be not cōpelled to eate theyr owne donge, and drynke theyr owne stale with you?
And Rabsakeh stode styffe, and cryed with a loude voyce in the Jewes tonge, and sayd. C Nowe take hede howe the greate kynge of the Assirians gyueth you warnynge. Thus sayth the kynge: Lette not Ezechias dis-ceyue you, for he shall not be hable to delyuer
you. Moreouer let not Ezechias comfort you in the Lorde, when he sayeth: The Lorde withoute doubte shall defende vs, and shall not gyue ouer this citye in to the hande of the kynge of the Assirians, byleue hym not.
But thus sayeth the kynge of Assiria: Ob-teyne my fauoure, enclyne vnto me: so may euery man enioye his vyneyardes and fygge-trees, and drynke the water of his cesterne:
vnto the tyme that I come my selfe, and brynge you in to a lande that is lyke youre owne: wherin is wheate and wyne, which is bothe sowen with sede, and planted with vyneyardes. Let not Ezechias disceyue you, when he sayth vnto you: the Lorde shall de-lyuer vs.
Myght the goddes of the Gentyles kepe D euerye mannes lande frome the power of the kynge of the Assirians? Where is the God of Hemath and Arphad? Where is the God of Sepharuaim? And who was hable to defende Samaria out of my hande? Or whiche of all the Goddes of the landes, hath delyue-
red their countrey out of my power, so that ÿ Lorde shold deliuer Jerusalem fro my hande?
Unto this Ezechias messengers helde theyr tonges, and answered not one worde: for the kyng had charged them that they shulde gyue him none answere. So came Eliakim Helki-ahs sonne the President, Sobna the Scribe, & Joah Asaphs sonne the Secretary, vnto Ezechias with rent clothes, and told him the wor-des of Rabsakeh.

¶ Ezechias humbleth hym selfe before the Lorde.
The armye of Sennacherib is slayne of the Angel of the Lorde: and he him selfe is kylled of his owne sonnes.

CAPI

CAPI. XXXVII.

A When Ezechias herde that, he rent his iiii.Re.xix.a clothes, and put on a sackcloth, & went in to the temple of the Lorde. But he sent Eliakim the President, Sobna ÿ Scribe with the eldest preestes clothed in sack vnto ÿ Prophete Esaye the sonne of Amoz, and they sayd vnto him: Thus sayth Ezechias: This is the day of trouble, of plage, and of wrath:
lyke as when a chylde commeth to the byrth,
but the woman hathe no power to brynge it forthe. The Lorde thy God, no doubte, hath well consydered the wordes of Rabsakeh, whome his lorde the kynge of Assirians hath sent, to defye and blaspheme the lyuynge
God: with suche wordes as the Lorde thy God hath herd ryght well. And therfore lift vp thy prayer for the remnaunte that yet are lefte. So the seruauntes of kynge Ezechias came to Esaye.
B And Esaye gaue them this answere: Say
thus vnto your Lord: thus sayth the Lorde:
Be not afrayde of the wordes that thou hast
herde, wherwith the kynge of the Assyryans seruauntes haue blasphemed me. Be-holde, I wyll cause a wynde goo ouer him,
as soone as he heareth it, he shall go agayne
in to his countrey, there wyll I destroye him with the swerde. Nowe when Rabsakeh retourned, he founde the kynge of Assiria lay-inge siege to Lobnah, for he hadde vnderstande, that he was departed from Lachis.
For there came a rummour, that Tharhakah
kynge of Ethiopia was come forth to warre agaynst him.
And when the kynge of Assiria herde that,
C he sent other messengers to kynge Ezechias, with this commaundement: Saye thus to Ezechias kynge of Juda: Let not thy God disceyue the in whome thou hopest, and say-est: Jerusalem shall not be gyuen in to the handes of the kynge of Assiria. For thou kno-west well howe the kynges of Assyria haue handled all the landes that they haue subuerted, and hopest thou to escape? Were the people of the Gentyles (whome my proge-nytours conquered) delyuered at anye tyme thorowe theyr goddes? As namely, Gozan, Haran, Rezeph, and the chyldren of Eden, whiche dwelle at Thalassar. Where is the kynge of Hemah, and the kynge of Arphad, &
the kynge of the citye of Sepharuaim, Ena and Aua?
Nowe when Ezechias hadde receyued the lettre of the messengers, and red it, he wente
vp in to the house of the Lorde, and opened the lettre before the Lorde. And Ezechi-as prayed before the Lorde, on this maner:
O Lorde of hostes, thou God of Israel, which dwellest vpon Cherubyn. Thou art the God that onely is God of all the kyngdomes of the worlde, for thou onely hast created heuen and erth. Enclyne thyn eare, Lorde, and con-sidre, open thyne eyes, o Lorde, and se and pon der all the wordes of Sennacherib, whiche D hath sente his embassage to blaspheme the lyuynge God.
It is true, O Lorde, that the kynges of Assiria haue conquered all kyngdomes & landes, and caste theyr goddes in the fyre. Not-withstandyng those were no goddes, but the workes of mens handes, of wood or stone, therfore haue they destroyed them. Delyuer vs then, O Lorde our God, from the handes of Sennacherib; that al kyngdomes of the erth
maye knowe that thou onely arte the Lorde.
Then Esaye the sonne of Amoz, sent vnto E-zechias, saying: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel: where as thou hast made thy prayer vnto me, as touchynge Sennacherib this is the aunswere, that the Lorde hathe gyuen
concernynge him:
Despysed arte thou and mocked, o dough-ter of Syon, he hath shaken his heed at the, o doughter of Jerusalem. But thou Sennacherib, whom hast thou defyed and blasphe-med? and agaynst whome thou hast lyfted vp thy voyce, and exalted thy proude lokes? euē agaynste the holye one of Israell. Thou with thy seruauntes haste blasphemed the Lorde, and thus holdest thou of thy selfe: I couer
the hye mountaynes and sydes of Libanus with my horsemen.
And there wyll I cutte downe the hygh E Cedre trees, and the fayrest Fyrre trees. I wyll vp in to the heyght of it, and in to the thycke of the tymbre woddes. Yf there be no water, I wyll graue and drynke. And as for waters of defence, I shal drye them vp with the fete of myne hoste. Yea (sayest thou) hast thou not herde what I haue taken in hande, and brought to passe of old tyme? That same wyll I doo nowe also: waste, destroye, and brynge stronge cityes vnto heapes of stones.
For theyr inhabitoures shall be lyke lame men, broughte in feare and confounded.
They shall be lyke the grasse and grene her-bes in the felde, lyke the haye vpon house
toppes, that wythereth afore it be growē vp.
I knowe thy wayes, thy goynge forth, and thy comming home, yea and thy madnesse a-gaynst me. Therfore thy furiousnesse agaynst F me, and thy pryde is come before me. I wyll put a rynge in thy nose, and a brydle byt in the chawes of the, and turne the aboute euen the same waye thou camest. I wyll gyue the also this token, O Ezechias, this yere shalte thou eate that is kepte in store, and the nexte yere suche as groweth of him selfe, and in the thyrde yere ye shall sowe and repe, yea ye shall plante vyneyardes, and enioye the fru-tes therof.
And suche of the house of Juda as are escaped, shall come togyther, and the remnaunt shall take roote benethe, and brynge forthe frute aboue. For the escaped shall go oute of Jerusalem, and the remnaunt from ÿ mount
Syon.
And this shall the gelousye of the Lorde of G
hostes brynge to passe. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde, concernynge the kynge of the Assyrians: He shall not come in to the city, and shall shoote no arowe in to it, there shall no shylde hurt it, neither shall they dygge about it. The same waye that he came, shall he re-tourne, and not come at this citye, sayethe the Lorde. And I wyll kepe and saue the cytye (sayth he) for myne owne, and for my seruante Dauids sake.

4.Reg.xix.g Eccle.xlviii.d Tobye.i.d 1.Mach.vii.f 2.Mac.viii.e The death of Senacherib.

*Thus the aungell went forth, and slewe of the Assirians hoste, an hundred foure score and fyue thousande. And when men arose vp earlye (at Jerusalem,) beholde all laye full of deed bodyes. So Sennacherib the kynge of the Assirians brake vp and dwelt at Nuuue. Afterwarde it chaunced, as he prayed in the temple of Nesrah his God, and Adramalech and Hasazer his owne sonnes, slewe hym with the swerde, and fledde in to the lande of Ararat. And Asar hadon his sonne raygned after him.

¶ Ezechias is sycke vnto the death, but is yet reuyued by the Lorde, and lyueth.xv. yeares after: for whiche benefyte he giueth thankes.

CAPI. XXXVIII.

A 4.Reg.xx.a 2.Par.xxxii.f

NOt long after this, was Ezechias sycke vnto the deathe: and the Prophete Esaye the sonne of Amoz came vnto hym, and sayde: Thus commaundeth the Lorde: Set thyne house in ordre, for thou muste dye, and shalte not escape. Then Ezechias tourned his face towarde the wall, and prayed vnto the Lorde, and sayde: Remembre, O Lorde, that I haue walked before the in trouthe, and stedfast herte, and haue doone the thynge that is pleasaunt to the. And Ezechias wepte sore.

Then sayde God vnto Esaye: Goo and speake vnto Ezechias: the Lorde God of Dauid thy father sendeth the this worde: I haue herde thy prayer, and considred thy teares: beholde I wyll put fyftene yeres mo vnto thy lyfe, and delyuer the and the citye also, from the hande of the kynge of Assyria, for I wyll defende the citye. And take the this token of the Lorde, that he wyll doo it, as he hathe spoken: Beholde I wyll returne the shadowe of Achaz dyall, that nowe is layde out with the sunne, and bring it tenne degrees backwarde. So the sunne tourned tenne degrees backwarde, the whiche he was descended afore.

B

¶ A thankesgyuinge, whiche Ezechias kyng of Juda wrote, whan he hadde bene sycke and was recouered.

I Thought I shold haue gone to the gates of hel in my best age, and haue wanted the residue of my yeres.

I spake within my selfe: I shall neuer beholde the Lorde God in this lyfe: I shall neuer se man amonge the dwellers of the worlde.

Myne age is folden vp together, and taken awaye fro me lyke a shepeherdes cotage: my lyfe is hewen of, lyke as a weuer cutteth of his webbe.

Whyle I was yet talkynge my rede, he hewed me of, and made an ende of me in one daye.

I thought I wold haue lyued vnto the morowe: but he brosed my bones lyke a lyon, & made an ende of me in one daye.

Then chatred I lyke a swalowe: and lyke a crane, and mourned as a doue.

I lyfte vp myne eyes in to the heyght: O Lorde (sayd I) violence is wrong vnto me, be thou surety for me.

What shall I speake or saye, that he maye this w? that I may lyue out all my yeres, yea in the bytternesse of my lyfe?

Verely (Lorde) men shoulde lyue in bitternesse: and all my lyfe muste I passe ouer therin, for thou raisest me vp, & wakest me.

But loo, I wyll be well content with this bytternesse.

Neuertheles my conuersacion hath so pleased the, that thou wouldest not make an ende of my life, so that thou hast cast al my synnes behynde thy backe.

For hell prayseth not the, death dothe not magnifye the.

They that goo downe in to the graue prayse not thy trouthe: but the lyuynge, yea the lyuynge knowlege the, lyke as I do this daye.

The father telleth his children of thy layth fulnesse.

Delyuer vs (O Lorde) and we will synge prayses in thy house, all the dayes of our lyfe.

And Esaye sayde: take a playster of figges, and laye it vpon the sooze, so shall he be hole.

Then sayde Ezechias: O what a greate thynge is this, that I shall goo vp into the house of the Lorde.

¶ Ezechias is reproued of Esaye, because he shewed his treasure vnto the Embassadours of Babylon.

CAPI. XXXIX.

AT the same tyme Merodach Baladam, Baladams sonne kynge of Babylon, sent letters and presentes to Ezechias. For he vnderstode how he had ben sycke, and was recouered agayne. And Ezechias was glad thereof, and shewed them the cõmodities of his treasure, of syluer, of golde, of spyces and rootes of precyous oyles, all that was in his cupbordes and treasure houses. There was not one thynge in Ezechias house, and so throwe out all his kyngdome, but he let them se it.

Then came Esaye the Prophete to kynge Ezechias, and sayde vnto him: What haue the men sayde, and frome whence came they vnto the? Ezechias answered: they came oute of a farre countrey vnto me, out of Babylon. Esaye sayde: what haue they loked vpon in thyne house? Ezechias answered: All that is in myne house haue they sene: and there is nothing in my treasure, but I shewed it them.

Then sayd Esaye vnto Ezechias: Vnderstande the worde of the Lorde of hoostes. Beholde the tyme wyll come that euery thynge whiche is in thyne house, and all that thy progenytoures haue layde vp in store vnto this daye, shall be caryed to Babylon, and no thynge lefte behynde. This sayth the Lorde. Yea, and parte of thy sonnes that shall come of the, and whom thou shalt get, shall be caried hence, and become gelded chamberlaynes in the kyng of Babylons courte: Then said Ezechias to Esay: Nowe God prospere his owne worde, whiche he hath spoken. He sayd moreouer: so there be peax and faythfulnesse in my tyme.

¶ The commynge of Sayncte Johñ Baptyst. The preparacion of the Apostles. The callynge of the Gentyles.

CAPI. XL.

BE of good cheere my people, be of good cheere (sayth your God) comfort Jerusalem, and tell her that her trauayle is at an ende, that her offence is pardoned, that she hath receyued of the Lordes hande sufficient correction for all her synnes. A voyce cryeth: Prepare the waye for the Lord in the wildernesse, make streyght the pathe for our God in the desert. Let all vales be exalted, and euery mountayne and hyll be layde lowe. What is croked, let it be made streight, and let the rough places be made playne fyldes. For the glory of the Lorde shall appere, and all flesshe shal se it, for why? the mouth of ỹ Lorde hath spoken it.

The same voyce spake: Nowe crye. And I sayd: what shall I crye? Then spake it: that all flesshe is grasse, and that all the beautye therof, is as the flour of the felde. The grasse is withered, the floure falleth awaye. Euen so is the people as grasse, when the breethe of the Lord bloweth vpon them. The grasse withereth, or the floure fade awaye: But the worde of our God endureth for euer. Moreouer the voyce cryed thus: Go vp vnto the hyll (o Sion) thou that bringest good tydynges, lyft vp thy voyce with power, o thou preacher Jerusalem. Lyft it vp without feare, and say vnto the cytyes of Juda: behold your God, behold the Lorde, euen the almighty shall come with power, and beare rule with his arme. Beholde he bringeth his treasure with him, & his workes goo before hym. He shall fede his flocke lyke an herdman. He shall gather the lambes togither with his arme, and cary them in his bosome, and shall kyndly entreate those that beare yonge.

Who hath holden the waters in his fyste? Who hath measured heuen with his spanne, and hath comprehended all the earthe of the worlde in thre fyngers? Who hathe weyed the mountaynes and hylles? Who hath restourned the mynde of the Lorde? Or who is of his counsell to teache him? At whom hath he asked counsell, to make him vnderstande, and to lerne him the waye of iudgement: to teache him science: and to instruct him in the waye of vnderstandyng? Beholde, all people are in comparison of him, as a drop to a boket full; and are counted as the lesse thynge that the balaunce weyeth. Beholde, the Iles are in comparison of him, as the shadowe of the sunne beame. Libanus is not sufficient to mynistre fyre for his offeryng, and all the beastes therof are not ynoughe to one sacrifyce. All people in comparison of him, are rekened as nothynge, yea vayne vanitie and emptynesse.

D Romano.xi.d 1.Corinth.ii.a Sapien.x.e

To whom then wil ye liken God? or what similitude wil ye set vp vnto him? Shal ỹ carueer make him a carued ymage? and shall the goldsmyth couer him with golde, or caste hym in to a forme of syluer plates? Moreouer shall the ymage maker (that the poore man whyche is disposed maye haue some thynge to set vp also) seke oute and chose a tree, that is not rotten, and carue of it an ymage that moueth not? Know ye not this? Herde ye neuer of it? Hathe it not ben preached vnto you from the beginning? Haue ye not ben informed of this sithens the foundacion of the erth was layde: that he sitteth vpon the circle of the worlde, and that all the inhabitauntes of the worlde are in comparison of him but as grashoppers: That he spredeth oute the heauens as a couering: that he stretcheth them out, as a tent to dwell in: that he bringeth princes to nothyng, and the iudges of the erth to dust: so that they be not planted nor sowen agayne, neither their stocke rooted agayne in the erth? For as soone as he bloweth vpon them, they wither and fade awaye, lyke the strawe in a whyrlwynde.

Ecc.xviii.d E

To whom now wil ye lyken me, and who shal I be like, saith the holy one? Lift vp your eyes on hye, and cõsider. Who hath made those thinges, whiche come out by so greate heapes? and he can call them all by their names. For there is nothyng hyd vnto the greatnesse of his power, strengthe, and myghte. How maye then Jacob thynke, or howe maye Israell saye: My wayes are hyde frome the Lorde, and my God knoweth not of my iudgementes. Knowest thou not, or hast thou not herd, that the euerlastyng God, the Lorde whiche made all the corners of the earth, is neyther werye nor fayne: and that his wysedome can not be comprehended: but that he giueth strength vnto the werye, and power vnto the fayne? Children are wery and fayne and the strongest men fall: But vnto them that haue the Lorde before their eyes, shall strengthe be encreased. Eagles wynges shall growe vpon them: When they runne, they shall not fall: and when they goo, they shall not be werye.

¶ Of the goodnesse and mercy of God towarde the people.

CAPI. XLI.

A BE styll (ye Ilandes) and harken vnto me. Be stronge ye people: Come hyther and shewe youre cause, we wyll goo to the lawe togyther. Who rayseth vp the iuste from the rysynge of the sunne, and calleth hym to goo forthe? Who casteth downe the people, and subdueth the kynges before hym: that he maye throwe them all to the grounde with his swearde, and scatter them lyke stubble with his bowe? He foloweth vpon them, and goeth safely hym selfe, and commeth in no foote pathe with his fete. Who hathe made, created, and called the generacions frome the begynnynge? Euen I the Lorde, whiche am the fyrst, and with the last.

B Beholde ye Iles, that ye maye feare, and ye endes of the erth, that ye maye be abasshed, drawe nye, and come hyther. Euery man hath exhorted his neyghboure, and brother, and bydden hym be stronge. The smyth comforted the moulder, and the yron smyth the hammer man, saying: It shall be good that we fasten this caste worke: & euen they fastened it with nayles, that it sholde not be moued. And thou Israel my seruaunte: Iacob my chosen seed of Abraham my beloued, whom I ledde from the endes of the earthe by the hande: For I called the frome farre, and sayde vnto the: Thou shalte be my seruaunte, I haue chosen the, and wyll not caste the awaye: be not afrayde, for I wyll be with the. Loke not be-
C hynde the, for I wil be thy God to strengthe the, helpe the, and to kepe the with this ryght hande of myne.

Esaye.xliiii.a xlviii.a. Apo. ii.b.xxii.c

Beholde, all they that withstande the, shal come to confusion and shame: and thyne aduersaries shall be destroyed and broughte to noughte. So that who so seketh after them, shall not fynde them. Thy destroyers shal perish, and so shall they that vndertake to make batayle agaynst the. For I thy Lord and God wil strengthen thy right hande. Euen I that saye vnto the, Feare not, I will helpe the. Be not afrayde thou lytle worme Iacob, & thou
D despised Israel, for I wil helpe the, sayth the Lorde and the holy one of Israel thyne auenger. Beholde, I wil make the a treding carte, and a newe wayne, that thou mayst thresh and grynd the mountaynes, and bryng the hylles to powder. Thou shalt fan them, & the wynd shall cary them awaye, and the whyrlwynde shall scatter them. But thou shalte reioyse in the Lorde, and shalt delite in praysing the holy one of Israel.

When the thrystye and poore seke water
E and fynde none, and when theyr tonge is drye of thyrste: I gyue it theym, sayth the Lorde. I the God of Israell forsake them not. I brynge forth floudes in the hylles, and welles in the playne feldes. I tourne the wyldernesse to ryuers, and the drye lande to Condites of water. I plante in the waste grounde trees of Cedre, Boxe, Myrre, and Olyues. And in the dry, I set Fyrre trees, Elmes and Hawthornes togither. All this do I, that they all togither maye se and marke, perceyue with their hertes and considre, that the hand of the Lorde maketh these thinges, and that the holy one of Israel bryngeth them to passe.
F Stande at youre cause, sayth the Lorde, & bring forth youre strongest grounde, counselleth the king of Iacob. Let the goddes come forth themselues, and shew vs the thinges that are past what they be: let them declare them vnto vs that we maye take them to herte, and knowe them hereafter. Eyther let them shewe vs thynges for to come, and tel vs what shal be done hereafter: so shall we know that they be goddes. Shewe some thynge, eyther good or bad: so wyll we bothe knowlege the same and tell it out.

Beholde, ye goddes are of noughte, and youre makynge is of noughte, but abhominacion hathe chosen you. Neuerthelesse, I haue waked vp one from the north, & he shal come,
G And an other from the East, whiche shall call vpon my name, and shal come to the princes, as the potter to his claye, and as ye potter treadeth downe the myre: Who tolde that afore? So wil we confesse and saye, that he is ryghtous. But there is none that sheweth or declareth any thinge, there is none also that heareth youre wordes. Beholde, I wyll fyrste graunte them of Syon and Ierusalem to be Euangelistes. But when I considre: there is not one amonge them that prophecyeth, neyther (when I aske him) that aunswereth one worde. Lo, wycked are they and vayne, with the thinges also that they take in hand: yea wynd are they, and emptinesse, with their ymages togither.

¶ The commynge of Christe, and his baptisme.

CAPI. XLII.

BEholde, nowe therfore, this is my seruaunt, whome I wyll kepe to my selfe: A myne electe: In whome my soule shall [illegible] be pacified. I wyll gyue him my spirite, that he maye shewe forthe iudgement and equitie amonge the Gentyles. He shal not be an outcryer, nor an hye mynded person. His voyce shall not be herde in the stretes. A brosed rede shal he not breake, and the smokynge flaxe shall he not quenche: but faythfully and truly shal he gyue iudgement. He shal neither be ouerthrowne ne hastye, that he maye restore ryghteousnes vnto the erth: and the Gentyles also shall kepe his lawes. For thus saythe God the Lorde vnto him (euen he that made heuens, and spredde them abrode, and set forth the earthe with her increase: whiche geueth brethe vnto the people that is in it, and to them that dwell therin) I the Lord haue called the in ryghtousnesse, and ledde the by the hande. Therfore wyll I also defende the, and [illegible] geue the for a couenaunt of the people, and to be the lyght of ye Gentyles. That thou mayst open the eyes of the blynde, let out the prisoners, and them that syt in darcknesse, out of the dongeon house. I my selfe, whose name
B is the Lorde, whiche gyue my power to none [illegible]
other, neyther myne honour to the Goddes: shewe you these newe tydynges, and tell you them or they come, for olde thynges also are come to passe.

Synge therfore vnto the Lorde, a newe songe of thankes gyuynge: blowe oute his prayse vnto the ende of the worlde. They that be vpon the see, and all that is therin, prayse him, the Iles, and they that dwell in them. Let the wyldernesse with her cityes lyfte vp her voyce, the townes also that be in Cedar. Let them be gladde that sytte vpon rockes of stone, and let them crye downe from the hygh mountaynes: ascrybyng almightynesse vnto the Lord, and magnifieng him among ye Gentyles. The Lord shal come forth as a gyaunt, and take a stomak to him lyke as a fresh man
C of warre. He shall rore and crye, & ouercome his ennemies.

I haue longe holden my peax (saythe the Lorde) shoulde I therfore be styll, and kepe sylence for euer? I wyll crye lyke a trauelyng woman, and ones wyll I destroye and deuour. I wil make waste both mountayne and hyll, and drye vp euery grene thyng that groweth theron. I wyll drye vp the floudes of water, and drinke vp the ryuers. I will bryng the blynde in to a strete that they knowe not: and lede them in to a fotepath, that they are ignoraunt in. I shall make darcknesse lyghte before them, and the thyng that is croked to be streyght. These thynges wyll I doo, and not forget them. And therfore let them confounde, and be ashamed earnestly, that hope in ydolles, and saye to facioned ymages: ye are our goddes.

D Heare, o ye deafe men, and sharpen youre syghtes to se, o ye blynde. But who is blynder then my seruaunte? Or so deafe as my messengers whome I sente vnto them? For who is so blynde as my people, and they that haue the rule of them? They are lyke as yf thou vnderstodest moche, and keptest nothing: or yf one herde well, but were not obedient. The Lorde be mercyfull vnto them for his ryghtousnesse sake, and that his worde might be magnified and praysed. But it is a mischeuous and wicked people. Their yonge men belong all to the snare, and shall be shut into prysō houses. They shal be caryed awaye captiue, & no man shall lose them. They shall be troden vnder fote, and no man shal laboure to bryng them agayne. But who is he among you that pondreth this in his mynde that considreth it, and taketh it for a warning in time to come.

Who suffred Iacob to be troden vnder fote, and Israel to be spoyled? Did not the Lorde? Now haue we synned agaynst him, and haue had no delyte to walke in his wayes, neither ben obedient vnto his lawe. Therfore hathe he poured vpon vs his wrathful displeasure, and stronge batayle, whiche maketh vs haue to do on euery syde, yet wyll we not vnderstande: He burneth vs vp, yet synketh it not in to our hertes.

¶ God promyseth to send his Chryst, whiche shal delyuer his people. He forgyueth synnes for his owne sake.

CAPI. XLIII.

BUt nowe the Lorde that made the, O Iacob, and he that facioned the, o Israel A sayth thus: Feare not, for I wyl defend the. I haue called the by name, thou art myne owne. When thou wentest in the water, I was by the, that the stronge floudes shoulde not plucke the away. When thou walkest in the fyre, it shall not burne the, and the flame shal not kyndle vpon the. For I am the Lorde thy God, the holy one of Israel, thy sauiour. I gaue Egypte for thy delyueraunce, the Morians and the Sabees for the: bycause thou wast deare in my syght, and bycause I set by the, and loued the. I pylled all men for the, and delyuered vp all people for thy sake, that thou shouldest not feare, for I was with the. I wyll brynge thy sede frome the Easte, B and gather the togyther from the Weste. I wyll saye to the Northe, let goo. And to the Southe, kepe not backe: but brynge me my sonnes from farre, and my doughters frome the endes of the worlde: Namely all those that be called after my name: For them haue I created, facyoned, and made for myne honoure.

Brynge forthe that people, whether they haue eyes, or be blynde, deafe, or haue eares. All nacions shall come in one, and be gathered in one people. But whiche amonge yonder goddes shall declare suche thynges, and tell vs what is to come? Lette them brynge their wytnesses, so shall they be free: for then men shal heare it, and saye it is trouthe. But I brynge you wytnesses (saythe the Lorde) euen those that are my seruauntes, whome I haue chosen: to thintent that ye myghte be certyfyed, and gyue me faythfull credence:
yea and to considre, that I am he, before Osee.xiii.b
whome there was neuer anye God, and that there shall be none after me. I am onely the Lorde, and without me is there no sauioure. C
I gyue warnynge, I make hole, I teache you that there shoulde be no straunge God among you. And this recorde must ye beare me youre selues, sayth the Lorde that I am God. And euen he am I from the begynnynge, and there is none that can take anye thynge oute of my hande. And what I do, can no man chaunge.

Thus saythe the Lorde, the holye one of Israell youre redemer: For youre sake I wyll sende to Babylon, and brynge all the strongest of them frome thence: Namely the Chaldees that boste them of theyr shyppes: Euen I the Lorde youre holye one whiche haue made Israell, and am youre kynge. Moreouer thus sayth the Lorde, euen he that maketh awaye in the see, and a foote pathe in the myghtye waters: whiche bryngeth forth the charettes and horses, the hoste and the power, that they maye fall a slepe, and neuer ryse, and be extincte, lyke as towe is quenched.

ii.Corin.v.d Apo.a.xxi.b Ye remembre not thinges of olde, and regarde nothynge that is paste. Therfore beholde, I shall make a newe thynge, and shortly shall it appere: ye shall well knowe it, I haue tolde it you before, but I wyll tell it you agayne. I wyll make streetes in the deserte, and riuers of waters in the wildernesse. The wylde beestes shall worship me: the dragon and the Estriche. D For I shall gyue water in the wyldernesse, and stremes in the deserte: that I maye gyue drynke to my people, whō I chose, this people haue I made for my selfe, and they shall shewe forthe my prayse. For thou (Jacob) woldest not call vpon me, but thou haddest an vnluste towarde me, o Israel.

Thou gauest me not thy younge beastes for burntofferynges, neyther dydest honoure me with thy sacrifyces. Thou boughtest me no deare spices with thy moneye, neyther powredst the fatte of thy sacrifyces vpon me. How be it I haue not ben chargeable vnto the in offerynges, neyther greuous in incense.

But thou hast laden me with thy synnes: and weryed me with thyne vngodlynesse.

Where as I yet am euen he only, that for myne owne selfes sake do awaye thyne offences, and forget thy synnes: so that I wyl neuer thynke vpon them. Put me now in remembraunce (for we wyll reason togyther) and shewe what thou hast for the to make the quyte. Thy fyrst father offended sore, and thy rulers haue synned agaynste me. Therfore I eyther suspended, or slewe the chiefest prynces: I dyd curse Jacob, and gaue Israel in to reprofe.

¶ Chryst promyseth to delyuer his churche, whiche he hath redemed. Idolatrye and knelyng before Images &c. are confuted.

CAPI. XLIIII.

SO heare nowe, o Jacob my seruaunt, and Israell, whome I haue chosen. For thus A sayth the Lorde that made the, facioned Jeremy.xxx.g and.xlvi.g the, and helped the euen frome thy mothers wombe: Be not afrayd, o Jacob my seruaunt, thou righteous, whome I haue chosen. For I shall poure water vpon the drye ground, and ryuers vpon the thyrsty. I shall poure my spirite vpon my seed, and myne encrease vpon thy stocke. They shall grow togyther lyke as the grasse, and as the wyllyes by the waters syde: One wyll saye I am the Lordes. An other wyll call vnder the name of Jacob. The thyrde shall descrybe with his hand vnto the B Lorde, and gyue hym selfe vnder the name of Israel.

Esaye.xli.b.x Esay.xlviii.b Apo.i.b.xxii.c Moreouer thus hathe the Lorde spoken: euen the kynge of Israell, and his auenger, the Lorde of hostes: I am the fyrste and the laste, and without me is there no God. For what is he that euer was lyke me, whiche am frome euerlastynge? Lette hym shewe his name, and do where through he maye be lykened vnto me. Let him tell you forth playnly, thynges þ are past, and for to come: yea and that withoute anye feare or stoppe. For haue not I euer tolde you hytherto, and warned you? Ye can beare me recorde youre selues. Is there anye God excepte me? or anye maker that I shoulde not knowe hym?

Wherfore all caruers of ydolles are but vayne, and their labour lost. Jerem. They must beare recorde them selues, that (seyng they can nether se ne vnderstande) they shall be confounded. Who shoulde nowe make a God, or facion an ydoll, that is profitable for nothyng? Beholde, all the felowshyp of them must be brought to confusion. Let all the workmasters of them come and stande togyther from amonge men: they must be abasshed and confounded one with an other. The smith taketh Sapi. yron, and tempre it with whote coles, and facyoneth it with hammers, and maketh it with all the strengthe of his armes: yea somtyme he is faynte for verye hunger, and so thursty that he hathe no more power. The carpenter (or ymage caruer) taketh mete of the tymbre: and spredeth forth his lyne: he marketh it with some coloure: he playneth it, he ruleth it, and squareth it, and maketh it after the ymage of a man, and accordynge to the beautie of a man: that it maye stande in the temple.

Moreouer, he goeth oute to hewe downe Cedre trees: he bryngeth home Elmes and Okes, and other tymbre of the wood. Or, C elles the Fyrre trees whiche he planted hym selfe, and suche as the rayne hathe swelled, whiche wodde serueth for men to burne. Of this he taketh and warmeth hym selfe withall: he maketh a fire of it to bake breed. And afterwarde maketh a God therof to honour it: and an ydoll to knele before it. One pece he burneth in the fyre, with an other he rosteth flesshe, that he maye eate roste his belye full: with the thyrde he warmeth him selfe, and sayth: Aha, I am well warmed, I haue ben at the fyre. And of the resydue he maketh him a God and an ydoll for him selfe. He kneleth before it, he worshyppeth it, he prayeth vnto it, and sayth: delyuer me for thou art my God.

Yet men neyther consydre ne vnderstande, bycause theyr eyes are stopped, that they can not se: and theyr hertes, that they can not perceyue. They pondre not in theyr mynde, for they haue neyther knowledge nor vnderstandynge, to thynke thus: I haue burnt one pece in the fyre: I haue baked breede with the coles therof, I haue rosted flesshe withall, and eaten it: shall I nowe of the resydue make an abhominacion, and fall downe before a rotten pece of wod? The kepynge of duste, and foolishenes of herte hath turned them asyde, so that none of them can can haue a fre conscience to thynke: may not I erre?

D Consydre this, O Jacob and Israel, for thou arte my seruaunt. I haue made the, that thou myghtest serue me. O Israell, forget me not. As for thyne offences, I dryue them awaye lyke the cloudes, and thy synnes as the myst. Turne the agayne vnto me: & I wil delyuer the.

Be glad ye heuens whom the Lorde hathe made, lette all that is here benethe vpon the erth be ioyfull. Reioyse ye mountaynes and wodes, with all the trees that are in you: for the Lorde shall redeme Jacob, and shewe his glorye vpon Israell. For thus sayethe the Lorde thy redemer, euen he that facyoned the from thy mothers wombe: I am the Lorde, whiche do all thynges my selfe alone. I onely haue spredde oute the heuens, and I onely haue layde the foundacyon of the earthe. I destroye the tokens of witches, and make the sothsayers goo wronge. As for the wyse, I tourne them backwarde, and make their cunnynge folysshnesse.

But I set vp the purpose of my seruauntes, and fulfyll the counsell of my messengers. I saye to Jerusalem: tourne agayne. And to the cityes of Juda: be ye buylded agayne: and I repayre theyr decayed places. I saye to the grounde: be drye. And I drye vp thy water floudes. I saye to Cyrus: thou art myne herdman: so that he shall fulfyll all thynges after my wyll. I saye to Jerusalem: be thou buylded, and to the temple: be thou fast grounded.

¶ The deliueraunce of the people by Cyrus. The cōmynge of Chryste and callynge of the Gentyles

CAPI. XLV.

A THus sayethe the Lorde vnto Cyrus his anoynted, whom he ledeth by the right hande: that the people may fal downe before him: I wyll lose the gyrdle of kynges: that they shal open the gates before thy face, and not to shut theyr dores. I wyll goo before the, and make the croked streyghte: I shall breake the brasen dores, and burste the yron barres. I shal gyue the the hyd treasure, and the thynge whiche is secretly kept: that thou mayst knowe that I the God of Israell haue called the by name: and that for Jacob my seruauntes sake, and for Israel my chosen.

For I called the by thy name, and ordeyned B the or euer thou knewest me: Euen I the Lorde, before whome there is none other: for without me ther is no God. I haue prepared the or euer thou knewest me: that it myght be knowen from the rysynge of the sonne, to the goynge downe of the same, that all is nothynge withoute me. For I am the Lorde, and there is elles none. It is I that created the lyght and darknesse: I make peax and trouble: yea euen I the Lorde do al these thynges. The heauens aboue shall droppe downe, and the cloudes shal rayne rightousnesse. The earthe shall open it selfe, and brynge forthe helthe, and therby shall ryghtounesse florysh. Euen I the Lord shal bring it to passe.

Wo be vnto him that chydeth with his maker, the potsherde with the potter: Saith the claye to the potter, what makest thou? or thy worke serueth for nothyng? Wo be vnto him Romanis.ix.d Jere.xviii.a that saith to his father: why begettest thou? And to his mother: why bearest thou? Thus sayth the Lord, euen the holy one and maker of Israel: Aske me of thinges for to come, cōcernynge my sonnes: and put me in remembraunce, as touching the workes of my handes: I haue made the erthe, and created man vpon it. With myne hādes haue I spred forth heuen, and giuen a commaundement for all the host therof. I shal wake him vp with rightousnesse, and ordre all his wayes. He shall buylde my city, and let out my prisoners, and that neither for gift nor rewardes, sayth the Lorde of hostes.

The Lorde hathe sayde moreouer: The occupyers of Egypt, the marchauntes of the C Morians and Sabees, shall come vnto the with tribute, they shall be thyne, they shall folowe the, and go with cheynes vpon theyr fete. They shall fall downe before the, and make supplicacion vnto the. For God (without whom there is none other God) shall be with the. O how profounde art thou, o God, thou God and sauyour of Israel? Confounded be ye, and put to dishonoure: go hence togyther with shame, all ye that be workemasters of errour: (that is worshyppers of ydols.) But Israel shall be saued in the Lorde, whiche is the euerlastynge saluacion: They shal not come to shame nor confusion, worlde without ende.

For thus sayth the Lorde: euen he that created heuen, the God that made the earth, that facyoned it and set it forth: I haue not made it for nought, but I made it to be inhabyted. Euen I the Lorde, withoute whome there is none other. I haue not spoken secretly, neyther in darke places of the earthe. It D is not for noughte, that I sayde vnto the seed of Jacob: seke me. I am the Lorde, whiche when I speake, declareth the thinge that is ryghtous and true. Let them be gathered and come togyther, let them drawe nye hyther that are escaped of the people: Haue they anye vnderstandynge that sette vp the stockes of theyr ydolles, and praye vnto a God that can not helpe them? Lette men drawe nye, let them come hyther, & aske counsell one at an other, and shewe forth: What is he, that tolde this before? or who spake of it, euer sence the begynnyng? Haue not I the Lorde done it: without whom there is none other God? the true God and sauioure, and there is els none but I? And therfore tourne you vnto me (all ye endes of the erth) so shall ye be saued, for I am God, and there is elles none. I sweare by my selfe: oute of my mouth Roma.xiiii.b Philip.ii.b commeth the worde of rightousnesse, and that may no man tourne: but all knees shal bowe vnto me, and all tunges shall sweare by me, sayinge: Verely in the Lorde is my ryghteousnesse and strength. To hym shall men come: but all they that thynke scorne of hym shall be confounded, and the hole sede of Israell shall be iustifyed and prayse in the Lorde.

¶ Idolatrye is reproued. The helth that commeth by Christe is prophecyed.

CAPI. XLVI.

A Neuerthelesse Bell shall fall, and Nabo shalbe broken, whose ymages are a burthen for the beastes and cattell to ouerlade them, and to make them wery. They shal synke downe, and fall togyther, for they may not ease them of theyr burthen, therfore must they go in to captiuitie.

B Harken vnto me, O house of Iacob, and all ye that remayne yet of the housholde of Israel, whome I haue borne from youre mothers wombe, and brought you vp from your byrthe, tyll ye were growen: I whiche shall beare you vnto youre laste age: I haue made you, I wyl also nourysshe you, beare you and saue you. Whome wyll ye make me lyke in facyon or ymage, that I maye be lyke hym? Ye fooles (no doubte) wyll take oute syluer and golde oute of youre purses, and weye it, and hyre a goldesmyth to make a God of it, that men maye knele downe and worshyp it. Yet muste he be taken on mennes shoulders

C Baruch.vi.a and borne, and set in his place, that he maye stande and not moue. Alas that men shoulde crye vnto hym whiche geueth no answere: & delyuereth not the man that calleth vpō hym from his trouble.

Consydre this well and be ashamed. Goo in to youre owne selues (O ye runnagates.) Remembre the thynges whiche are past sence the begynnynge of the worlde: that I am God, and that there is elles no God, yea and that there is nothynge lyke vnto me. In the begynnynge of a thyng, I shewe the ende therof: and I tell before, thynges that are not yet come to passe. With one worde is my deuyse accomplysshed, and fulfilleth all

D my pleasure. I cal a byrde out of the East, and all that I take in hande, oute of farre countreys, as soone as I commaunde, I brynge it hither: as sone as I thynke to deuyse a thing I do it.

Heare me, O ye that are of an hye stomacke, but farre from ryghteousnesse, I shall brynge forth my ryghteousnesse: It is not far, and my helthe shall not tarye longe awaye. I wyll laye helthe in Syon, and gyue Israel my glorye.

¶ The worde of the Lorde agaynste Babilon.

CAPI. XLVII.

A But as for the (O doughter, thou virgyn Babylon.) Thou shalte syt in the dust, thou shalt syt vpō the grounde, and not in a trone (O thou mayden of Chaldea) Thou shalte no more be called tender and pleasaunte. Thou shalte brynge forthe the queene and grynde meele, put downe thy stomacher, make bare thy knees, and shalte wade thorowe the water ryuers. Thy shame shall be discouered, and thy preuytyes shall be sene. For I wyll auenge me of the, and no man shall let me, sayth our redemer, whiche is called the Lorde of hostes, the holye one of Israel.

Syt styll, holde thy tonge, and get the in to some darcke corner, O doughter Chaldea, for thou shalte be no more called ladye of kyngdomes. I was so wrothe with my people, that I punysshed myne inheritaunce, and gaue them in to thy power. Neuerthe-

B lesse, thou shewedest them no mercye, but euen the very aged men of them dydest thou oppresse ryght sore with your yoke, and thou thoughtest thus: I shall be ladye for euer. And besyde all that, thou haste not regarded these thynges, neyther cast what shold come after. Heare nowe therfore thou wylfull, that syttest so carelesse, and speakest thus in thyne herte: I am alone, and without me is there none: I shall neuer be wydowe, nor desolate agayne. And yet bothe these thynges shal come to the vpon one daye, in the twincklynge of an eye: namely wydowehed and

C desolacion.

They shall myghtyly fall vpon the for the multitude of thy wytches, and for the great heape of thy coniurers. For thou hast comforted thy selfe in thy disceytfulnesse, and haste sayde: No man seeth me. Thyne owne wysdome and connynge hathe disceyued the. In that thou hast said: I am alone, and without me there is none. Therfore shal trouble come vpon the, and thou shalte not knowe from whence it shal aryse. Mischiefe shal fal vpon the, whiche thou shalt not be hable to put of. A sodeyn miserye shall come vpon the, or euer thou be aware.

D Nowe goo to thy coniurers, and to the multytude of thy wytches (whome thou hast ben acquaynted withall from thy youthe) yf they maye helpe the, or strengthen the. Thou haste hytherto hadde manye councelles of them: so lette the heuengasers, and the beholders of sterres come on nowe and delyuer the: yea and let them shewe when these newe thynges shall come vpon the. Beholde they shall be lyke strawe, whiche yf it be kyndled with fyre, no man maye ryd it: for the vehemencie of the flambe: and yet it gyueth no synders to warme a man by, ne cleare fyre to syt by. Euen so shall they be vnto the, whome thou haste vsed and occupyed from thy youthe. Euerye one shall shewe the his erroneous waye, yet shall none of them defende the.

¶ The ypocrysye of the Iewes is reproued. The Lorde alone wyll be worshypped, whiche hath chosen vs, and whiche souccoureth vs for his owne sake.

CAPI. XLVIII.

Heare

A Heare this, O thou house of Iacob, ye that are called by the name of Israell, and are come out of one stocke with Iuda, whiche sweare by the name of the Lorde, and beare wytnesse by the God of Israel (but not with trouth and ryght) whiche are called fre men of the holy cytie, as they that loke for comforte in the God of Israell, whose name is the Lorde of Hostes.

The thinges that I shewed you euer sence the begynnyng, Haue I not brought them to passe, immediatlye as they came oute of my mouthe, & declared them? And they are come. Howbeit I knewe that thou arte obstinate, and that thyne necke hath an yron veyne, and that thy browe is of brasse. Neuertheles I haue euer sence the begynning shewed the of thinges for to come, and declared them vnto the, or euer they came to passe, that thou shuldest not saye: myne Idoll hathe done it, my carued or caste ymage hath shewed it. Heare and consyder al these thinges whether it was

B ye that prophecyed them: But as for me, I tolde the before at the begynnynge, newe and secrete thinges, that thou knewest not of. And some done nowe not of olde tyme, wherof thou neuer herdest, before they were brought to passe, that thou canst not saye: I knewe of them. Moreouer there be some wherof thou hast neyther herde nor knowen, neyther haue they ben opened vnto thyne eares afore tyme. For I knewe that thou woldest maliciouslye offende, therfore haue I called the a transgressoure, euen from thy mothers wombe.

Neuertheles for my names sake, I haue withdrawe my wrath, and for myne honours sake I haue ouersene the, so that I haue not rooted the out. Beholde, I haue pourged the, and not for moneye. I haue chosen the in the fyre of pouertie. And that only for myne owne sake, for I geue myne honoure to none other, that thou shuldest not despyse me. Herken vnto me O Iacob, and Israell whome I haue

C called. I am euen he that is, I am the fyrste and the last. My hande is the foundacion of the earth, and my ryght hande spanneth ouer the heauens. As soone as I called them they were there. Gather you all together, and herken: Whiche of yonder goddes hath declared this, that the Lorde wyll do by the kynge of Babylon (whome he loueth and fauoureth) and by the Caldees his arme? I my self alone haue tolde you this before. Yea I shall call hym, and brynge hym forth, and geue hym a prosperous iourneye. Come nye, and heare this: haue I spoken any thynge darkly sence the begynnyng? when a thynge begynneth, I am there.

D Wherfore the Lorde God with his spirite hath sent me. And thus sayth the Lorde God thyne auenger, the holy one of Israell: I am the Lorde thy God, which teache the profitable thinges, and leade the the way, that thou shuldest go. Yf thou wylte nowe regarde my commaundementes, thy welthynes shall be as the water streame, & thy ryghteousnes as the waues flowynge in the see. Thy sede shall be lyke as the sande in the see, and the frute of thy body, lyke the grauell stones therof. Thy name shall not be roted out, nor destroyed before me. Ye shall go awaye frome Babylon, and escape the Caldees with a merye voyce. This shalbe spoken of, declared abrode, and go forth vnto the ende of the worlde, so that it shalbe sayde: The Lorde hath defended his seruaunte Iacob, that they suffred no thurst, when they trauayled in the wyldernesse. He claue the rockes a sunder, and the water gusshed oute. As for the vngodlye, they haue no peace, sayth the Lorde.

Exodi.xvii.b Numeri.xx.b Esaye.lvii.d

¶ Chryste shall gather togyther all nacions be they neuer so farre of.

CAPI. XLIX.

A Ye Iles, herken vnto me, and take hede ye people frome farre. The Lorde hath called me fro my byrth, and made mencion of my name fro my mothers wombe, he hath made my mouth lyke a sharpe swearde, vnder the shadowe of his hande hath he defended me, & hyd me in his quyuer, as a good arowe, and sayde vnto me: Thou art my seruaunt Israell, I wylbe honoured in the. (Esaye.li.a) Then answered I: I shall lese my laboure, I shall spende my strength in vayne. Neuertheles, I wyll commytte my cause and my worke vnto the Lord my God. And nowe sayth the Lord:

B euen he that fasshyoned me fro my mothers wombe to be his seruaunt, that I may brynge Iacob agayne vnto hym, howbeit, Israel wyl not be gathered vnto hym agayne. In whose syght I am greate, whiche also is my Lorde, my God, & my strength. Let it be but a small thinge, that thou arte my seruaunte, to set vp the kynredes of Iacob, and to restore the destruction of Israel, yf I make the not also the lyght of the Gentyles, that thou mayest be my health vnto the ende of the worlde. (Esaye.xlii.b Act.xiii.g)

Moreouer thus sayth the Lorde the auenger and holy one of Israell, because of the abhorrynge & despysyng amonge the Gentyles,

C concernyng ẏ seruaunt of all them that beare rule. Kynges and Prynces shall se, and aryse and worshyp, because of the Lorde that he is faythfull, and because of the holy one of Israell, whiche hath chosen the.

And thus sayth the Lorde: * In the tyme appoynted wyll I be present with the. * And in the houre of health wyll I helpe the, and delyuer the. (*ii.Cori.vi.a Ieremye.xi.a *Esay.xlii.a) I wyll make the a pledge for the people, so that thou shalt helpe vp the earth agayne, and chalenge agayne the scattred heritages. That thou mayest saye to the presoners: go forth, and to them that are in darkenesse: come into the lyght, that they may fede in the hye wayes, and get theyr lyuyng in all places. There shal neyther hunger nor thurst, heate nor sunne hurte them. For he that fauoureth them, shall leade them, & geue them drynke of the sprynge welles. (Apoca.vii.d) I wyll make wayes vpon all my mountaynes, and my fote

D pathes shalbe exalted. And beholde, they shall come from farre: lo, some from the North and Weste, some from the Southe. * Reioyse ye (Esaye.xxxiiii) heauens, heauens, and synge prayses thou earthe.

Take of ioye ye hylles, for God wyll com=
forte his people, and haue mercye vpon his,
that be in trouble.
Then shal Syon saye: *God hath forsake Roman xi.a me, and the Lorde hath forgotten me. Doth a wyfe forget the chylde of hyr wombe, and the sonne whom she hath borne? And though she do forget, yet wyll not I forget the. Be= holde, I haue wrytten the vpon my handes, thy walles are euer in my syghte. They that haue broken the downe, shall make haste to buyld the vp agayne, and they that made the waste, shall dwell in the. Lyft vp thyne eyes, & loke aboute the, all these shall gather them
C together, and come to the. As truly as I lyue (sayth the Lorde) thou shalt put them al vpõ
the, as an apparell, and gyrde them to the, as a bryde with her Iewels. As for thy land that lyeth desolate, wasted and destroyed, it shal=
be to narowe for them, that shall dwell in it.
And they that wold deuoure the, shalbe farre awaye. Then the chyld whom the barren shall F bring forth vnto the, shall saye in thyne eare:
this place is to narow, syt nye together, that I may haue rowme. Then shalt thou thynke by thy selfe: Who hathe begotten me these?
seinge I am barren and alone, a captyue and an outcast? And who hath norysshed them vp for me? I am desolate and alone, but frome whence come these?
And therfore thus sayth the Lorde God:
Beholde, I wyll stretch oute myne hands to the Gentyles, and set vp my token to the peo ple. They shall bryng the thy sonnes in theyr lappes, and cary thy daughters vnto the vpõ theyr shoulders. For kynges shalbe thy nour= syng fathers, and Quenes shalbe thy nour= syng mothers. They shal fall before the with theyr faces flat vpon the earthe, and lycke vp
G the dust of thy fete, that thou mayest knowe, *Roma. ix. d howe that I am the Lord. *And who so put teth his truste in me, shal not be confounded.
Who spoyleth the gyaunte of his praye? or who taketh the presonre frome the myghtye?
And therfore thus sayth the Lorde: The pre= soners shalbe taken from the gyaunte, & the spoyle delyuered from the violent, for I wyl mayntayne thy cause agaynst thyne aduersa= ryes, & saue thy sonnes. And wyll fede thyne enemyes with theyr owne fleshe, and make them drynk of theyr owne bloud, as of swete wyne. And all flesh shall knowe (O Iacob) that I am the Lorde thy Sauyoure, & strong auenger.

¶ The Iewes are reproued, and also called.

CAPI. L.

A Thus sayth the Lord: Where is the byll of youre mothers deuorcemente, that I sent vnto her, or who is the vsurer, to whome I solde you? Beholde, for youre owne offences are ye solde, & because of youre trans= gression is youre mother forsaken. For why would no man receyue me, when I came? and when I called, no man gaue me an answere.
Was my hand clene smyten of, that it might not helpe? or had I not power to delyuer? lo, at a worde I drynke vp the see, and of water
floudes I make drye lande, so that for wante of water, the fysh corruppt and dye of thurst. B
As for heauen, I clothe it with darknesse, and put a sack vpon it.
The Lorde God hath geuen me a wel ler= ned tunge, so that I can comfort them which are troubled, yea and that in due season. He waked myne eare vp by tymes in the mor=
nynge (as the scolemasters do) that I myght herken. The Lorde God hath opened myne eare, therfore can I not saye naye, nor with= drawe my selfe, but I offer my backe vnto the smyters, and my chekes to ŷ nyppers. I turne not my face from shame and spittyng, for the C Lorde God helpeth me, therfore shall I not be confounded. I haue hardened my face lyke a flynte stone, for I am sure, that I shall not come to confusion. Myne aduocate speaketh for me, who wyll then go with me to lawe?
Let vs stande one agaynste another, yf there be any that wyl reason with me, let him come here forthe to me. Beholde, the Lorde God standeth by me, what is he that can cõdemne me? lo, they shalbe all lyke as an olde clothe, D which the mothes shall eate vp.
Therfore who so feareth the Lord among you, let hym heare the voyce of his seruaunt.
Who so walketh in darkenesse, and no lyght
shyneth vpon hym, let hym hope in the Lord,
and holde hym by his God. But take hede, ye haue all kyndled a fyre, and gyrded youre selues with the flame. Ye walke in the glys= terynge of youre owne fyre, and in the flame that ye haue kyndled. This cõmeth vnto you fro my hande, namelye that ye shall slepe in sorowe.

¶ Consolacion and comforte is promysed vnto the faythfull

CAPI. LI.

Herken vnto me, ye that holde of ryght= tousnes, ye that seke the Lorde. Take A hede vnto the stone, wherout ye are hewen, and to the graue wherout ye are dyg= ged. Consydre Abraham your father, and Sa= ra that bare you, howe that I called hym a= lone, prospered hym wel, and encreased hym, howe the Lorde comforted Syon, and repay= red all her decaye, makyng her deserte as a pa radyse, and her wyldernesse as the garden of the Lorde. Myrth and ioye was there, than= kesgeuynge and the voyce of prayse. Haue re= B specte vnto me then, O my people, and laye
thyne eare to me, for a lawe & an ordynaunce shall go forth fro me, to lyghtẽ the Gentyles.
It is at hande, that my health and my ryght=
tousnesse shall go forthe, and the people shal=
be ordred with myne arme.
The Ilandes (that is the Gentyles) shall hope in me, and put theyr trust in myne arme.
Lyft vp your eyes towarde heauen, and loke vpon the earth beneth. For the heauens shall vanysh awaye lyke smoke, and the earth shall weare

weare lyke a clothe, & they that dwell therin, shall perysshe in lyke maner. But my healthe contynueth for euer, and my ryghtousnes shall not ceasse. Therfore herken vnto me, ye that haue pleasure in ryghtousnes, thou people
C that bearest my law in thyne herte. Feare not the curse of men, be not afrayd of theyr blas= phemyes and reuylynges, for wormes and mothes shall eate them vp lyke cloth & woll.
But my ryghtousnesse shall endure for euer,
and my sauynge healthe frome generacion to generacion. Wake vp, wake vp, and be strõg, O thou arme of the Lorde, wake vp, lyke as in tymes paste, euer and sence the worlde be= ganne.
Arte not thou he, that haste wounded that D proude Lucifer, and hewen the dragon in pe= ces? Arte not thou euen he, whiche hast dryed vp the depe of the see? which hast made playn
the see grounde, that the delyuered myght go thorowe? That the redemed of the Lorde, which turned agayne, myght come with ioye vnto Syon, there to endure for euer? That myrthe and gladnesse myghte be with them,
that sorowe and wo myghte fle frome them?
Yea I, I am euen he, that in all thynges ge= ueth you consolacion. What arte thou then,
that fearest a mortall man, the chylde of mã, which goeth awaye as doeth the floure? And forgettest the Lord that made the, that spred
oute the heauens, and layde the foundacion of the earthe. But thou arte euer afrayde for the syght of thyne oppressoure, which is rea= dy to do harme. Where is the wrathe of the oppressoure? It commeth on faste, it maketh E haste to appeare. It shall not perysh, that it shulde not be able to destroye, neyther shall it fayle for faute of norysshynge. I am the Lorde thy God, that make the see to be styll, and to rage, whose name is the Lorde of Ho=
stes. I shall put my worde also in thy mouth, and defende the with the turnynge of my hande, that thou mayest plante the heauens, and laye the foundacions of the earthe, and saye vnto Syon: thou arte my people.
Awake, awake, and stande vp, O Ierusalẽ,
thou that from the hande of the Lorde haste
F dronken oute the cuppe of his wrathe, thou that hast supped of, and sucked oute the slom= brynge cuppe to the botome. For amonge all the sonnes whome thou haste begotten, there is not one that maye holde the vp, & not one to leade the by the hande, of all the sonnes that thou hast norysshed. Bothe these thynges are happened vnto the, but who is sory for it?
Yea, destruction, wastyng, hunger, & swearde,
but who hath cõforted the? Thy sonnes lye G comfortles at the heade of euery strete, lyke a taken venyson, and are full of the terrible wrath of the Lorde, and punysshmente of thy God. And therfore thou miserable and dron= ken (howe be it not with wyne.) heare this:
Thus sayth the Lorde: thy Lorde and God,
the defender of his people: Beholde, I wyll
take the slombrynge cuppe out of thy hande, euẽ the cuppe with the dregges of my wrath,
that from hence forth thou shalt neuer drynk
it more, and wyll putte it in theyr hande that

A * Who geueth credence vnto oure preachynge? Or to whome is the arme of the Lorde knowen? He shall growe before the Lord lyke as a braunch, & as a rote in a drye ground, he shall haue neyther beawtie nor fauoure. When we loke vpon hym, there shalbe no kaynnelle, we shall haue no luste vnto hym. He shalbe the most symple, and despysed of all, whiche yet hath good experience of sorowes and infirmities. We shall reken hym so symple and so vyle, that we shall hyde oure faces from hym. How be it (of a trouth) he only taketh awaye oure infirmite, and beareth oure payne. Yet we shall iudge hym, as though he were plaged & cast downe of God, where as he (not withstandyng) shalbe wounded for oure offences, and smytten for oure wyckednes. For the payne of our punyshmēt shalbe layde vpon hym, and with his stryppes shall we be healed.

¶ Of the great dominyon of Chryst. The indignacion of God endureth but a short space, but his mercye is euerlastynge.

CAPI. LIIII.

A Therefore be glad now, thou baren that bearest not, Reioyce, synge and be merry, thou that art not with chylde. For the desolate hath moo chyldren, then the mayed wyfe, sayth the Lorde. Make thy tente wyder, and spreade out the hangynges of thyne habitacion, spare not, laye forth thy cordes, & make fast thy stakes, for thou shalt breake out on the ryght syde and on the lefte, & thy sede shall haue the Gentyles in possession, & dwell in the desolate cyties. Feare not, for thou shalt not be confounded. Be not ashamed, for thou halte not come to confusion. Yea thou shalt forget the shame of thy youth and shalt not remembre the dishonour of thy wedowhead. For he that made the, shalbe thy Lorde and husbande, (whose name is the Lorde of Hostes,) and thyne aduenger shall be euen the holy one of Israell, the Lorde of the hole worlde. For the Lorde shall call the, beynge as a desolate sorowfull woman, and as a yonge wyfe that hathe broken her wedlocke, sayth thy God.

Galath.iiii.d Luke.xxiii.d

B A lytle whyle haue I forsake the, but with greate mercyfulnes shall I take the vp vnto me. When I was angry, I hyd my face from the for a lytle season, but thorow euerlastyng goodnes shall I pardon the, sayth the Lorde thyne auenger. * And this muste be vnto me, as ✠ water of Noe, for lyke as I haue swoorne that I wyll not brynge the water of Noe any more vpon the worlde, so haue I swoorne that I wyll neuer be angry with the, nor rebuke the. The mountaynes shall remoue, and the hylles shall fall downe, but my louyng kyndnelle shall not moue, & the bonde of my peace shal not fall downe from the, sayth the Lorde thy mercyfull louer. Beholde thou poore, vexed, and despysed. I wyll make thy walles of precyous stones, and thy fondacion of Saphyres, thy wyndowes of Christall, thy gates of fyne cleare stone, and thy borders of pleasaut stones. * Thy chyldren shall all be taught of God, and I wyll geue them plenteousnes of peare. In ryghteousnes shalte thou be grounded, & be farre from oppression, for the whiche thou nedest not be afrayed, neyther for hyndraunce, for it shall not come nye the. Beholde, the aleaunte that was farre from the, shall dwell with the, and he that was sometyme a straunger vnto the, shalbe ioyned with the. Beholde, I make the smyth that bloweth the coles in the fyre, and he maketh a weapen after his handy worke. I make also the waster to destroye, but all the weapens that are made agaynste the, shall not prospere. And as for all tunges, that shall resiste the in iudgement, thou shalte ouercome them and condemne them. This is the heritage of the Lordes seruauntes, & the ryghtousnes that they shall haue of me, sayth the Lorde.

C Consolacion and comforte to the people. The frute and profyt of the worde of God.

CAPI. LV.

A Come to the waters all ye that be thursty, and ye that haue no money. Come bye, that ye maye haue to eate. Come, bye wyne and mylke, without any money, or money worth. Wherefore do ye laye out youre money, for the thynge that feedeth not, and spende youre labour aboute the thynge that satisfyeth you not? But herken rather vnto me, and ye shall eate of the beste, and youre soule shall haue her pleasure in pleutousnes. Enclyne your eares, and come vnto me, take heede, and youre soule shall lyue. For I wyll make an euerlastynge couenaunte with you, euen the sure mercyes of Dauid.

Beholde, I shall geue hym for a wytnelle among the folke, for a Prynce and Capitayne vnto the people. Lo, thou shalte call an vnknowen people, and a people that hadde no knowledge of the, shall runne vnto the, because of the Lorde thy God, the holy one of Israel, which glorifyeth the. Seke the Lord, whyle he maye be founde, and call vpon hym whyle he is nye. Let the vngodlye man forsake his wayes, and the vnryghtous his ymaginacions, and turne agayne vnto the Lorde, & shall he be mercyfull vnto hym and to our God, for he is ready to forgyue. For thus sayth the Lorde: my thoughtes are not youre thoughtes, & your wayes are not my wayes, but as farre as the heauens are hyer then the earth, so farre do my wayes exceade youres, & my thoughtes yours. And lyke as the rayne and snow commeth downe from heauen, and returneth not thyther agayne, but watereth the earth, maketh it frutefull, and grene, that it maye geue corne and bread vnto the sower. So the worde also that commeth oute of my mouth shal not turne agayne voyde vnto me, but shall accomplyth my wyll and prospere in the thynge, whereto I sende it. And so shall ye goo forthe with ioye, and be led with peace. The mountaynes and hylles shall synge with you for ioye, and all the trees of the felde shall clappe theyr handes. For thornes, there shall growe. Fyrre trees, and the Myrre tree in the steade of briers. And this shall be done to the prayse of the Lorde, and for an euerlastynge token, that shall not be taken awaye.

C Exhortacion to iudgement and righteousnesse, and to the spirituall kepyng of the Sabboth. Against Shepherdes that deuoure theyr flocke.

CAPI. LVI.

A Thus sayth the Lorde: Kepe equite, and do ryght, for my sauynge healthe shall come shortly, and my ryghtousnes shall be opened. Blessed is the man that doth this, and the mans chylde which kepeth the same. Beehat taketh hede, that he vnhalowe not the Sabboth, (that is) he that kepeth hym selfe that he do no euell. Then shall not the straunger, which cleaueth to the Lorde, saye: Alas, the Lord hath shut me cleane out from his people. Neyther shall the gelded mā saye: Lo, I am a drye tree. For thus sayth the Lorde, vnto ✠ gelded that kepeth my Sabboth: Namely, that holdeth greatly of the thynge that pleaseth me, and kepeth my couenaunt. Unto them wyll I geue in my houshalde and within my walles, a better heritage & name then yf they had bene called sonnes & doughters. I wyll geue them an euerlastynge name, that shall not perysshe. Agayne, he sayth vnto the straungers that are disposed to hyche to the Lorde, to serue hym, and to loue his name. That they shalbe no hyred men. And all they, which kepe themselues, that they vnhalowe not the Sabboth, namely, that they fulfyll my couenaunte. Them will I bringe to my holy mountayne, and make them ioyfull in my house of prayer. Their burnte offrynges and sacrifices shall be accepted vpon myne aulter, for my house shalbe an house of prayer for all people.

B Math.xxi.b Marc.xi.c Luke.xix.b

D Thus sayth the Lorde God which gathereth together the scatred of Israell. I wyll brynge yet another congregation to hym. All the beastes of the felde, and all the beastes of the wood, shall come to deuoure hym. For his watche men are all blynde, they haue all together no vnderstandynge, they are all domme dogges, not brynge able to barcke, they are sleperye, slogyth are they, and lye mortynge, they are shamelelle dogges, that be neuer satisfyed. The shepherdes also in lyke maner haue no vnderstandynge, but euery man turneth his owne way, euery one after his owne couetousnes with all his power. Come (sayd they) I wyll fetch wyne, so shall we fyll our selues, that we maye be dronken. And so to morowe, lyke as to daye, yea & much more.

¶ The Iewes are rebuked for theyr iniurye done to Chryst.

CAPI. LVII.

A But in the meane season the ryghtous perysheth, and no man regardeth it in his herte. Good godly people are taken awaye, and no man considereth it. Namelye, that the ryghtous is couered awaye euyll ow the wycked, that he hym selfe myghte be in rest, lye quyetly vpon his bed, and lyue after his owne pleasure. Come hyther therfore ye charmers chyldren, * ye sonnes of the aduoutrer and the whore. Wherin take ye youre pleasure? Vpon whom gape ye with youre mouth, and bleare out youre tonge? Are ye not chyldren of aduoutry, and a sede of dissimulatiō? Ye take youre pleasure vnder the okes, and vnder all greene trees, the chylde brynge slayne in the valleys and dennes of stone. Your part shalbe with the stony rockes by the ryuer. Yea euen these shall be thy parte. For there thou haste poured meate and drynkoffeynges vnto them. Shulde I ouerse that? Thou hast made thy bed vpon hye mountaynes, thou wentest vp thyther, and there haste thou slayne sacrifices. Behynd the doores and postes, hast thou set vp thy remembraunce.

* Math.xiii.d

B When thou haddest discouered thy selfe to another then me, when thou wentest downe and made thy bed wyder (that is) when thou hyddest came the certayne of yonder Idols, and louedest theyr couches, where thou sawest them. Thou wentest strayght to kynges with oyle and dyuerse oyntmentes, (that is) thou hast sente thy messengers farre of, and yet art thou fallen into the pyt therby. Thou haste had trouble for the multitude of thyne owne wayes, yet sayedest thou neuer: I wyll leaue of. Thou thynkest to haue lyfe (or health) health) of thy selfe, and therfore thou beleuest not that thou arte sycke. For when wylt thou be abasshed or feare, seyng thou hast broken thy promyse, and remembrest not me, neyther hast me in thyne herte? Thynkest thou, that I also wyll holde my peace, (as afore tyme) that thou fearest me not? Yea verely I wyll declare thy goodnes and thy workes, but they shall not profyt ye when thou cryest, let thy chosen heape delyuer the. But ye wynd shall take them all awaye, and carye them in to the ayre. Neuertheles, they that put theyr trust in me, shall inherett the lande, and haue my holy hyll in possession.

Jeremye.ii.d / Deute.xxxii.d

And therfore thus he sayth: Make ready, make ready, and clense the strete, take vp what D ye can oute of the waye that leadeth to my people. For thus sayth the hye and excellent, euen he that dwelleth in euerlastyngnesse, whose name is the holye one. * I dwell hye aboue and in the Sanctuary, and with hym also, that is of a contrite and humble spirite, that I maye heale a troubled mynde, and a contrite herte. For I chyde not euer, and am not wroth without ende. But the blastynge goeth fro me, though I make the breath. I am wroth with hym for his couetousnes and luste, I smyte hym, I hyde me, and am angry, when he turneth him selfe, and foloweth the by waye of his owne herte. But yf I maye se his ryght waye agayne, I make hym hole, I lede hym and restore hym vnto them whome he maketh ioyfull, & that were sory for hym. I make the frutes of thankesgeuynge. I geue peace vnto them that are farre of, & to them that are nye, saye I the Lord, that make him hole. But the wycked are lyke the ragyng see, that can not rest, whose water fometh with the myre & grauell. Euen so the wycked haue no peace, sayth my God.

¶ The Lorde (by the mouth of the Prophete) reproueth the people, for theyr fastynges, which were full of Hypocrisye.

CAPI. LVIII.

A — * Ezechi.iii.c / Jeremy.xix.a

AND therfore crye nowe, as loude as thou canst. Leaue not of, lyfte vp thy voyce lyke a trumpet, and shewe my people theyr offences, and the house of Jacob theyr synnes. For they seke me dayly & wyll knowe my wayes, euen as it were a people that dyd ryght, and had not forsaken the statutes of theyr God. They argue with me concernynge ryght iudgement, and wyll pleate at the lawe with theyr God. Wherfore faste we (saye they) and thou seest it not? we put our lyues to straytenesse, and thou regardest it not.

Beholde, when ye faste, youre luste remayneth styll, for ye do no lesse violence to youre detters, lo, ye fast to stryfe and debate, and to smyte hym with your fyste that speaketh vn-
B to you. Ye fast not (as some tyme) that youre voyce myght be hearde aboue. Thynk ye this fast pleaseth me, that a man shulde chasten hym selfe for a daye, and to wrythe his heade aboute lyke an hoke in an heary clothe, and to lye vpon the earth? Shulde that be called fastynge, or a daye that pleaseth the Lorde? But this fastynge pleaseth not me, tyll the tyme be thou lose hym out of bondage, that is in thy daunger, that thou breake the othe of wycked bargaynes, that thou let the oppressed go fre, and take from them all maner of burthens. It pleaseth not me, tyll thou deale thy bread to the hongry, and brynge the poore fatherlesse home into thy house, when thou sist the naked that thou couer hym, and hyde not thy face from thyne owne flesh.

Zachari.vii.b

Then shall thy lyghte breake forthe as the mornynge, and thy health florysh ryght shortlye, C thy ryghtousnesse shall go before the, and the glory of the Lorde shall embrace the.

Then yf thou callest, the Lorde shall answere the: yf thou cryest, he shall saye: here I am. Yea yf thou layest awaye thy burthens, and holdest thy fyngers, and ceasest frome blasphemous talkynge, yf thou hast compassion vpon the hongry, and refresshest the troubled soule. Then shall thy lyght spryng oute in the darkenesse, and thy darkenesse shalbe as the none daye. The Lorde shal euer be thy gyde, and satisfye the desyre of thyne herte, & fyl thy bones with mary. Thou shalt be lyke a fresh watred garde, and lyke the fountayne of water, that neuer leaueth runnynge. Then the places that haue euer bene waste, shalbe D buylded of the, there shalt thou laye a foundacion for many generacions. Thou shalt be called the maker vp of hedges, and the buylder agayne of the waye of the Sabboth.

Yea yf thou turne thy fete frome the Sabboth, so that thou do not the thynge which pleaseth thy selfe in my holy daye, then shall thou be called vnto the pleasaunt, holy, and gloryous Sabboth of the Lorde, where thou shalt be in honoure, so that thou do not after thyne owne ymagynacion, neyther seke thyne owne wyll, nor speake thyne owne wordes. Then shalt thou haue thy pleasure in ye Lord which shall cary the vpe aboue the earth, and fede the with the heritage of Jacob thy father, for the Lordes owne mouth hath so promysed.

¶ The Lorde is myghtye to saue, and redy to heare oure requestes.

CAPI. LIX.

BEholde, the Lordes hande is not so A shortened that it can not helpe, neyther is his eare so stopped that it maye not heare. But youre mysdedes haue separated you fro youre God, and your synnes hyde his face frome you, that he heareth you not. For youre handes are defyled with bloude, & your fyngers with vnryghtousnesse. Your lyppes speake lesynges, and your tonge setteth oute wyckednes. No man regardeth ryghtousnes, and no man iudgeth truely. Euery man hopeth in vayne thynges, and ymagyneth dysceyte, conceyueth werynesse, and bryngeth forth euell. They brede cockatrice egges, and weue weue the spyders webbe. Who so eateth of their egges, dyeth. But yf one treade vpon them, ther cometh vp a serpent. Theyr web maketh no clothe and they maye not couer them with theyr laboures. Theyr dedes are the dedes of wyckednesse, and the worke of robbery is in theyr handes. Their fete runne to euil, and they make hast to shed innocent blood. Theyr counsels are wycked counsels, harme and destruction are in their wayes. But the waye of peace they knowe not. In theyr goinges is no equyte, their wayes are so croked that whosoeuer goeth therin, knoweth no thinge of peace.

B And this is the cause that equite is so farre from vs, and that the rightousnesse cometh not nygh vs. We loke for lyght, lo, it is darknesse: for the mornyng shyne, se, we walke in the darcke. We grope like the blynde vpon ye wall, we grope euen as one that hathe none eyes. We stomble at the none day, as though it were towarde night: in the fallynge places, lyke men that are halfe deed. We rore all lyke Beares, & mourne styll lyke doues. We loke for equite, but there is none: for health, but it is farre fro vs. For our offences are many before the, and our synnes testify agaynste vs. Yea we muste confesse ye we offende & knowledge ye we do amysse: Namely transgresse & dissemble agaynste the Lorde, & fall away from our God: vsynge presumptuous and traytorous imaginacions, & castinge false matters in our hertes. And therfore is equite gone asyde, & ryghtousnesse standeth farre of: truth is falle downe in the strete, & the thing thats playne and open may not be shewed. Yea the truth is layde in pryson, & he ye refrayneth him selfe from euel must be spoyled.

C Whan ye Lorde saw this, it dyspleased him sore, that there was no where anye equyte. He sawe also: that there was no man/which had pitie therof, or was greued at it. And he helde him vp his owne power, and cleued to his owne rightousnesse. * He put rightousnes vpon him for a brest place, & set ye helmete of health vpon his heade. He put on wrath in steade of clothing, & toke gelousye about him for a cloke (lyke as when a man goeth forthe wrothfully to recompence his enemyes, & to be auenged of his aduersaryes) Namely, that he myght recompence & rewarde the Ilandes where thorow the name of the Lorde myght be feared, from the rising of the Sunne, and his magestye, vnto the goynge downe of the same.

D For he shall come as a violent water streame, which the wynde of the Lorde hath moued. But vnto Sion there shall come a redemer, & vnto them in Jacob that turne from wickednes, sayth the Lorde. I wyll make this couenaunte with them (sayth the Lord) My spirite that is come vpon the, and the wordes whiche I haue put in thy mouthe, shall neuer go out of thy mouthe, nor out of the mouth of thy chylders children, from this tyme forth for euermore.

¶ A consolation and comforte to Jerusalem.

CAPI. LX.

AND therfore gette the vp betymes, for A thy lyght commeth, and the glorye of the Lorde shall ryse vp vpon the. For lo, whyle the darcknesse and cloude couereth the earthe and the people, the Lorde shall shewe the lyght, and his glory shal be sene in the. Whe thou seist this thou shalt marueyle excedyngly, and thyne herte shalbe opened: when the power of the see shalbe conuerted vnto the (that is) when the strength of ye Gentyles shal come vnto the. The multitude of Camels shal couer the, the dromedaries of Madian and Epha: All they of Saba shall come, bryngyng gold & incense, & shewing B the prayse of the Lord. All the catel of Cedar shalbe gathered vnto the, the rammes of Nabaioth shall serue the, to be offred vpon mine aulter, which I haue chosen, and in the house of my glorye whiche I haue garnysshed. But what are these that fle here lyke the cloudes and as the Doues flyenge to theyr wyndowes?

The Iles also shall gather them vnto me, and specially the shyppes of the see: that they maye bringe the sonnes from farre, and theyr syluer and theyr golde with them, vnto the name of the Lorde thy God, vnto the holye one of Israel, that hath gloryfyed the. Straungers shall buylde vp thy walles, and theyr kynges shall do the seruice. For when I am angrye, I smyte the: & when it pleaseth me, I pardon the. Apoca.xxi.g Thy gates shall stande open styll both daye and nyght, and neuer be shut: that the host of the Gentyles may come, and C that theyr kynges may be brought vnto the. For euerye people and kingdome that serueth not the, shall peryshe, & be destroyed with the swerde. The glorye of Lybanus shall come vnto the: The Fyrre trees Boxes & Cedres togyther to garnyshe the place of my Sanctuary, for I wil gloryfy the place of my fete.

Moreouer those shall come knelynge vnto the, that haue vexed the: & all they ye despised the, shall fall downe at thy fote. Thou shalt D be called the cytie of the Lorde, the holy Sion of Israel. Bicause thou hast ben forsaken and hated, so that no man went thorow the: I wil make the glorious for euer and euer, and ioyful thorow out al posterities. Thou shalt suk the mylke of the Gentyles, and kynges brestes shal fede the. And thou shalt knowe that I the Lorde am thy sauiour and defender, the mighty one of Jacob. For brasse, will I gyue the gold, and for yron siluer: for wod brasse, and for stones yron. I wyll make peace thy ruler, and ryghtousnesse thyne offycer. Violence and robberye shall neuer be herde of in thy lande, neyther harme and destruction within thy borders. Thy walles shall be called helthe, and thy gates the prayse of God.

Apoca.xxi.g. * The sonne shall neuer be thy daye lyght, beautye in the steade of asshes, ioyfull oynt-ment for lyguinge, pleasaunt rayment for an heuye mynde: That they myghte be called excellent in ryghtousnesse, a plantynge of the Lorde for him to reioyse in.

B They shall buylde the long roughe wyl-dernesse, and set vp the olde desert. They shal repayre the waste places, and suche as haue bene voyde thorowoute many generacions.
Straungers shall stande and fede youre cattell, and the Aleauntes shall be youre plow-men and reapers. But ye shall be named the prestes of the Lorde, and men shall call you the seruauntes of oure God. Ye shall enioye
C the goodes of the Gentyles, and tryumphe in theyr substaunce. For your great reprofe & shame, shal they haue ioye that ye may haue parte with theym. For they shall haue double possessiō in theyr land, and euerlasting ioye shal be with them, For I the Lord, whiche loue ryght and hate robberye (though it were offred me) shall make theyr workes full of faythfulnes, and make an euerlastynge
couenaunte with them.
Theyr sede also and theyr generacion shal-be knowen among the Gentyles, and amōge
the people. All they that se thē, shall knowe ye they are the hygh blessed seed of the Lorde.
And therfore I am ioyfull in the Lorde, and my soule reioyseth in my God. For he shall put vpon me the garment of helth, and couer me with the mantel of ryghtousnesse. He shal decke me lyke a brydgrome, and as a bryde ye hath her apparell vpon her. For lyke as the grounde bryngeth forth frute, and as the garden shuteth forth sede: So shall the Lorde God cause ryghteousnes, & the feare of God
to floryshe forthe before al the heathen.

¶ A Propheceye of the commynge of Chryst.

CAPI. LXII.

A FOr Syons sake therfore wyll I not hold my tongue, and for Ierusalems sake I wyll not ceasse: vntyl theyr ryghtousnes breake forth as the shynynge lyght, and their helthe as a burnynge lampe. Then shall the Gentyles se thy ryghtousnesse and all kinges thy glorye. Thou shalt be named with a new name, which the mouth of ye Lord shal shew.
Thou shalte be a crowne in the hande of the Lorde, and a glorious garlande in the hande of thy God. From this time forth thou shalt B neuer be called ye forsaken, and thy lande shal
no more be called ye wyldernesse. But ye shalte be called Hephzibah, & thy lande Beula: for the Lorde loueth the, & thy lande shalbe inhabited. And lyke as a yong mā taketh a daughter to maryage, so shal God mary him selfe vnto thy sonnes. And as a brydgrome is glad of his bryde, so shall God reioyse ouer the.
C I wil set watchmē vpon thy walles (O Ie-rusalem) whiche shall neither ceasse daye nor nyght to preache the Lorde. And ye also shall not kepe him close, nor leue to speake of him
vntyll Ierusalem be set vp, & made the prayse of the worlde. The Lorde hath sworne by his ryght hande & by his strong arme, that from hēce forthe he wyll not gyue thy corne to be meat for thine ennemyes, ne thy wyne (wher-in thou haste laboured) to be drynke for the straūgers. But they that haue gathered ye corne, shal eate it, & gyue thankes to the Lord and they that haue borne in the vyne, shall drinke it in the court of my Sanctuarye.
Stande backe, and departe a sunder, ye ye stāde vnder the gate: make rowme ye people
D repayre the strete, and take awaye the stones, & set out a token for the people. Beholde, the Lord proclaymeth in the endes of the worlde:
tell the daughter Sion: se, thy saluacion commeth: beholde, he bryngeth his treasure with him, and his workes go before him. For they whom ye Lord delyuereth, shalbe called ye holy people: and as for the, thou shalt be named ye greatlye occupyed, and not the forsaken.

¶ Of the redemption promysed to the people.

CAPI. LXIII.

A WHat is he this, that commeth from Edom, wt stayned reade clothes of Bosra:
(which is so costly cloth) & commeth in so nymbly wt al his strēgth: I am he ye teacheth ryghtousnes & am of power to helpe. Wherfore thē is thy clothing red, & thy raymente like his ye treadeth in ye wine presse? I haue tro-den downe myne enemyes in my wrathe, and set my fete vpon them in my indignacion: And theyr bloude sprange vpon my clothes, and so haue I stayned al my raiment. For the day of vengeaunce that I haue taken in hande, and the yeare of my delyueraunce is come. I loked about me, and there was no man to shewe me any helpe, I fell downe, and no mā helde me vp. Then I helde me by myne owne arme, and my feruentnesse susteyned me. And thus haue I troden downe the people in my wrathe, and bathed them in my displeasure:

In so moche that I haue shedde theyr bloude
vpon the earthe.
I wyll declare the goodnesse of the Lorde, yea and the prayse of the Lorde for all that he hath gyuen vs, for the greate good that he hathe done for Israel: whiche he hath gyuen them of his owne fauour, and accordinge
to the multytude of his louynge kyndnesses.
For he sayde: These no doubte wyll be my people, and no shrinkynge chyldren, and so he was theyr sauyoure. In theyr troubles he tro-bled them not, but the angell that went forth from his presence delyuered them: Of very loue & kyndenesse that he had vnto thē, rede-C med he them. He hathe borne them, & caryed them vp euer sence the world began. But after they prouoked hym to wrathe and vexed his holy mind, he was theyr enemy, & fought agaynste them him selfe. Yet remembred he ye olde tyme of Moses and his people: How he brought them frome the water of the see, as a shepeherde doth with his shepe: how he had gyuen his holy spirite amonge them: how he had led Moses by the righte hande with his gloryous arme: how he had deuyded the water before them (wherby he gate him selfe an euerlastynge name) howe he led them in the depe, as an horse is led in the playne, ye they shulde not stumble. The spirite of the Lorde led them, as a tame beaste goeth in the felde.
Thus (O God) hast thou led my people,
D to make thy selfe a gloryous name with all.
Loke downe then frome heauen, and behold
the dwellynge place of thy sanctuarye and thy glorye. How is it, that thy gelousye, thy strength, the multytude of thy mercyes and thy louynge kyndnesse, wyl not be intreated of vs. Yet arte thou oure father: For Abrahā knoweth vs not, nether is Israel acquaynted with vs. But thou Lorde art oure father and redemer, & thy name is euerlastynge. O Lord wherfore haste thou led vs out of thy wayes?
wherfore hast thou hardened oure hertes, that we feare the not? Be at one with vs agayne, for thy seruauntes sake that are of the generacion of thyne herytage. Thy people hathe had but lytle of thy Sanctuarye in possessiō, for oure enemyes haue taken it in: And we are become euen as we were from the begyn-nynge: but thou arte not theyr Lorde, for they haue not called vpon thy name.

¶ The Prophete (vnder the person of the Iewes) bewayleth theyr exyle and bannyshment. Theyr ryghtuousnesse is lyke a cloth fyled with the flowres of a woman.

CAPI. LXIIII.

A O That thou woldest cleue the heuen in sondre, and come downe: that the moūtaynes myght melte awaye at thy presence, lyke as at an hote fyre, & that the malicious myght boyle, as the water doth vpon
ye fyre: Wherby thy name myght be knowen amonge thyne ennemyes, and that the Gentyles myght trēble before the. That ye myght-est come down wt thy wōderous straūge wor-kes, then shulde thy hylles melte at thy presence. For sence the begynnynge of the world there was none (excepte thou O God) that hearde or perceyued, * neither hathe any eye
sene what thou doste for them, that put their *i.Cor.ii.b.
truste in the.
B Thou helpest hym that doth ryghte with cherfulnesse, and them that thynke vpon thy wayes. But lo, thou arte angrye, for we offend and haue bene euer in synne, * and there Rom.iii.b.c
is not one hole. We are all as an vncleane Psal.xiii.a. thynge, and all oure ryghtousnesses are as ye clothes stayned with the floures of a womā:
we fall euerychone as the leafe, for oure syn-nes cary vs awaye lyke the wynde. There is C no man that calleth vpon thy name, that stādeth vp to take holde by the. Therfore hidest thou thy face frome vs, and consumest vs, because of oure synnes.
But nowe O Lorde, thou father of oures:
* we are the claye, and thou arte oure potter Rom.ix.c.
& we all are the worke of thy handes. Be not Eccle.xxxiii.b to sore displeased (O Lord) and kepe not our Psa.lxxviii.b offences to longe in thy remembraunce, but consydre that we al are thy people. The cities D of thy Sāctuary lye wast, Syon is a wyldernesse, and Ierusalem a deserte. Oure holy house whiche is oure beautye, where oure fathers praysed the, is brent vp: yea all oure commodities and pleasures are wasted away. Wilt thou not be intreated (Lorde) for all this?
Wylt thou hold thy peace, and scourge vs so sore?

¶ The felicytie of Ierusalem, and the callynge of the Heathen.

CAPI. LXV.

A THey shal seke me, that hytherto haue Esay.lii.a.
not asked for me: they shall fynde me, Rom.x.d.
that hitherto haue not sought me. Thē shall I say immediatly to the people that neuer called vpon my name: I am here, I am here. For thus long haue I euer holden oute my handes to an vnfaythfull people, that go not the right way, but after theyr owne imaginacions: To a people that is euer defying me to my face. * They make theyr oblations Deut.xii.a.c
in gardens, and theyr smoke vpon altares of Deut.xiiii.b.
brycke, they lurke among the graues and lye
in the dēnes all nyght. They eate swynesflesh & vncleane broth is in theyr vessels. If thou commest nye them, they say: touch me not, Deut.xiiii.a for I am holyer then thou. Leuit.xi.a.
All these men when I am angrye shall be turned to smoke and fyre, that shal burne for-B euer. Beholde it is wrytten before my face, & shal not be forgotten, but recompēsed. I shal Ieremy.vii.a

Esay.lxvi.a. rewarde it them in to theyr bosome: I mean Ezechi.xx.d. youre mysdedes, and the misdedes of youre fathers togyther (sayth the Lord) which haue made theyr smokes vpon the mountaynes, and blasphemed me vpō the hylles: therfore
wyll I measure theyr olde dedes in to theyr bosome agayne. Moreouer thus sayth the Lorde: lyke as when one wold gather holy grapes, men saye vnto him: breake it not of,
for it is holy: euen so wyll I do also for my seruauntes sakes, that I wyll not destroy thē all: But I wyll take a sede out of Jacob, and oute of Juda one, to take possession of my hil.
My chosen shall possesse these thynges, and My seruauntes shall dwell there. Saron shal be a shepefolde, and the valleye of Achor shal
gyue the stallynge for the catell of my people
C that feare me. * But as for you, ye are they,
that haue forsaken the Lorde, & forgotten my Prouer.i.c. Jeremy.vij.c holy hyll. Ye haue set vp an aultare vnto for tune, and gyuen ryche drynckofferynges vnto treasure. Therfore wyll I nombre you with the swearde, that ye shall be destroyed all to= gyther. For when I called, no man gaue me answere: when I spake ye harkened not vnto me, but dyd wyckednesse before myne eyes, & chose the thynge that pleased me not.
Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: Be= holde my seruauntes shall eate, but ye shall haue honger. Beholde, my seruauntes shall drincke but ye shall suffre thurste. Beholde, my seruauntes shal be merye, but ye shal be confounded. Beholde, my seruauntes shall reioyse for verye quyetnesse of herte: But ye shall crye for sorowe of herte, and complayne for vexacion of mynde. Youre name shall not be sworne by amonge my chosen, for God
the Lorde shall sleye you, and call his ser= uauntes by an other name. Who so reioyseth vpon earthe, shall reioyse in the true God.
And who so sweareth vpon earth, shall swere in the true God. For the olde enmyte shal be forgotten, and taken away oute of my syght.
For lo, I shall make a newe heauen, & a newe
earthe. And as for the olde, they shall neuer be thoughte vpon, ne kepte in mynde: but men shall be glad and euermore reioyse, for the thynges that I shall do.
For why: Beholde, I shall make a ioyful Jerusalem, yea I my selfe will reioyse with Apoca.xxi.a. Jerusalem, and be glad with my people: And D the voyce of weppynge and waylynge shal not be herde in her from thence forth. There shal neuer be chylde ne olde man, that haue not theyr full dayes. But when the chylde com= meth to an hundreth yeare olde, it shall dye.
And yf he that is an hundreth yere of age do wronge, he shall be cursed. They shall buylde houses, and dwell in them: they shall plante vineyardes, and eate the frute of them. They shall not buylde, & another possesse. They shal not plāt & other eate: But lyke of my people shalbe lyke a tree, & so shall the worke of theyr handes.
My chosen shall lyue longe, they shall not labour in vayne, nor begette with trouble:
for they are the hye blessed sede of the Lord,
and theyr frutes with them. And it shall be, E or euer they call, I shall answere thē. While they are yet but thinckynge howe to speake,

I shal heare them. The Wolfe and the Lābe shall fede to gyther, and the Lyon shall eate haye lyke the bullocke. But earthe shall be ÿ Esay.xi.
serpentes meate. There shall no man hurt ne slaye an other, in all my holy hylle, sayth the Lorde.

¶ God dwelleth not in temples, made by mannes hande. He despyseth sacrifyces done without mercy and fayth. God comforteth them that are troubled for his sake. Amonge the Christen, the Sabboth is contynuall.

CAPI. LXVI.

Thus sayth the Lorde: Heauen is my A seate, and the earthe is my fote stole. Act.vij.
Where shall nowe the house stande ÿ ye wyll buylde vnto me? And where shall be the place, ÿ I wil dwell in? As for these thin= ges, my hande hath made them all, and they are all created, sayth the Lorde. Whiche of them shal I then regarde? Euen him that is of a lowly troubled spirite, and standeth in awe of my wordes. For who so slayeth an oxe for me, dothe me so greate dishonoure, as he ÿ kylleth a man. He that killeth a shepe for me choketh a dogge. He that bryngeth me meate B offeringes, offereth swynes bloude: Who so maketh me a memoriall of incense, prayseth the thinge that is vnryghte. Yet take they such wayes in hande, and theyr soule delyteth
in these abhomynacions.
Therfore wyl I also haue pleasure i laugh= Prouer.i. Jeremy. Esay.
ynge them to scorne, and the thynge that they feare, wyl I bryng vpon them. For whē
I called, no man gaue answere: whē I spake
they wolde not heare: But dyd wyckednesse before myne eyes, and chose the thynges that dyspleased me. Heare the worde of God all ye that feare the thing which he speaketh. Your brethren that hate you, and caste you oute for my names sake, saye Let the Lorde magnyfy him selfe, that we maye se youre gladnesse: &
yet they shall be confounded.
For as touchynge the cytie and the temple C
I heare the voyce of the Lorde, that wyll re= warde, and recompense his enemyes: like as when a wyfe bryngeth forth a man childe, or euer she suffre the payne of the byrth and an= guysshe of the trauayle. Who euer herde or sawe suche thynges? doth the grounde beare in one daye? Or are the people borne all at ones, as Syon beareth her sonnes? For thus sayth the Lorde: Am I he that maketh o= ther to beare, and bare not my selfe? Am not I he that beareth, and maketh barren?
sayth thy God. Reioyce with Jerusalem,
and be gladde with her, all ye that loue her.
Be ioyfull with her, all ye that mourned for D
her. For ye shall sucke comforte oute of her brestes, and be satisfied. Ye shall taste, & haue delyte in the plenteousnesse of her power. For thus sayth the the Lorde: Beholde, I wyll let peax in to her, like a water floude, and the myght of the heathen like a flowyng streme.
Then

Then shall ye sucke, ye shall be borne vpon her sydes, and be ioyfull vpon her knees. For lyke as a chylde is comforted of his mother,
so shall I comforte you, and ye shalbe com= forted in Jerusalem. And when ye se this, your herte shall reioyse, and your bones shall floryssh lyke an herbe.
E Thus shal the hande of the Lord be knowē
amonge his seruauntes, and his indignacion amonge his enemyes. For beholde, the Lorde shall come with fyre, and his charet shall be lyke a whyrle wynde, that he maye recom=
G pence his vengeaunce in his wrathe, and his indignacion with the flame of fyre. For the Lorde shall iudge all flesh with the fyre, and with his swearde, and there shall be a greate nombre slayne of the Lorde. Suche as haue made them selues holy and cleane in the gar= dens, and those that haue eaten swyne flesh,
myce, and other abominacions, shalbe taken awaye together, sayth the Lorde. For I wyll F come to gather all people and tunges with theyr workes and imaginacyons, these shall come, and se my glorye. Unto them shall I geue a token, and sende certayne of them (that be delyuered) amonge the Gentyles, in to Celycia, Afryca and Lidya (where men can handle bowes) in to Italye also and Greke
lande.
G The Iles farre of, that haue not hearde

speake of me, and haue not sene my glorye.
shal preache my prayse among the Gentyles, and shall brynge all youre brethren for an of= frynge vnto the Lorde, out of all people, vpō horses, charettes and horse lytters, vpō Mu= les and cartes to Jerusalem my holye hyll (sayth the Lorde) lyke as the chyldren of Js= raell brynge the offrynge in cleane vessels, to the house of the Lorde.
And I shall take oute certayne of them for
to be Prestes and Leuytes, sayth the Lorde.
For lyke as the newe heauen and the newe Apoca.xxi.a.
earth which I wyll make, shalbe fast stablys= shed by me, (sayth the Lorde.) So shall youre sede and your name contynue, and there shal
be a newe Moone for the other, and a newe Sabboth for the other, & all flesh shall come to worshyppe before me, (sayth the Lorde.)
And they shall goo forthe and loke vpon
the carcons of them that haue trans= gressed agaynst me. For theyr wor=
mes shall not dye, neyther Mat.ix.f.
shall theyr fyre be quen= ched, and all fleshe
shall abhorre
them.

¶ The ende of the boke of the Prophete Esaye.

D.D.iij.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE IEREMYE.

¶ The Rocke of Jeremy, and in what tyme he prophecyed. He excuseth him selfe and wolde refuse the office of a Prophete, because he is younge and vnexperte. He is taught of the Lorde, and becommeth bolde. God openeth vnto him, that the destruction of the Jewes, by the Babilonians, is at hand. Jeremy is commaunded to speake the worde of God vnto the Jewes, without feare.

CAPI. I.

THese are the Sermons of Jeremye the sonne of Helkiah the Preest, one of them that dwelte at Anathoth in the lande of Benjamin, when the Lorde had fyrste spoken with hym, in the tyme of Josiah the sonne of Amon kyng of Juda, in the xiij. yere of his kyngdome, and so durynge vnto the tyme of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, and vntyl the.xj. yeres of Zedekiah the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda were ended, when Jerusalem was take, euen in the fyfth moneth. The worde of the Lorde spake thus vnto me: Before I fashyoned the in thy mothers wombe, I dyd know the. And or euer thou wast borne, I sanctified the, and ordeyned the, to be a Prophete vnto the people. Then sayde I: Oh Lorde God, I am vnwete, for I am yet but yonge. And the Lorde answered me thus: Saye not so, I am to yonge. For thou shalt goo to all that I shall sende the vnto, and whatsoeuer I cõmaunde the, that shalt thou speake. Be not afrayed of their faces, for I wylbe with the, to deliuer the, sayeth the Lorde.

And with that, the Lorde stretched out his hande, and touched my mouth, & sayd moreouer vnto me: Behold, I put my wordes in thy mouthe, and this daye do I set the ouer the people and kyngdomes, that thou mayst roote oute, breake or, destroye, and make waste, and that thou mayst buylde vp and plante. After this, the Lorde spake vnto me, sayenge: Jeremy, what seest thou? And I sayde: I se a wakyng rodde. Then sayde the Lorde: thou haste sene yeght, for I wyll watch diligently vpon my worde, to performe it.

It happened afterwarde, that the Lorde spake to me agayne, and sayde: What seest thou? And I sayde: I se a seething pot, lokyng from out of the North vpther warde.

Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: Out of the North shall come a plage vpon all the dwellers of the lande. For lo, I wyll call all the offices of the kyngdomes of the North (sayth the Lorde.) And they shall come, & euery one shall set his seate in the gates of Jerusalem, & in all their walles rounde about & thorowe all the cyties of Juda. And thorow them shal I declare my iudgement, vpon all the wycked dede of those men that haue forsake me, that haue offred vnto straunge goddes and worshipped the workes of their owne handes.

And therfore gyrde vp thy lopnes, aryse, and tell them all, that I geue the in commaundement. Feare them not, I wyll not haue the to be afrayed of them. For beholde, this daye do I make the a stronge fensed towne, an yron pyller, & a wal of stele agaynst the hole lande, agaynst the kynges and myghty men of Juda, agaynst the preestes & people of the lande. They shall fyght agaynst the, but they shall not be able to ouercome the, for I am with the, to deliuer the, sayeth the Lorde.

¶ God reherseth his benefytes done vnto the Jewes. Agaynste Preestes and Prophetes, or preachers that contemne and despyte God. The Jewes are destroyed, because they forsoke God, and because they raune a hore hunteynge after Idolles.

CAPI. II.

MOreouer, the worde of the Lorde commaunded me thus: Go thy waye, crye in the eares of Jerusalem, and saye: Thus sayth the Lorde: I remẽbre the for the kyndnesse of thy youth, & because of thy stedfast loue, in that thou folowdest me thorowe the wyldernesse, in an vntylled lande. Thou Israell wast halowed vnto the Lorde, and is was his fyrste frutes. All they that deuoured Israell, offended: myscrortune fell vpon them, sayeth the Lorde. Heare therfore the worde of the Lorde, O thou house of Jacob, and all the generacion of the house of Israell. Thus sayth the Lorde vnto you.

What vnfaithfulnesse found your fathers in me, that they went so farre awaye fro me, & fallyng to lyghtnesse, & beyng so vayne? They thought not in their hertes: Where haue we lefte the Lorde, that brought vs oute of the lande of Egypt, that led vs thorow the wyldernesse, thorow a desert & rough lande, thorow a dyre & a deadly lande, yea a lande that no man had gone thorowe, & wherin no man had dwelt? And when I had brought you into a pleasaũt welbuylded land, that ye might eate the frutes & all the cõmodities of the same, ye went forthe & defyled my lande, and brought myne heritage to abomination.

The Preestes them selues sayde not ones: Where is the Lord? They that haue the law in their handes, knowe me not. The shepherdes offende agaynste me. The Prophetes do seruyce vnto Baal, and folowe suche thynges as shall brynge them no profyt.

Wherfore I am constrayned (sayth the Lorde) to make my cõplaynte vpon you, and vpon your children. Go in to the Iles of the Gentiles, and loke well, sende vnto Cedar, take them, and loke well, sende vnto Cedar, take diligent hede, and se, whether suche thynges be done there, whether the Gentiles their goddes deale so falsly & vntruely with their gods, (whiche yet are no goddes in deede.) But my people hath geue ouer their true honoure, for a thynge that maye not helpe them.

Be astonished, o ye heuens, be afrayde and abashed at suche a thynge, sayeth the Lorde. For my people hath wone two cuyls. They haue forsaken me the well of water of lyfe, and digged them pittes, yea vile and broken pittes that holde no water. Is Israel a bonde seruaunt, or one of the housholde? Why is he then so spoyled? Why do they roze and crye then vpon him as a lyon? They haue made his land waste, his cityes are so brent vp, that there is no man dwellynge in them. Yea the children of Noph and Taphnes haue vexed thy necke.

Commeth not this vnto the, because thou hast forsaken the Lorde thy God, euer sence he ledde the by the waye? And what haste thou nowe to do in the streete of Egypte? to drynke foule water? Eyther what makest thou in the waye of Assiria? To drynke water of the floude? Thyne owne wickednesse shal reproue the, and thy turnyng away shall condemne the: that thou mayste knowe and vnderstande how cuyll and bytterfull a thynge it is, that thou haste forsaken the Lorde thy God, and not feared him sayth the Lorde God of hostes.

I haue euer broken thy yoke of olde, and burste thy bondes: yet sayste thou, I will no more serue, but (lyke an harlot) thou runnest aboute vpon all hye hylles, and amonge all grene trees, where as I planted the oute of noble grapes, and good rotes. How art thou tourned then in to a bitter, vntrue tefull, and and straunge grape? Yea, and that so sooze: that though thou washe the with Nitrus, & make thy selfe to sauoure with that swete smelynge herbe of Bozith: yet in my syght thou art stayned with thy wickednesse, sayth the Lorde thy God.

Saye not nowe: I am not vnclene, and I haue not folowed the Goddes. Loke vpon thyne owne wayes in the wodoes, valeys, & dennes: so shalt thou knowe what thou hast done. Thou arte lyke a swyfte Dromadary that goeth euely his way: and thy wantonnesse is lyke a wylde asse that vseth the wildernesse, and that snoffeth and bloweth at his will. Who can tame the? All they that seke the, shal not fayle, but fynde the in thyne owne vnclennes. Thou kepest thy foote from nakednesse, and thy throte from thyrst, and thinkest thou in thy selfe: tusth, I wil take no sorowe, I will loue the straunge goddes, and hange vpon them.

Lyke as a theefe that is taken with the deede commeth to shame, euen so is the house of Israel come to confusion: the commen people, their kynges and rulers, their preestes and prophetes. For they saye to a stocke: thou art my father, and to a stone: thou hast begotte me: yea they haue turned their backe vpon me, & not their face.

But in the tyme of their trouble, whe they saye: stande vp and helpe vs, I shal answere them: Where are nowe thy goddes, that thou hast made the? byd them stande vp and helpe the in the tyme of nede. For loke how many cities thou hast (O Juda) so many goddes hast thou also.

Wherfore ryen wyll ye goo to lawe with me, seinge ye all are synners agaynste me sayeth the Lorde? It is but lost labour, that I smyte youre children, for they receyue not my correction. Youre owne swerde destroyeth youre Prophetes, lyke a deuouringe lyon. Yf ye be the people of the Lorde, then harken vnto his worde: am I then become a wildernesse vnto the people of Israel? or a lande that hathe no lyght? Wherfore sayeth my people then: we are fallen of, and we wyll come no more vnto the? Dothe a mayden forget her raymente, or a bryde her stomacher? And dothe my people forget me so longe? Why boosteth thou thy wayes so hyghly (to obtayne tauoure there forowe) when thou hast yet stayned them with blasphemyes? Jeremy.vi.e

Upon thy wynges is founde the bloude of poore and innocent people, and that not in corners and holes onely, but openly in all places. Yet darest thou saye I am gyltelesse: Tusthe, his wrathe can not come vpon me. Beholde, I wyll reason with the, because thou darest saye: I haue not offended. O howe cuyll wyll it be for the to abyde it: when it shall be knowen how ofte thou hast gone backwarde? Deute.xxviiij.b Jeremy.v.iiij.a Ezech.xx.d

For thou shalte be confounded as well of Egypte, as of the Assirians: Yea, thou shalte goo thy waye frome them, and smyte thyne handes togyther vpon thy heed: Because the Lorde shall brynge that confydence and hope of thyne to nought, and thou shalt not prospere withall.

¶ God beynge mercyfull, calleth vnto repentaunce his people, whiche he hadde forsaken for their hoordome with goddes. He exhorteth Israell vnto repentaunce, promysynge them shepeherdes that shoulde haue the true knowledge of God. The returne of Israel vnto God, notwithstynge their offence.

CAPI. III.

COmmenly when a man putteth awaye his wyfe, and she goeth frome him and marryeth with an other, then the question is: Sholde he receyue vnto her any more after that? Is not this felde then defiled and vnclene? But as for the, thou hast played the harlot with many louers, yet tourne agayne to me sayth the Lord. Lyft vp thyne eyes on euerye syde, and loke yf thou be not defiled. Thou hast waited for them in the streetes, & as a murtherer in the wildernesse. Thorowe thy hoordome and shameful blasphemies is the lande defiled.

This is the cause, that the rayne and euenynge dewe hathe ceased. Thou haste gotten an hoores forehead, and canste not be ashamed. Elles wouldest thou saye vnto me: O my father, thou arte he that hast broughte me vp, and ledde me fro my youthe: Wylte thou then put me awaye, and caste me of for euer?

euer? Or wylte thou withdrawe thy selfe cleane fro me? Neuertheleſſe thou ſpeakeſt ſuche wordes, but thou art euer doing wozſe and wozſe.

* Thꝰ Lozde ſayde alſo vnto me: in the tyme of Joſiah the kynge: Haſte thou ſene what that wyzthy kynge Iſraell hathe doone? howe ſhe hathe runne vp vpon all the hylles and amonge all ſyzthe trees, and there playe to the hatlot? Haſte thou lene alſo (when ſhe hadde doone all this) howe I ſayde vnto her: that ſhe ſhoulde turne agayne vnto me, and yet ſhe is not returned? Juda that vnfaythfull ſyſter of hers alſo ſawe this: Naye ſy that after I hadde well ſene the aduoutrye of the wyzthy kynge harlotte Iſraell, I put her awaye, and gaue her a byll of diuozcement.

For all this her vnfaythfull ſyſter Juda was not aſhamed, but went backe and playe ed the hoore alſo. Yea, and the noyſe of her hoozedome hathe defyled the hole lande. For ſhe hath committed her aduoutrye with ſtones and ſtockes.

Neuertheleſſe her vnfaythfull ſyſter Juda is not tourned agayne vnto me with her hole hert, but fayndly: ſayth the Lozde. And the Lozde ſayd vnto me. The backſlyder Iſraell is moze ryghtous then the vnfaythfull Juda: and therfoze goo preache theſe wozdes toward the Nozthe, and ſaye: Thou wyzthy kynge Iſraell, tourne agayne (ſayth the Lozde) and I wyll not tourne my face from you: for I am mercyful, ſayth the Lozd, and I wyll not alwaye beare diſpleaſure againſt you: but on this condition, that thou knowe thy greate blaſphemye: Namely, that thou haſte vnfaythfully forſaken the Lozde thy God, and haſte made thy ſelfe parte taker of ſtraunge Goddes vnder all grene trees, but haſt hadde no wyll to heare my voyce, ſayth the Lozde.

* Oye wyzthyleſſe chyldren, tourne agayne, ſayth the Lozde: and I wyll be maryed with you. For I wyll take one out of the cite, and two out of one generation from amonge you, and bryng you out of Syon: and wyll geue you herdemen after myne owne mynde, whiche ſhall fede you with knowlege and wyſdome.

Moreouer, when ye be encreaſed and multiplyed in the lande, then (ſayeth the Lozde) there ſhall no more boſſe be made of the Arche of the Lozdes Teſtament: No man ſhall thynke vpon it, neyther ſhall any man make mention of it: for from thence forth the ſhall neyther be viſited, ne gouerned with ſyghte.

Then ſhall Jeruſalem be called the Lozdes ſeate, and all Heathen ſhall be gathered vnto it, for the Lozdes names ſake, whiche ſhall be ſet forthe, they ſhall folowe no more the ymagination of their owne frowarde herte.

Then thoſe that be of the houſe of Juda, ſhall goo vnto the houſe of Iſraell: and they ſhall come togyther out of the Nozthe into the ſame land that I haue gyuē your fathers.

I haue ſhewed alſo howe I toke the vp, being but a child, and gaue the a pleaſaunt land for thyne herytage: yea, and a goodly hoſt of the Heathen: and howe I commaunded the that thou ſholdeſt *call me father onely, and not to ſwyrne fro me.

But lyke as a woman fayleth her louer, ſo are ye vnfaythfull vnto me (Oye houſe of Iſraell) ſayth the Lozde. And therfoze the hoope of the cyrcumcyſion of Iſrael was heard on euery ſyde, wepinge and waylinge: for they haue defiled theyr waye, and forgotten God theyr Lozde.

Oye wyzthyleſſe chyldren, tourne agayne (ſayinge: Lo, we are thyne, for thou arte the Lozde our God:) And lo that I heare youre backeturnynges. Thy hylles fall, and all the hye pryde of the mountaynes, but the helthe of Iſraell ſtandeth onely vpon God our Lozde.

Confuſion hathe deuoured oure fathers laboure frome oure youthe vp: yea, theyr ſhepe and bullockes, theyr ſonnes and doughters. So wo we alſo lyepe in oure confuſion, and ſhame couereth vs: for we and oure fathers from oure youthe vp vnto this daye, haue ſynned agaynſte the Lozde oure God, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lozde our God.

¶ The true repentaunce or returnynge to God. He exhorteth to the circumcyſion of the herte. The deſtruction of Jewryze is propheceyed, for the malyce of theyr hertes.

CAPI. IIII.

OIſrael, yf thou wylte turne the, then turne vnto me, ſayeth the Lozde. And yf thou wilt put awaye thyne abhominacions out of my ſyght, thou ſhalte not be moued: And ſhalte ſwere. The Lozde lyueth: in truth, in equitie and rightouſneſſe: and all the people ſhal be fortunable and ioyfull in him. For thus ſayth the Lozde, to all Juda and Jeruſalem: plow your lande, and ſowe not among the thornes.

Be circumcyſed vnto the Lozde, and putte away the foreſkynne of youre hertes, all ye of Juda, and all the indwellers of Jeruſalem: that my indignacion breke not out lyke fyre, and kyndle, ſo that no man maye quenche it, becauſe of the wickednelle of youre ymaginacions.

Preache in Juda and Jeruſalem: crye oute and ſpeke: blow the trompettes in the lande: crye that euery man may geare, and ſaye: Gather you togither, and we wyll go in to ſtrong cities. Set vp the token in Syon, ſpede you, and make no tarying: for I will bryng a great plage, & a greate deſtruction from the Nozthe. For the ſpoyler of the Gentyles is broken vp frome his place, as a lyon out of his denne, that he maye make the lande waſte, and deſtroye the cityes, ſo that no man maye dwell therin. Wherfoze gyrde youre ſelues about with ſacke cloth, mourne and wepe, for the feareful wrath of the Lozd ſhal not be withdrawen from you.

At the ſame tyme (ſayeth the Lozde) the herte of the kynge and of the Pzynces ſhall be gone, the prieſtes ſhal be aſtonyſhed, and the Pzophetes ſhall ye looze afrayde. Then ſayde I: O Lozde God, haſt thou then diſceyued this people, and Jeruſalem, ſayinge: ye ſhall haue peax, and nowe the ſwerde goeth thzowe their lyues? Then ſhall it be ſayd to the people, and to Jeruſalem: there commeth a warme wynde frome the Nozthe thzowe the way of my people, but neither to fan, ne to clenſe.

After that there ſhall come vnto me a ſtronge wynde, and then wyll I alſo geue ſentence vpon them. For loo, he commeth downe lyke as a cloude, and his charettes are lyke a ſtormy wynde: his hoꝛſemen are ſwifter then the Egle. Wo vnto vs, for we are deſtroyed. O Jeruſalem, waſh thyne herte from wickednelle, that thou mayſt be helped. How longe ſhall thy noyſome thoughtes remayne with the?

For a voyce frome Dan, and from the hyll of Ephraim ſpeaketh oute, and telleth of a deſtruction. Beholde the Heathen geue Jeruſalem warnyng, and preache vnto her, that her deſtroyers are commynge frome farre countreys. They tell the cities of Juda the ſame alſo, they ſhall geue them warnynge in euery place, lyke as the watchemen in the felde. For they haue pzouoked me to wzathe, ſayth the Lozde.

Thy wayes and thy thoughtes, haue brought the vnto this: this is thyne owne wyckednelle and diſobedience that hath poſſeſſed thyne herte: Ah my bely, ah my bely, (ſhalte thou crye) howe is my herte ſo ſoze? my heart panteth within me, I can not be ſtill, for I haue herd the ceryinge of the trompettes and peales of warre.

They crye murther vpon murther, the hole lande ſhal periſſhe. Immediatly my tentes were deſtroyed, and my hangynges in the twinckelynge of an eye. How longe ſhall I ſe the tokens of warre, and heare the noyſe of the trompettes.

Neuertheleſſe, this ſhall come vpon them, becauſe my people is become foolyſſhe, and haue vtterly no vnderſtandynge. They are the chyldren of folyſhneſſe, and without any diſcretion. To do euil, they haue wit ynough: but to do wel, they haue no wyſdome. I haue loked vpon the earthe: and ſe, it is waſte and voyde. I loked towarde heuen, and it had no ſhyne.

I beheld the mountaynes and they trembled, and all the hylles were in a feare. I loked aboute me, and there was no bodye, and all the byrdes of the ayze were awaye. I marked well, and the plowed felde was become waſte: yea al their cities were broken downe at the preſence of the Lozde, and indignacion of his wrathe.

For thus hath the Lozde ſayde: The hole lande ſhal be deſolate, yet wil I not then haue done. And therfoze let the erth mourne, and let the heuen be ſoꝛye aboue: for the thynge that I haue purpoſed and taken vpon me to do, ſhal not repent me, and I will not go frō it. The hole lande ſhal flē for ỹ noyſe of horſe men and bowmen: they ſhal run in to trimes in to woodes, and clyme vp the ſtony rockes. All the cityes ſhall be voyde, & no man dwellynge therin.

What wylt thou now do, thou beinge deſtroyed? For though thou clotheſt thy ſelfe with ſcarlet, & deckeſt the with golde: though thou paynteſt thy ſelf with colours, yet ſhalt thou trym thy ſelf in vayne.

For thoſe that hitherto haue ben thy great fauourers ſhall abhoꝛre the, and goo aboute to ſlee the. For (me thynke) I heare a noyſe, lyke as it were a woman trauelynge, or one labouryng of her fyrſt chylde: Euen ỹ voyce of the doughter Sion, that calleth out her armes, and ſaweth, ſayinge: Ah, wo is me, how ſoze vexed and faynt is my herte, for the that are ſlayne?

¶ In Jewryze is there no ryghtous or faythfull man founde, eyther amongeſt the people, or the rulers, for whoſe ſake the Lozde ſhoulde ſpare the cytye: wherfoze Jewryze is deſtroyed of the Aſſyrians.

CAPI.

LOke thzowe Jeruſalem: beholde and ſe: Seke thzowe her ſtretes alſo within, yf ye can fynde one man that doeth equall and ryghte, or that laboureth to be faythfull: and I ſhall ſpare him (ſayeth the Lozde.) For though they can ſaye: the Lozde lyueth, yet w they ſwere to diſceyue: Where as thou (o Lozde) lokeſt onely vpon faythe and truthe.

Thou haſt ſcourged them, but they toke no repentaunce: thou haſt cozrect the for amendment, but they refuſed thy cozrection. They made theyr faces harder then a ſtone, & wolde not amende.

Therfoze I thoughte in my ſelfe: peraduenture they are ſo ſymple and foolyſh, that they vnderſtande nothynge of the Lozdes waye, and iudgementes of our God. Therfoze wyll I goo vnto their heades and rulers, and talke with them: yf they knowe the waye of the Lozde, and the iudgementes of oure God. But theſe (in lyke maner) haue broken the yoke, and burſte the bandes in ſonder.

Wherfoze a lyon out of the wod ſhal hurt them, and a wolfe in the euenynge ſhall deſtroye them. The cat of the mountayne ſhall lye lurkynge by their cities, to teare in peces all them that come therout. For theyr offences are manye, and theyr departynge awaye is greate. Shoulde I then for all this haue mercye vpon the? Thy chyldren haue forſaken me, and ſwoꝛne by them that are no goddes. And albeit they were bounde to me in mariage, yet they fell to aduoutrye, and haūted harlottes houſes.

In

In ye desire of vncleanly lust they are become like the stoned horse, euery man neyeth at his neyghbours wyfe: sholde I not correct this sayth the Lorde?

Sholde I not be auenged of euery people, that is lyke vnto this? Clyme vp vpon their walles, beate them downe, but destroye them not vtterly: cut of their braunches, bycause they are not the Lordes. For vnfaythfully hathe the house of Israel and Iuda forsaken me, sayth the Lorde. They haue denied the Lorde, and sayde: it is not he. Tusshe, there shall no mysfortune come vpon vs: we shall se neyther swerde nor honger. As for the warnyng of the Prophetes, they take it but for wynde: yea there is none of these, which will tell them, that suche thynges shall happen vnto them. Ezechi.xxii.c.

D Wherfore thus sayth the Lorde God of hostes: bycause ye speake suche wordes: beholde: The wordes that are in thy mouthe will I turne to fire, and make the people to be wod, that I may consume them.

Lo, I will brynge a people vpon you from farre, O house of Israel (sayth the Lorde) a myghtye people, an olde people, a people whose speche thou knowest not, neyther vnderstandest what they saye. Their quyuers are sodeyne deathe: yea they them selues be verye grauntes. This people shall eate vp thy frute and thy meate: yea they shall deuoure thy sonnes and thy doughters, thy shepe and thy bullockes.

They shall eate vp thy grapes and fygges. As for thy stronge and well fensed cities wherin thou dyddest truste, they shall destroye theym with the swearde. Neuerthelesse I wyll not haue doone with you, sayth the Lorde. But yf they saye: Wherfore dothe the Lorde oure God all this vnto vs?

E Then aunswere them: bycause that lyke as ye haue forsaken me, and serued straunge goddes in youre owne lande: euen so shall ye serue other goddes also in a straunge land. Iere.xvi.b

Preache this vnto the house of Iacob, and crye it oute in Iuda, and saye thus: Heare this (thou foolysshe and vndiscrete people) * ye haue eyes, but ye se not: eares haue ye, but ye heare not. Esay.vi.b. Iohn.xii.d.

Feare ye not me, sayth the Lorde? Are ye not ashamed to loke me in the face? which bynde the see with the lande, so that it can not passe his boundes: For thoughe it rage, yet can it do nothynge, and thoughe the waues therof do swell, yet may they not go ouer.

But this people hathe a false and obstynate herte, they are departed and gone awaye from me. F They thynke not in theyr hertes: O let vs feare the Lorde oure God that geueth vs rayne earlye and late, when nede is: whiche kepeth euer styl the haruest for vs yerely.

Neuerthelesse youre mysdedes haue turned these frome you, and youre synnes haue robbed you herof. For amonge my people are founde wycked personnes, that priuely laye snares, and wayte for men, to take them and destroye them. And lyke as a nette is full of byrdes, so are theyr houses full of that whiche they haue gotten with falsehed and discepte.

G Herof commeth their greate substaunce and rychesse: herof are they fatte and welthye, and are run awaye fro me with shamefull blasphemyes. They mynistre not the lawe, they make no ende of the fatherlesses cause, they iudge not the poore accordynge to equitie.

Shulde I not punish these thinges, sayth ye Lorde? Wolde I be auenged of all suche people as these be? Horrible and greuous thinges are done in the lande.

The Prophetes teache falsely, and the preestes folowe them, and my people hathe pleasure therin. What wyll come therof at the last?

¶ The synnes for whiche Ierusalem is afflycted. Vncircumcysed eares. Couetousnesse. Discepte. The Lorde reiecteth the sacrifyces of the Iewes. The commynge of the Babylonyans is prophecyed agayne.

CAPI. VI.

A Come forth of Ierusalem, ye strong children of BenIamin: blow vp the trompettes ye Tecuites, let vp a token vnto Bethcarem, for a plage and a greate miserye bursteth out from the North.

I wyll lyken the doughter of Syon to a fayre and tendre woman, & to her shall come the shepeherdes with theyr flockes. Theyr tentes shall they pytche rounde aboute her, and euerye one shall fede them that are vnder his hande. Make battayle agaynste her (shall they saye.) Aryse, let vs go vp, whyle it is yet daye.

B Alas, the daye goeth awaye, and the nyght shadowes fall downe: Aryse, lette vs go vp by nyght, and destroye her stronge holdes: for thus hath the Lorde of hostes commaunded.

Hewe downe her trees, and set vp bulworkes agaynste Ierusalem. This is the citye that muste be punysshed, for in her is all vyciousnesse. Lyke as a Condyte aboundeth in water, euen so this citye aboundeth in wyckednesse. Robberye and vnryghteousnes is herde in her, sorow and woundes are euer there in my syght. Amende the, O Ierusalem, lest I withdrawe my hert from the, and make the desolate: and thy land also, that no man dwel in it. C For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: The resydue of Israel shal be gathered as the remnaunt of grapes.

And therfore tourne thyne hande agayne in to the basket, lyke the grape gatherer. But vnto whom shall I speake, whom shal I warne, that he maye take hede? Theyr eares are so vncircumcysed, that they maye not heare.

Beholde, they take ye word of God but for a scorne, and haue no lust therto. And therfore I am so ful of indignaciõ, o Lord, that I may suffre no longer. Shede out thy wrathe vpon the chyldren that are withoute, and vpon all yonge men.

Yea the man muste be taken prysoner with the wyfe, and the aged with the creple. Their houses with their landes and wyues shall be turned vnto straungers, when I stretche oute myne hande vpon the inhabitauntes of this lande, sayth the Lorde. For frome the least, vnto the mooste, they hange all vpon couetousnesse: and frome the Prophete vnto the Preest, they goo all aboute with falsehed and lyes.

D And besyde that, they heale the hurte of my people with swete wordes, sayinge: peace peace, when there is no peace at all. Therfore they muste be ashamed, for they haue commytted abhominacion. But howe shoulde they be ashamed, when they knowe nothing, neyther of shame, nor of good nourtoure? And therfore they shall fall amonge the slayne: and in the houre when I shall vysyt them, they shall be brought downe, sayth the Lorde.

Thus sayth the Lorde: goo in to the strettes, consydre and make inquisicion for the olde way, and yf it be the good and right waye: then goo therin, that ye maye fynde rest for youre soules. But they saye: we will not walke therin, and I wyll set watche men ouer you, and therfore take heed vnto the voyce of the trompet: But they saye we wil not take hede. E Heare therfore ye Gentyles, and thou congregacion shalte knowe, what I haue deuysed for them. Heare thou earth also: beholde, I wyll cause a plage come vpon this people, euen the frute of their own ymaginacions.

For they haue not bene obedient vnto my wordes, and to my lawe, but abhorred them. Wherfore brynge ye me incense frome Saba, and swete smellynge Calamus frome farre countreyes? Youre burnte offerynges displease me, and I reioyse not in youre sacrifices.

And therfore thus sayth the Lorde: beholde, I wyl make this people fal, and there shal fall from amonge them the father with the chyldren, one neyghboure shall perysshe with an other.

F Moreouer thus sayth the Lorde: Beholde there shal come a people from the North, and a great people shall aryse frome the endes of the earth, with bowes and with dartes shall they be weapened: It is a roughe and fearce people, an vnmercyfull people: theyr voyce roreth lyke the see, they ryde vpon horses well appoynted to the batayle agaynst the, O doughter Sion.

Then shall this crye be hearde: Oure armes are feble, heuynesse and sorowe is come vpon vs, as vpon a woman trauelynge with chylde. No man goo forthe in to the feld, no man come vpon the hye strete, for the swerde and feare of the enemye shall be on euery syde.

G Wherfore gyrde a sacke clothe aboute the (O thou doughter of my people) sprynckle thy selfe with asshes, mourne and wepe bytterly, as vpon thy onely beloued sonne: For the destroyer shall sodeynly fall vpon vs. Amos.viii.b.

The haue I set for a prouer of my hard people, to seke out, and to trye theyr wayes. For they are all vnfaythfull and fallen awaye, they hange vpon fylthy lucre, they are clene brasse and yron, for they hurte and destroye euerye man. The bellous are brente in the fire, the lead is consumed, the melter melteth in vayne, for the euyll is not taken awaye from them. Therfore shall they be called noughtye syluer, bycause the Lorde hathe caste them oute.

¶ Ieremye is commaunded to shewe vnto the people the worde of God, whiche trusteth in the outwarde seruyce of the temple, that helpeth nothynge. The euyls that shall happen to the Iewes for the despysynge of theyr prophetes. Sacrifyces doth not the Lorde chefely requyre of the Iewes, but that they shoulde obey his worde. Topheth.

CAPI. VII.

A These are the wordes that God spake vnto Ieremye: Stande vnder the gates of the Lordes house, and crye out these wordes there with a loude voyce, and saye: Heare the worde of the Lorde all ye of Iuda that go in at this doore, to honour the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israel. Amende youre wayes and youre counselles, and I wyll lette you dwelle in this place. Trust not in false lyenge wordes, sayinge: here is the temple of the Lorde, here is the temple of the Lorde, here is the temple of the Lorde. Iere.xxvi.b.

B * For yf ye wyll amende youre wayes and counsels, yf ye wyll iudge ryghte betwyxte a man and his neyghboure: yf ye wyll not oppresse the straunger, the fatherlesse and the wydowe: yf ye wyll not shedde innocente bloode in this place: yf ye wyll not cleue to straunge goddes to youre owne destruction: then wyll I let you dwell in this place: yea, in the land that I gaue afore tyme vnto your fathers for euer. Exod.xxii.c. Zacha.vii.c. Leuit.xix.g. Iob.xxiii.a.

But take hede, ye truste in counselles that begyle you, and do ye no good. For when ye haue stollen, murthered, commytted aduoutrye, and periurye: When ye haue offred vnto Baal, folowynge straunge and vnknowen Goddes: Then come ye, and stande before me in this house, (whiche hath my name gyuen vnto it) and saye: Tusshe we are absolued quyte, thoughe we haue doone all these abhominacions. Esay.lxi.b.

C * What, thynke you this house that beareth my name, is a den of theues? And these thinges are not done priuyly, but before mine eyes sayth the Lorde. Go to my place in * Silo, wherunto I gaue my name afore tyme, and loke well what I dyd to the same place for the wyckednesse of my people of Israell. Iob.ii.b. Math.xxi.b. Iere.xxvi.f. Iosue.xviii.a. Iere.xxvi.a. I.Reg.iii.iiii. v and vi.*

And

And nowe, thoughe ye haue wone all these dedes (sayth the Lorde) and I my selfe rose vp euer betymes to warne you, and to common with you, yet wolde ye not heare me:
I called, ye wolde not answeare. And therfore euen as I haue done with Silob, so will I do to this house, that my name is gruen vnto, (and that ye put your trust in) ye vnto the place that I haue gruen to you and your fathers. And I shall thrust you out of my sighe as I haue cast out all your brethren the hole sede of Ephraim.

Therfore thou shalte not praye for this people, thou shalte neyther grue thanckes nor bydde prayer for them: thou shalte make no intercessiō to me for them: for in no wyse will I heare the. Seest thou not what they doo in the cityes of Juda, and without Jerusalem? The chyldren gather stickes, the fathers kindle the fire, the mothers knede
the dowghe, to bake cakes for the quene of heuen.

They poure oute drynckeofferynges vn-
to straunge Goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrathe: How be it they hurte not me (sayth
the Lorde) but rather confounde and shame them selues.

And therfore thus sayethe the Lorde God:
beholde, my wrath and my indignacion shall be poured out vpon this place, vpon me and cattell, vpon the trees of the felde, & al frute of the land, & it shal burne so that no mā may quenche it.

Thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israel: Ye heape vp your burntofferynges
with youre sacrifyces, and eate the fleshe.
But when I broughte youre fathers oute of Egypt, I spake no worde vnto them of burnt offerynges and sacrifyces: but this I commaunded them, saying: harken and obey my voyce, and I shall be your God, and ye shal be my people: so ye walke in all the wayes which I haue commaunded you, that ye may prospere.

But they were not obedient, they inclyned not their eares therevnto, but wente after their owne ymaginations, and after the mocions of their owne wycked hert, and so tour ned them selues awaye, and conuerted not vnto me. And this haue they doone, from the tyme that youre fathers came out of Egypt
vnto this daye.

Neuertheles I sent vnto them my seruauntes all the Prophetes: I rose vp erlye &
sente them worde, yet wolde they not harken
ne offre me their eares, but were obstinate and worse then their fathers. And thou shalt now speake all these wordes vnto them, but they shall not heare the: thou shalte cry vpon them, but they shall not answere the. Therfore shalte thou saye vnto them: this is the people, that neyther heareth the voyce of the Lord their God, ne receyueth his correction.
Faythfulnesse and truthe is clene rooted out of their mouth.

Wherfore cut of thyne heere, and caste it away, take vp a complaynt in the hole land:
for the Lorde shall cast awaye and scatter the people, that he is displeased withall. For the chyldren of Juda haue doone euyll in my syghte, sayethe the Lorde. They haue set vp their abhominations in the house that bathe my name, and haue defyled it. They haue also buylded an aulter at Tophethe, whiche is in the valleye of the chyldren of Hennon:
that they myghte burne their sonnes and doughters, whiche I neuer commaunded them, neyther came it euer in my thoughte.
and therfore beholde, the dayes shall come (sayethe the Lorde) that it shall no more be called Tophethe, or the valeye of the chyldren of Hennon, but the valey of the slaync,
for in Tophethe they shall be buryed, bycause
they shall elles where haue no rowme. Yea, the deed bodyes of this people shall be eaten
of the foules of the ayre, and wylde beestes of the earthe, and man shall fraye them awaye. And as for the voyce of myrthe and gladnesse of the cityes of Juda and Jerusalem, the voyce of the bydegrome, and of the bryde: I will make them ceasle, for the lande shall be desolate.

¶ The destruction of the Jewes. The Lorde moueth the people to amendement, reckening vp their synnes. Reproueth the lyinge doctryne of the Prophetes and Prestes, and their couetyse.

CAPI. VIII

At the same tyme, sayth the Lorde, the bones of the kynges of Juda, the bones of his Princes, the bones of the prestes and Prophetes, yea and the bones of the citezyns of Jerusalem, shalbe brought out of their graues, and layde agaynst the sunne,
the moone, and all the heuenly hoste, whome
they loued, whom they serued, whō they ran after, whome they soughte and worshypped.
They shall neither be gathered together, ne buried, but shall lye vpon the earthe to their shame and dysplesynge.

And all they that remayne of this wycked
generation, shall rather more to dye then lyue, where so euer they remayne, and where as I scatter them, sayth the Lorde of hostes. This shalte thou saye vnto them also: Thus sayth
the Lorde: Do men fall so, that they aryse not vp agayne? And turne they so farre away that they neuer conuerte? Wherfore then is this people and Jerusalem gone so far backe, that they tourne not agayne. They are cunner the longer, the more obstinate, and will not be conuerted.

For I haue loked and considred: but there is no man that speaketh a good worde: there is no man that taketh repentaunce for his synne, that wyll so moche as saye: wherfore haue I done this? But euery man (as soone as he his turned backe) runneth forth still, like a wylde horse in a batayle. The Storke knoweth his appoynted time, the turtle awe, the swalowe and the crane consider the tyme of their trauayle, but my people will not knowe
the time of the punishmēt of the Lord? How dare ye saye then: we are wyse, we haue the lawe of the Lorde amonge vs?

Beholde, the disceptfull penne of the scribes, setteth forth lyes: therfore shall the wise be confounded, they shall be afrayde and taken: for lo, they haue cast oute the worde of the Lorde: what wysdome can then be among them? Wherfore I wyl grue their wi ues vnto straungers, and their feldes to destroyers.

For from the lowest vnto the hyest, they folow al kynde lucre: and from the prophet vnto the preest, they delt all with lyes. Neuer thelesse, they heale the hurte of my people in suche wordes, saying: peax peax, where there is no peax at all.

Fye for shame, how abhominable thynges
do they? & yet they be not ashamed, yea they knowe of no shame.

Wherfore in the tyme of their visitacion,
they shall fall amonge the deed bodyes sayth
the Lorde.

Moreouer I will gather them in, sayth the Lord, so that there shal not be one grape vpō
the vine, ne one fyg vpon the fyg tree, & the leaues shall be pluct of.

Then wil I cause them to depart and saye:
why prolong we the time? Let vs gather our selues together, and go in to the stronge cittie,
there shall we be in rest: For the Lorde oure
God hathe put vs to silence, and gruen vs water mixte with gall, to drynke, bicause we haue synned agaynst him.

We loked for peax, and we fare not þ better, we wayted for the tyme of helth, and lo,
here is nothyng but trouble.

Then shall the noyse of his horses be herde
frome Dan, the hole lande shall be afrayde at the neyping of his stronge horses: for they shall goo in and deuoure the lande, with all that is in it: the cityes, and those that dwell therin. Moreouer, I wyll sende Cockatrices and serpentes amonge you (whiche wyl not be charmed) and they shal bite you, sayth
the Lorde.

Sorowe is come vpon me, and heuy-nesse vexeth my herte: for loo, the voyce of the crynge of my people, is herde frome a farre countreye: Is not the Lorde in Sy-on? Is not the kynge in her? Wherfore then haue they grieued me (shall the Lorde saye)
with their ymages, and koolyshe straunge fashons?

The haruest is gone, the sommer hathe
an ende, and we are not holped. I am sore vexed, bycause of the hurte of my people:
I am brupe, and abasshed: for there is no more Tyacle at Galaad, and there is no Phesycyon that can heale the hurte of my people.

¶ The complaint and bewayling of the Prophete for the malyce of the people. In the knowlege of God ought we only to reioyce. The circumcision of the hert.

CAPI. IX.

Who wyll grue my hed water y-noughe, and a well of teares for myne eyes: that I may wepe night and day, for the slaughter of my people? Wolde God that I hadde a cotage some where farre from folke, that I myghte leaue my people, and goo frome them: for they be all aduoutrers and a thrynckynge sorte. They bende their tunges lyke bowes, to shote out lyes. As for the truthe, they may nothyng away withall
in the worlde. For they go from one wyckednesse to an other, and holde nothynge of me,
sayth the Lorde.

Yea, one muste kepe him selfe frome an other, no man maye safely trust his owne brother: for one brother vndermyneth an other,
and one neyghboure begyleth an other. Yea,
one dissembleth with an other, and they speale with no truthe. They haue practised their tonges to lye, and taken great paynes to wo myschiefe. They haue set their stole in ꝑ middest of disceyte, and for verye dissemblynge refuseth they wyll not knowe me, sayethe the Lorde.

Therfore thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes:
beholde, I wyll melte them and trye them, for what shold I els do to my people? Their tun ges are lyke sharpe arowes to speake disceyt.
With their mouth they speake peaceably to their neighbour, but priuily they laye wayte
for him.

Sholde I not punish them for these thin-ges, sayth the Lorde? Or sholde I not be aue ged of anye suche people as this? Vpon the mountaynes wyll I take vp a lamentacion & sorowful cry, and a mourninge vpon the fayre playnes of the wildernesse: Namely, bowe
they are so brent vp, that no man goeth there any more: yea a man shal not heare one beest crye there.

Byrdes and cattell are all gone frome thence. & ill make Jerusalem also an heape
of stones, and a denne of venymous wormes.
And I wil make the cityes of Juda so waste, that no man shall dwel therin. What man is so wyse, as to vnderstande this? Or to whom hath the Lord spoken by mouth, that he may shewe this and saye: O thou lande why perisshest thou so? Wherfore arte thou so brent vp, and lyke a wyldernesse, that no man goeth thorowe?

Yea the Lorde him selfe tolde the same vn to them that forsoke his lawe, and kepte not the thynge that he gaue them in commaun-dement, neither lyued therafter: but folo-wed the wyckednesse of their owne herts,
and serued straunge goddes, as their fathers taught them.

Therfore thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes,
the God of Israel: Beholde, I wyll fede this people with wormewod, and grue them gall to drynke. I wil scatter them also among the Heathen, whom neither they ne their fathers haue knowen: and I wyll sende a swerde amonge them, to persecute them, tyl I bringe them to noughte. Moreouer thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: loke ye call for mourning wyues, and send for wyse women: that

they

they come thyther, and synge a mournyng
songe of you: that the teares maye fall out of our eyes, and that oure eye lyddes maye
gusshe out of water.

F For there is a lamentable noyse herde of Syon: O how are we so sore destroyed? O howe are we so pitesully confounded? We muste forsake oure owne naturall countrey, and we are shut oute of oure owne lodgyn-ges. Yet heare the worde of the Lorde (O ye women, and lette youre eares regarde the wordes of his mouthe: that ye maye learne youre doughters to mourne, and that euerye one maye teache her neyghbours to make lamentacyon. Namely thus: Deathe is clymmynge vp in at oure wyndowes, he is come in to oure houses, to destroye the childe before the dooze, and the younge man in the strete.

G But tell thou playnly, thus sayth ỹ Lorde:
The dead bodyes of men shall lye vpon the grounde, as the donge vpon the felde, and as the heye after the mower, and there shall be no man to take them vp.

1. Corinth. i. d. 2. Corint. x. d. Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde: Let not the wyse man reioyse in his wysdome, ne the stronge man in his strength, neither the riche man in his ryches: But who so will reioyse
let him reioyse in this, that he vnderstandeth and knoweth me: for I am the Lorde, which do mercy, equitie and rightousnesse vpon the erth. Therfore haue I pleasure in suche thin-ges, (sayth the Lorde. Beholde, the tyme com meth (sayth the Lorde) that I will vysyte all them, whose foreskyn is vncircumcised. The Egyptians, the Jewes, the Edomites, the Ammonites, the Moabites, and the shaven Madianites that dwel in the wyldernes. For all the Gentyles are vncircumcised in ỹ flesh,
but all the house of Israel are vncircumcised
in the herte.

¶ The constellacyons of the sterres are not to be feared. Of the weykenesse of Idoles, and of the power of God. Of cupil curates.

CAPI. X.

A HEare the worde of the Lorde, that he speaketh vnto the, O thou house of Israel: Thus sayth the Lorde: Ye shall not learne after the maner of the Heathen, & ye shall not be afrayde for the tokens of he-uen: for the heathen are afrayde of suche:
Esaie. xlvii. e. yea all the customes and lawes of the Gentyles are nothynge but vanitie. They hewe Esay. xliii. b. downe a tree in the wod with the handes of Sapien. xiii. the workeman, & facyon it with the axe: they couer it ouer with golde or syluer, they fasten it with naples and hammers, that it moue
not. It standeth as vpryght as the palme tree, it can neither speake ne goo, but must be borne.
Baruch. vi. Be not ye afrayde of suche, for they can doo Iudi. viii. b. neyther good ne cupil. But there is none like Epoca. xx. b. vnto to the, O Lorde, and great is the name of thy power. Who wolde not feare the?
Or what kynge of the Panymes wolde not obey the?

For amonge all the wyse men of the Panymes, and in all theyr kyngdomes, there is none that maye be lykened vnto the. They are all togyther vnlerned & vnwyse. All their conning is but vanitie: namely wod, siluer, whiche is broughte out of Tharsis, and bet-ten to plates: and golde frome Ophir, a worke that is made with the hande of the craftes man and the caster, clothed with pe-lowe lyke and scarlet: euen so is the worke of their wyse men all togyther. But ỹ Lorde is a true God, a lyuynge God, and an eter-nall kynge. Yet he be wrothe, the earthe shaketh: all the Gentyles maye not abyde his indignacion.

As for their goddes, it may well be sayd of them: they are goddes that neither made heauen ne earthe: therfore shall they perysshe from the earthe, and frome all thynges vndee heuen. But (as for oure God) he made Iere.
the earth with his power, and with his wis-dome hathe he finished the hole compasse of the worlde, with his discrecion hath he spred out the heuens.

C At his voyce the waters gather togither in the ayre, he drawe th vp the cloudes from the vttermost partes of the erth: he turneth ligh tenynge to rayne, and bryngeth forthe the wyndes out of their treasures. His wisdome Psal.
maketh all men foles. And confounded be al casters of ymages, for that they cast, is but a vayne thynge, and hathe no lyfe. The vayne craftesmen with their workes, that they in their vanitie haue made, shall perysshe one with an other in the tyme of visitacion. Ne-uertheles Jacobs portion is not suche: but it is he that hath made al thinges, and Israel is the rod of his enheritaunce: The Lord of hostes is his name. Put away thyne vncle-nesse oute of the lande, thou that arte in the strong cityes. For thus sayth the Lorde: Be holde, I will nowe throwe oute the inhabitauntes of this lande a great waye of, and trouble them in suche sorte, as they shall no more be founde.

D Alas how am I hurt? Alas how payneful are my scourges vnto me? For I confesse this sorow by my selfe, and I must suffre it. My tabernacle is destroyed, and all my cordes are broken. My chyldren are gone fro me, and can no where be founde. Nowe haue I none to spreade oute my tente, or to set vp my han-gynges. For the herdemen haue done folyshly, that they haue not sought the Lorde.
Therfore haue they dealte vnwyselye with their catell, and all are scattered abrode. Be-holde, the noyse is harde at hande, and great sedicion out of the North: to make the cities of Juda a wildernesse, and a dwellynge place for dragons.

E Nowe I knowe, O Lorde, that it is not in Ps.
mans power to ordre his owne wayes, or to Pro.
rule his owne steppes and goinges. Therfore chasten thou vs, O Lorde, but with fauoure
and not in thy wrathe, lyenge vs not vtterly to nought. Poure out thyne indignacion vp-on the Heathen that know the not, & ther
vpon the people that call not on thy name:
And

And that because they haue consumed, deuou-red and destroyed Jacob, and haue roted out his glorye.

¶ curse of them that obeye not the worde of Goddes promesse. The people of Juda folowynge
the steppes of theyr fathers, worshypeth straunge goddes. The Lorde sayth he wyll not heare the Jewes, and forbyddeth also Jeremye to praye for them.

CAPI. XI.

THis is an other sermon, which ỹ Lorde commaunded Jeremye to preache, saying: Heare the wordes of the couenaunt and speake vnto all Juda, and to all them that dwell at Jerusalem. And saye vnto them
Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israell:
Cursed be euery one that is not obedient vnto
the wordes of this couenaunt: which I commanded vnto your fathers, what tyme as I brought them oute of Egypte, frome the yron fornace, sayinge: Be obedient vnto my voice and do accordyng to all that I commaunde you: so shall ye be my people, and I will be your God, and will kepe my promesse that I haue sworne vnto youre fathers: Namely that I wolde gyue them a lande wherin flo-weth with mylke and honye, as ye se, is come to passe this daye. Then answered I, and sayde, Amen. Je is euen so, Lorde, as thou sayest.

B Then the Lorde sayde vnto me agayne:
Preache this in the cityes of Juda, and rounde
aboute Jerusalem, and saye: Heare the wor-des of this couenaunt, that ye maye kepe them. For I haue diligently exhorted youre fathers, euer sythens the tyme I broughte them out of the lande of Egypte, vnto this daye. I gaue them warnynge betymes, sayinge, Harken vnto my voyce: Neuerthelesse they wolde not obeye me, nor enclyne their eares vnto me, but folowed the wyc-ked imaginacions of their owne hertes.

And therfore haue I accursed them as transgressours of all the wordes of this couenaunte that I gaue them to kepe, worshyp they (not withstandynge) haue not kepte.

And the Lorde sayde vnto me: It is found out, that hole Israel, and all these cityzyns of Jerusalem are gone backe. They haue turned them selues to the blasphemyes of their fore fathers, whiche had no lyste to heare my worde. Euen lykewyse haue these also folowed straunge goddes, and worshipped the.
The house of Israell and Juda haue broken my couenaunce, whiche I made with their fathers.

C Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: Beholde,
I will sende a plage amonge you, whiche ye shall not be able to escape: and thoughe ye crye vnto me, I will not heare you. Then shall the townes of Juda, and the cityzyns of Jerusalem go and call vpon their goddes vnto whom they made their oblacions, but they are not able to helpe them in tyme of their trouble. For as many cityes as thou hast, O Jeremy. ii. e Juda, so manye goddes haste thou also. And loke how many stretes there be in the, O Jerusalem, so many shamefull auiters haue ye set vp, to offre vpon them vnto Baal. But Jere. xliii. b.
praye not thou for this people: byd neyther
praise ne prayer for them, for though they cry vnto me in their trouble, yet wyl I not heare
them.

D O thou beloued, why wost thou so shame-full greate blasphemyes in my house? Euen as thoughe that holye flesche myght absolue
the, specially when thou hast made thy bosse of thy wyckednesse. The Lorde called the a greene olyue tree, a faire one, a frutefull one,
a goodly one: but nowe that there is a contrarye reporte of the abyde, he wyll burne
the vp, and destroye thy braunches. For the Lorde of hostes that planted the, hath deuised a plage for the (O thou house of Israell and Juda, for the cupll that ye haue done to prouoke him to wrathe, in that ye dyd seruice vnto Baal.

E Thus, O Lorde, haue I learned of the, and vnderstande it: for thou hast shewed me their ymaginacions. But I (as a meke lambe) was caried awaye to be slayne: not knowing that they hadde deuised suche a counsell agaynste me, sayinge: we wyll destroye his meate
with wodde, and dryue him oute of ye lande of the lyuynge, that his name shall neuer be thought vpon.

Therfore I wyll beseeche the nowe, O Esay. xlvii. e Lorde of hostes, thou ryghtous iudge, thou that tryest the reynes and the hertes: let me se the auenged of them, for vnto the haue I committed my cause. The Lorde therfore Sapien. ii. d.
spake thus of the cityzyns of Anathoth, that Jeremy. xx. c.
sought to slee me, sayinge: Preache not vnto vs in the name of the Lorde, or elles thou shalt dye of our handes. Thus (I saye) spake
the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, I wyll vysyte
you. Youre younge men shall perysshe with the swerde, youre sonnes and youre doughters shall vtterly dye of honger, so that none shall remayne. For vpon the cityzyns of A-nathoth wyll I bringe a plage, euen the yere of their visitacion.

¶ The Prophete marueyleth at the prosperitye of the wycked, although he confesse God to be ryght-ous. The Jewes are forsaken of the Lorde. He speaketh agaynste Curates and preachers that seduce the people. The Lorde threteneth destruccyon vnto the nacyons that bordered Jewrye, whiche troubled and vexed it.

CAPI. XII.

O Lorde, thou arte more ryghtous, then A
that I shoulde dispute with the: Ne-uertheles, lette me talke with the in thinges reasonable. How happeneth it that Job. xxi. d.
the way of the vngodly is so prosperous? and Habacu. i. b.
that it goeth so wel with them which (without any shame) offend and lyue in wickednes?
Thou plantest them, they take roote, they
GG. ij. growe,

growe, and bringe forthe fruite. They boaste moche of the, yet doest thou not punish them. But thou Lord (to whom I am wel knowe) thou that hast seue, and proued my hert, take them awaye, lyke as a flocke is caried to the slaughter house, and appoynt them for ye daye of slaughter.

How long shall the lande mourne, and all the herbes of the felde perish, for the wickednesse of them that dwell therin? The cattell and the byrdes are gone, yet they saye: tusshe, God will not destroye vs vtterly.

Seinge thou arte werye in runnynge with the fote men, how wylte thou then run with horses? In a peaceable sure lande thou maist be safe, but how wylt thou do in the iurions pryde of Iordane? for thy brethren and thy kynred haue all togyther despised the, and cryed oute vpon the in thyne absence. Beleue them not, thoughe they speake fayre wordes to the. As for me (saye I) I haue forsaken myne owne dwellynge place, and lefte myne heritage. My lyfe also that I loued so well, haue I giuen in to the handes of myne enemyes. Myne heritage is become vnto me, as a lyon in the wod. It cried out vpon me, therfore haue I forsaken it. Myne heritage is vnto me, as a speckled byrde, a byrde of byuers colours is vpon it. Go hence and gather all ye beestes of the felde together, that they maye eate it vp.

Byuers herdemen haue broken downe my vineyarde, and troden vpon my portion. Of my pleasaunt portion, they haue made a wylderneffe. They haue layde it waste: and lowe that it is waste, it sygheth vnto me. Yea, the hole lande lyeth waste, and no man regardeth it.

The destroyers come ouer the heeth euery waye, for the swerde of the Lorde shall consume from the one ende of the land to the other, and no fleshe shall haue rest. They shall sow wheate, and reepe thornes. They shal take heritage in possession, but it shall do them no good. And ye shal be confounded of youre owne wynnynges, because of the greate wrathe of the Lorde.

Thus saythe the Lorde vpon all myne euyll neyghbours, that laye hande on myne heritage, whiche I haue geuen my people of Israel: Beholde, I wyll plucke them (namely Israell) oute of theyr lande, and put out the house of Juda frome them. And when I haue rooted them oute, I wyll be at one with them agayne, and wyll haue mercye vpon them: and bringe them agayne (euery man to his owne heritage, and in to his lande.

And yf they (namely that trouble my people) wyll lerne the wayes of them to swere by my name: The Lord lyueth (lyke as they lerned my people to swere by Baal) then shall they be reckened among my people. But yf they wyll not obeye, then wyll I rote out the same folke, and destroye them (sayethe the Lorde.

¶ The destruccyon of the Jewes is prefygured, and theyr sparplynge abrode. Why Israel was recey ued to be the people of God, and why they were forsaken.

CAPL XIII.

MOreouer, thus said the Lord vnto me: Go thy way and get the a lynen breche, and gyrde it aboute thy loynes, and let it not be wet. Then I got me a breche, according to the commaundemēt of the Lord, and put it aboute my loynes. After this the Lorde spake vnto me agayne: Take ye breche that thou hast prepared, aboute the, and get the vp, and goo vnto Euphrates, and hyde it in a hole of the rocke. So wente I, and hyd it, as the Lorde commaunded me. And it happened longe after this, that the Lorde spake vnto me: Aryse, and get the to Euphrates, and fet the breche thence, whiche I commaunded the to hyde there. Then wente I to Euphrates, and dygged vp, and toke ye breche from the place where I had hyd it: & beholde the breche was corrupte, so that it was profytable for nothynge.

Then sayd the Lorde vnto me: thus sayth the Lorde: euen so wyll I corrupt the pryde of Juda, and the haurte mynde of Jerusalem. This people is a wycked people, they wyll not heare my worde, they folowe the wicked ymaginacions of theyr owne hert, and hange vpon straunge goddes, them haue they serued and worshypped: and therfore they shall be as this breche that serueth for nothynge.

For as straytly as a breche lyeth vpon a mans loynes, so straytly dyd I bynde the hole house of Israell, and the hole house of Juda vnto me, sayth the Lord: that they might be my people: that they might haue a glorious name: that they myghte be in honoure: but they wolde not obeye me. Therfore saye thus vnto them, and saye: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel: Euery pot shall be filled with wyne. And they shall saye: thynkest thou we knowe not that euerye pot shall be filled with wyne? Then shalte thou saye vnto them: Thus sayth the Lorde: Beholde, I shall fyll all the inhabitauntes of this lande with dronkennesse, the kynges that sytt vpon Dauids stole, the preestes and Prophetes, with all that dwell at Jerusalem. And I wyll smyte them one against an other, yea the fathers against the sonnes, sayth the Lorde.

I wyll not pardon them, I wyll not spare them: ne haue pitye vpon them: but destroye them. Be obedient, gyue eare, take no disdayne at it, for it is the Lorde him self that speaketh: Honoure the Lorde youre God herein, or he take his lyght from you, and or euer youre feete stomble in darcknesse at the hyll: lest when ye loke for the lyghte, he tourne it in to the shadowe and darcknesse of deathe. But yf ye wyll not heare me, that gyue you secrete warnynge, I wyll mourne frome my hole herte, for youre stubbornnesse. pitteously

Pyteously wyl I weype, and the teares shal gusshe oute of myne eyes. For the Lordes flocke shall be caryed awaye prysoners. Tell the kynge, and the rulers: Humble youre selues, sette you downe lowe: for the crowne of your glorye shall fall from youre heed. The cityes towarde the south shall be shut vp, & no mā shal opē the. All Juda wal be caryed awaye prysoners, so that none shall remayne.

Lyft vp your eyes and beholde them that come from the North: Lyke a fat flocke wal they fall vpon the. To whome wylte thou make thy mone, when they come vpon the? for thou hast taughte them thy selfe, & made them maisters ouer the. Shall not sorowe come vpon the, as on a woman traueylynge with chylde? And yf thou woldest saye then in thyne herte. Wherefore come these thynges vpon me? Euen for the multitude of thy wickednesse, shal thy hynder partes and thy face be discouered.

For like as the man of Inde may chaunge his shynne, and the cat of the mountayne her spottes: so maye ye that be exercised in euyll, doo good. Therfore wyll I scatter you, lyke as the stubble that is taken awaye with the South wynde. This shall be youre portion, and the portion of your measure, wherewith ye shall be rewarded of me, sayth the Lorde: because ye haue forgotten me, and put youre trust in disceptfull thynges. Therfore shall I tourne thy clothes ouer thy heed, and discouer thy thyghes, that thy pruntyes maye be sene, thy aduoutry, thy wedy maiyce, thy brethynesse and thy shamefull horedome. For vpon the feldes and hylles I haue sene thy abhominations. Woo be vnto the (O Jerusalem) when wylte thou euer be clensed any more?

¶ Of the derth that shoulde come in Jewrye. The prayer of the people, a lyenge mercye of the Lorde. The vnfaythfull people are not hearde. Of prayer, fastynge, and of false Prophetes that disceyue the people.

CAPI. XIIII.

THe worde of the Lorde shewed vnto Jeremye, concernynge the derth of the frutes. Juda shall mourne: men shall not goo moche more thorowe his gates: the lande shall be no more had in regarde, & the cyte of Jerusalem shall breake out. The lordes shall sende theyr seruauntes to fetche water, and when they come to the welles, they shall fynde no water, but shall carye theyr vessels home emptye. They shall be ashamed and confounded, and shall couer their heedes. For the ground shal be dried vp, because there commeth no rayne vpon it. The plowmen al so shall be ashamed, and shall couer their heedes. The hynde shal forsake the yong fawne that he bryngeth forthe in the felde, because there shall be no grasse. The wylde asses shal stande in the mosse, and drawe in their wynde lyke the dragons, their eyes shall layle for want of grasse.

Doubtelesse our owne wickednesse rewarde vs: But Lord do thou according to thy name, thoughe our transgressions and synnes be many. For thou art the comfort and helpe of Israel in the tyme of trouble. Why wylte thou be as a straunger in the land, and as one that goeth ouer the felde, and commeth in onely to remayn for a nyght? Why, wilt thou make thy selfe a cowarde, and as it were a gyaunte that yet may not helpe? For thou art ours (o Lorde) and we beare thy name, therfore forsake vs not.

Then spake the Lorde, concerning this people, that gaue pleasure to go so nymbly with their fete, and leaue not of, and therfore displeased the Lord: in so moch that he wil now byrng agayne to remembraunce all their mysdeedes, and punish all their synnes. Yea, euen thus sayd the Lorde vnto me: Thou shalte not pray to do this people good. For though they fast, I wyll not heare their prayers. And though they offer burnt offeringes and sacrifices, yet wil not I accepte them. For I will destroye them with the swerde, honger and pestilence. Then answered I: O Lorde God, the Prophetes saye vnto them: Loo, ye shall see no swerde, and no honger shal come vpō you, but the Lorde shal gyue you continuall rest in this place.

And the Lorde sayde vnto me: The Prophetes preache lyes vnto them in my name. I gaue not spoken with them, neither gaue I them any charge, neither dyd I send them: yet they preache vnto you false visions, charmynge, vanitie, and disceptfulnesse of theyr owne herte: Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: As for those Prophetes that preache in my name (whom I neuertheles haue not sent) and that saye: Tusshe there shal neither batayle ne honger be in this land: With swerde and with hongre shall those Prophetes perysh, and the people to whom they haue preached, shal be cast out of Jerusalem, dye of honger, and be slayne with the swerde (and there shall be no man to burye them) both they and theyr wyues, theyr sonnes and theyr doughters. For thus wyll I poure their wickednesse vpon them. This shalt thou saye also vnto them: Myne eyes shall wepe without ceasynge, daye and nyght. For my people shall be destroyed with great harme, and shal perisshe with a great plage, for if I goo in to the felde: lo, it lyeth all full of slayne men: If I come in to the citye: lo, they be all famished of hongre.

Yea, their Prophetes also and preestes shall be led in to an vnknowen lande.

Hastte thou then vtterly forsaken Juda? (sayd I) Doth thyne so abhorre Sion? Or hast thou so plaged vs, that we can be healed no more? We loked for peax, and there commeth no good, for the tyme of helthe: and lo, here is no thynge but trouble. We knowlege (O Lorde) all oure mysdeedes, and the synnes of oure fathers, that we haue offended the. Be not displeased (O Lorde) for thy names sake, forget not thy louynge kyndnesse: Remembre the trone of thyne honour, breake not the cournaunt that thou hast made with vs. Are there anye amonge the Goddes of the Paynims, that send rayne, or gyue the shewers of heauen? Doste not thou it, O Lorde oure God, in whom we trust? Yea Lorde, thou wilt all these thinges.

¶ The Lorde wyll not heare Moses or Aaron, yf they praye for the people, but wyll wrappe them in manye mysteryes. The cause of suche greate mysteryes.

CAPI. XV.

A Jeremi. viii.b. xi.c.e. xiii.b. Ezech. xiiii.c.

THen spake the Lord vnto me, and saide: Though Moses and Samuel stode before me, yet haue I no herte to this people. Dryue them awaye, that they maye goo out of my syghte. And yf they saye vnto the: Whyther shall we go, then tell them: The Lorde spueth you this awaye: Some vnto deathe, some to the swerde, some to honger, some into captiuitie. For I wyll bringe foure plages vpon the, sayth the Lorde. The swerde shall strangle them, the dogges shall drawe them, the foules of the ayre, and beastes of the earthe shall eate them vp, and destroye them. I wyll scatter them about also, in all kyngdomes and landes to be plaged, because of Manasses the sonne of Ezechias kynge of Juda, for the thinges that he dyd in Jerusalem.

B Who shall then haue pitie vpon the, O Jerusalem? Who shall be sorye for the? Or who shall make intercession to entreate peace for the: seing thou goest fro me, and courest backewarde, sayth the Lorde? Therefore I wyll stretche out myne hande against the, to destroye the, and I will not be entreated. I will scatter the abrode with the fanne on euerye syde of the lande, I wyl waste my people and destroye them, for they haue had no lust to turne from their owne wayes. I wyll make their widowes moo in nombre then the sandes of the see.

Upon the mothers of theyr children, I shall bringe a destroyer in the noone daye. Sodeynly and vnwares shal I sende a feare vpon their cities. She that hath borne seuen children shall haue none, her hert shal be ful of sorowe.

The sunne shall sayle her in the clere daye, Amos. viii.c. when she shall be confounded and shamed for very hepocrisie. As for those that remayne, I wil deliuer them vnto the swerde of their enemyes, sayth the Lorde. O mother, alas that euer thou didest beare me, an enemy & hated of the hole lande: Thoughe I neuer lente ne receyued vpon vsury, yet all men speake euill vpon me

And the Lorde answered me: Lede not I the then vnto good? Come not I to the when thou art in trouble, and helpe the whē thyne ennemye oppresseth the? Doth one yron hurt an other, or one metall that commeth frome the North another? As for youre riches and treasure, I wyll gyue them oute vnto a pray, not for anye money, but because of all youre synnes that ye haue wone in all youre coastes. And I wyll bringe you with your ennemyes in to a lande that ye knowe not: for the fyre that is kindled in my indignacion, shal burne you vp.

O Lorde (sayde I then) thou knowest all thynges, therfore remembre me, and visit me, deliuer me fro my persecuters: Receyue not my cause in thy longe wrathe, yet thou knowest that for thy sake I suffre rebuke. When D I had founde thy wordes, I ate them vp gredily: they haue made my herte ioyfull & glad. For I cal vpon thy name, o Lord God of hoostes. I dwel not amonge the scorners, neither is my delite therin: but I dwell onely in the feare of thy hand, for thou hast filled me with bytternes. Shal my heurnes endure for euer? Are my plages then so great, that they maye neuer be healed? Wilt thou be as a water fayled, and can not continue?

Upon these wordes, thus sayde the Lorde vnto me: Yf thou wylt turne agayne, I shall set the in my seruyce: and yf thou wylte take oute the thynge that is precious frome the vile, thou shalte be euen as myne owne mouthe. They shall conuerte vnto the, but turne not thou vnto them: & so shall I make the a strong wall of stele agaynst this people. They shall fyght agaynste the, but they shall not preuayle. For I my selfe wyl be with the to helpe the, and deliuer the sayth the Lorde. And I wyll rydde the oute of the handes of the wycked, and deliuer the out of the hande of tyrauntes.

¶ The prophecyeth the misery of the Jewes. He sheweth, that the worshyppinge of Idoles and the contempt of Gods lawe, is the cause of their mysery. He prophecyeth the captiuitie of Babilon, and their deliuerance from thence agayne. The callinge of the Gentiles.

CAPI. XVI.

MOreouer thus sayd the Lorde vnto me: A Thou shalte take the no wyfe, ne begette chyldren in this place: For of the chyldren that are borne in this place, of theyr mothers that haue borne them, and of theyr fathers that haue begotten them in this lande, thus sayethe the Lorde: They Iere. xxii. Jere. xxv. shall dye an horrible deathe, no man shall mourne for them, ne burye them: but they shall lye as donge vpon the earthe. They Psal. lxxix. Jere. shall perysshe thorowe the swerde and honger, and theyr bodyes shall be meate for the foules of the ayre, and beestes of the earthe. Agayne, thus sayth the Lorde: Go not vnto them, that come together for to mourne and wepe: for I haue taken my peace frome this people (sayth the Lorde) yea my fauoure and my mercy. And in this land shal they dye, olde and yonge, and shall not be buryed: no man shall bewayle, no man shall clyp or shaue him selfe for them.

Ther

B There shall not one bysyte an other, to mourne with them for theire deed, or to comforte them. One shall not offre an other the cuppe of consolacion, to forget theyr heuines for father and mother. Thou shalt not go in to their feaste house, to syt downe, moch lesse to eate or drynke with them. For thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I shall take awaye oute of this place, the voyce of mirthe and gladnesse, the voyce of the bridegrome and of the bryde: yea and that in youre dayes, that ye may se it.

Now when thou shewest this people all these wordes, and they say vnto the: Wherfore hath the Lorde deuysed all this greate plage for vs? Or what is the offence and syn that we haue done agaynste the Lorde oure God? Then make thou them this answere: Because youre fathers haue forsaken me E (sayth the Lorde) & haue cleued vnto straunge goddes, whom they haue honoured and worshypped: but me haue they forsaken, and haue not kepte my lawe. And ye with your shamefull blasphemyes, haue exceded the wyckednes of youre fathers. For euerye one of you followeth the frowarde and euyll ymagynacion of his hert, and is not obediente vnto me.

Therfore wyll I caste you oute of this lande, into a lande that ye and your fathers knowe not: and there shal ye serue straunge goddes daye and nyght, where wyll I shewe you no fauoure. Beholde therfore (sayth the Lorde) the dayes are come, that it shall no more be sayde: The Lorde lyueth, whiche broughte the chyldren of Israell oute of the lande of Egypte: but, it shall be sayde, the Lorde lyueth, that broughte the children of Israel from the Northe, and frome al landes where I had scatered them. For I will bring them agayne in to the lande, that I haue vnto their fathers.

Beholde (sayethe the Lorde) I will sende P oute many fyshers to take them, and after that wyll I sende out many hunters to hūte them oute, frome al mountaynes and hylles and out of the caues of stones. For myne eyes beholde all their wayes, and they can not be hyd fro my face, neither cā they: wicked dedes be kepte close oute of my syghte. But fyrste wyll I sufficiently rewarde their shamefull blasphemyes & synnes, wherwith they haue defyled my lande: Namely with they: stinking Idols and abhominacions, wherewith they haue fylled myne heritage, O Lorde, my strength, my power, and refuge in tyme of trouble. The Gentyles shall come vnto the, from the endes of the worlde, and saye: Verelye oure fathers haue cleued vnto lyes, they: Idols are but vayne and vnprofitable. How can a man make vnto his goddes, whiche are not able to be godes. And therfore I wyll ones teache them, sayethe the Lorde, I wyll shewe them my hande and my power, that they maye knowe that my name is the Lorde.

¶ The frowardnesse of the Jewes. Cursed be those that put their confydence in man, and those blessed that trust to God. Mannes hert is wycked. God is the searcher of the hert. The lyuyng waters are forsaken. The halowynge of the Sabboth is commaunded.

CAPI. XVII.

YOure synne (O ye of the tribe of Juda) A is written in the table of your hertes, and grauen so vpon the edges of youre alters with a penne of yron and with an Adamant clawe: that youre children also may think vpon your altars, woddes, thicke trees, byghe hylles, mountaynes and feldes. wherfore I wyll make all youre substaunce and treasure be spoyled, for the greate synne that ye haue done vpon your byghe places thorow out all the coastes of youre lande. Ye shall be caste out also frome the heritage, that I gaue you. And I wyll subdue you vnder the hand bondage of your ennemyes, in a lande that ye knowe not. For ye haue mynysshed fyre to my indignacion, whiche shall burne Jere. xl viii. d. euermore. Thus sayth the Lorde: Cursed be B the man that putteth his truste in man and that taketh flesh for his arme: and he, whose herte departeth frome the Lorde. He shalbe lyke the heeth, that groweth in the wyldernes. As for the good thing that is for to come he shal not se it: but dwell in a dry place of the wyldernes, in a salt and vnoccupied lād. ✻ O blessed is the mā, that putteth his trust Psal. xl. b. in the Lorde, and whose hope is the Lorde Prou. xxii. d. him selfe. ✻ For ye shall be as a tree, that is planted by the water syde: whiche spredeth oute the rote vnto moystnesse, whome the Psal. i. heate can not harme, when it commeth, but his leaues are grene. And though there grow but lytle fruce because of drouthe, yet is he not careful but he neuer leaueth of to bring forthe fruite. Amonge all thinges lyuynge, man hath the most disceytfull and vnlouely herte.

Who shall then knowe it? Euen I the Lorde searche out the grounde of the herte, and trye the reynes, and rewarde euery man Roma. ii. c. accordynge to his wayes, and accordinge to the frute of his counsels.

The disceytfull maketh a nest, but bringeth forth no young: he commeth by riches but not vprightouslye. In the myddest of his life Apoca. ii. a. Psal. vii. c. must he leaue them behynde him, and at the i. Reg. xvi. b. last be found a very foole. But thou (O Lord) whose trone is moste gloryous, excellent and of moste antyquite, whiche dwellest in the place of oure holy rest: Thou arte the comforte of Israell. All they that forsake the, shall be confounded: all they that departe from the, shall be written in earthe, for they haue forsaken the Lorde the very condyte of the waters of lyfe.

Heale me, O Lorde, and I shall be holesaue thou me, and I shall be saued, for thou arte my prayse. Beholde, these men saye vnto me: Where is the worde of the Lord? Let it come. Where as I neuertheles

Iedyng

ledinge the flocke in thy wayes, haue compel C led none by vyolence. For I neuer desyred any mans death, this knowest thou well. My wordes also were right before the. Be not nowe terryble vnto me, O Lorde, for thou art he in whom I hope, when I am in peryl.
Let my persecuters be confounded, but not me: let them be afrayde, and not me. Thou shalte bringe vpon them the tyme of theyr
plage, and shalte destroy them right sore.

Agayne, thus hath the Lorde sayde vnto me: Go and stande vnder the gate, where thorow the people and the kynges of Iuda go out and in, yea vnder all the gates of Jerusalem, and say vnto them: Heare the word of the Lorde, ye kynges of Iuda, and al thou people of Iuda, and all ye citesins of Jerusalem, that go thorowe this gate: Thus the Lorde commaundeth: Take hede for youre lyues, that ye carye no burthen vpon you in the Sabboth, to bringe it thorow the gates of Jerusalem: ye shall beare no burthen also oute of youre houses in the Sabboth. Ye shall do no laboure therin, but halowe the Sabboth, as I commaunded youre fathers.
How be it they obeyed me not, neither herke ned they vnto me: but were obstinate and stubburne, and neither obeyed me, nor recey-ued my correction. Neuertheles, yf ye wyll heare me (sayth the Lorde) and beare no bur
then in to the citie thorowe this gate vpon D the Sabboth: If ye wyll halowe the Sab-both, So that ye do no worke therin: then shal ther go thorow ye gates of this city, kiges and princes, that shall syt vpon the stoole of of Dauid: They shalbe caryed vpō charettes
and ryde vpon horses, bothe they and theyr prynces. Yea whole Iuda and al the citesins of Jerusalem shal go here thorowe, and this citye shall euer be the more and more inhabited. There shall come men also from the cy-ties of Iuda, from aboute Jerusalem, and from the land of BenJamin, from the playne feldes, from the mountaynes and frome the wyldernesse: whiche shall brynge burntofferynges, sacrifices, oblacions, and incense, and offre thanckesgyuynge in the house of the Lorde. But yf ye wil not be obedient vnto me, to halowe the Sabboth, so that ye wyll beare youre burthens thorowe the gates of Jerusalem vpon the Sabboth: Then shall I set fyre vpon the gates of Jerusalem, and it shall burne vp the the houses of Jerusalē,
and no man shalbe hable to quenche it.

¶ God sheweth by the example of a potter, that it is in his power to destroye the despysers of his worde, and to helpe them agayn when they amend. The conspiracye of the Jewes agaynst Jeremye. His prayer agaynst his aduersaryes.

CAPI. XVIII.

A THis is an other communycacion, that God had with Jeremy, sayinge: Arise,
and go downe in to the Potters house,
and there shall I tell the more of my mynde.
Nowe when I came to to the Potters house
I founde him makynge his worke vpon a whele. The vessell that the Potter made of claye, brake amonge his handes: So he be-ganne a newe, and made an other vessell, accordynge to his mynde. Then sayde the Lord thus vnto me: Maye not I do with you, as this Potter doth, O ye house of Israel, sayth
the Lorde? Beholde, ye house of Israel: ye are in my hand, euen as the claye in the Potters hande.

B When I take in hande to rote out, to de-stroye, or to waste awaye anye people or king dome: yf that people (agaynste whome I haue thus deuysed) conuerte from theyr wickednesse: Immediatly, I repent of the plage that I deuysed to bryng vpon them. Agayne when I take in hande, to buylde, or to plante
a people or a kyngdome: yf the same people
do euell before me, and heare not my voyce: Immediatly, I repent of the good, that I deuyse to do for them.

Speake nowe therfore vnto hole Juda,
and to them that dwell at Jerusalem: Thus sayth the Lorde: Beholde, I am deuysynge a plage for you, and am takynge a thinge in hande agaynst you.

C Therfore let euery man turne frome his euyll waye, take vpon you the thinge that is good, and do ryght. But they say: No more of this, we wyll folowe oure owne ymagynacyons, and do euerye man accordinge to the wylfulnesse of his owne mynde.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: Aske amonge the Heathen, yf any man herde suche
horryble thynges, as the daughter of Syon hath done. Shal not the snow (that melteth vpon the stony rockes of Lybanus) moysten
the feldes? Or may the sprynges of waters be so grauen awaye, that they runne no more gyue moystnesse, ne make frutefull? But my people hath so forgotten me, that they haue made sacrifice vnto vayne goddes. And whyle they folowed theyr owne wayes, they are come oute of the hyghe strete, and gone in to a fote waye not used to be troden. Where thorowe they haue brought theyr lande into an euerlastynge wyldernesse and scorne: So that whosoeuer trauayleth therby, shalbe abasshed, and wagge theyr heades. With an Easte wynde wil I scatter them, before their enemyes. And when theyr destruction commeth
I wyll turne my backe vpon them, but not my face. Then sayde they: come, let vs yma-gyn som thinge agaynste this Jeremye. Yea this dyd euen the prestes, to whome the law was commytted: the Senatours, that were the wysest: and the Prophetes whiche war-red not the word of God. Come (sayde they) lette vs cut oute his tunge, and let vs not re-garde his wordes. Consydre me, O Lorde, & D harde the voyce of myne ennemyes. Do they not recompence euyll for good, when they dygge a pyt for my soule? Remembre, howe that I stode before the, to speake for theym,
and to tourne awaye thy wrath frome them.

Therfore let theyr children dye of hunger,
and let them be oppressed with the swearde.
Let theyr wyues be robbed of theyr children,
and

and become wydowes: let theyr husbandes be slayne, let theyr yonge men be kylled with the swearde in the felde. Let theyr noyse be herde out of their houses, when ye murtherer commeth sodenly vpon them: For they haue digged a pit to take me, and layed snares for my fete. Yet Lorde, thou knowest all their councell, that they haue deuysed to slaye me.
And therfore forgyue them not their wycked nes, and let not theyr synne be put out of thy syght: but let them be iudged before the as the gyltye: This shalt thou do vnto them
in the tyme of thy indignacion.

¶ He prophecyeth the destruccyon of Jerusalem, for contempt and despysynge of the worde of God.

CAPI. XIX.

A MOreouer, thus sayde the Lorde vnto Jeremye: Go thy waye, and bye the an erthen pitcher, and brynge forth the Senatours, and the prestes into the valley of the chyldren of Hennon, which lyeth before the port that is made of brycke, and shewe them there the wordes, that I shall tell the,
and say thus vnto them: Heare the worde of the Lord, ye kynges of Juda, and ye cytezins of Jerusalem: Thus sayth the Lord of Hostes the God of Israel: Behold, I wil bring suche a plage vpon this place, that the eares of all that heare it, shall glowe. And that be cause they haue forsake me, and vnhalowed
this place, and haue offred in it vnto straūge goddes: whome neither they, their fathers, ne the kynges of Juda haue knowen. They haue fylled this place also with the bloude
of innocentes, for they haue set vp an aulter vnto Baal, to burne their childre for a burnt offerynge vnto Baal, whiche I neither com maunded, ne charged them, neyther thought ones therupon.

B Beholde therfore, the tyme commeth (saith the Lorde) that this place shall no more be called Topheth, ne the valley of the children of Hennom, but the valley of slaughter. For in this place will I slaye the Senatoures of Juda and Jerusalem, and kyll them downe with the swearde in the syght of theyr enne-myes, and of them that seke their lyues. And their deed carcases wyll I gyue to be meate for the foules of the ayre, and beastes of the C felde. And I will make this cytye so desolate, and despysed: that who so goeth therby, shal
be abasshed and iest vpon her, because of al
her plages.

* I will fede them also with the fleshe of their sonnes and their doughters. Yea euerye one shall eate vp an other in the besegynge & straytnesse, wherwith their ennemyes (that seke their lyues) shall kepe them in. And the pitcher shalt thou breake in the syght of the men, that shall be with the, and saye vnto them: Thus sayth the Lorde of Hostes: euen so will I destroye this people and cytye:
as a Potter breketh a vessel, that can not be made hole agayne.

D In Topheth shall they be buried, for they shall haue none other place. This wyll I do III. Reg. xxiii.
vnto this place also, sayth the Lorde, and to them that dwell therin: Yea I wyll doo to this cytye, as vnto Topheth (For the houses of Jerusalem and the houses of the kynges of Juda are defiled, like as Topheth) because of all the houses, in whose parlers they dyd sacrifyce vnto all the hoste of heauen, and poured out drynke offerynges vnto straunge goddes. And so Jeremy came from Topheth where the Lorde had sent him to prophecye & stode in the court of the house of the Lorde and spake to all the people: Thus sayth the Lord of Hostes the God of Israel: Behold,
I wyll bringe vpon this cytye and vpon eue-ry towne about it, al the plages that I haue deuysed agaynst theym: for they haue bene obstynate, and wolde not obeye my warnynges.

¶ Jeremye is smytten and caste in to preson, for preachynge of the worde of God. He prophecyeth the captiuitie of Babylon. He complayneth that he is a mockynge stocke, for the worde of God. He is compelled by the sprete to preache the worde, wyll he wyll he not.

CAPI. XX.

WHen Phashur the preaste, the sonne of A Emer, chefe in the house of the Lorde, herde Jeremye preache so stedfastly: he smote Jeremye, and put him in the stockes, that are by the hygh gate of BenJamin, in the house of the Lorde. The next daye folo-wynge Phashur brought Jeremye out of the stockes agayne. Then sayde Jeremye vnto him: The Lord shal cal the no more Phashur (that is excellent and increasynge) but Magor (that is fearefull and afrayed) euerye where. For thus sayth the Lorde: beholde, I wyll make the afrayed, the thy selfe, and all that fauoure the: which shall perysshe with the swearde of their ennemyes, euen before thy face.

And I wyll gyue hole Juda vnder the B
power of the kynge of Babylon, whiche shal cary some vnto Babylon prysoners, and slay some with the swearde. Moreouer, all the substaunce of this lande, all their precyous and gorgeous workes, all costlynes, and all the treasure of the kynges of Juda: wyll I gyue into the handes of theyr enemyes whiche shall spoyle them, and carye theym vnto Babilon. But as for the (O Phashur) thou shalte be caryed vnto Babylon with al thine housholde, and to Babilon shalte thou come where thou shalte dye, and be buryed: thou and al thy fauourers, to whom thou hast pre ched lyes. O Lorde, thou makest me weake, but thou refreshest me, and makest me strong agayne. All the daye longe am I despysed and laughed to scorne of euery man: because I haue now preached long agaynste malicious tyranny, and shewed them of destructiō. For the whiche cause they cast the worde of the C Lorde in my teeth, and take me euer to the worst

worse.

Wherfore, I thought from hence forthe not to speake of him, ne to preache any more in his name. But the worde of the Lord was a very burnynge fyre in my herte and in my bones, whiche when I wolde haue stopped I myght not. For why, I herde so many derisyons and blasphemyes, yea euen of mine owne companyons, and of suche as were conuersaunt with me: whiche went aboute, to make me afrayed, sayinge: vpon him, let vs go vpon him, to feare hym, and make him holde his tonge: that we may ouercom him and be auenged of him.

But the Lorde stode by me, lyke a myghtye gyaunt: therfore my persecuters fel, and coulde do nothynge. (Iere. xviii. b) They shalbe sore confounded, for they haue done vnwisely, they shal haue an euerlastyng shame. And now, O Lorde of Hostes, thou ryghteous iudge (which knowest the reynes and the very hertes) let me se them punyshed, for vnto the I committe my cause. (Ieremy. xi. d.)

D Synge vnto the Lorde and prayse hym, for he hathe delyuered the soule of the oppressed, from the hande of the vyolent. Cursed be the daye, wherin I was borne: vnhappye be the daye wherin my mother brought me forth. Cursed be the man, that brought my father the tydynges, (Iob. iii. a.) to make him glad, sayinge: thou hast gotten a sonne. Let it happen vnto that man, as to the cities which the Lord turned vpsyde downe (when he had hearde longe the wicked rumoure of them) because he slewe me not, as sone as I came oute of my mothers wombe, and because my mother was not my graue her selfe, that the byrthe might not haue come out, but remayned styl in her. Wherfore came I forth of my mothers wombe? To haue experience of labour and sorowe? and to lede my lyfe with shame?

¶ He prophesyeth that Zedekiah shall be taken, and the cytye burned.

CAPI. XXI.

A These are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Ieremy what tyme as king Zedekiah sent vnto him Phashur the sonne of Melchiah, and Sophoniah the sonne of Maasiah preaste, sayinge: Aske counsell at the Lorde (we praye the) of oure behalfe, for Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon besegeth vs, if the Lorde (peraduenture) wyll deale with vs, accordyng to his merueilous power, and take hym from vs.

Then spake Ieremy. Gyue Zedekiah this answere. Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel: beholde, I wyll turne backe the weapons, that ye haue in youre handes, wherwith ye fyghte agaynste the kynge of Babylon and the Caldees, which besege you round about the walles, and I wyll brynge them togyther into the myddest of this cytye, and I my selfe will fyght agaynst you, with an out stretched hande, and with a myghtye arme, in great displeasure and terryble wrathe: and wyll smyte them, that dwel in this citie: yea bothe men and cattell shall dye of the pestilence.

B And after this (sayth the Lorde) I shall delyuer Zedekiah the kyng of Iuda and his seruauntes, his people (and suche as are escaped in the cytye, from the pestylence, swearde, and honger) into the power of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon: yea in to the handes of their enemyes, in to ŷ handes of those that folowe vpon their lyues, whiche shall smyte them with the swearde: they shal not pyty them, they shall not spare them, they shal haue no mercye vpon them.

C And vnto this people thou shalte saye: Thus sayth the Lorde: * beholde, I laye before you the waye of lyfe and death. Whoso abydeth in this cytye, shall perysshe: eyther with the swearde, with honger, or with pestylence. But who so goeth out to holde on the Chaldees parte, that besege it, he shall saue his lyfe, and shal wynne his soule for a pray. For I haue set my face agaynste this cytye (sayth the Lorde) to plage it, and to do it no good. It muste be gyuen in to the hande of the kynge of Babilon, and be brent with fyre.

D And vnto the house of the kynge of Iuda, saye thus: Heare the worde of the Lorde (O thou house of Dauid) for thus sayth ŷ Lord: Mynyster ryghtousnesse, and that soone, delyuer the oppressed frome vyolent power: or euer my terryble wrath breake oute lyke a fyre, and burne so, that no man maye quench it, because of the wyckednesse of youre ymaginacions. Beholde, (sayeth the the Lord) I will come vpon you, that dwell in the valleyes, rockes and feldes, and say: Tushe: who wil make vs afrayed? or who wyll come in to our houses? For I wyl vyset you (sayth the Lorde) because of the wyckednesse of youre inuencions, and wyll kyndle such a fyre in youre wod, as shall consume all, that is about you.

¶ He exhorteth the kynge of Iuda to iudgement and ryghtousnesse. why Ierusalem is brought into captiuyte. The death of Selum the sonne of Iosia is prophecyed.

CAPI. XXII.

Thus sayde the Lorde also: Go downe in to the house of the kynge of Iuda, and speake there these wordes, and saye: A Heare the worde of the Lorde, thou kynge of Iuda that syttest in the kyngly sete of Dauid: thou and thy seruauntes and thy people that go in and oute at this gate. Thus the Lord commaundeth: kepe equite and ryghtousnes, delyuer the oppressed from the power of the vyolent: do not greue ne oppresse the straunger, the fatherlesse ne the widowe, and shede no innocent bloude in this place.

And yf ye kepe these thinges faythfully then shall there come in at the dore of this house kynges to syt vpon Dauids seate: they B shall be caryed in charettes and ryde vpon horses, both they and their seruauntes, and their people. But yf ye wyll not be obedient vnto these commaundementes, I swere by mine owne selfe (sayth the Lorde) this house shall be waste. For thus hathe the Lorde spoken vpon the kynges house of Iuda: Thou arte the heade, as Galaad is in Lybanus: What wylte thou saye of it, yf I make the not so waste (and thy cities also) that no man shall dwel therin? I wyl prepare a destroyer with his weapons for the, to hewe downe thy speciall Cedre trees, and to caste them in the fyre.

C And all the people that go by this cytye, shall speake one to another: wherfore hath the Lorde done thus vnto this noble cytye? Then shal it be answered: * because they haue broken the couenaunt of the Lord their God, and haue worshypped & serued straunge goddes. Mourne not ouer the deed, and be not wo for them, but be sory for him that departeth awaye: for he commeth not agayne and seeth his natiue countrey no more. For thus sayth the Lorde, as touchynge Selum the sonne of Iosiah kynge of Iuda, whiche raygned after his father, and is caryed oute of this place: He shall neuer come hyther agayne, for he shal dye in the place, wherunto he is led captyue, & shal se this lande no more.

D Wo worthe him, that buyldeth his house with vnryghtousnes, and his parlers with the good that he hath gotten by vyolence: which neuer recompenseth his neyghbours labour ne payeth him his hyre. He thynketh in him selfe: I wyll buylde me a wyde house and gorgyous parlers: He causeth wyndowes to be hewen therin, and the selynges & geastes maketh he of Cedre, and paynteth them with Zenober. Thinckest thou to raigne nowe that prouokest me to wrath with the Cedre trees?

Dyd not thy father eate and drynke, and prospere well, as longe as he delt with equite and ryghtousnes? Yea when he helped the oppressed & poore to their ryght then prospered he well,

From whence came this, but onely because he had me before his eyes, sayth the Lorde. Neuertheles, as for thyne eyes and thyne herte, they loke vpon couetousnesse, to shed innocent bloude, to do wronge and vyolence. And therfore thus sayth the Lorde agaynste Iehoakim, the sonne of Iosiah kynge of Iuda: They shall not mourne for him (as they vse to do) alas brother, alas sister: neither shal they saye vnto him: Alas syr, alas for that noble prince. But as an Asse shall he be buryed, corrupt and be caste without the gates of E Ierusalem.

Clymme vp the hyl of Lybanus (O thou doughter Sion) lyfte vp thy voyce vpon Basan, cry from all partes: for al thy louers are destroyed. I gaue the warnynge, whyle thou waste yet in prosperyte. But thou saydest: I wyll not heare. And this maner haste thou vsed from thy youth, that thou woldest neuer heare my voyce. All thy herdmen shall be dryuen with the wynde, and thy derlynges shall be caryed awaye into captyuyte: Then shalte thou be broughte to shame and confusyon, because of all thy wyckednesse: thou that dwellest vpon Lybanus, and makest thy nest in the Cedre trees. O how greate shall thy mournynge be, when thy sorowes come vpon the, as a woman trauelyng with chylde?

As truelye as I lyue (sayth the Lorde) F Though Conaniah the sonne of Iehoakim kynge of Iuda were the signet of my ryghte hande, yet wyll I plucke him of: And I wyl gyue the into the power of them that seke to slaye the, and into the power of them that thou fearest: in to the power of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, and in to the power of the Caldees. Moreouer, I wyll sende the, and thy mother that bare the, in to a straunge lande, where ye were not borne and there shall ye dye. But as for the lande G that ye wyll desyre to returne vnto, ye shall neuer come at it agayne. This man Conaniah shal be lyke an ymage robbed and torne in peces, whiche pleaseth no man, for all his apparell. Wherfore both he and his sede shal be sent awaye, and cast out into a lande, that they knowe not.

O thou earthe, earthe, earthe: heare the worde of the Lorde: Wryte this man amonge the outlawes, for no prosperyte shall this man haue all his lyfe long. Neither shall any of his sede be so happye, as to syt vpon the seate of Dauid, and to beare rule in Iuda,

¶ He speaketh agaynst euyll curates that make hauocke of the flocke of the Lorde. Of the conuersyon of the remnaunt of the Iewes to the fayth. The commynge of the true shepherde Chryst is prophesyed. Agaynst false prophetes. when a prophet preacheth the worde of God. God conuerteth the hertes of the hearers. Agaynst prophetes that preache lyes vnder the name of God. The myracles of false prophetes.

CAPI. XXIII.

WO be vnto the shepherdes, that destroye and scatre my flocke, sayth the Lorde. A Wherfore, this is the commaundement (Eze. xxxiiii. a.) of the Lorde God of Israel, vnto ŷ shepherdes that fede my people: Ye scatre and thrust out my flocke, and loke not vpon them. Therfore nowe wyll I vysyt the wickednesse of youre ymaginacyons, sayth the Lorde: And wyl gather to gyther the remnaunt of my flocke frome all landes that I had dryuen them vnto, and wyll brynge them agayne to their pastures, that they maye growe and increase. I wyll set shepherdes also ouer them, whiche shall fede them: They shall no more B feare and drede, for there shall none of them be lost, sayth the Lorde. Beholde, the tyme (Iere. xxxiii. c. Esay. iiii. b. xl. c. & xlv. b.) commeth, sayth the Lord, that I wyll rayse vp the ryghteous braunche of Dauid, whiche shal beare rule, and discus matters with wysdome, and shall set vp equyte and ryghtousnesse agayne in earth.

In his tyme shall Juda be saued and Israell shall dwell without feare. And this is the name that they shall call hym: euen the Lorde oure ryghtous maker. And therfore beholde, the tyme commeth, sayth the Lord, that it shall no more be sayde: the Lorde lyueth, which brought the chyldren of Israell out of the lande of Egypte: But the Lorde lyueth, which brought forth, and led the sede of the house of Israel, out of the North land, and from all countreyes where I had scatered them and they shall dwell in their owne lande agayne.

Jerem.xiiii.a

My herte breaketh in my bodye, because of the false Prophetes, all my bones shake: I am become lyke a dronken man (that by the reason of wyne can take no rest) for very feare of the Lorde, and of his holy wordes: Because the lãd is ful of aduouterers, where thorowe it is destroyed and mourneth, and the pleasaunt pastures of the desert are dryed vp. Yea the waye that men take, is wycked, E and their gouernaunce is nothynge lyke the holy worde of the Lorde. For the prophetes & the preestes them selues are poluted hypocrites, and their wyckednesse haue I founde in my house, sayth the Lorde. Wherfore, their way shal be slypperye in the darknes, wherein they may stacker and fal. For I wyl bring a plage vpon them, euen the yeare of theyr visitacion, sayth the Lorde. I haue sene foly amonge the Prophetes of Samaria, that they preached for Baal, & disceyued my people of Israell.

I haue sene also among the Prophetes of Jerusalem foule aduoutrye, and presumptuous lyes. They take the moste shamefull men by the hande, flaterynge thẽ, so that they can not returne frome their wyckednes. All these with theyr cytezyns are vnto me, as Sodome, and as the inhabytoures of Gomorre.

Jeremy.ix.b

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde of hostes concernynge the prophetes: Beholde, I wyll fede them with wormwod, and make them drynke the water of gall. For frome the prophetes of Jerusalem is the sycknes of ypocrysye come into all the lande.

D Jeremi.xxvii & xxiii.b.

And therfore the Lorde of hostes giueth you this warnynge: Heare not the wordes of the prophetes, that preach vnto you, and disceyue you: for they speake the meanyng of their owne herte, and not oute of the mouth of the Lorde. They saye vnto them, that despyse me: The Lorde hath spoken it: Tush, ye shall prospere ryght well. And vnto all them, that walke after the lust of their owne herte, they saye: Tushe, there shall no misfortune happen you. For who hath sytten in the counsell of the Lorde, that he hath herde and vnderstande, what he is about to doo: Who hath marked his voyce, an herde it? Beholde, the stormy wether of the Lorde (that is, his indignacion) shal go forth, and shal fal downe vpon the heed of the vngodly. And the wrath of the Lorde shall not turne agayne, tyll he performe and fulfyl the thought of his hert. And in the latter dayes ye shall knowe his meanynge.

Jeremy.xii.a Sophon.iii.a

I haue not sent these Prophetes (sayth the Lorde) and yet they ranne. I haue not spoken to them, and yet they preached. But yf they hadde contynued in my counsell and herde my wordes: they had turned my people from theyr euyll wayes and wycked ymaginacions. Am I then God that seeth but the thynge, whiche is nyghe at hande, and not that is farre of? sayth the Lorde. Maye any man hyde hym selfe so, that I shal not se hym? sayth the Lorde. Do not I fulfyl heauen and earthe? sayth the Lorde. I haue herde well ynoughe, what the Prophetes saye, that preache lyes in my name, sayinge: I haue dreamed, I haue dreamed. How longe wyll this contynue in the prophetes hertes, to tell lyes, & to preache the crafty subtylte of their owne herte? Whose purpose is (with the dreames that euery one tell) to make my people forgette my name, as their fore fathers dyd, when Baal came vp. The prophet that hathe a dreame, let him tell it: and he that vnderstandeth my worde, let hym shewe it faythfully. E

F For what hath chaffe and wheat to do togyther? sayth the Lorde. Is not my worde lyke a fyre, sayth the Lord, and lyke an hammer, that breaketh the harde stone? Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: beholde, I wyll vpon the Prophetes, that steale my worde pryuely frome euery man. Beholde, here am I (sayth the Lorde) agaynste the Prophetes, that take vpon their tunges to speake: The Lorde hathe sayd. Beholde, here am I (sayth the Lorde) agaynste those Prophetes, that dare prophecye lyes, and disceyue my people with theyr vanyties, & myracles, whome I neuer sent, ne commaunded theym. They shall do this people greate harme, sayth the Lorde.

If this people, eyther any Prophete or preste aske the, and saye: what is the burthẽ of the Lorde? Thou shalte saye vnto them: What burthen? Therfore wyll I caste you fro me (sayth the Lorde) because ye youre selues are a burthen. And the Prophete, prest or people that vseth this terme (the burthen of the Lorde) hym wyll I vyset, and his house also.

G But thus shall ye saye, euery one to an other: What answere hath the Lorde gyuen? or, what is the Lordes commaundement? And as for the burthen of the Lorde, ye shal speake no more of it: for euerye mans owne word is his burthen, because ye haue altered the wordes of the lyuynge God the Lorde of Hostes our God.

Thus shall euerye man saye to the prophetes: what answere hath the Lorde gyuen the? Or what sayth the Lord? And not ones to name the burthen of the Lorde. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: For so moche as ye haue vsed this terme (the burthẽ of ye Lorde) where as I not withstandinge sent vnto you and forbade you to speake of the Lordes burthen. Beholde therfore I wyll repute you as a burthen, and wil cast you out of my presence: yea and the city also, that I gaue you & youre fathers: and wil bring you to an euerlasting confusion, and in to suche a shame as shal neuer be forgotten.

¶ The vysyon of the two pannyers of fygges. The fyrst vysyon sygnyfyeth, that parte of the people shoulde be brought agayne frome captyuytye. The seconde, that Sedechias and the rest of the people shoulde be destroyed.

CAPI. XXIIII.

A The Lorde shewed me a vision: Beholde there stode two maundes of fygges before the temple of the Lorde, after that Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon had led awaye captyue Jechoniah the sonne of Joakim kynge of Juda, the myghtye men also of Juda, with the worke masters, and connyng men of Jerusalem vnto Babylon. In the one maunde were very good fygges, euen lyke as those that be fyrst rype. In the other maunde were verye naughtye fygges, whiche myght not be eaten, they were so euyll. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: What seest thou Jeremye? I sayde: fygges, wherof some be verye good, and some so euyl, that no man may eate them.

B Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, after this maner: Thus sayth the Lorde the God of Israell: lyke as thou knowest the good fygges, so shall I knowe the men ledde awaye, whome I haue sente out of this place in to the lande of the Caldees, for their profyte: and I wyll set myne eyes vpon thẽ for the beste, for I wyll brynge them agayne into this lande: I wil bylde them vp, and not breake them downe: I will plant them, and not roote them oute. And I wyll gyue them an herte, to knowe howe that I am the C Lorde. They shall be my people, and I wil be their God, for they shall returne vnto me wt their hole herte.

And lyke as thou knowest the noughtye fygges, whiche maye not be eaten, they are so euyll: Euen so wyll I (sayth the Lorde) let Sedechias the kynge of Juda, (ye and all his prynces, and the resydue of Jerusalem that remayne oute in this lande, and them also that dwell in Egypt) to be vexed and plaged D in all kyngdomes and landes. And wyll make them to be a reprofe, a cõmon by worde a laughynge stocke and shame, in all the places where I shall scattre them. I wyll sende the swerde, honger, and pestylence amonge them, vntyll I haue cleane consumed them out of the lande that I gaue vnto them and theyr fathers.

¶ Jeremye prophecyeth, that they shall be in captiuytye thre score and ten yeares, because they contemned and despysed the worde of God. He sheweth that after thre score and ten yeares, the Babylonyans shoulde be destroyed. The destruction of all nacyons is prophecyed. He moueth the preastes of the nacyons to waylynge.

CAPI. XXV.

A Sermon that was gyuen vnto Jeremye, vpon all the people of Juda. In the fourthe yere of Joakim the sonne of Josias kynge of Juda, that was in the fyrste yere of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon. Whiche sermon Jeremye the Prophete made vnto all the people of Juda, and to all the inhabitoures of Jerusalem on this maner. A

From the thyrtenth yere of Josias the son of Amon kynge of Juda, vnto this presente daye (that is euen thre and twenty yere) the worde of the Lorde hath ben committed vnto me. And so I haue spoken to you, I haue rysen vp earlye, I haue gyuen you warnynge in season, but ye wolde not heare me. Though the Lorde hathe sente his seruauntes, all the Prophetes vnto you in season: Yet wolde ye not obeye, ye wolde not enclyne youre eares to heare.

B iiii.Re.xvii.b Jere.xviii.c Jere.xxxv.c.

He sayd: tourne agayne euery man frome his euyll waye, and from your wycked ymagynacions, and so shall ye dwelle for euer in the lande, that the Lorde promysed you and youre forefathers: and go not vnto straunge goddes, serue them not, worshyp them not, and angre me not with the workes of youre handes: then wyll not I punysshe you. Neuerthelesse, ye wolde not heare me (sayth the Lorde) but haue defiled me with the workes of youre handes, to youre owne greate harme.

Wherfore thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: Because ye haue not harkened vnto my worde: lo, I wyll sende oute and call for all the people that dwell in the North, sayth the Lorde, and wyll prepare Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon my seruaunte, and wyll brynge them vpon this lande, and vpon all that dwell therin, and vpon all the people that are aboute them, and wyll vtterly roote them oute. I wyll make of them a wyldernesse, a mockage, and a contynuall deserte.

C Moreouer, I wyll take frome them the voyce of gladnesse and solace, the voyce of the brydegrome and the bryde, the voyce of the anoynted, with the cresshettes: and this hole lande shall become a wyldernesse, and they shall serue the sayd people, and the kyng of Babylon thre score yeres and ten. When the thre score and tenne yeres are expyred, I wyll vysyte also the wickednesse of the kyng of Babylon and his people, sayth the Lorde: yea and the lande of the Caldees, and wyll make it a perpetual wyldernesse, and wil fulfyll all my wordes vpon that lande, whiche I haue deuysed agaynste it: yea, all that is wrytten in this boke, whiche Jeremye hathe prophecyed of all people: so that they also shall be subdued vnto diuers nacions & great kynges, for I wyll acquyte theym accordyng to their dedes and workes of their owne handes.

Jeremi.xxix.c ii.Pa.xxxvi.d i.Esdr.i.a Daniel.ix.a Job.xxxiiii.b

D Esaye.li.b

For thus hathe the Lorde God of Israel spoken vnto me: Take this wyne cup of indignacion

Psal.lxxv.b. dignacion fro my hand, that thou maist cause all the people to whome I sende the, for to drynke of it: that when they have dronken therof, they may be mad and out of their wittes, when the iwerde commeth, that I wyll sende amonge them. Then toke I the cuppe from the Lordes hand, and made all the people, drynke therof, vnto whom the Lorde had sent me.

C But syrste the cityes of Jerusalem, and all the cityes of Juda, their kynges and princes: to make them desolate, waste, despised and cursed, as it is come to passe this daye. Yea, and Pharao kyng of Egypte, his seruauntes, his princes, and his people all togither one with an other, and all kynges of the lande of Hus, all kynges of the Philistines lande, Ascalon: Azah, Accaron and the rest of Asdod, the Edomites, the Moabites, and the Ammonites, al the kinges of Tyrus and Sidon: the kinges of the Iles, beyonde the see: Dedan, Thema, Buz, and the shauen Idumacites: all the kynges of Arabye, and (generallye) all the kynges that dwell in the wyldernesse: all the kynges of Zamri, all the kynges of Elam, all the kynges of Medes, all kynges towarde the Northe, farre or nye, euerye one with his neyghbourers: Yea, all the kyngdomes that are vpon the yole earthe. The kynge of Sesach, sayde he, shall drynke with them also.

F And say thou vnto them: This is the commaundement of the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: Drynke and be dronken, spewe and fall that ye neuer ryse: and that thorow the iwerde, whiche I wyll sende amonge you. But yf they wyll not receyue the cuppe of thy hande, and drynke it, then tell them: Thus bathe the Lorde of hostes threten you: drynke it ye shall, and that shortly. For, lo, I begyn to plage the citye that my name is vpon vnto: thynke ye then, that I wyll leaue you vnpunyshed? Ye shall not goo quyte. For why, I call for a iwerde vpon all the inhabitaunces of the earth, sayth the Lorde of hostes.

Jerem.xlix.b Ezech.xx.b 1.Pet.iiii.c.

Joel iii.c Amos.ix.d. Therfore tell them all these wordes, and say vnto them: The Lorde shall crye from above, and let his voyce be herde frome his holy dwellynge place. With a greate noyse shall he crye frome his courte regall. He shall gyue a greate voyce (lyke the grape gatherers) and the sounde therof shall be herde vnto the endes of the worlde. For the Lorde hathe a iudgement to gyue vpon all people, and wyll holde his courte of iustyce with all flesshe and punysshe the vngodly, sayethe the Lorde.

G Jeremi.xxv.c For thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, a myserable plage shall goo frome one people to an other, and a greate stormye watter shall aryse frome all the endes of the earthe. And the same daye shall the Lorde him selfe slee theym, frome one ende of the earthe vnto an other. There shall no lamentacion be made for any of them, none gathered vp, nor buryed; but shall lye as dung vpon the grounde.

Mourne, o ye shepherdes, and crye: sprinkle your selues with asshes, o ye rammes of the flocke: for the tyme of your slaughter is fulfilled, and ye shall fall lyke vessels commenly made for pleasure.

The shepherdes shall haue no wayes to flye, and the rammes of the flocke shal not escape. Then shall the shepherdes crye horrible, and the rammes of the flocke shall mourne: for the Lorde shall consume their pasture, and their beste feldes shall lye dead, by cause of the horrible wrathe of the Lorde. They shall forsake their folders, lyke as a lyon. For their landes shall be waste, bicause of the wrathe of the destroyer, and bycause of his fearefull indignacion.

C Jeremye moueth the people to amendement. He is taken of the Prophetes and Preastes, and brought to iudgement. He beinge accused before the Princes, answereth: that he had preached onely the wordes of God. The rulers and the people depart Jeremye, agaynst the wylles of the Preastes and Prophetes: after the exemple of Ezechias, whi che had delyuered Micheas, that had preached the same thynges that Jeremye had preached. Uriah the Prophete is kylled of Joakym, contrarye to the wyll of God.

CAPI. XXVI.

I N the begynnynge of the raygne of Joakim the son of Josias kyng of Juda, came this worde from the Lorde, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lorde: Stande in the courte of the Lordes house, and speake vnto all theym whiche (oute of the cityes of Juda) come to do worshyp in the Lordes house, all the wordes that I commaunde the to saye. Loke thou kepe not one worde backe, yf (peraduenture) they will harken and turne euery man frome his wycked waye: that I maye also repente of the plage, whiche I haue determined to bringe vpon them, bycause of their wycked inuencions.

And after this maner shalt thou speake vn to them: Thus sayth the Lorde: yf ye wyll not obeye me, to walke in my lawes, whiche I haue gyuen you, and to heare the wordes of my seruauntes the Prophetes, whome I sende vnto you, rysynge vp tymely, and dyll sende vnto you, rysynge vp tymely, and dyll sende (I saye) then wyll I do to this house, as I dyd vnto Silo, and wyll make this citye to be abhorred of all the people of the earthe. And the preestes, the Prophetes, and al the people herde Jeremye preache these wordes in the house of the Lorde.

Now when he hadde spoken oute all the wordes, that the Lorde commaunded him to preache vnto all the people, then the preastes, the Prophetes, and all the people layde holde vpon him, and sayde: thou shalte dye. Howe darest thou be so bolde, as to saye in the name of the Lorde: it shall happen to this house as it dyd to Silo: and this cyte shall be so waste, that no man shall dwell therin?

And

And when all the people had gathered aboute Jeremye in the house of the Lorde, the princes of Juda herde of this tumoure, and they came forthwith oute of the kynges palace in to the house of the Lorde, and sat the downe before the newe dooze of the Lorde.

Then spake the preestes and the Prophetes vnto the rulers, and to all the people, these wordes: This man is worthy to dye, for he hath preached agaynst this city, as ye your selues haue herd with your eares.

Then sayde Jeremye vnto the rulers and to all the people: The Lord hath sent me to preache agaynst this house, and agaynst this citye all the wordes that ye haue herd. Therfore amende youre wayes, and your aduisementes, and be obedyente vnto the voyce of the Lorde youre God: so shall the Lorde repent of the plage, that he hadde deuysed agaynst you. Nowe as for me: I am in youre handes, doo with me as ye thynke expediente and good.

But this shall ye knowe: yf ye put me to deth, ye shall make your selues, this citye and all the inhabitours therof, guilty of innocent bloude. For this is of a truth: that the Lord hath sent me vnto you, to speake al these wordes in your eares.

E Then sayd the rulers and the people vnto the preestes and Prophetes: This man may not be condemned to death, for he hath preached vnto vs in the name of the Lorde oure God. The elders also of the lande stode vp, and sayd thus vnto all the people: Micheas the Morasthite, whiche was a Prophete vnder Ezechias kynge of Juda, spake to all the people of Juda: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: Syon shall be plowed lyke a felde, Jerusalem shall be an heape of stones, and the hyll of the Lordes house, shall be turned to an hye wodde.

Dyd Ezechias the kynge of Juda and the people of Juda put him to deth for this? No verily, but rather feared the Lorde, and made their prayer vnto him. For whiche cause also the Lorde repented of the plage that he had tuysed against them. Shold we then do suche a shamefull dede agaynst our soules? There was a Prophete also, that preached thy sayinge in the name of the Lord called Uriah the sonne of Semeiah of Cariathiarim: this man preached also agaynst this citye and agaynste this land, according to all as Jeremy sayeth. Now when Joakim the kynge with all the estates and princes had herde his wordes, the kynge went about to slee him. When Uriah perceyued that, he was afrayde, and fled, and departed in to Egypt.

Then Joakim the kyng sent seruauntes in to the lande of Egypt: Namely Elnathan ỹ sonne of Achabor, and certeyn men with him in to Egypte, whiche fetched Uriah oute of Egypte, and brought him vnto kyng Joakim that slewe him with the iwerde, and caste his dead body in to the common peoples graue. But Ahikam the son of Saphan helped Jeremye that he came not in to the handes of the people to be slayne.

C Jeremye, at the commaundement of the Lorde, sendeth bondes to the kynge of Juda, and to the other kynges that were nyghe, whereby they are monyshed to become subiectes vnto Nabuchodonosor. He warneth the people and the kynges and rulers, that they beleue not false Prophetes.

CAPI. XXVII.

I N the begynnynge of the raygne of Joakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, came this worde vnto Jeremye frome the Lorde, whiche spake thus vnto me: Make the bondes and cheynes, and put them about thy necke, and sende them to the the kyng of Edom, the kynge of Moab, the kynge of Ammon, ỹ kynge of Tyrus, and to the kynge of Sydon, & that by the messengers which shall come to Jerusalem vnto Sedechias the king of Juda, & byd them saye vnto their maisters: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israell, speake thus vnto youre maisters: I am he that made the erth, the men, and the catell that are vpon the grounde, with my greate power and stretched out arme, & haue gyuen it vnto whom it pleased me.

And nowe wyll I delyuer all these landes in to the power of Nabuchodonosor ỹ kynge of Babylon, my seruaunt. The beestes also of the felde shall I gyue hym to doo hym seruyce. And all people shall serue him, and his sonne, and his chyldes chyldren, vntyll the tyme of the same lande be come also: yea manye people, and greate kynges shall serue hym.

Moreouer, that people and kyngdome whiche wyll not serue Nabuchodonosor, and that wyll not put their neckes vnder the yoke of the kynge of Babylon: the same people wyll I vysyte with the iwearde, with honger, with pestylence, vntyll I haue consumed them in his handes, sayth the Lorde.

And therfore folowe not youre Prophetes, sothesayers, expounders of dreames, charmers and wytches, whiche saye vnto you: ye shall not serue the kynge of Babylon. For they preache you lyes: to bringe you farre frome youre lande, and that I myghte cast you out, and destroye you. But the people that put their neckes vnder the yoke of ỹ kynge of Babylon and serue hym, those I wyll let remayne styll in their owne lande (sayth the Lorde) and they shal occupy it and dwell therin.

All these thynges tolde I Sedechias kyng of Juda, and sayde: Put youre neckes vnder the yoke of the kynge of Babylon, and serue him and his people, that ye maye lyue. Why, wylt thou and thy people perish with the iwerde, with honger, with pestylence: lyke as the Lorde hathe denysed for all people that wyll not serue the kynge of Babylon? Therfore gyue no care vnto those Prophetes (that tell you: Ye shall not serue the kyng of Babylon) for they preache you lyes, neyther haue I sente them, sayeth the Lorde: how be it they are bolde, falsely to prophecye

in my name: that I mighte the sooner dryue you out, and that ye myght perish with your preachers.

I spake to the preestes also, and to all the people: Thus sayth the Lorde: Heare the wordes of those Prophets that preaches vnto
you, and saye: Beholde the vessels of ỹ Lor-des house, shall shortly be brought hyther a-gayne frome Babylon: For they prophecye lyes vnto you. Heare them not but serue the kynge of Babylon, that ye may lyue. Wherfore will ye make this citye to be destroyed?
But yf they be true Prophetes in very dede,
and yf the worde of the Lorde be commytted
vnto them, then lette them praye the Lorde of hostes, that the remnaunt of the ornamen tes (whiche are in the house of the Lorde, and remayne yet in the house of the kynge of Juda, and at Jerusalem) be not caried to Ba bylon also.

For thus hath the Lorde of hostes spoken concerning the pyllers, the lauer, the seat and the residue of the ornamentes that yet remayn in this citye, whiche Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon toke not, when he caryed
awaye Jechoniah the sonne of Joakim kyng of Juda, with all the power of Juda and Jerusalem, frome Jerusalem vnto Babylon captyue.

Yea, thus hathe the Lorde of Hoostes
the God of Israell spoken, as touchynge
the residue of the ornamentes of the Lordes house, of the kynge of Judas house, and of Jerusalem: They shall be caryed vnto Babylon, and there they shall remayne vntyll I vysyte them, sayethe the Lorde. Then wyll I brynge them hyther agayne. And this was wone in the same yere: euen in the begynnyng of the raygne of Sedechias kyng of Juda.

¶ The false prophecye of Hananiah the Prophete. Jeremye sheweth ỹ the Prophecye of Hananiah is false, by the exemple of other Prophetes. He being inspyred of the Lorde, reprouerth Hananiah, Pro-phecyinge his death.

CAPI. XXVIII.

BVt in the fourthe yere of the raygne of Sedechias kynge of Juda, in the fyfth moneth: It happened that Hananiah
the sonne of Assur the Prophete of Gabaon spake to me in the house of the Lorde, in the presence of the preestes and of all the people, and sayd: Thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes
the God of Israell: I haue broken the yoke of the kyng of Babylon: and after two yere wyll I bryngе agayne in to this place, all the ornamentes of the Lordes house, that Nabu chodonosor kynge of Babylon caried awaye
from this place vnto Babylon.

Yea, I wil bryng agayn Jechoniah ỹ sonne of Joakim the kynge of Juda him selfe, with all the prysoners of Juda (that are caryed vn to Babylon) euen in to this place, sayethe the Lorde, for I wyl breake the yoke of the king of Babylon.

Then the Prophet Jeremye gaue answere vnto the Prophet Hananiah, before the preestes, and before all the people that were present in the house of the Lorde. And ỹ Prophet Jeremye sayd: Amen. The Lorde do that, and graunt the thynge whiche thou hast Prophecied: that he maye bryngе agayne all the ornamentes of the Lordes house, and reserue al the prysoners frome Babylon in to the place. Neuerthelesse harken thou also what I will saye, that thou and al the people may heare: The Prophetes that were before vs in times passe, whiche prophecied of warre or trouble, or pestylence, eyther of yeare vpon manye nations and greate kyngdomes were proued by this, (yf God had sende them in verye dede) whē the thing came to passe, which that Pro phet tolde before.

And Hananiah the Prophet toke ỹ cheyne from the Prophet Jeremyes necke, and brake it, and with that sayd Hananiah that all the people might heare: Thus hathe the Lorde spoken: Euen so wyll I breake the yoke of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon, frome the necke of all nations, yea and that within this two yere. And so the Prophete Jeremye went his waye.

Nowe after that Hananiah the Prophete had taken the cheyne from the Prophete Jeremies necke, and broken it: The worde of the Lorde came vnto the Prophete Jeremye saynge: Go and tell Hananiah these wordes: Thus sayth the Lorde: Thou hast broke the cheyne of wod, but in stede of wod thou shalt make chaynes of yron. For thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: I wyll put a yoke of yron vpon the necke of all this people, that they maye serue Nabuchodono-sor the kyng of Babylon, yea and so shal they do. And I wyl gyue him the beestes in the felde. Then sayd the Prophet Jeremye vnto that Prophet Hananiah: Heare me (I praye the) Hananiah: The Lorde hathe not sente the, but thou bringest this people in to false byleefe. And therfore thus sayethe the Lorde: beholde, I wyll send the out of the land, and within a yere thou shalte dye, bicause thou hast falsely spoken agaynst the Lorde. So Ha nanah the Prophet died the same yere in the seuenth moneth.

¶ The Epystle of Jeremye, sent vnto them that were in captyuytye in Babylon. He prophecyeth they should returne from captyuytye after three score and ten yeares. He prophecyeth the destruction of the kynge and of the people that remayned in Jerusa-lem. He threteneth two Prophetes that seduced the people. The death of Semeiah the Nehela-myte is prophecyed.

CAPI. XXIX.

THis is the coppye of the letter, that Jere-mye the Prophet sent from Jerusalem vnto the prysoners: the Senatours preestes, Prophetes, and al the people whom Nabuchodonosor hadde ledde vnto Babylon after that tyme that kynge Jechoniah, and his queene, his chamberlaynes the prynces of Juda and Jerusalem, the workemasters of Jerusalem were departed thyther. Whiche letter Elasah the sonne of Saphan and Ga-mariah the sonne of Helkiah dyd beare, whom Sedechias ỹ kyng of Juda sente vnto Babylon to Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon. These were the wordes of Jere-myes letter:

Thus hathe the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israell spoken vnto all the prysoners that were ledde frome Jerusalem vnto Babylon: buylde your houses to dwell therin: plante you gardens, that ye maye enioye the frutes therof: take you wyues to beare you sonnes and doughters: prouyde wyues for youre sonnes, and husbandes for your doughters, that they maye getте sonnes and doughters, and that ye maye multiplye there. Laboure not to be fewe, but seke after peace, and pro-sperite of the citye wherin ye be prysoners, & praye vnto God for it. For in the peace therof shall your peace be. For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israell: Let not those Prophetes and sothesayers that be amonge you, disceyue you: and marke not your owne dreames. For why, they preache you lyes in my name, and I haue not sente them, sayeth the Lorde.

But thus sayth the Lorde: When ye haue fulfylled thre score and tenne yeres at Baby-lon, I wyll bryngе you home, and of myne owne goodnesse I wyll carye you hyther a-gayne vnto this place. For I knowe what I haue deuyled for you, sayth the Lorde. My thoughtes are to gyue you peace, and not trou ble (whiche I grue you all redye) and that ye myghte haue hope agayne. Ye shall crye vnto me, ye shall go and call vpon me, and I shall heare you. Ye shal seke me, and fynde me. Yea yf so be that ye seke me with your hole herte, I wyll be found of you (sayth the Lorde) and wil deliuer you out of pryson, and gather you togyther agayne out of all places wherin I haue scattered you, sayethe the Lorde: and wyll bryngе you agayne to the same place, from whence I caused you to be caried away captyue.

But where as ye saye, that God haue rayse-ed you vp prophetes at Babylon: thus hath the Lorde spoken (concernyng the kyng that sytteth in the stole of Dauid, and all the peo ple that dwelle in this citie, youre brethren that are not gone with you in to captiuitie.) Thus, I saye, speaketh the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, I wil send a swerde, hongre, and pe-stilence vpon them, and will make them lyke vnsauerely figges, that maye not be eaten for bitternesse. And I will persecute them with ỹ swerde, with hongre and with.

I wyll deliuer them vp to be vexed of all kyngdomes, to be cursed, abhorred, laughed to scorne, and put to confusion of all the peo-ple amonge whome I haue scattered them: and that bicause they haue not ben obedient vnto my commaundementes, saith the Lorde, whiche I sente vnto them by my seruauntes the Prophetes. I rose vp early, and sent vn-to them, but they wolde not heare, sayth the Lorde.

Heare therfore the worde of the Lorde, all ye prysoners, whom I sent from Jerusa-lem vnto Babylon: Thus hathe the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel spoken of Achab the sonne of Colaiah, and of Sedechias the sonne of Maasiah, which prophecye lyes vn to you in my name: Beholde, I wyll deliuer them in to the hand of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, that he may slee them be-fore youre eyes. And all the prysoners of Ju-da that are in Babylon, shall take vpon them this terme of cursynge, and saye: Now God wo vnto the, as he dyd vnto Sedechias and Achab, whome the kynge of Babylon rosted in the fyre, bycause they synned shamefully in Israell.

For they haue not only defiled their neigh-bours wyues, but also preached lyinge wor-des in my name, which I haue not commaun ded them. This I testify and allure, sayth the Lorde. But as for Semeiah the Nehelampte thou shalt speake vnto him: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Bicause thou hast sealed letteres vnder thy name, vn-to all the people that is at Jerusalem, and to Sophoniah the sonne of Maasiah the preest: yea, and vnto all the preestes: wherin thou wrytest thus vnto him: The Lord hath ordeined the to be preest in stede of Joiada the preest, that shouldest be the ouerse in the house of the Lorde aboue all Prophetes, and pri-soners, and that thou mightest put them in pryson, or in the stockes. Howe happeneth it then, that thou hast not reproued Jeremy of Anathoth, whiche neuer ceaseth of his pro-phecyinge?

And beside all this, he hath sent vs worde vnto Babylon, and tolde vs playnely, that oure captiuitie shall longe endure: that we we shulde buylde vs houses to dwell therin, and to plante vs gardens that we maye en-ioye the frutes therof. Whiche letter Sopho niah the preest dyd rede, and let Jeremye the Prophete heare it.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremye, sayinge: Sende worde to all them that are in captiuitie, on this maner: Thus hath the Lorde spoken concerning Semeiah the Nehelampte: Bycause that Semeiah hath prophecied vnto you without my com-mission, and broughte you in to a false hope, therfore thus the Lorde dothe certifye you: Beholde, I will vysyte Semeiah the Nehe-lampte, and his seed: so that none of his shal remayne amonges this people, and none of them shall se the good that I will do for this people, sayth the Lorde. For he hath preached falsely of the Lorde.

¶ The retourne of the people from Babylon. God by his chastenynge sheweth that the people is synfull. The Destruction of the enemyes of Israel.

CAPI. XXX.

A These are the wordes that the Lorde shewed unto Jeremye, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel: Write up diligentlye all the wordes that I haue spoken unto the, in a boke. For loo, the tyme commeth (sayth the Lord) that I wyl bryng agayne the prysoners of my people of Israell and Juda, sayth the Lorde: For I wyll restore them unto the lande, that I gaue to theyr fathers, and they shall haue it in possession.
Agayne, these wordes spake the Lorde concerning Israel and Juda: thus sayth ỷ Lord:
We heare a terrible crye, feare and disquietnesse. For what els dothe this signifie, that I se? Namely that all stronge men smyte every man his hande upon his loynes, as a woman in the payne of her travayle. Who ever sawe
a man travayle with chylde? Enquyre ther-Jeremi.xiii.d after, and se. Yea, all their faces are marveylous pale.
Alas for this day, which is so dredful that Joel.ii.c. none may be lykened unto it: and alas for ỷ Amos.v.c. tyme of Jacobs trouble, from the whiche he Sophon.i.d shall yet be delivered. For in that daye, sayth
B the Lorde, I wyll take his yoke frome thy necke, and breake thy bondes. They shall no more serve straunge goddes under him, but they shall do servyce unto God their Lorde,
and to David their kyng, whom I wil rayse
up unto them. *And as for the, o my servaunt Esaye.xliiii.a Jacob, feare not (sayth the Lorde) and be not Luke.i.g afrayde, o Israel. For lo, I wil helpe the also Eze.xxxiiii.d frome farre, and thy seed frome the lande of Jerem.xlvi.g their captivitie.
And Jacob shall turne agayne, he shall be in rest, and haue a prosperous lyfe, and no mã shall make him afrayde. For I am with the,
to helpe the, sayth the Lorde. And though I shall destroye all the people amonges whom I haue scattered the, yet wyll I not destroye
the, but correcte the, and that with discretion. For I knowe that thou arte in no wyse without faute. Therfore thus sayth the Jeremye.x.d Lorde: I am sory for thy hurt and woundes.
Exo.xxxiiii.a There is no man to medle with thy cause, or Nahum.i.a. to bynde up thy woundes: there maye no man helpe the.
All thy lovers haue forgotten the, and care
C nothynge for the. For I haue gyven the a cruell stroke, and chastened the roughly: and that for the multytude of thy mysdedes, for thy synnes haue had the over hand. Why ma Jerem.xiii.d kest thou mone for thy harme? I my self haue pitie of thy sorowe, but for the multitude of thy mysdedes and synnes, I haue doone this unto the.
And therfore all they that devour the, shal Jere.ii.a.xx.d be devoured, and all thyne enemyes shall be led in to captivitie. All they ỷ make the waste shal be waste them selues: and al those that rob the, wil I make also to be robbed. For I wyl gyve the thy helth agayn, and make thy woundes hole, sayth the Lorde: bicause they reputed the as one caste awaye and despysed, O Syon.
D For thus saythe the Lorde: beholde, I Num.xxiiii.a wyll sette up Jacobs tentes agayne, and defende his dwellynge place. The citye shall be buylded in her olde estate, and the houses shall haue theyr ryght foundacion. And oute of them shal go thankesgyving, and the voice of ioye.
I wil multiply them, and they shal not minish: I shal endue them with honour, and no man shal subdue them. Their children shal be as afore tyme, and their congregacion shal cõ tinue in my syght. And al those that vexe thẽ wyll I visyte. Michea.v.
A capitayne also shall come of them, and a prynce shall sprynge out from the myddest of them: hym wyll I chalenge to my selfe, and he shall come unto me. For what is he, that Joan.vi.
gyveth over his herte o come unto me, sayth
the Lorde?
Ye shall be my people also, and I wyll Jeremi.
be youre God. Beholde, on the other syde xxiii.a.
shall the wrathe of the Lorde breake oute Jerem.
as a stormye water, as a myghtye whyrle and.xxii.
wynde: and shall fall upon the heeds of the ungodly.
The terrible displeasure of the Lorde shall not leave of, untyll he haue done and performed the intent of his herte, which in the latter dayes ye shall understande. At the same tyme, sayth the Lorde, shall I be the God of all the generacions of Israell, and they shall be my people.

¶ The propheceyth that the people of Israel shall be restored agayne unto theyr prosperytye. To be remitted frome synne is the gyfte of God. The byrth of Chryste is propheceyed. All the wycked shall dye in theyr wyckednes. The newe Testament and covenaunt is propheceyed. The Chrysten are taught and instructe of the Lorde. Our synnes shall so be remitted, that they shall not ones be thought on. God promyseth that he wyll caste of the Jewes. The buyldynge agayne of Jerusalem.

CAPI. XXXI.

Thus saythe the Lorde: The people of Israell, whiche escaped in the wylder- Num.
nesse from the swerde, founde grace to come in to their rest. Even so shall the Lorde nowe also appeare unto me frome farre, and ii.Cor.
saye: I love the with an everlastynge love, Ephe.
therfore do I sprede my mercye before the.
I wyll repayre the agayne (O thou dough-ter of Israell) that thou mayste be fast and sure. Thou shalte take thy tabrettes a-gayne, and goo forth with them that lede the daunce.
Thou shalt plant vynes agayne upon the hylles of Samaria, and the grape gatherers
shal plant and synge.
And when it is tyme the watchemen upon the mounte Ephraim shall crye: Aryse, let Esa.
us goo unto Syon to oure Lorde God, for thus saythe the Lorde: Rejoyce with glad-nesse, bicause of Jacob, crye unto the heed of B
the Gentyles: speake out, sing, and say: The Lorde shall deliver his people, the remnaunt of Israell, and make them hole. Beholde,
I wyll brynge them agayne from out of the North lande, and gather them from the endes of the

of the worlde, with the blynde and lame that are amonge them, with the women that be greate with chylde, and suche as be also delivered: and the company of them that come agayne, shall be greate.
They departed frome hence in hevynesse,
but with ioye wyll I brynge theym hyther agayne. I wyll lede them by the ryvers of water in a straight waye, where they shall [illegible] not stomble: For I wyll be Israels father [illegible] and Ephraim shall be my fyrstborne.
Heare the worde of the Lorde, O ye Gentiles, preach in the Iles, that lye farre of, and say: he that hath scatered Israel, shal gather him to gyther agayne, and shall kepe hym as a shepherde dothe his flocke. For the Lorde shall redeme Jacob, and ryd him frome the hande of the vyolent. And they shall come, & reioyce upon the hyl of Syon, and shal haue plentuousnes of goodes, whiche the Lorde
shal gyve them: Namely, wheat, wyne, oyle younge shepe & calues. And theyr conscyence shal be as a wel watred garden, for they shal
no more be hongry.
Then shal the maide reioyce in the daunce,
C yea both yonge and olde folkes. For I wyll turne their sorowe in to gladnes, and wyll comfort them and make theym ioyfull, even frome their hertes. I wyl poure plenteousnes upon the hertes of the priestes, and my people
shal be satisfied wt good thiges, saith ỷ Lord.
Thus sayth the Lorde: *The voyce of [illegible] hevynes, weepynge and lamencion came into heaven: even of Rachel mournynge for her chyldren, & wolde not be comforted because they were awaye.
But now sayth the Lorde: leave of from wepynge and cryinge, withholde thyne eyes from teares, for thy laboure shall be rewarded saythe the Lorde. And they shall come agayne oute of the lande of theyr enemy-es: Yea even thy posteritie shall haue conso-lacion in this (sayth the Lorde) that thy chil dren shall come agayne in to theyr owne
lande.
Moreover I herde Ephraim, that was led awaye captyve, complayne on this maner: O Lorde, thou hast correct me, and thy chastenynge haue I receyved, as an untamed calfe.
Converte thou me, and I shall be converted, for thou arte my Lorde God: Yea as soone as thou turnest me, I shall refourme my selfe: and when I understande, I shall smyte upon my thyghe. For verelye I haue commytted shamefull thynges: O lette my youthe beare this reprofe and confusyon.
D Upon this complaynt, I thoughte thus
by my self: is not Ephraim my deare sonne?
Is he not the chylde, with whom I haue had all myrth and pastyme? For sence the tyme that I fyrst communed with him, I haue him ever in remembraunce: therfore my very hert dryveth me unto him, gladly and lovyngly
wil I haue mercye upon him, sayth ỷ Lorde.
Set the watchmen, provyde teachers for the,
set thyne herte upon the rightway, that thou shuldest walke, and turne agayne (O thou doughter of Israel) turne agayne to these cytyes of thine. Howe longe wilte thou go a-straye, O thou shrinkynge doughter? For the Lorde wyll worke a newe thing upon earth
A woman shall compasse a man.
For thus saythe the Lorde of Hostes the E God of Israell: It wyll come therto, that when I haue brought Juda out of captivyte, these wordes shall be herde in the lande &
in his cityes: The Lorde, which is the fayre brydegrome of ryghtuousnesse, make the fruteful, O thou holy hill: And there shall dwell Juda, and all her cities, the shepherdes
and husbande men: For I shall fede the hon
grye soule, and refreshe all faynte hertes.
When I herd this I came agayne to my self,
and mused, lyke as I had bene waked out of a swete slepe.
Beholde (sayth the Lord) the dayes come,
that I wyl sowe the house of Israel and the house of Juda, with men and wt catel. Yea it shall come therto, that lyke as I haue gone aboute in tymes paste to rote theym oute, to scatre theym, to breake them downe, to de-stroye them and chasten them: Even so will I also go dylygently about, to buylde them up agayne and to plante theym saythe the Lorde.
Then shall it no more be sayde: the fa- Ezech.xviii.a
thers haue eaten a sowre grape, and the chil drens teth are set on edge: for every one shal dye for his owne mysdede, so that who so ea-teth a soure grape, his teeth shall be set on edge.
Beholde, the dayes come (sayth the Lorde) F that I wyl make a newe covenaunt with the house of Israel and with the house of Juda:
not after the covenaunt that I made with Hebre.x.d.
their fathers, when I toke them by the hand Esaye.li.b.
and led them out of the land of Egipt: which Jere.xxiii.b
covenaunt they brake, wherfore I punysshed and.xxx.a.
them sore, sayth the Lorde: But this shall be the covenaunte that I wyll make with the house of Israell after those dayes, saythe
the Lorde: I wyll plante my lawe in the inwarde partes of them, and wryte it in their hertes, and wyll be their God and they shall
be my people.
And frome thence forth shall no man teach his neyghboure or his brother, & say: know
the Lorde: But they shall all knowe me, frome the lowest unto the hyghest, sayth the Lorde. For I wyll forgyve their mysdedes, Act.x.g.
and wyll never remembre their synnes anye
more.
Thus sayth he the Lorde which gave the sunne to be a lyght for the daye, and ỷ moone
and sterres to shyne in the nyghte: whiche moveth ỷ see, so that the floudes therof waxe
fearce: his name is the Lorde of Hostes.
Lyke as this ordynaunce shall never be takẽ out of my syght, sayth the Lord: So shall the sede of Israell never cease, but alwaye be a people before me.
Moreover, thus saythe the Lorde: lyke as the heaven above can not be measured, and G as the foundacions of the earth beneth may not

not be sought out: So wyll I also not cast out the hole seed of Israell, for that they haue committed, sayeth the Lorde. Beholde, the dayes come sayeth the Lorde, that the cy-tie of the Lorde shall be enlarged from the towre of Hananeel, vnto the gate of the corner wall. From thence shall the right measure be taken before her vnto the hyll top, of Gareb, and shal come about Gaath, and the hole valley of the deed karcases, and of the asshes, & all Ceremoth vnto the broke of Cedron: and from thence vnto the corner of the horsegate towarde the East, where as the Sanctuary of the Lorde also shall be sette.
And when it is nowe buylded and set vp of this fashyō it shall neuer be broke, nor cast
downe any more,

¶ Ieremye is cast in to prison, bicause he prophe-cyed that the cytie shoulde be taken of the kynge of Babylon. By the felde that Ieremye bought at the commaundement of the Lorde, is sygnifyed, that the people shoulde come agayne to theyr owne pos-sessyon. The people of God are his enheritaunce, and he is theyr Lorde. To feare God is Gods gyfte, so thentent that synnes maye be eschewed.

CAPI. XXXII.

THese wordes spake the Lorde vnto Je remye, in the tenth yere of Sedechias kynge of Juda, whiche was the .xviij.
yere of Nabuchodonosor, what tyme as the kinge of Babilons hoste layed syege vnto Jerusalem. But Ieremye the Prophet lay bounde in the courte of the prison, which was in the kynge of Judaes house: where Sedechias
the kynge of Juda cauſed him to be layed, because he hadde prophecyed of this maner: Thus sayethe the Lorde: Beholde: I wyl de lyuer this cytye in to the handes of the kyng of Babylon whiche shall take it. As for Sede-chias the kyng of Juda, he shall not be able to escape the Caldees, but surely he shal come in to the handes of the kynge of Babylon:
which shal speke with him mouth to mouth
and one of thē shall loke an other in the face.
And Sedechias shal be caryed vnto Babilō,
and there shall he be, vntyll the tyme that I vysyt hym, sayeth the Lorde. But yf thou ta-kest in hande to fyghte agaynste the Caldees
thou shalte not prospere.

And Ieremye sayde: Thus hath the Lord spoken vnto me: Beholde, Hananeel the son of Selum thyne vncles sonne shall come vnto the, and requyre the to redeme the land, that lyeth in Anathoth vnto thy selfe: for
by reason of kynred it is thy parte to redeme
it, and to bye it out.

And to Hananeel myne vncles son came to me in the courte of the prison (accordynge to the worde of the Lorde) and sayde vnto me: Bye my lande (I prayde the) that lyeth
in Anathoth in the countrey of Ben Jamin:
for by heritage thou hast ryghte to loose it out for thy selfe, therfore redeme it. Then I perceyued, that this was the commaundemēt
of the Lorde, and so I loosed the lande frome Hananeel of Anathoth, myne vncles sonne,
and weyed him there the mony: euen seuen
sycles, and ten syluer pens.

I cauſed him also to make me a wryting and to seale it, and called recorde therby, and weyed him there the mony vpon the waigh-tes.

So I toke the euydence with the coppe
(when it was orderlye sealed and red ouer)
I gaue the euydence vnto Baruch ſ sonne of Neriah the sonne of Maasiah in the syght of Hananeel my cosen, and in the presēce of the wytnesses, that be named in the euydēce, and before all the Jewes that were therby in the courte of the prison.

I charged Baruch also before them saye-inge: the Lorde of Hoostes ſ God of Israel cōmaundeth the, to take this sealed euydēce with the coppe, and to lay it in an erthen bessell, that it maye longe contynue.

For the Lorde of Hoostes the God of Isra el hath determyned, that houses, feldes and vyneyardes shall be possessed agayne in this lande.

Now when I had delyuered the euydēce
vnto Baruch the son of Neriah, I beloughte
ſ Lord, sayeng: O Lorde God: It is thou ſ hast made heauen and earth with thy greate power and hygh arme, and there is nothyng to harde for the. Thou shewest mercye vpon thousandes, thou recompensest the wickednes of the fathers, into the bosome of ſ children that come after them

Thou arte the great and myghty God, whose name is the Lorde of Hoostes: greate
in counsell, and infinite in thought: Thyne eyes loke vpon all the wayes of mens chyldren, to rewarde cuerye one after his waye and accordynge to the fruites of his inuēcions.

Thou hast done greate tokens and wō ders in the lande of Egypte (as we se this daye) vpon the people of Israell an vpon thole men: to make thy name greate, as it is come to passe this daye:

Thou hast brought thy people of Israel out of the lande of Egypte, with tokens,
with wonders, with a myghtye hande,
with a stretched oute arme, and with greate terrybleneſſe: and hast gyuen theym this lande, lyke as thou haddest promysed vnto theyr fathers: Namelye that thou wouldst
gyue them a lande, that floweth with mylke and honye.

Nowe when they came therin, and possessed it, they folowed not thy voyce, and walked not in thy lawe: but all that thou commaundedest them to do, that haue they not done, and therfore come all these plages vpon
them.

Beholde, there are bulwarkes made nowe against the cyty to take it: and it shal be won of the Caldees that besiege it, with sweorde, ſ
hongre and deth, and loke what thou hast pro
phesyed, that same shall come vpon them.

For lo, all thinges are present vnto the:
yet sayest thou vnto me (O Lorde God) and commaundest me, that I shall lose a pece of lande vnto my selfe, and take witnesses ther-to: and yet in the meane season the cytye is delyuered in to the power of the Caldees.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto
me, sayinge: Beholde, I am the Lorde God of all fleshe, is there any thyng then to hard for me? Therfore thus sayde the Lorde: be-holde, I shall delyuer this cytye in to the power of the Caldees, and in to the power of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, they shall take it. For the Caldees shall come, and wynne this cytye, and sette fyre
vpon it, and burne it: with the gorgyous houses, in whose parlers they haue made sacrifyce vnto Baal, and poured dyynckofferin-ges vnto straunge goddes to prouoke me vnto wrathe.

For synge the childzen of Israel, and the childzen of Juda haue wrought wyckednes
before me euer from theyr youth, what haue they elles done, but prouoked me with the workes of their owne handes? sayethe the Lorde.

Or what hathe this citie bene els, but a prouokynge of my wrath, euer sence the daye
that I buylded it vnto this houre? Wherin
I cast it out of my syght, because of the great blasphempes of the childzen of Israell and Juda, whiche they haue done to prouoke me:
yea they, their kynges, their princes, their preestes, their prophetes, hole Juda, and all the citezins of Jerusalem.

When I rose vp early, and taught them
and instructe them, they turned theyr backes to me, and not their faces. They wolde not heare, to be reformed and correcte. They haue sette their goddes in the house, that is halowed vnto my name, to defyle it. They haue buylded hyghe places for Baal in the valley of the childzen of Hennom, to bowe their sonnes & dougters vnto Moloch: whiche I neuer commaunded them, neither came it euer in my thoughte, to make Juda synne
with suche abhompnacion.

Moreouer thus hathe the Lorde God of Israel spoken, concernynge this cytye, which (as ye youre selues confesse) shall be delyue-red into the hande of the kynge of Babilon,
when it is wonne with the sweorde, with hon
ger and with pestylence. Beholde, I wyll gather them to gyther from all landes, wherin
I haue scatered thē in my wrath, in my fear-full and greate displeasure: and wyll bryng thē agayne vnto this place, where they shall dwel safelye. And they shal be my people, and I wyll be theyr God.

And I will gyue them one herte and one
waye, that they maye feare me all the dayes of their lyfe, that they and their childzen after them maye prospere. And I wyll sette vp an euerlastyng couenaunt with them Name-lye: that I wyll neuer ceasse to doo theym good, and that I wyll put my feare in their hertes, so that they shal not run awaye from
me.

Yea I wyll haue a lust and pleasure to do them good, and faythfully to plant them in this lande with my hole herte, and with all my soule.

For thus sayth the Lorde: lyke as I haue brought all this great plage vpon this people: so will I also bryng vpon them all the good, that haue I promysed them. And men shall haue their possessions in this lande, whereof ye saye nowe, that it shall neither be inhabited of people ne of catell, but be delyuered in to the handes of the Caldees: Yea
lande shal be bought for mony, and euydēces made therupon and sealed before witnesses in the countrey of Ben Jamin, and rounde a-boute Jerusalem: in the cities of Juda, in the cities that are vpon the mountaynes, and in them that lye beneth, yea & in the cities that are in the desert. For I wyl bryng their prysoners hither agayne, sayth the Lorde.

¶ The Prophete is monyshed of the Lorde, to praye for the delyuerance of the people, whiche the Lorde promyseth. God forgyueth synnes, and doeth graciously to the people, for his owne re-nowme. Of the kyngdom of Chryst. The kyngdome of Chryste in the churche shall neuer be ended.

CAPI. XXXIII.

MOreouer the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremy on this maner, when he was yet bounde in the courte of the prison: Thus sayethe the Lorde, which ful-fylleth the thyng that he speaketh, the Lord which performeth the thing that he taketh
in hande euen he, whose name is the Lorde:
thou hast * cryed vnto me, and I haue herde
the: I hue shewed greate an hyghe thynges, whiche were vnknowen vnto you.

Thus (I saye) spake the Lorde God of Israel, concernynge the houses of this citie, &
the houses of the kynges of Juda: that they shall be broken thorowe the ordynaunce and weapons, when the Caldees come to besiege them: and they shall be filled with the deed karcases of men, whome I wyll slaye in my wrathe and displeasure: when I turne my face frome this cytye because of all her wyckednesse. Beholde, (sayethe the Lorde) I wyll heale theyr wounds and make theym hole,
I will open them the treasure of peace and truth.

And I wyll returne the captyuyte of Juda and Israel: and wyl set them vp agayne
as they were afore, From all myscdedes (wher in they haue offended agaynste me) I wyll clense them: And al their blasphempes whtche they haue done agaynst me, when they re garded me not, I will forgyue them.

And this shall get me a name, a prayse &
honoure, amonge all people of the earthe, whiche shall heare all the good, that I wyll
shewe vnto them: yea they shall be afrayed and astonyed at all the good dedes and be-nefytes, that I wyll do for them. Moreouer thus sayethe the Lorde: in this place, wher-of

of ye laye that it shall be a wylderneſſe, wher in neither people ne catel shall dwell: in like manner in the cytyes of Juda and without Jerusalem (which also shal be so voyde, that neither people ne catteil shall dwell there) shall the voyce of gladneſſe be herde againe, the voyce of the bydgrome and of the bryde the voyce of them that shall synge: Prayse the Lorde of Hostes, for he is louynge and his mercye endureth for euer, and the voyce of them that shal offre vp gyftes in the house of the Lorde. For I wyll reſtore the captyuyte of this lande, as it was afore, sayethe the Lorde. Thus sayethe the Lorde of Hostes Ie shall come yet therto, that in this lande, whiche is voyde from men and catell, and in all the cytyes of the lande, there shall be set vp shepherdes cotages in the cityes vpō the mountaynes: and in the cytyes that lye vpō the playne, and in the deſerte.

In the lande of Benjamin, in the feldes of Jerusalem, and in the cytyes of Juda shal the shepe be nombred agayne, vnder the hād of him, that telleth them, sayethe the Lorde.

E Beholde, the tyme commeth, sayeth the Lord, Jere. xiii. a. Jere. xxiii. a. that I wyll performe that good thyng, whiche I haue promyſed vnto the house of Isra el and to the house of Juda. In those dayes, and at the same tyme, I wyll brynge forthe vnto Dauid, the braunche of ryghteouſnes, & he shall do equytie and righteouſneſſe in the land. In those dayes shall Juda be helped, & Jerusalem shall dwell safe, and he that shal call her is euen God our ryghteuous maker. For thus the Lorde promyſeth: Dauid shal neuer want one, to syt vpon the stole of the house of Israel: neither shall the preestes & Leuytes want one to offre alwaye before me burnt offrynges, to kyndle the meatoffrynges, and to prepare the sacrifyces.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremye after this maner: Thus sayth the D Gene. viii. d Jere. xxiii. a. Lorde: Haue the couenaunt whiche I haue made with daye and nyght be broken, that ther shulde not be daye and night in due season? Then mayst my couenaunt also be broke whiche I made with Dauid my seruaunte, and so he not to haue a sonne to reigne in his Throne. So shall also the preeſtes and Leuites neuer fayle, but serue me. For lyke as the Gene. xv. a and xxii. c. sterres of heauen maye not be nombred, neither the sande of the see measured: so will I multyplye the sede of Dauid my seruaunte, and of the Leuites my mynyſters.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lord came to Jeremy, sayinge: Vnderstondeſt thou not what this people speaketh? Two kyngdoms (saye they) hath the Lorde chosen, and those same two hath he calle awaye. For so farre is my people come, that they haue no hope to come to eyther any more, to be one people agayne. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: If I haue made no couenaunt with daye & nyght, and gyuen no statutes vnto heuen and earthe: then wyll I also caste awaye the sede of Dauid my seruaunte: so that I wyll take no prynce out of his sede, to rule the posteritee of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. But yet I will turne agayne their captiuitie, & be mercifull vnto them.

The threteneth that the cytie, and kynge Sedechias also, shall be gyuen in to the handes of the kynge of Babylon. He rebuketh them that brought backe of theyr brethren into captyuyte, that were pardoned to go at theyr libertye.

CAPI. XXXIIII.

THese are the wordes whiche the Lord I spake vnto Jeremy, what tyme as Nabuchonosor the kynge of Babylon, and all his Hostes (out of al the kingdomes that were vnder his power) and all his people, fought agaynste Jerusalem, and al the cities therof. Thus sayth the Lord God of Israel: Goo, and speake to Sedechias the kynge of Juda, and tell him: The Lorde sendeth the this worde: Beholde, I wyll delyuer this citie in to the hande of the kynge of Babylon, he shall burne it, and thou shalte not escape his handes, but shalte be led awaye prisoner, and delyuered in to his power. Thou shalte loke the kynge of Babylon in the face, & he shall speake with the, mouth to mouth, then shalte thou go to Babylon. Yet heare the worde of the Lorde, O Sedechias thou kynge of Juda: Thus sayethe the Lorde vnto the: Thou shalte not be slayne with the sweарde, but shalt dye in peare. Lyke as thy forefathers the kynges, thy progenitours, were brente: so shalte thou be brent also, and in the mournyng they shall saye: Oh Lord. For thus haue I determyned, sayethe the Lorde.

Then spake Jeremye the Prophethe all these wordes vnto Sedechias kynge of Juda in Jerusalem: what tyme as the kynge of Babylons hoste besieged Jerusalem, and the remnaunte of the cytyes: Namely, Lachis & Azecah, whiche yet remayned of the stronge defenced cytyes of Juda.

These are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy the prophet, when Sedechias was agreed with all the people at Jerusalem, that there shulde be proclaymed a lybertye: so that euerye man shulde let his seruaunt and handmayde go free, Hebrue and Hebruesse, and no Jewe to holde his brother as a bonde man. Nowe as they had consented euen so they were obedyent, and let them go free. But afterwarde they repented, and toke agayne the seruauntes and handmaydens, whom they had let go free, and so made the bonde agayne.

For the whiche cause the worde of the L Lorde came vnto Jeremye from the Lorde him selfe, sayinge: Thus sayethe the Lorde God of Israel: * I made a couenaūte with your fathers, when I brought them oute of Egypte (that they shulde no more be bonde men, sayinge: When seuen yeres are out, euery man shall let his bought seruaunte an Hebrue go free, yf ye haue serued him sixe yeres. But youre fathers obeyed me not and hearkened not vnto me. As for you, ye were nowe turned, and dyd ryghte before me, in ye proclaymed, euery man to let his neighboure go free, & in that ye made a couenaunt before me, in the temple that beareth my name: But yet ye haue turned youre selues agayne and blaspheмed my name: In this, that euery man hathe requyred his seruaunte and bondmayden agayne, whom ye had let goo gayne and free, and compelled them to serue you agayne, and to be youre bonde men. And therfore thus sayethe the Lorde: ye haue not obeyed me, euery man to proclayme tredome vnto his brother and neighboure: wherfore I wyll call you vnto a tredome, sayethe the Lorde: euen vnto the sweарde, to the pestilence, and to honger, and wil make you to be plaged in all the kyngdomes of the earthe. Yea those men that haue broke my couenaūte and not kepte the wordes of the appoyntmen, which they made before me: when they hewed the calfe in two, and wyen there wer thorowe the two halfes therof: The Pryn ces of Juda, the Prynces of Jerusalem, the gelded men, the Preestes and all the people of the lande, whiche went thorow te two syes of the calfe. Those men wil I gyue in to the powre of their enemyes, and into the handes of them that folowe vpon their lyues.

And their deed bodyes shall be meat for the foules of the ayre, and beſtes of the feld As for Sedechias the kynge of Juda and his Prynces, I wyll delyuer them into the power of their enemyes, and of them that desyre to slaye them, and into the hande of the kynge of Babylons hoste, whiche nowe is departed from you: But thorowe my commaundement (sayethe the Lorde) they shall come agayne before this citie, they shall fyght agaynste it, wynne it, and burne it. Moreouer I wyll laye the cytyes of Juda so waste, that no man shall dwell therin.

The propoundeth the obedyence of the Rechabytes, and therby confoundeth the pryde of the Jewes. The commaundement of Jonadab, the father of the Rechabytes. He threteneth punyshment vnto the rebellyous Jewes. He promyseth prosperyte vnto the Rechabytes, for theyr obedyence vnto their father.

CAPI. XXXV.

THe wordes whiche the Lorde spake A vnto Jeremye, in the dayes of Joakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda are these: Goo vnto the house of the Rechabites, and call them oute, and bryng them to the house of the Lorde in to some commodyous place, and gyue them wyne to drynke. Then toke I Jazanlah the sonne of Jeremye, the sonne of Habazinniah, & his brethren, and all his sonnes, and the hole houshold of the Rechabites: and brought them in to the house of the Lorde, into the closet of the children of Hanan the sonne of Jegedaliah the man of God: whiche was by the closet of ꝑ Princes, that is aboue the closet of Maasiah the sonne of Selum, whiche is the kepar of the treasurye. And before the sonnes of the B kynred of the Rechabites, I set portes full of wyne, and cuppes, and sayde vnto them: Drynke wyne. But they sayde: we drynke no wyne, for Jonadab the sonne of Rechab oure father commaunded vs sayinge: ye and youre sonnes shall neuer drynke wyne, buyld no houses, sowe no sede, plante no vynes, yea ye shall haue no vynyardes: but for all youre tyme ye shall dwell in tentes, that ye maye lyue longe in the lande wherin ye be straungers. Jeremy. xxxv. d

Thus haue we obeyed the cōmaundemēt of Jonadab the sonne of Rechab our father in all that he hathe charged vs, and so we drinke no wyne all oure lyfe longe: we, nor oure wyues, our sonnes, and our doughters. Neither buylde we any house to dwell therin, we haue also amonges vs neither vynyardes, ne ozne land to sowe: but we dwel in tentes, we obey, and do accozding vnto all that Jonadab oure father commaunded vs.

But nowe when Nabuchodonosor the C kynge of Babylon came vp in to the land, we sayde come, let vs go to Jerusalem, that we maye escape the hoste of the Caldees and the Assirians: & so we dwell nowe at Jerusalem. Then came the worde of the Lord vnto Jeremye sayinge: thus sayth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israell: Go and tell hole Juda and al ꝑ inhabitauntes of Jerusale: Will yenet be reformed, to obey my wordes? sayth the Lorde. The wordes which Jonadab the sonne of Rechab commaunded his sonnes, that they shulde drynke no wyne, are fast and surely kepte: for vnto this daye they drynke no wine, but obey their fathers commaundement. But as for me, I haue stande vp early, Jere. xvii. d xxv. a. I haue spoken vnto you, and gyuen you earnest warning: and yet haue ye not bene obedyent vnto me. Yea I haue sent my seruauntes all the prophetes vnto you, I rose vp early, & sent you worde, sayinge: O turne you, euery man from his wicked waye: amende youre lyues, and go not after straunge goddes, to worshyp them: that ye may contynue in the lande, which I haue gyuen vnto you & your fathers, but ye wolde neither heare me, ne so lowe me.

The children of Jonadab Rechabs sonne D haue stedfastly kepte their fathers commaundement, that he gaue them, but this people is not obedyent vnto me. And therfore thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I wyl bryng vpon Juda and vpon euery one that dwelleth in Jerusalem, all the trouble that I haue deuysed agaynste them. For I haue spoken vnto the, but they wolde not folowe: I haue called vnto them, neuerthelesse they wolde gyue me no answere. Jere my also spake vnto the houshold of the Rechabites: Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israel: For as moche as ye haue obeyed ꝑ commaundement of Jonadab your father, and kept all his precepes, and done accozdynge vnto all that he hath bydde you: Therfore thus sayeth the Lord of Hostes, the God of Israel: Jonadab the sonne of Rechab shall Prouer. xx. c. Capy. xlv. b Jeremy. vii. b Jere. xxxiii. e shal not fayle, but haue one out of his stocke, to stande alwaye before me.

¶ Baruch wryteth (as Jeremye indyteth) the booke of the curses agaynst Juda and Israel. He is sent with the boke vnto the people, and redeth it before them al. he is called before the rulers, and redeth it before them also. The rulers shewe vnto the kynge the wordes of the boke. Jehudi taketh the boke, and readeth a lytle of it, and after casteth it in the fyre. There is an other wryten at the commaundement of the Lorde.

CAPI. XXXVI.

A IN the.iiij. yere of Joakim ỹ sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, came this worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremy sayinge: Take a boke
Jeremi.xxx.a and wryte therin al the wordes, that I haue spoken to the, to Israel, to Juda, and to all the people frome the tyme that I beganne for to speake vnto the (in thy raygne of Josiah) vnto this daye. That when the house of Juda heareth of the plage, whiche I haue deuysed for the, they may peraduenture turne Jere.xviii.a euery man from his wicked way, that I maye forgyue their offences and synnes.

Then dyd Jeremye call Baruch the Jeremi.xlv.a sonne of Neriah, & Baruch wrote in the boke at the mouthe of Jeremy, all the wordes of the Lorde, whiche he had spoken vnto him. And Jeremy commaunded Baruch, sayinge:
B I am in pryson, so that I maye not come in to the house of the Lorde: therfore go thou thyther, and reade the boke, that thou hast wrytten at my mouth: Namely, the wordes of the Lord, & rede them in the Lordes house vpon the fastyng daye: ỹ the people, hole Juda, and all they that come out of the cytyes maye heare. Peraduenture they wyll praye meekly before the face of the Lord, and turne euerye one from his wycked waye. For great is the wrathe and displeasure, that the Lord hath taken agaynst this people.

So Baruch the sonne of Neriah dyd according vnto all that Jeremy the Prophete commaunded him, readynge the wordes of the Lord out of the boke in the Lordes house. And this was done in the fyfth yere of Joa-
Jone.iii.a kim the sonne of Josiah king of Juda, in the myneth moneth when it was commaunded that all the people of Jerusalem shulde faste, before the Lorde, and they also that were come frome the cytyes of Juda vnto Jerusalem.

Then red Baruch the wordes of Jeremye
C oute of the boke within the house of the Jere.xxvi.d Lord out of the treasurye of Gamariah the sonne of Saphan the Scrybe, which is beside the hygher lofte of the doze of the Lordes house: that al the people myght heare. Now when Micheah the sonne of Gamariah the sonne of Saphan had herde all the wordes of the Lord out of the boke, he went downe to the kynges palace into the Scribes chambre, for there al the princes were set: Elisama the Scrybe, Dalaiah the sonne of Semei, Elnathan the sonne of Acabor, Gamariah ỹ sonne of Saphan, Sedechias the sonne of Hananiah, with all the princes. And Michaeh tolde them all the wordes, that he herde Baruch rede oute of the boke before the people.

Then all the princes sent Jehudi the son
D of Nathaniah, the sonne of Selemiah, the sonne of Chusi, vnto Baruch, sayinge: Take in thine hande the boke, wherout thou hast red before all the people, and come. So Baruch the sonne of Neriah toke the boke in his hand, and came vnto them. And they sayd vnto him: Syt downe, & rede the boke that we may heare also. So Baruch red, that they myght here. Now whē they had herd al the wordes, they were abashed one vpō an other, and sayd vnto Baruch: We wyll certefye kynge of all these wordes. And they examyned Baruch, saying: tell vs, how diddest thou wryte all these wordes out of his mouth? Then Baruch answered them: He spake all these wordes vnto me with his mouthe, and I alone was with him, and wrote them in ỹ boke.

Then sayde the Princes vnto Baruch:
E Go thy waye, and byde the with Jeremye, so that no man knowe where ye be. And they went in to the courte. But they kepte the boke in the chambre of Elisama the Scrybe, and tolde the kynge all the wordes that he myght heare. So the kynge sent Jehudi to fetche him the boke, which he brought out of Elisama the Scrybes chambre. And Jehudi red it, that the kynge and all the princes, which were about him, myght heare. Now the kynge sat in the wynter house, for it was 36.22 in the nynth moneth, and there was a good fyre before him. And when Jehudi had red.iij. or foure leaues therof, he cut the boke in peces with a penne knyfe, and caste it into the fyre vpon the harth, vntyll the boke was al brent in the fyre vpon the harth.

Yet no man was abashed therof, or rente
F his clothes: neither the kynge hym selfe, ne his seruauntes, though they herde all these wordes. Neuertheles Elnathan, Dalaiah, and Gamariah besought the kinge, that he wolde not burne the booke: notwithstandynge the kynge wolde not heare them, but commaunded Jerahmeel the sonne of Amalech, Saraiah the sonne of Ezriel and Selamiah the sonne of Abdiel, to laye handes vpō Baruch the Scrybe, and vpon Jeremye the Prophete but the Lorde kept them oute of syghte. After nowe that the kynge had brent the boke, and the Sermons whiche Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremye: The word
G of the Lorde came vnto Jeremy, sayinge: Take an other boke, and wryte in it all the foresayde sermons: that were written in the fyrste boke, whiche Joakim the king of Juda hath brent.

And tell Joakim the kynge of Juda thus
H sayth the Lorde: thou hast brent the booke, and thoughtest within thy selfe: Why hast thou wrytten therin, ỹ the kyng of Babylon shall come, and make this land waste, so ther shall make bothe the people and catell to be out of it? Therfore thus the Lorde sayth of Joakim the kinge of Juda: There shall none of his generacion syt vpon the throne of Dauid. His dede corse shall be cast oute that the heat of the day, and ỹ frost of the nyght may come vpon him. And I wil visit the wickednesse of him, of his seed, and of his seruauntes. Moze ouer all the euyll that I haue promised them (though they herd me not) wyl I bring vpon them, vpon the inhabitauntes of Jerusalem, and vpon all Juda. Then toke Jeremye an other booke, and gaue it Baruch the Scribe, the sonne of Neriah, which wrote therin out of the mouthe of Jeremye: All the sermons that were in the fyrste booke, whiche Joakim the kynge of Juda dyd burne. And there were added vnto them manye moo sermons then before.

¶ Sedechias succedeth Cononiah. He sendeth vnto Jeremye to praye for hym. Jeremye goynge in the lande of Ben Jamyn, is taken. he is beaten, and put in pryson. He is delyuered by kynge Sedechias.

CAPI. XXXVII.

A SEdechias the son of Josiah, whiche was made kyng thorow Nabuchodonosor king of Babylon reygned in the land of Juda, in the stede of Cononiah the sonne of Joakim. But neyther he, nor his seruauntes, ne the people in the lande wolde obeye the wordes of the Lorde, which he spake by the Prophete Jeremye. Neuertheles Sedechias the kynge sent Jehucal the sonne of Selemiah, and Sophonias the son of Maasiah preest to the Prophet Jeremy, saying: O praye thou vnto the Lord our God for vs. Now Jeremye walked 34.41 yet among the people at that tyme, and was not put in pryson as yet. Pharaos hoste also was come out of Egypt, which whē the Caldees that beleged Jerusalem perceyued, they departed from thence.

B Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremye the Prophet, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel, this answere shal ye gyue to the kynge of Juda, that sente you vnto me for counsell: Beholde, Pharaos hoste, whiche is come forth to helpe you, shal returne to Egypt, in to his owne lande: but 34.22 the Caldees shal come agayne, & fight against this cītye, wyn it, & set fyre vpon it. For thus sayth the Lord: deceyue not your owne myndes, thynkyng on this maner: tush the Caldees goo now their waye from vs: No, they shall not go their waye. For thoughe ye had slayne the hole hoste of the Caldees, that besiege you, and euery one of the slayne laye in his tent, yet sholde they stande vp and set fire vpon this cītye.

Nowe when the hoste of the Caldees was
C broken vp frome Jerusalem for feare of the Egyptians armye, Jeremye went out of Jerusalem towarde the lande of Ben Jamin to departe busynesse there amonge the people. And whē he came vnder Ben Jamins porte, there was a porter called Jeriah the sonne of Selemiah, the son of Hananiah, whiche fell vpon him, and toke him, sayinge: thy mynde is to turne to the Caldees.

Then sayd Jeremy: it is not so, I goo not
C to ỹ Caldees. Neuertheles Jeriah wold not beleue him, but brought Jeremy bound before the princes. Wherfore the princes were angry with Jeremy, causing him to be beaten, & to be layd in prison in the house of Jonathas the scribe, for he was the ruler of the pryson. Thus was Jeremye put in the dongeon and pryson, and so laye there a longe tyme. Then
D Sedechias the kynge sent for him, and called him, and asked him quietly in his owne house sayinge: thynkest thou this busynesse (that nowe is in hande) commeth of the the Lorde? Jeremy answered: yea that it doth, and thou (sayd he) shalt be deliuered in to ỹ king of Babylons power.

Moreouer Jeremye sayde vnto kynge Se-
D dechias: what haue I offended agaynste the, agaynst thy seruauntes, or agaynst this people, that ye haue caused me to be put in pryson? Where are your Prophetes which haue prophecyed vnto you, and sayd that the king of Babylon shold not come agaynst you and this lande?

And therfore heare nowe, O my lorde the kynge: let my prayer be accepte before the, and sende me no more in to the house of Jonathas the scribe, that I dye not there. Then
E Sedechias the kyng commaunded to put Jeremy in the fore entry of the pryson, and dayly to be gyuen him a cake of breed, and els no dyght meate, vntyll all the breed in the cītye was eaten vp. Thus Jeremy remayned in the fore entre of the pryson.

¶ By the meanes of the rulers, Jeremye is put in to a dongeon. At the requeste of Abedmelech the Chamberlayne, the kynge commaundeth Jeremye to be brought forthe of the dongeon. Jeremye sheweth the kynge how he myght escape death.

CAPI. XXXVIII.

A SAphatiah the sonne of Mathan, Godoliah the sonne of Phashur, Jucah the son of Selemiah, and Phashur the sonne of Melchiah perceyued the wordes that Jeremy had spoken vnto all the people: namelye on this maner: Thus sayth the Lord: Who so Jeremi.xxi.b remayneth in this cīty, shal perysshe, either xxvii.a with the swerde, with hongre or with pestilence: But who so falleth vnto the Caldees, shall escape wynnynge his soule for a praye, and shall lyue. For thus sayth the Lorde. This cītye (no doubt) must be deliuered in to the power of the king of Babylon, and he also shal wyn it. Then sayd the princes vnto the kyng: Syr, we beseche you lette this man be put to deth. For thus he discourageth the handes of the souldyers that be in this cīty, and the handes of all the people, when he speaketh suche wordes vnto them.

B This man verily laboureth not for pear of the people, but mischefe. Sedechias the kinge answered and sayd: Lo, he is in your handes for the kynge may denye you nothyng. Then toke they Jeremy, and cast him in to the dongeon of Melchiah the son of Hamelech, that dwelte in the fore entrye of the pryson. And they let downe Jeremye with cordes in to a dongeō, where there was no water, but myre: So Jeremye stacke faste in the myre. Nowe when Abedmelech the Mozian being a chamberlayne in the kynges court, understode that they had cast Jeremye in to the dongeon: he went out of the kynges house, and spake to ỹ kynge, (whiche then sate vnder the porte of Benjamin) these wordes: My lorde the kinge where as these men medle with Jeremye the prophete, they doo him wronge: Namelye in that they haue put him in prison, there to dye of honger, for there is no more breed in the citye.

C Then the kyng commaunded Abedmelech the Mozian, and sayd: Take from hence .xxx. men whom thou wilt, and drawe vp Jeremye the prophete oute of the dongeon before he dye. So Abedmelech toke the men with him, and went to the house of Amalech, and there vnder an almery he gat olde ragges, & worne cloutes, and let them downe by a corde in to the dongeon to Jeremy.

D And Abedmelech the Mozian said vnto the prophete Jeremye: O put these ragges and cloutes vnder thyne arme holes, betwixt the and the cordes: and Jeremye did so. So they drewe vp Jeremye with cordes, and toke him out of the dongeon, and he remayned in the fore entrye of the prison. Then Sedechias the kynge sent and caused Jeremye the prophete be called vnto him out of the thirde entrye that was by the house of the Lord. And
Jer. xxxviii. c the kynge sayd vnto Jeremy: I will aske the some what, but hyde nothynge fro me. Then Jeremy answered Sedechias: Yf I be playne vnto the, thou wilt cause me suffre deth: yf I gyue the counsel, thou wilt not folowe me. So the king swore an othe secretly vnto Jeremy sayinge: As truly as the Lorde lyueth, that made vs these soules, I will not slee ỹ, ne gyue the in to the handes of them that seke after thy lyfe.

E Then sayd Jeremy vnto Sedechias: thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: Yf case be that thou wylte go forth vnto the kynge of Babylons prynces, thou shalt saue Jere. xxxviii.d thy lyfe, and this citye shall not be brent: yea bothe thou and thy housholde shall escape with youre lyues. But yf thou wylte not go forth to the kyng of Babylons princes, then shall this citye be deliuered in to the handes of the Caldees whiche shall set fyre vpon it, and thou shalte not be able to escape them. And Sedechias sayd vnto Jeremye: I am afrayde for the Jewes, that are fled vnto the Caldees lest I come in their handes, and so they to haue me in derision.

F But Jeremy answered: No, they shal not betraye the: O harken vnto the voyce of the Lord (beseche the) which I speke vnto the, so shalte thou be well, and saue thy lyfe. But yf thou wilt not go forth, the Lord hath told me this playnly: Behold, all the wome that are lefte in the kyng of Judas house, shall go oute to the kynge of Babylons princes. For they think, that thou art disceyued: and that the men in whom thou dyddest put thy trust, haue mated the, & let thy fete fall in ỹ myre, and gone their waye from the. Therfore all thy wyues with their children shall flie vnto the Caldees, & thou shalt not escape their handes, but shalt be the king of Babylons prisoner, and this city shal be brent.

Then sayd Sedechias vnto Jeremy: loke G that no body knowe of these wordes, & thou shalt not dye. But yf the princes procure that I haue talked with the, and come vnto the, saying: O speake, what sayd the king to the: hyde it not from vs, and we will not put the to deth. Tell vs (we praye the) what sayd the king to the? So thou giue them this answer: I haue humbly besought the kinge, that he will let me lye no more in Jonathans house, that I dye not there? Then came al the princes vnto Jeremy, and asked him. And he told them after the maner as the kynge bad him. Then they helde their pease, for they perceyued nothynge. So Jeremye abode styll in the fore entrye of the pyson, vntyll the day that Jerusalem was wonne.

¶ Nabuchodonosor besiegeth Jerusalem. Sedechias flieth. He is taken of the Chaldees. His sonnes are slayne. His eyes are thrust out. Jeremye is prouyded for. Abedmelech is delyuered from captyuytye, because of the confydence that he hathe in God.

CAPL. XXXIX.

NOw when the citye of Jerusalem was taken (for in the nynth yere of Sedechias kynge of Juda, in the tenth moneth, came Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon and all his hoste, and besieged Jerusalem, and in the eleuenth yere of Sedechias, in the fourthe moneth, in the nynety daye of the moneth he brake in to the citye.) Then all the princes of the kynge of Babylon came in, and sat them down vnder the port: Nergel, Sarezar, Samegarnabo, Sarsachim, Rabiatis, Nergel, Sarezer, Rabmag, with all the other princes of the kynge of Babylon. And when Sedechias the kynge of Juda, with his souldyers sawe them, they fled, and departed out of the citye by nyght thorowe the kynges garden, and thorow the port that is betwene the two walles, and so they wente towarde the wildernesse.

But the Chaldees hoste folowed faste after them, and toke Sedechias in the felde of Jericho, and brought him prysoner to Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon vnto Reblath that lyeth in the land of Hemath, where he gaue iudgement vpon him. So the king of Babylon caused the children of Sedechias, and al the nobles of Juda be slayn before his face at Reblath. And made Sedechias eyes to be put out, and bounde him with chaynes and and sent him to Babylon.

Moreouer the Caldees brent vp the kynges palace, with the other houses of the people, and drake downe the walles of Jerusalem. As for the remnaunt of the people that were in the citye, and suche as were come to helpe them (what so euer was lefte of the cōmon sorte) Nabuzardan the chiefe capitayne caryed them to Babylon. But Nabuzardan the chiefe capitayne lefte the rascall people, (and those that hadde nothynge) dwell styll in the lande of Juda, and gaue them vynegardes and corne feldes, at the same time. Nabuchodonosor also the kynge of Babylon, gaue Nabuzardan the chief capiteyn a charge concernynge Jeremye, sayinge: take and eye sithe him, and make moche of him: se thou do him no harme, but entreate him after his owne desyre.

So Nabuzardan the chiefe Capytayne, Nabusasban the chyefe chamberlayne, Nergallarezer the treasurer, and all the kynge of Babylons lordes sent for Jeremye, and caused him be fet oute of the fore entrye of the pyson, and committed him vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam, the sonne of Saphan: that he shulde cary him home, and so he dwelt amonge the people.

D Now whyle Jeremy laye yet bounde in the fore entry of the prison, the worde of ỹ Lorde came vnto him, saying: Go and tel Abedmelech the Mozian: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: Beholde, all the wordes that I bryng vpon them, that thou shalt se it: but I wyll delyuer the (sayth the Lorde) and thou shalt not come in the handes of those men whom thou fearest. For vndoubtedlye I will saue the so that thou shalt not perish with the swerde: but thy lyfe shal be saued, and that because thou hast put thy truste in me, sayth the Lorde.

¶ Jeremye hathe lycence to go whyther he wyll. He dwelleth with the people that remaynyth at Jerusalem, ouer whom Godoliah ruleth. Johanan prophecyeth deth vnto Godoliah.

CAPI. XL.

THis is the maner how the Lord entreated Jeremy, when Nabuzardan ỹ chief capitayne had let him go fre from Ramah, whither he had led him bound amonge all the prysoners, that were caried from Jerusalem and Juda vnto Babylon. The chiefe Capitayne called for Jeremy, and sayd vnto him: The Lorde thy God spake mightily before of the mischefe vpon this place: Now the Lord hath sent it, and performed it as he had promysed: for ye haue synned agaynste the Lorde, and haue not bene obedient vnto his voyce, therfore commeth this plage vpō you. Beholde, I loose the bondes from thy handes this daye: yf thou wylt now goo w̄ me vnto Babylon: by then, for I wyll se to the, and B prouyde for the: But yf thou wylte not goo Gene. xiii. & with me to Babylon, then remayne here. Be- Toby. i. d.
holde, all the lande is at thy wyl, loke where thou thinkest conuenient and good for the to abyde, there dwell. Yf thou canst not be content to dwel alone, then remayne with Gedoliah the son of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan: whom the king of Babilon hath made gouernour ouer the cities of Juda, and dwell with him among the people, or remayne where so euer it pleaseth the. So the chiefe Capitayne Jere. xxxix. d gaue him his expēses with a rewarde, and let him go. Then went Jeremy vnto Godoliah the son of Ahikam to Mazphah, and dwelte there with him amonge the people that were left in the lande.

Now when the Capitaynes of the hoste of C Juda (which with their felowes were scattered abrode on euery syde in the lande) vnderstode that the kyng of Babylon had made Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam gouernour in the the lande, and that man, wyfe, and child: yea and the poze men in the lande (that were not led captiue to Babylon) shulde be vnder his iurisdiction: They came to Godoliah vnto Mazphah: Namely Ismael the son of Nathaniah, Johanan, and Jonathath the sonnes of Careah, Sareah the son of Thanhometh, the sonnes of Ophai the Netophathite, Jesaniah the son of Maachati with their companions. And Godoliah the son of Ahicam, the son of Saphan swore vnto them & their felowes on this maner: Be not afrayde to iiii. Re. xxv. c seruc the Caldees, dwel in the lande, and do the kynge of Babylon seruyce, so shal ye prospere. Beholde, I dwell at Mazphah to be an officer in the Caldees behalfe, and to satisfye suche as come to vs. Therfore gather you wyne, corne and oyle, and kepe them in your ware houles, and dwel in your cities that ye haue in keping.

Yea all the Jewes also that dwelt in Moab vnder the Ammonites, in Idumea, and in all the countreys, when they herde that the kyng of Babylon hadde made Godoliah the son of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan, gouernour vpon them that were left in Juda: All the Jewes (I saye) returned oute of all places where they were fled vnto, and came in to the lande of Juda to Godoliah vnto Mazphah, and gathered wyne and other fruites, and that very moche.

Moreouer Johanan the sonne of Careah & all the capitaynes of the hostes, that were scatred on euery syde in the land, came to Godoliah in Mazphah, and sayd vnto him: knowest thou not that Baalam king of the Ammonites hathe sent Ismael the son of Nathaniah to slee the? But Godoliah the son of Ahicam bileued the not. Then said Johanan the son of Careah vnto Godoliah in Mazphah these wordes secretly: let me go, I praye the, & I wil slee Ismael the son of Nathaniah, so that no body shal know it. Wherfore wil he kill the, that al ỹ Jewes which resort vnto the might be scatred, and the remnaunt in Juda perish? Then said Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam to Johanan the sonne of Careah: Thou shalte not do it, for they are but lyes, that men saye of Ismael.

¶ Ismael kylleth Godoliah gylefully, and many other with hym. Johanan foloweth after Ismael.

CAPI. XLI.

A iiii.Re.xxv.d But in the seuenth moneth it happened that Ismael the son of Nathaniah the sonne of Elisama (one of the kynges blood) came with them that was greatest about the king, and ten men that were sworne with hym vnto Godoliah the son of Ahicam to Mazphah, and ate there togither. And Ismael the son of Nathaniah, with those ten men that were sworne to him, start vp and smote Godoliah the son of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan with the swerde and slewe him, whom the king of Babylon had made gouernour of the land. Ismael also slewe all the Jewes that were with Godoliah at Mazphah, and all the Caldees that he founde there waytyng vpon him.

B The next day after that he had slayne Godoliah (the matter was yet vnknowen) there came certeyn men from Sichem, from Siloh and Samaria, to the nombre of foure score, whiche had shauen their beerdes, rent their clothes, and were all heuy, bryngynge meatoffrynges, and incense in their handes, to offer it in the house of the Lorde. And Ismael the son of Nathaniah went forth of Mazphah wepyng to mete them. Now when he met them, he sayd: Go your waye to Godoliah the son of Ahicam. And when they came in the myddest of the citye, Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah (with them that were sworne vnto hym) slewe them euen at the myddest of the pytte.

C Among these four score men there were ten that sayd vnto Ismael: Oh slee vs not, for we haue yet a great treasure in the felde, of whete, barley, oyle and honye. So he spared them, and slewe them not with their brethre. Now the pyt wherin Ismael did cast the deed bodyes of the men (whom he slewe bicause of Godoliah) had king Asa caused to be made, for feare of Baasa the kynge of Israell, and the same pyt dyd Ismael fyll with slayne men. (iii.Reg.xxv.c) As for the remnaunt of the people, the kinges doughters and all the people that were yet left at Mazphah, vpon whome Nabuzardan the chiefe Capitayne had made Godoliah the son of Ahicam gouernoure: Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah caryed them awaye prisoners towarde the Ammonites.

Gene.xiiii.c i.Reg.xxx.b. But when Johanan the sonne of Careah and all they whiche had ben capitaynes ouer the kynges hoste with him herde of al the wyckednesse that Ismael the son of Nathaniah had done, they toke their companions & went out for to fight with Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, and found him by the waters of Rabim in Gabaon. Nowe when all the people whom Ismael led captyue saw Johanan the son of Careah and al the other capitaynes of the host, they were glad. So al the people that Ismael had caryed awaye frome Mazphah, were brought agayne.

D And when they returned they came to Johanan the sonne of Careah. But Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah fledde frome Johanan with eyght of his sworne companions, and wente to the Ammonites. Then Johanan the sonne of Careah, and all the capitaynes of the hoste that were with hym, toke the remnaunt of the people, whome Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had ledde awaye (when he hadde slayne Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam) whom they had also rescued from him: fightyng men, women and chyldren, and gelded men, whom they brought agayn from Gabaon: and wente from thence and sate them downe at Geruth Camaam, which lyeth besyde Bethlehem, that they might go in to Egypt for feare of the Caldees: of whom they were afrayde, bicause that Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had slayne Godoliah Ahikams sonne, whom the kyng of Babylon had made gouernour in the lande.

¶ The Capitaynes toke counsell of Jeremye what they oughte to do. Jeremye monysheth the rest of the people not to go in to Egypte.

CAPI. XLII.

A So all the rulers, and Johanan the sonne of Kareah, Jezoniah the sonne of Osaiah came with all the people from the lest vnto the moost, and sayde vnto Jeremye the Prophet: heare our peticion, that thou maist praye for vs vnto the Lorde thy God, and for the rest whereof there be verye fewe lefte of many, as thou seest vs: that the Lorde thy God maye shewe vs awaye to go in, and tel vs what we shoulde doo. Then Jeremye the Prophete sayde vnto to them: I haue herde you. Beholde, I wyll praye vnto God youre Lorde, as ye haue required me: & loke what aunswere the Lorde geueth you, I shall certifye you therof, and kepe nothyng backe fro you. And they sayd vnto Jeremy: The Lord of treuth and faythfulnesse be our recorde that we wyl do all that the Lorde thy God commaundeth vs, whether it be good or euil. We wil harken vnto the voyce of our Lord God to whome we sende the, that we maye prospere, when we haue folowed the voyce of the Lorde our God.

B And after ten dayes came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremy. Then called he Johanan the sonne of Karee, and all the capitaynes of the people that were with him: yea and all the people from the leest to the most, and said vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lord God of Israel, vnto whom ye sent me, to lay forth your prayers before him: Yf ye wyll dwell in this land, I shal buylde you vp, and not breke you down: I shal plant you, and not rote you out: for I am pacified as concernynge the trouble that I haue done to you.

Feare

Feare not the kynge of Babylon, of whom ye stande in awe: O be not afrayde of hym, sayth the Lorde: for I wyll be with you, to helpe you, and delyuer you frome his hande. I wyll pardon you, I wyll haue mercye vpon you, & brynge you agayne in to your owne lande.

C Neuerthelesse, yf ye purpose not to dwell in this lande, nor to folowe the voyce of the Lorde youre God: but wyll saye thus, we wyll not dwell here, but goo in to Egypte: where we shall neyther se warre, heare the noyse of batayle, ne suffre honger, there will we dwell. Wherfore heare nowe the worde of the Lorde, o ye remnaunt of Juda. Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Yf ye be holly purposed to goo in to Egypte, and to be there as straungers: the swearde that ye feare, shall ouertake you in Egypte, and the honger wherof ye be here afrayde shall hange vpon you in to Egypt, and there ye shall dye. For all they that of set purpose vndertake to goo in to Egypte, there to ease them selues of theyr myserye, shall perysshe with the swerde, with honger, and pestylence: not one of them shall remayne, there shall none escape the plage, that I wyl bring vpon them.

D For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: lyke as my wrathe and indignacion is come vpon the inhabitaunts of Jerusalem, so shall my displeasure goo forthe vpon you also, yf ye go in to Egypt: For there ye shalbe reuiled, abhorred, brought to shame and confusion: and as for this place, ye shal neuer se it more. The Lorde forbyddeth you, o ye remnaunt of Juda, that ye shal not go in to Egypte.

And forget not that I haue warned you earnestly this daye, elles shall ye begyle your selues. For ye sente me vnto the Lorde youre God, and sayd: O praye thou the Lorde our God for vs: and loke what aunswere the Lorde oure God geueth the, that brynge vs agayne, and we shall doo therafter. Nowe haue I shewed and declared vnto you the voyce of the Lorde youre God, for the which cause he hathe sent me to you. Yf ye wyll not folowe it, be sure that ye shall perysshe with the swerde, with honger, and pestilence: euen in the same place, where your luste was to go and dwell.

¶ Johanan caryeth the remnaunt of the people in to Egypt, contrary to the mynde of Jeremy. Jeremye prophecyeth the destruction of Egypte.

CAPI. XLIII.

A Nowe when Jeremye had ended all the wordes of the Lorde God vnto the people (for their sakes to whom God had sent him) Azariah the son of Osaiah, and Johanan the sonne of Karee, with al the prowde persons, sayd vnto Jeremye: Thou lyest, the Lorde oure God hathe not sent the to speake vnto vs, that we sholde not go in to Egypt: to dwell there: But Baruch the sonne of Neriah prouoketh the agaynst vs, that he mighte brynge vs in to the captiuitie of the Caldees: that they might sle vs, and cary vs awaye prysoners vnto Babylon.

B So Johanan the sonne of Karee, and al the Capytaynes of the hoste, and all the people folowed not the commaundement of the Lorde: Namely to dwell in the lande of Juda: But Johanan the sonne of Karee, and all the Capytaynes of the hoste, caryed awaye all the remnaunte in Juda, that were come togyther agayne frome the Heythen, (amonge whome they hadde ben scattered) to dwell in the lande of Juda: Men, women children, the kinges doughters: al those that Nabuzardan the chiefe Capitayne had lefte with Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam. (Jeremi.xli.c) They caryed awaye also the Prophet Jeremy, Baruch the sonne of Neriah, and so came in to Egypt: for they were not obedient vnto the commaundement of God. Thus came they to Taphnis.

C And in Taphnis the worde of the Lorde happened vnto Jeremye, sayenge: Take great stones in thyne hande, and hyde them in the brycke wall, vnder the doore of Pharaos house in Taphnis, that all the men of Juda maye se, and saye vnto theym: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I wyll sende and call for Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon my seruaunt, and wil set his seate vpon the stones that I haue hyd, and he shall sprede his tent ouer them. (Jerem.xlvi.c)

D And when he commeth he shall smyte the lande of Egypt with slaughter, with prysonment, and with the swerde. He shall set fyre vpon the temples of the Egyptians goddes, and burne them vp, and take them selues prisoners. Moreouer he shal araye him self with the lande of Egypt, lyke as a shepherde putteth on his cote, and shall departe his waye from thence in peax. The pyllers also of the temple of the sunne that is in Egypte: shall be breake in peces, and burne the temples of the Egyptians goddes.

¶ He reproueth the people for theyr Idolatrye. They that sette lyghte by the threatenynge of the Lorde, are chastened. The destruction of Egypte and the Jewes therin, is prophecyed.

CAPI. XLIIII.

A This is the worde that was shewed to Jeremye concernynge all the Jewes, whiche dwelte in Egypte: at Magdal, at Taphnis, at Memphis, and in the lande of Patures. Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: ye haue sene all the myserye that I haue brought vpon Jerusalem, and vpon all the cytyes of Juda, so that this daye they are desolate, and no man dwellynge therin: and that bycause of the great blasphemyes whiche they commytted, to prouoke me vnto angre: In that they wente backe to doo sacrifyce and worshyp vnto straunge goddes: whom neyther they, nor ye, youre fathers haue knowen. How be it I sent vnto them my seruauntes all the Prophetes: I rose vp early, and sente vnto them, and gaue them warnynge: O doo no suche abhominable thynges, and thynges that I hate. But they wolde not folowe ne harken, to tourne from theyr wyckednesse, and to doo no more sacrifyce vnto straunge goddes.

Jerem. xvv.a and.xvi.c

Wherfore myne indignacion and wrathe was kyndled, and brent vp the cityes of Juda, the feldes with the stretes of Jerusalem, so that they were made walle and desolate, as it is come to passe this daye. Nowe therfore thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: How happeneth it that ye do so greate euyll vnto youre owne soules, thus to destroye the men and women, chyldren and babes of Juda? so that none of you is lefte, bycause ye prouoke me vnto wrathe with the workes of your owne handes: whē ye offre vnto straunge goddes in the lande of Egypte, where as ye begon to dwell: That ye myght vtterly perysshe, and that ye might be reuyled, and shamefully intreated of all nacyons. Do haue ye nowe forgotten the wyckednesse of youre forefathers, the wyckednesse of the kynges of Juda, and their wyues, the wyckednesse that ye youre selues and youre wyues haue doone in the lande of Juda, in the citye and in the lande of Jerusalem?

Yet are ye not sorye this daye, ye feare not neither walke ye in my law & in my commaundementes that I haue gyuen vnto you and your fore fathers.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: I am stedfastly addysed and determined to punysshe you, and to rote oute all Juda. As for the remnaunt of Juda that purposly went in to Egypt, there to take them of their misery: I wyll take them and they shall all be destroyed. In the lande of Egypte shall they perysshe, beynge consumed with the sweorde and with honger. For from the leest vnto the moost, they shall perysshe with the sweorde and with honger. Moreouer they shall be reuyled, abhorred, shamed, and confounded.

Amos.ix.b

Jeremy.xlii.c and.xliiii.c

For I will visyte them that dwell in Egypt, as I haue visited Jerusalem: with the sweorde, with honger, and with pestilence: so that none of the remnaunt of Juda, whiche are gone to dwell in Egypte shall be lefte to come agayn in to the land of Juda, although they thinke to come thither agayn, & to dwel there. For none shall come agayne, but suche as are fled awaye.

Jerem. xxxix.

Then all the men which knewe that their wyues had offered vnto straunge goddes, and a greate sorte of wyues that stode there, yea and all the people that dweite there in Egypte in the cirye of Patures answered Jeremye and sayd: as for the wordes that thou hast spoken vnto vs in the name of the Lorde we wyll in no wyse heare them: but what so euer goeth oute of oure owne mouth, that wyll we doo: We wyll doo sacrifyce, and offre oblacions vnto the quene of heuen, lyke as we and oure fore fathers, our kynges and our prynces haue wone in the cityes of Juda, and in the stretes and feldes of Jerusalem. For then had we plentifulnesse of vitayles, then were we in prosperitie, & no misfortune came vpon vs.

But sence we lefte to offre and to doo sacrifyce vnto the Quene of heuen, we haue had scarcenesse of all thynges, and perysshe with the sweorde and honger. Last of all, whē we women doo sacrifyce and offered vnto the Quene of heauen, dyd we make her cakes, and poure vnto her drynckeofferynges, to wo her lesupce, withoute oure husbandes wyles?

Then sayd Jeremy vnto al the people, to the men, to the women, and to all the folke whiche had gyuen hym that answere: Dyd not the Lorde remembre the sacrifyces that ye, youre fore fathers, youre kynges and wyues (with all the people) haue offered in the cityes of Juda, in the stretes and lande of Jerusalem? and hathe he not considered this in his mynde? In so moche that the Lord might no longer suffre the wyckednesse of youre inuencyons, and the abhominable thynges whiche ye dyd? Is not youre lande desolate and waste, yea and abhorred so that no man dwelleth therin anye more, as it is come to passe this daye?

Dyd not all this happen vnto you bycause ye made suche sacrifyce, and synned agaynst the Lorde? Ye haue not followed his voyce, to walke in his lawe, in his ordinaunces and statutes.

Yea this is the cause, that all misfortune happened vnto you, as it is come to passe this daye. Moreouer, Jeremye spake vnto all the people, and to all the women: Heare the worde of the Lorde all Juda, ye that be in the lande of Egypte: thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: Ye and youre wyues haue spoken with youre owne mouthe the thynge that ye haue fulfilled in dede.

Yea thus haue ye sayd: We wyl not fayle, but doo the thynge that pleaseth vs: we will doo sacrifyce, and poure oute drynkeofferynges to the quene of heuen. Purposely haue ye set vp youre owne good meanynges, and hastely haue ye fulfylled youre owne intent. And therfore heare the worde of the Lorde all Juda, ye that dwelle in the lande of Egypte.

Beholde, I haue sworne by my greate name, sayth the Lorde, that my name shall not be reherced thorowe anye mans mouthe of Juda, in all the lande of Egypte, to sayen: The Lorde God lyueth, for I wyll watche to plage them, and not for their welthe. And all the men of Juda that be in the lande of Egypte, shall perysshe with the sweorde, and with honger, vntyll they be vtterly destroyed.

Neuertheles those that fled away for the sweorde, shall come agayne in to the land of Juda, but there shall be very fewe of them. And al the remnaunt of Juda, that are gone into Egypte, there to dwell, shall knowe whose wordes shall be found true: theirs or myne. Take this for a token, that I wyll visit you in this place, sayth the Lorde, and ye may know, howe that I (without doubt) wyl performe my purpose vpon you to punyshe you. Beholde, sayth the Lorde, I wyll delyuer Pharao Hophra kynge of Egypte in to the handes of his ennemyes, that seke after his lyfe: euen as I gaue Sedechias the kynge of Juda in to the handes of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon, which sought after his lyfe.

¶ Baruch is reproued of Jeremye.

CAPI. XLV.

These are the wordes that Jeremy the prophet spake vnto Baruch the sonne of Nerias, after þ he had written these sermons into a boke at the mouthe of Jeremy, in the fourth yere of Joakim the son of Josiah kynge of Juda.

Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israell vnto the, O Baruch: In so moche as thou thoughtest thus, when thou wast writtynge. Wo is me, the Lorde hath gyuen me payne for my trauayle: I haue wearyed my self with syghynge, and shall I fynde no rest? Therfore tel him O Jeremy, that the Lorde saith thus: Beholde, The thing that I haue buylded, wyll I breake downe agayne, and rote out the thynge, that I haue planted, yea this hole lande. And seekest thou yet promotion? Loke not for it, and desyre it not. For I wyll bryng a miserable plage vpon al flesshe (saith the Lord. But thy life wil I gyue the for a pray wherforeuer thou goest.

¶ The prophecyeth the destruction of Egypt. Deliuerance is promysed to Israel.

CAPI. XLVI.

Here folowe the wordes of the Lorde to the Prophete Jeremye, whiche he spake vnto the Gentyles. These wordes folowynge preached he to the Egyptians cōcernynge the host of Pharao Necho kyng of Egypt, when he was in Charcamis beside þ water of Euphrates: what tyme as Nabuchadonosor the kyng of Babilon slewe him, in the fourth yere of of Joakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda.

Ye make redy buckler and shylde, ye goo forth to fight: Ye harnesse youre horses and set your selues vpon them: Ye set your salets fast on, ye brynge forthe speares, ye scoure youre sweardes and put on youre brest plates.

But alas, how happeneth it, that I se you so afrayde? why flynthe ye backe? wherfore are your worthyes slayne? Yea they runne so fast awaye, that none of them looketh behynde hym. Feare & fastnesse is fallen vpon euerye one of the saythe the Lorde. The lightest of foote shall not flee awaye, and the worthyes shall not escape.

Toward the North by the water of Euphrates, they shall stomble & fall. But what is he this, þ swelleth vp, as it were a flonde, roynge & ragynge lyke the streames of water? It is Egypt that ryseth vp lyke þ flonde, and casteth oute the waters with so greate noyse.

For they say: We wil go vp, and wil couer the earthe: we wyll destroy the cytyes, with them that dwel therin. Get you to horsback coule forth the charettes, come forth ye worthies: ye Mozians, ye Libeans with youre bucklers, ye Libeans with youre bowes: So shall this daye be vnto the Lord God of hostes, a daye of vengeaunce, that he maye auenge him of his ennemyes. The sweorde shal deuoure, it shall be satisfied & bathed in their bloude: For the Lorde God of hoostes shall haue a slaynge offerynge towarde the North, by the water of Euphrates. Go vp (O Galaad) and bynge trycle vnto the daughter of Egypte:

But in vayne shalte thou go to surgerye for thy wound shal not be stopped. The heythen shall heare of thy shame, and the lande shall be full of thy confusion: for one strong man shall stomble vpon an other, howe then shulde they not fall both togyther.

These are the wordes þ the Lorde spake to the Prophet Jeremye, concernynge the host of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon, which was sent to destroy the land of Egipt: Preache out thorowe the lande of Egypt, & cause it be proclaymed at Magdol, Memphis and Thaphnis, and saye: Stande fyl, make the redye, for the sworde shall consume the rounde aboute.

Howe happeneth it that thy myghty worthies are fallen? why stode they not fast? Euen because the Lorde thrust them downe. The slaughter was greate, for one fell euer fyl vpon an other. One cryed vpon an other: Vp, let vs goo agayne to our owne people, and to oure owne naturall countrey, from þ sworde of oure enemye.

Crye euen there: O Pharao kynge of Egypte, the tyme wil bynge destruccion vpon. As truly as I lyue (sayth the kynge, whose name is the Lorde of Hostes) it shall come as the mount of Thabor, and as Lybanus if it stode in the see. O thou daughter of Egypte make redy thy gere to flyt. For Memphis shall be voyde and desolat, so that no man shal dwel therin. The lande of Egypte is lyke a goodly fayre calf, but one shal come out of the North to pluck her forwarde. Her waged souldiers that be with her, are lyke fat calues.

They also shall fle awaye togyther, and not abyde: for the daye of their slaughter & the tyme of their vysytacion shall come vpō them.

The crye of their ennemyes shall make a noyse, as the blaste of a trompet. For they shall entre in with their host, and come with axes, ares, as it were hewers downe of wod. And they shall cut downe her wodde, sayethe the Lorde, without any discrecion. For they shal be mo in nombre then the grashoppers, so that no man shall be able to tell them. The daughter of Egypt shal be confounded, whē she shall be delyuered in to the handes of the people of the North.

Moreouer thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde I wyl viset that restlesse people of Alexandria, Pharao and Egypte, yea both their goddes and their kynges: euen Pharao, and all theym that put their truste in him. Yea I wyll delyuer them into the handes of those, that seke after their lyues: Namely, into ℔ power of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon, and into the power of his seruauntes. And after all these thinges it shall be inhabited as afore tyme sayeth the Lorde.

B But be not thou afrayd (O my seruaunt Jacob) feare not thou, O Israel. For lo, I wil helpe the frome farre, and thy sede frome the lande of thy captyuyte. Jacob also shal come agayne, and be in rest: he shall be rych, and no man shall do him harme. Feare thou not (O Jacob my seruaunte) sayethe the Lorde, for I am with the: and wyll destroye all nations, amonges whom I haue scattred the, Neuertheles I will not consume the but chasten the and correct the: yea and that with discrecyon: neither will I spare the as one that were fautelles.

¶ The worde of the Lorde, agaynste the Philystynes.

CAPI. XLVII.

A THese are the wordes, that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremye the Prophete agaynste the Philistines, before that Pharao smote the cytye of Azab. Thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, there shal waters arise out of the North: and shal grow to a great floude, runnyng ouer, and ouerrynge the lād, the cytyes, and them that dwell therin.

And the men shal crye, and all they that B dwell in the lande shal mourne at the noyse and stampynge of their stronge barbed horses, at the shakynge of their charettes and at the romblyng of the wheles. The fathers shall not loke to their children, so feble and wery shal their handes be: at the same tyme when he shall be there, to destroye the hole lande of the Philistines. He shal make waste both Tyrus, Sidon and all other that are sworne vnto them.

For the Lorde wyll destroye al Palestina, and the other Iles, that be deuyded from C the countrey. Baldnesse is come vpon Gaza, Ascalon with her other valleyes shall kepe her pease.

How longe wilte thou stare, O thou D swearde of the Lorde? Turne agayne into thy sheathe, rest, and leaue of. But how can it cease, when the Lorde him selfe hath geuen him a charge ageynste Ascalon, and sayntde vp agaynste the cytyes of the see coste?

¶ The worde of the Lorde agaynst the Moabites.

CAPI. XLVIII.

THus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israell agaynste Moab: wo be to the cittie of Nabo, for it shall be layed waste, brought to confusyon and taken. Yea thy stronge citte of Kariathiarim shall be brought to shame, and afrayed: Moab shall no more be had in honoure: Wicked counsell shall be taken vpon Hesbon. Come (that they say) let vs rote them out, that they may be no more amonge the nombre of the Gentyles, ℟ they may no more be thought vpō: Thus the swerde shal persecute the: A voice shall crye frome Horonaim: With great wa fynge and destruction, is Moab made desolate.

And this crye shall be herde in all her cytyes. At the going vp vnto Luith there shall aryse a lamentacion: and downe towarde Horonaim, there shall be herde a cruell and a deedly crye: Get you away, saue your liues and be lyke vnto the herbe in the wyldernes. For because thou hast trusted in thy stronge holdes and treasure, thou shalt be take, Chamos with his prestes and princes shall goo awaye into captyuyte.

The destroyer shal come vpō al the cityes, E none shall escape. The valleyes shal be destroyed, and the fyldes shall be layde waste lyke as the Lorde hath determyned.

Make a token vnto Moab, that she get her awaye spedely: for her cities shall be made so desolate, that no man shall dwell therin. Cursed be he that doth the worke of the Lorde negligently, and cursed be he that kepeth backe his swearde frome shedynge of bloude.

Moab hath neuer bene eyche and carelesse frome her youth vp, she hath sytten and taken her ease with her treasure. She was neuer yet put out of one vessell into an other (that is) she neuer went awaye in to captyuyte, therfore her taste remayneth, and her sauoure is not yet chaunged.

But lo, the tyme commeth, sayeth the Lord that I shal sende her trusters to truste her vp to prepare and season her vessels: yea her tabrettes rattell and shake to and fro. And Moab shall be ashamed of Chamos, lyke as Israel was ashamed of Bethel, wherin she put her truste.

Wherfore do ye thinke thus: we are F myghtye, and stronge men of warre? Moab shall be destroyed, and her cytyes brent vp: her chosen younge men shall be slayne, sayth the kynge, whose name is the Lorde of hostes. The destruction of Moab commeth on a pace, and her fall is at hande.

All her neigbeures shal mourne for her, and all they that knowe her name, shall say: O howe happeneth it, that the stronge staffe and the goodly rod is thus broke? And thou daughter Dibon, come downe from thy glory and and syt in pouertye. For he that destroyeth Moab, shall come vp to the also, and breake downe thy stronge holdes.

And thou that dwellest in Aroer, get the D to the strete, and loke aboute the: aske them that are fled and escaped, and say: what thing is happened? O, Moab is confounded and ouercome.

Mourne and crye, tell it out at Arnon, that Moab is destroyed. And iudgemēt shall come vpon the playne lande: Namely, vpon Holō, & Jahazah: vpon Mephaath & Dibon: vpon Nabo and the house of Deblathaim, vpon Cariathiarim and Bethgamul, vpon Bethmaon and Carioth, vpon Bozrah and all the cyties in the lande of Moab, whether they lye farre or nere.

The horne of Moab shall be smytten downe, and her arme broken, sayth the Lord. Make her dronken, for she magnifyed her selfe aboue the Lorde, that men may clappe their handes at her vomyt, and that she also maye be laughed to scorne. O Israel, shalte thou not laugh him to scorne, when he is taken amonge theues? Yea because of thy wordes that thou hast spoken agaynste him, thou shalte be dryuen awaye. Ye Moabites shall leaue the cities, and dwell in rockes of stone, & become lyke doues, that make their nestes in holes.

As for Moabs pryde, we haue herde of E it, she is very high mynded. I know her stoutnesse, her boastyng, her arrogancy, & the pryde other stomach, sayth the Lorde. For her furiousnes maye neither vpholde her w strēgth ne dede. Therfore shall there mournynge be made for Moab, and euerye man shall crye for Moabs sake: a lamentacion shalbe made to the men that stande vpon the wall. So will I mourne for the also, O Jazer, and for the. O thou vynyarde of Sabamah.

Thy wyne braunches shall come ouer the F see, and the braunches of Jazer but vnto the see: the destroyer shall breake into thy haruest and grape gatheryng: Myrth and chere shall be taken awaye from the tymbrefelde, and from the hole land of Moab.

There shal be no swete wine in the presse, the treader shall haue no stomache to crye, yea there shal be none to crye vnto him: whiche afore tyme were herde from Hesbon to Eleale & Jahaz, which lyfted vp their voyce from Zoar vnto Horonaim, that bullocke of thre yere olde. The waters also of Nemrim shall be dryed vp.

Moreouer I wyll make Moab ceasse G (sayethe the Lorde) frome the offeryngs & encense that she hath made vnto her goddes in hygh places. Wherfore my herte mourneth for Moab, like a croude playing an heye songe: and for the mens sake of the bricke wall my herte moorneth also, euen as a pype that pypeth a dolefull songe: for they shall be very fewe, and destroyed.

All heades shall be shauen, and all berdes clypped of: all handes bounde, and all loynes gyrded about with sakcloth. Vpon all the house toppes and stretes of Moab, there shall be mournynge: For I wyll breke Moab lyke an vnprofytable vessell sayth the Lorde. O how fearfuel is she? O how mourneth she? O howe doth Moab hang downe her heade, and is ashamed? Thus shal Moab be a laughinge stocke, and had in derision of all them, that be rounde aboute her.

For thus sayethe the Lorde: Beholde, Deu.xx.viii.d the ennemy shall come flyenge as an Egle, & Jerem.xlix.d spreade his wynges vpon Moab. They shall clyme ouer the walles, and winne the stronge holdes. Then the myghtye mens hertes in Moab shal be lyke the hert of a woman trauelyng with chylde, Jerem.xlix.d

And Moab shall be made so desolate, that she shall no more be a people, because G she hath set vp her selfe agaynste the Lorde. Feare, pyt, and snare shall come vpon the (O Moab) sayethe the Lorde. Who so escapeth the feare, shall fal in the pyt: and who Esaye.xxiiii.d so getteth out of the pyt, shall be taken in the snare.

For I wyll bryng a yeare of vysitacyon Esay.xxiiii.c vpon Moab, sayth the Lorde. They that are able to flye, shall stande vnder the shadowe of Hesebon. For there shall go a fyre out of Hesebon, and a flame from Sion, and shall burne vp that proude people of Moab, bothe before and beyonde.

Wo be vnto the (O Moab) for thou people of Chamos shalt perysh: Yea thy sonnes and doughters shall be led awaye captyue. Yet at the laste wyll I bryngē Moab out of captyuyte agayne, sayethe the Lorde. Thus farre of the plage of Moab.

¶ The worde of the Lorde agaynst the Ammonytes, agaynst Idumea, Damascus, Cedar, and Elam.

CAPI. XLIX.

AS concernynge the Ammonytes, thus A the Lorde sayeth: Hath Israel no children, or is he without an heyre? Why Ezechi.xxi.d and.xxv.a. Amos.i.a. hath youre kynge then taken Gad in? wherfore doth his people dwell in his cities? Beholde therfore, the tyme commeth (sayth the Lorde) that I will bryngē a noyse of warre into Rabah of the Ammonytes. Rahel shal be desolate, and her cytyes brent vp: and the Israelites shall be Lordes ouer those that had them in possession afore, sayth the Lord. Hesebon shall mourne, for it shall be roted out of the grounde, sayth the Lorde. The cytyes of Rabah shall crye out, and gyrde thē selues with sackcloth: they shall mourne, & runne aboute the walles: for their kyng shal be led awaye prysoner: yea his preestes and princes with him.

Wherfore trustest thou in the waters B stremes that flowe to and fro, O thou feare doughter: and thinkest thou arte so safe (by reason of thy treasure) that no mā shal come to the?

Beholde, I wyll bryngē a feare vpon the, sayth the Lord God of hostes, from al those that be about the: so that ye shal be scattered euery man frome an other, and no man shall gather gather them togyther agayne that be fled. But after that, I will brynge the Ammonites also out of captyuyte agayne.

Esaye.xxi.b. Ezechi.xxv.b xxxv.f.xxxv.a

Upon the Edomites hath the Lorde of Hoostes spoken on this maner: Is there no more wysdom in Theman? Is there nomore good counsell amonge his people? Is theyr wysdome then turned clene to nought? Get you hence, turne your backes, crepe downe into the depe, O ye cytyzins of Dedan.

For I will brynge destruction upon Esau, yea & the day of his vysytacion. If the grape gatherers came upon the, shulde they not leaue some grapes? If the nyghte robbers came upon the, shulde they not take so moch as they thought were ynough?

But I wyll make Esau bare, and discouer his secretes, so that he shall not be hable to hyde them. His sede shal be wasted away, yea his brethren and his neighboures, and he him selfe shall not be lefte behynde.

Jerem.xxv.b Ezechiel.ix.b i.Petri.iiii.c.

Thou shalte leaue thy fatherlesse childre behynde the, and I wyll kepe them and thy wydowes shall take their comforte in me. For thus hath the Lorde spoken: Beholde, they that men thought were unmete to drinke of the cuppe, haue dronken with the fyrste: and thynkest thou then to be free? No no: thou shalte neither be quyte nor free, but thou muste drynke also: For why, I haue sworne by my selfe (sayth the Lorde) y Bozrah shall become a wildernesse, an open shame, a laughinge stocke and cursynge: and her cities shall be a contynuall desert.

D

For I am perfectly informed of the Lord that he hath sent a message all ready unto y heithen. Gather you togyther, and go forth agaynste them: make you ready to the battayle, for lo: I wyll make the but small amonge the heithen, and lytle regarded amõg men.

Abdi.i.a Esay.xlvii.b Jere.xlviii.d

The hyghe stomacke and the pryde of thy herte haue disceyued the because thou wiste dwell in the holes of stony rockes, and haue the hygh mountaynes in possession. Neuertheles though thy neste were as hygh as the Egles, yet wyll I caste the downe, sayth the Lord. Moreouer Idumea shall be a wyldernesse: who so goeth by it, shall be abasshed, & wondre at all her miserable plages. Lyke as Sodome, Gomor, and the cities that laye there about, were turned up syde downe (saith the Lord) so shal no bodye dwell in Idumea, and no man shal haue his habytacion there.

Gene.xix.c

Beholde, lyke as the Lyon commeth up from the pleasaunt medowes of Jordan unto the grene pastures of Ethan, so wyll I dryue him, and make him runne agaynste her. But who is the younge man that I wyl ordeyne therto? Who is lyke unto me? What is he that wyll stryue with me? What shepherd may stande in my handes?

Job.xli.a

Therfore heare the counsell of the Lorde, that he hathe taken upon Idumea: and his purpose, that he hath deuysed upon the cytezins of Theman: The leest of the flock shall teare thẽ in peces, & loke what fayre thynge they haue, they shal make it waste, and them selues also: At the noyse of their fal the earth shall quake, the crye of their voyce shall be herde unto the red see. Beholde, the ennmye shall come and flee up hyther, lyke as it were an Egle, and spred his winges upõ Bozrah. Then shall the hertes of the worthyes in Edom be as the hert of a woman trauelynge of chyld. Upon Damascus, Hemath and Arphad shall come confusyon, for they shall heare euyl tydynges: they shall be tossed too & fro lyke the see that can not stande styll. Damascus shal be sore afrayd, and shal flee, tremblynge shall come upon her. Sorowe and payne shall ouer take her as a woman trauelynge of chylde.

But howe shulde so worshypfull and glorious a cytye be forsaken? Heare therfore: her younge men shall fall in the stretes, and all her men of warre shall be taken awaye in that tyme, sayth the Lorde of hoostes. I wyll kindle a fyre in the walles of Damascus, whiche shall consume the palace of Benhadad.

F Ezech.

As for Cedar and the kyngdome of Hazor, whom Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon smote downe, the Lorde hath spoken thus upon them: Aryse, and get you up unto Cedar and destroye the people towarde the easte. Their tentes and their flockes shal they take awaye, yea their hangynges and their vessell. Their camels also shall they carye awaye with them. They shall come aboute them on euery syde with a fearefull crye.

Flee, get you sone awaye, crepe in to caues, that ye maye dwell there: O ye inhabitauntes of Hazor sayth the Lord: for Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon hath holden a counsell concernynge you and concluded his deuyce agaynste you. Aryse, and get you up agaynste yonder ryche and carelesse people (sayth the Lorde) whiche haue nether gates ne dore barres, and that dwell not togyther, Their Camels shall be stollen and the droues of their cattayle dryuen a way.

Moreouer, these that be shauen wyll I scatter towarde al the wyndes, and brynge them to destruction: yea and that thorowe their owne famyliers, sayth the Lorde. Hazor also shall be a dwellynge for Dragons, & an euerlastynge wyldernese: so that no body shall dwell there, and no man shall haue there his habytacion.

G

These are the wordes, that the Lorde spake to the prophet Jeremy concernyng Elam, in the begynnynge of the raygne of Sedechias kyng of Juda. Thus sayth the Lord of Hoostes: Beholde: I wyll breake the bowe of Elam, and take away their strength and upon Elam I wyll bryng the foure windes from the foure quarters of heauen, & wil scattre them agaynst the same foure wyndes. And there shall be no people, but some of Elam shall flee unto them.

For I wyll cause Elam to be afrayde of their ennemyes, and of them that seke theyr lyues: and wyll brynge upon them the indignacion of my wrathe, sayth the Lorde. And

I

I wyll persecute theym with the swearde, so longe tyll I haue brought them to noughte. I wyll set my stole in Elam, I will destroye both the kynge and the prynces from thence, sayth the Lorde. But in processe of tyme, I wyl bryng Elam oute of captyuytye agayne, saith the Lorde.

He prophecieth the destruction of Babylon, and the delyueraunce of Israel, whiche was in captyuytye.

CAPI. L.

The wordes that the Lorde spake unto the Prophet Jeremy, concernynge Babylon, and the lande of the Caldees: preache among the Gentyles, let your voyce be herde, make a token: crye oute, kepe no sylence, but saye: Babylon shall be wonne, Bel shall be confounded, and Merodach shal be ouercome.

Yea their goddes shalbe brought to shame and theyr ymages shall stande in feare. For out of the Northe there shall come a people agaynste her, whiche shall make her land so waste, that no body shall dwell therin: neyther man ne beaste, for they shall flee and departe from thence.

In those dayes and at that tyme saith the Lorde, the children of Israel shall come, they and y children of Juda, weping and makyng haste, and shall seke the Lorde theyr God. They shall aske the waye to Sion, thyther shall they turne theyr faces, and come and hange upon the, in a couenaunt that neuer shall be broken.

My people hath bene a loste flocke, my shepherdes haue disceyued them, and haue made them go astraye upon the hilles, They haue gone from the mountayne to the lytle hyll, and forgotten their folde. All they that came upon them, haue deuoured them: and theyr ennemyes sayde: We haue made no faute agaynste them, for they haue displeased the Lord, yea euen the Lord which is y beautie of their ryghtousnesse, and that defended their fathers. Yet shall ye flee from Babylõ, and departe out of the lande of the Caldees, and ye shal be as the rammes that go before the flocke. For lo, I wyll wake up an hooste of people from the Northren lande, & brynge them upon Babylon: these shall laye siege to it, and winne it: Their arowes shall not mysse, lyke as a connyng archer shoteth not wronge. And the Caldees shall be spoyled, & all they that spoyle them, shall be satysfyed sayth the Lorde: because ye were so chearfull and glad, to treade downe myne herytage, and fulfylled youre pleasures, as the calues in the grasse: and tryumphed ouer the lyke the bulles, when ye had gotten the victorye. Youre mothers shall be sore confounded and they that bare you, shall come to shame. She shall be the leste set by amonge the nations, boyde waste, and dryed up. No man shal be hable to dwel there, for the feare of the Lorde, but he shall be hole desolate.

All they that goo by Babylon, shall stande styll, and be abasshed, and shall wondre at al her plages.

C

Go forth in your araye agaynste Babylon rounde aboute, all ye that can handle bowes shote at her, spare no arowes, for she hathe synned agaynste the Lorde.

Jere.xviii.b. xix.b.xlix.c.

Crye out: upon her, upon her, agaynste her rounde about: she shall yelde her selfe, her foundacions shal fal and her walles shall come downe, for it shal be the vẽgeaũce of the Lord. Yea vengeaũce shall be taken of her, and as she hathe done, so shal she be dealt withall.

Exod.xxi.b. Leuit.xxiiii.d Johel.iii.b

They shall rote out the sower from Babylon. and him that handleth the sicle in haruest. For feare of the swearde of the ennemye, euery man shall get him to his owne people, and euery man shal flee to his owne lande Israell is a scattered flock, the Lyons haue disperced them. Fyrst the kynge of the Assyrians deuoured them, last of all this Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon hath brosed all theyr bones.

D

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde I wyll vyset the kynge of Babylon and his kyngdom, as I haue vysyted the kynge of the Assyryãs and wyll brynge Israel agayne to his pleasaunt pasture, that he maye fede upon Charmel and Basan, and be satysfyed upon the mount of Ephraim and Galaad.

iiii.Reg.xix.g Esay.xiiii.d.

In those dayes and at the same tyme (sayth the Lord) yf the offence of Israel be sought for, there shall none be found: Yf men enquyre for the synne of Juda, there shall be none: for I wil be mercyful unto them, whome I suffre to remayne ouer.

Go downe (O thou auenger) into the enemyes lande, and vyset them that dwell therin: downe with them, and smyte them upon the backes, sayth the Lorde: do acordynge to all that I haue commaunded the. There is gone aboute the lande a crye of slaughter and greate murther, namely on this maner: Howe happeneth it, that the hammer of the hole worlde is thus broken and brosed in sonder? Howe chaunceth it, that Babylon is become a wyldernesse amonge the heithen on this maner? I my selfe haue layed wayte for the, and thou arte taken: unwares art thou trapped and snared: for why, thou haste prouoked the Lord unto anger: The Lord hath opened his house of ordinaunce, and brought forth the wepons of his wrath. For the thing that is done in the lande of the Caldees, it is the Lorde of hostes worke.

These thynges shall come upon her at y laste, they shall breake in to her preuy chambres, they shall leaue her as bare as stones, that be layde togyther upon heapes. They shall so destroye her, that nothynge shall be lefte.

They shall slaye all their myghtye souldyers, and put them to death. Wo be unto them, for the daye and tyme of their vysytacyon is at hande. Me thynke I heare all ready a crye, of them that be fled and escaped out of the lande of Babylon, whiche shewe in Syon the vengeaunce of his temple: yea

a voyce

a voyce of them, that crye agaynste Babylō: Call vp all the archers agaynste Babylon, pytch youre tentes rounde aboute her, that none escape. Recompence her, as she hath deserued: and accordynge as she hath done, so deale wyth her agayne: for she hath set vp her selfe agaynste the Lorde, agaynste the holy one of Israel. Therfore shall her younge men fall downe in the stretes, and all her mē of warre shall be roted out in that day, saith the Lorde. Beholde I speake vnto the (O ÿ proude) saith the Lorde God of Hostes: for thy daye shall come, euen the tyme of thy visitacion. And the proude shall stomble & fall, and no man shall helpe him vp. I wyl burne vp his cytyes with fyre, and it shall consume all that is rounde about him.

F Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: The chyldren of Israel and Iuda suffre vyolence togyther. All they that haue them in captyuytye, kepe them fast, and wyll not let them go: but their auenger and redemer is myghtye, whose name is the Lorde of Hostes: he shall mayntayne their cause, he shall make ÿ lande shake, and iudge them that dwell therin, one with an other. The swerde shal come vpon the Caldees, saythe the Lorde, vpon them that dwell in Babilon, vpon their princes, and vpon their wyse men: the swearde vpon their southsayers, as for those (they shal become fooles.) The swerde vpon their worthyes, so that they shall stande in feare: The swerde vpon their horsmen and charets and vpon all the commen people that dwell vnder them: so that they shall all become lyke wemen: the swearde vpon their treasure, so that it shall be stollen awaye: The swerde vpon their waters, so that they shall be dried vp: For the lād worshippeth ymages and delyteth in straunge wonderfull thinges. Therfore shall wylde beastes, Apes, and Estryches dwell therin: for there shal neuer man dwell there, neither shall any man haue his habitacion there for euermore. Lyke as God destroyed Sodom and Gomorre, with the cities that laye there aboute, saythe the Lorde: So shal no man dwel there also, nether shal any man haue there his habitacion. Beholde, there shall come a people from the North, with a great bond of men, and many kynges shall stande vp from the endes of the earthe: They beare bowes and bucklers, cruel are they and vnmercyful.

Gene.xix.c / Ieremye.l.b. / Deu.xxviii.c.

G Their voyce roreth lyke the ragyng see, they ryde vpon horses, and come weaponed to fyght agaynste the: O Babylon. As sone as the kynge of Babylon heareth tell of thē, his handes shall waxe feble: Sorowe and heuynes shall com vpon him, as a woman trauaylynge with childe. Beholde, lyke as ÿ Lyon commeth vp from the pleasaunt medowes of Iordane vnto the grene pastures of Ethan, so wyll I dryue thē forth, & make them runne agaynste her. But whome shall I chose out, and ordeyne to suche a thynge? For who is lyke me, or who will stryue with me? or what shepherde maye stande agaynst me? Therfore heare the counsell that the Lorde hath gyuen vpon Babylon, and the deuyce that he hathe taken vpon the lande of the Caldees. The leest amonge the people shall teare them in peces, and loke what pleasaunt thyng they haue: they shal lay it wast. The noyse at the wynnyng of Babylon shal moue the earthe, and the crye shall be herde amonge the Gentyles.

CAPI. LI.

THus hath the Lorde sayde: beholde, I wyll rayse vp a perelous winde agaynste Babylon and her cytzens, that beare euyll wyll agaynste me. I wyll sende also into Babylon fanners, to fanne her out and to destroye her lande: for in the daye of her trouble they shall be aboute her on euery syde: Moreouer, the Lorde hath said vnto the bowe men, and to them that clyme ouer the walles in brest places: Ye shall not spare her young mē: kyl downe all her hoste. Thus ÿ slayne shal fal downe in ÿ lād of the Caldees, and the wounded in ÿ stretes. As for Israell and Iuda, they shall not be forsaken, of theyr God, of the Lorde of Hoostes, of the holy one of Israel: no, though they haue fylled all their lande full of synne. Flee awaye frō Babylō, euery mā saue his lyfe. Let no mā hold his tōge to her wyckednes, for ÿ tyme of the Lordes vengeaunce is come, yea he shall rewarde her agayne. Babylon hath bene in the Lordes hand a golden cuppe, that maketh all landes dronken. Of her wyne haue all people droncken, therfore are they oute of theyr wyttes. But sodenly is Babylon fallen and destroyed. Mourne for her, brynge playsters for her woundes, yf she maye peraduenture be healed agayne. We wolde haue made Babylon hole (saye they) but she is not recouered. Therfore wyll we let her alone, and go euery mā into his owne countrey. For her iudgement is come in to heauen, and is gone vp to the cloudes. And therfore come on, we wyll shewe Sion the worke of the Lorde oure God.

Ierem. / Esay. / Ierem. / Esay. Apoca.

B Make sharpe the arowes, and fyll the quyuers: for the Lorde shall rayse vp the spirite of the kynge of the Medes, whiche hath already a desyre to destroy Babylon. This shal be the vengeaūce of the Lord, and the vengeaunce of his temple.

Set vp tokens vpon the walles of Babylon, make youre watche stronge, set youre watch men in araye, yea holde pryuie watches: and yet for all that shall the Lorde go forth with the deuyce, whiche he hath taken vpon them that dwell in Babylon.

O thou that dwellest by the great waters, O thou that hast so great treasure and ryches, thyne ende is come: and the rekening of thy wynnynges. The Lord of hostes hath sworne by hym self, that he wyl ouerwhelme the with men lyke greshoppers in nombre, which with a courage shall crye Alarum alarum agaynste the. Yea euen the Lorde of hostes, that with his power made the earth with his wisdome prepared the round world, and with his discrecion spredde oute the heauens. As sone as he letteth his voyce be herd the waters in the ayre waxe fearce: He draweth vp the cloudes frome the endes of the earthe. He turneth the lyghtenynges to rayne, he bryngeth the wyndes oute of their secrete places. By the reason of wysdome, all men are become fooles. Confounded be all the casters of ymages: For the thynge that they make, is but disceyte, and hathe no brethe. Vayne is it, and worthy to be laughed at: and in the tyme of vysitacion, it shall perysshe.

E Neuerthelesse the porcion of Iacob is none suche: but he that made all, whose name is the Lorde of hostes, is the rodde of his inheritaunce. Thou breakest my weapons of warre, and yet thorow the I haue scatered the nacions and kyngdomes: Thorow the haue I scatred horse and horseman, yea the charettes, and suche as sate vpon them: Thorowe the I haue scattered man and woman, olde and yonge, bacheler and mayden.

Thorowe the, I haue scattered the shepeherde and his flocke, the husbande man, and his catel, the princes and the rulers. Therfore wil I rewarde the citye of Babylon, and all her citezyns the Caldees, with al the euil whiche they haue wone vnto Syon: yea that ye youre selues shall se it, saythe the Lorde. Beholde, I come vpon the (thou noysome hyll) sayth the Lorde: thou that destroyest all landes. I wil stretche out my hand ouer the, and cast the downe from the stony rockes: & will make the a brente hyll, so that neither corner stones ne pinacles, ne foundacion stones shal be taken any more out of the, but waste and desolate shalte thou lye for euer more saythe the Lorde.

Set vp a token in the lande: blowe the trompettes amonge the Heathen, prouoke the nacyons agaynste her, call the kyngdomes of Ararat, Menni, and Ascanes agaynste her: nombre oute Taphsar agaynste her: brynge as greate a sorte of horses agaynste her, as yf they were greshoppers. Prepare agaynste theym the people of the Medes, with their kynges, prynces, and all theyr chiefe rulers, yea and the hole lande that is vnder them.

The lande also shall shake and be afrayde when the deuice of the Lorde shal come forth agaynst Babylon, to make the lande of Babylon so waste, that no man shall dwell any more therin. The worthyes of Babylon shal leaue the batayle, and kepe theym selues in stronge holdes, theyr strengthe hathe fayled them, they shal be lyke women. Their dwellynge places shall be brente vp, theyr barres shall be broken. One pursuaunt shall mete an other, yea one poste shall come by an other to brynge the king of Babylon tidinges: that his city is taken on euery syde, the fordes occupyed the fennes brent vp, and the souldiers sore afrayde.

D For thus saythe the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: the doughter of Babylon hathe bene in her tyme lyke as a thresshynge floore, but shortly shall her haruest come. Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon hath deuoured and destroyed me, he hath made me an emptye vessell, he swalowed me vp lyke a dragon, and fylled his belye with my delycates: he hath caste me oute, he hath taken my substaunce awaye, and the thyng that was left me, hath he caryed vnto Babylon, saythe the doughter that dwelleth in Sion: yea and my bloude also vnto the Caldees, sayth Ierusalem. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: Behold I wyll defende thy cause, and auenge the: I wyl drynke vp her see, and drye vp her water sprynges.

E Babylon shall become an heape of stones, a dwelling place for dragons, a fearfulnesse and wondring, bicause no mā dwelleth there. They shall rore togyther lyke lyons, and as the yonge lyons when they be angry, so shall they bende them selues. In their heate I shal set drinke before them, and they shall be dronken for ioye: Then shal they slepe an euerlastinge slepe, and neuer wake, sayth the Lorde. I shal cary them down to be slayn like shepe, like wethers and gotes.

Esaye.xxi.b / Ieremye.li.d

O, how was Sesach wonne? O how was the glorye of the hole lande taken? Howe happeneth it that Babylon is so wondred at amonge the Heathen? The see is rysen ouer Babylō, and hath couered her with his great waues. Her cities are layde waste, the lande lyeth vnbuylded & voyde: it is a land where no man dwelleth, and where no man trauayleth thorow. Moreouer I wyll vysyt Bel at Babylon: and the thyng that he hath swalowed vp: that same shal I plucke out of his mouth. The Gentyles also shal run no more vnto hym: yea and the walles of Babylon shall fall

Ieremye.l.a. / Esay.xlvi.a / Danie.xiiii.d

O my people, come out of Babylon, that euery man maye saue his lyfe, from the fearefull wrath of the Lorde. Be not faynte herted, and feare not at euery rumour that shall be herde in the lande: for euerye yere bryngeth newe tydynges, yea straunge wyckednesse and lordshyp. And lo, the tyme commeth that I wyll vysyte the ymages of Babylon, and the hole lande shall be confounded, yea and her slayne shall lye in the myddest of her: Heuen and erth with all that is therin, shall reioyse ouer Babylon, when the destroyers shall come vpon her from the Northe, saythe the Lorde.

F Lyke as Babylon hath beaten downe and slayne many of Israel, so shall there fall many and be slayne in all her kyngdome. Ye that haue escaped the swearde, haste you, stande not styll, remembre the Lorde a farre of: and thynke vpon Ierusalem, for we were ashamed to heare the blasphemyes: oure faces were couered with shame, bicause the straūge aleauntes came in to the Sanctuarye of the Lorde. Wherfore beholde (sayth the Lorde) the tyme commeth that I wyl vysit the ymages of Babylon, and thorowe the hole lande

Ieremye.l.c.

Jeremy xlix.d. they shall mourne and kall. Though Babylō clymed vp in to heuen, and kept her power on hye: yet shall I sende her destroyers, sayth the Lorde.

A pyteous crye shall be herde from Babylon, and a greate myserye krome the lande of the Caldees: when the Lord destroyeth the, and when he driueth oute the hye stomacke, and proude boostyng, wherwith they haue ben as furyous as the waues of great water flodes, and made greate crakes with their wordes. For the destroyers shall come vpon her, (euen vpon Babylon) whiche shall take her worthyes, and breake theyr bowes: for God is disposed to auenge him selfe vpon theym, and sufficiently to recōpence them. Yea (sayth the Lorde) I wyll make theyr Pryces, their wyse men, theyr chyefe rulers and all theyr worthyes dronken: so that they shall slepe an euerlastyng slepe, and neuer wake: Thus sayth the kynge, whose name is the Lorde of hostes.

Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: The thycke wall of Babylon shall be broken, and her proude gates shall be brente vp. And the thing that the Gentyles and the people haue wrought with greate trauayle & labour, shall come to nought, and be consumed in the fyre.

This is the charge that Jeremy gaue vnto Saraiah the son of Nerias, the son of Maasiah, when he went towarde Babylon with Sedechias the kyng of Juda, in the fourth yere of his raigne. Now this Saraiah was a peaceable prince. Jeremy wrote in a boke all the mischefe that shulde come vpon Babylon, yea and al these sermons that be written against Babylon, and gaue Saraiah this charge: When thou commest vnto Babylon, se that thou rede all these wordes and saye: O Lorde thou art determined to rote out this place, so that neyther people nor cattell shall dwelle there any more, but to lye waste for euer: and whē thou hast red out the boke, bynde a stone to it, and cast it in the myddest of Euphrates and say: Euen thus shal Babylon sinke, and be thrust downe with the burthen of trouble that I wil bring vpon her: so that she shal neuer come vp agayne. Thus farre are the prophecynges of Jeremye.

The repeteth the raygne of Sedechias. Jerusalem is taken of the Caldees. Sedechias sonnes are kylled before his face, and his eyes put out. The cytye is burned. The temple is spoyled and robbed. They that were lefte in Jerusalem, are caryed to Babylon. Kynge Joakym is brought forth of prison, and fedde lyke a kynge.

CAPL. LII.

SEdechias was one and twenty yere olde when he was made kyng, and he raigned eleuen yere in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Hamutal, Jeremyes doughter of Lobnah. He lyued wyckedly before the Lorde euen as Joakim dyd. Wherfore the Lorde was angrye at Jerusalem and Juda, so longe tyll he had cast them out of his presence. And Sedechias fel krome the kynge of Babylon. But in the nyneth yere of his raygne, in the tenth moneth, the tenth daye of the moneth, it happened that Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon with all his host came before Jerusalem, and besieged it, and made them bulwarkes rounde about it. And this besieging of the city endured vnto the eleuenth yere of kynge Sedechias.

And in the fourth moneth, the nyneth daye of the moneth, there was so greate honger in the city, that there were no more vitaples for the people of the lande. So all the souldyers brake away, and fled out of the city by nyghte thorowe the waye of the porte betwene the two walles by the kynges gardeyn. Now the Caldees badde compassed the citye rounde about, yet went these men their waye toward the wildernesse.

And so the Caldees folowed vpon them, and toke Sedechias the kynge in the feldes of Jericho, when his hoste was run from hym. So they caryed the kynge awaye prysoner to Reblath, vnto the kynge of Babylon in the lande of Hemath, where he gaue iudgement vpon him.

The king of Babylon also caused Sedechias sonnes to be slayne before his face, yea and put al the princes of Juda to deth at Reblath. Moreouer he put out the eyes of Sedechias, caused him to be bounde with cheynes, to be caryed vnto Babylon: and let him lye in prison tyll he dyed.

Now the tenth daye of the fyfth moneth in the nyneth yere of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilon, Nabuzardan the chiefe capitayne and the kynge of Babylons seruauntes came vnto Jerusalem, and brente the house of the Lorde.

He brent also the kynges palace, all the houses and all the gorgious buyldynges in Jerusalem.

And the hole hoost of the Caldees that were with the chyefe Capitayne, brake downe the walles of Jerusalem rounde about.

As for the poore people, and suche folke as yet was left in the citye, whiche also were fallen to the king of Babylon, yea and what people as yet remayned: Nabuzardan the chyefe Capitayne caryed them awaye prysoners.

But the poore people of the countreye dyd Nabuzardan the chyefe Capitayne leaue in the lande, to occuppe the vynyardes and feldes.

The Caldees also brake the brasen pilles that were in the house of the Lorde, yea the seate and the brasen Lauer that was in the house of the Lorde: and caryed all the metal of them vnto Babylon.

They toke awaye also the Cauldrons, Shouelles, Fleshe hookes, Spynckles, Spones, and all the brasen vessell that was occuppyed occupyed in the seruice: with the basens, coles pannes, Spynckters, pottes, candelsticks, spones, and cuppes: wherof some were of golde, and some of syluer.

The chiefe Capitayne toke also the two pyllers, the lauer, the twelue brasen bullockes that stode vnder the seate, whiche kynge Salomon made in the house of the Lorde: and all the vessell conteyned so moche metal that it might not be weyed. For euery pyller was eyghtene cubytes hye, and the rope that went about it was twelue cubytes and foure fyngers thycke and round: Now vpon the rope were brasen knoppes, and euery knop was .v. cubytes hye: and vpon the knoppes were hoopes and pomegranettes round about of clene brasse.

After this maner were both the pyllers fashioned with the pomgranettes, wherof there were an hundred four score and sixtene which hanged vpon the hoopes round aboute. The chyefe Capitayne also toke Saraiah the hye priest, and Sophonias that was chiefe next him, and the thre kepers of the treasurye. He toke out of the citye a chamberlayne whiche was a capitayne of the souldyers, and seuen men that were the kinges priuauntes, which were founde in the citye: and Sopher a capitayne that vsed to muster the men of warre: with thre score men of the countrey that were taken in the citye. These Nabuzardan the chiefe Capitayne toke, and caryed them to the kynge of Babylon vnto Reblath: and the kynge of Babylon caused them to be put to deathe at Reblath in the land of Hemath. So thus Juda was leade awaye captyue, out of his owne lande. This is the summe of the people, whome Nabuchodonosor led awaye captyue.

In the seuenth yere of his raygne, he caryed awaye of the Jewes, thre thousande and xxiij. In the eyghteenth yere Nabuchodonosor caryed awaye from Jerusalem eight hundred and two and eyghtye persons. In the thre and twenty yere of Nabuchodonosor, Nabuzardan the chiefe Capitayne toke awaye seuen hundred. xlv. Jewes prysoners. The hole sum of all the prysoners, is foure thousande and fyue hundred.

In the .xxxvij. yere after that Joakim the kynge of Juda was caryed awaye, in the xxv. daye of the .xij. moneth, Euilmerodach kynge of Babylon (the same yere that he raygned) gaue Joacin the kynge of Juda his pardon, & let him out of prison, and spake louyngly to him, and set his throne aboue the thrones of the other kynges that were with him in Babylon. He chaunged also the clothes of his prison, yea he ate with him all his lyfe long. And he had a continual lyuyng giuen him of the kynge of Babylon, euery daye a certayne lyuyng alowed him al the dayes of his life, vntyll he dyed.

BETH.

Jeremy.xiiii.c

She wepeth sore in the nyght, so that the teares run downe her chekes: for among all her louers, there is none that grueth her any comfort: yea her next frendes abhore her, and are become her ennemyes.

GIMEL.

Juda is taken prysoner, because she was defyled: and for seruynge so manye straunge goddes, she dwelleth now amonge the heathen. She fyndeth no rest, all they that persecuted her, toke her, and so she dwelleth amõg her ennemyes.

DALETH.

The stretes of Sion mourne, because no mã commeth any more to the solemne feestes. All her gates are desolate, her preestes make lamẽtacion, her maydens are carefull, and she her selfe is in great heuynesse.

HE.

Her enemyes are fallen vpon her heed, and haue put her to shame: because the Lorde hath chastened her for her great wickednesse: her chyldren are ledde awaye captyue before theyr ennemye.

VAV.

All the beautie of the doughter Sion is away, her princes are becom like wethers that fynde no pasture. They are dryuen away before their ennemye, so that they haue no more power.

ZAIN.

Now dothe Jerusalem remembre the tyme of her misery and disobedience, yea the sore and pleasure that she hath had in tymes past: seynge her people is brought downe thorow the power of their ennemye, and there is no man for to helpe her: her ennemyes stande lokynge at her, and laugh her Sabeth dayes to scorne.

HETH.

Jerusalẽ synned euer more and more, therfore is she come in decaye. All they that had her in honour, despise her: for they haue sene her fylthynesse. Yea she sigheth and is ashamed of her selfe.

TETH.

Her shyrtes are defiled, she remembred not what wold folow: therfore is her fal so great and there is no man to comfort her. O Lorde consydre my trouble, for myne ennemye hathe the vpper hande.

IOD.

The ennemye hathe put his hande to all the precious thynges that she had: yea euen before her eyes came the Heathen in and out of the Sanctuarye whome thou (neuerthelesse) hast forbydden to come within thy congregacion.

CAPH.

All her people seke their breed with heynesse, and selle what precious thynge euerye man hath, that giueth he for meat to saue his lyfe. Consydre, O Lorde, and se, howe vyle I am become.

LAMED.

O ye all that go fore by, beholde and se, yf ther be any sorow like vnto myne, wherwith the Lord hath troubled me in the daye of his fearefull wrathe.

MEM.

From aboue hathe he sent downe a fyre in to my bones and chastened me: he hath layde a net for my fete, and thrawen me wyde open: he hath made me desolate, so that I must euer be mournynge.

NVN.

The yoke of my transgression is come of the laste, with his hande hath he taken it vp, and put it aboute my necke. My strengthe is gone: the Lorde hathe deliuered me in to whose handes, from which I can not quite my selfe.

SAMECH.

The

The Lord hath destroyed all ỹ mighty men that were in me. He hath proclaymed a feest, to slaughter all my best men. The Lorde hath troden downe the doughter of Juda, lyke as it were a wyne presse.

AIN.

Therfore wo I wepe, and myne eyes gush out water: for the comforter that sholde quicken me, is farre fro me. My children are dryuen awaye, for why? the enemy hath gotten the ouer hande.

PHE.

Syon calleth out her handes, & there is no man to comfort her. The Lorde hath layde the ennemyes rounde aboute Jacob, and Jerusalem is as it were a menstruous woma in the myddest of them.

ZADE.

The Lorde is righteous, for I haue prouoked his ỹ countenaunce vnto angre. O take hede all ye people, and consydre my heuynesse: My maydens and my ponge men are led awaye into captiuitie.

KOPH.

I called for my louers (but they begyled me) for my preestes and counsellers, but they perished: euen whyle they sought for meat to saue their lyues.

RES.

Consydre (o Lorde) how I am troubled, my wõbe is disquieted, my herte turneth about in me, and I am ful of heuynesse. The swerd hurteth me without, and within I am lyke vnto deth.

SIN.

They heare my mourning, but ther is none that wil comfort me. All myne enemyes haue herd of my trouble, & are glad therof, because thou hast done it. But thou shalt bring forthe the tyme, whẽ they also shal be like vnto me.

THAV.

From the shal come al their aduersite, thou shalt plucke them awaye, euen as thou hast plucked me because of all my wyckednesse. For my sorow is very greate, and my herte is heuy.

CAPI. II.

ALEPH.

ALas how hath the Lord darkened the dugheter of Sion so sore in his wrath? As for the honour of Israel, he he hath caste it downe from heuen: how happeneth it, that he remembred not his own fote stole, when he was angry?

BETH.

The Lorde hath cast downe all the glorye of Jacob without any fauour: all the strong places of the doughter Juda hath he broken in his wrath, and throwen them down to the ground: her kyngdome and her princes hath he suspended.

GIMEL.

In the wrathe of his indignacyon he hathe broken all the ϕ horne of Israell: he hathe withdrawen his ryghte hande from the ennemye: yea, a flambe of fyre is kyndled in Jacob, and hath consumed vp al round aboute.

ϕ Horne here sygnyfyeth strengthe, power, nobylite and dominio.

DALETH.

He hathe bente his bowe lyke an ennemye, he hathe fastened his ryghte hande as an aduersarye: and euerye thynge that was pleasaunt to se, he hathe smytten it downe. He harye powred oute his wrathe lyke a fyre, in to the tabernacle of the doughter of Syon.

HE.

The Lorde is become lyke as it were an ennemye, he hathe caste downe Israell and all his places: yea, all his stronge holdes hathe he destroyed, and fylled the doughter of Juda with moche sorowe and heynesse.

VAV.

Her tabernacle (whiche was lyke a gardeyn of pleasure) hathe he destroyed: her hye solemne feastes hathe he put downe. The Lorde hath brought it so to passe, that the hye solemne feestes and Sabothes in Sion, are clene forgotten. In his heuye displeasure hathe he made the kynge and preestes to be despysed.

ZAIN.

The Lorde hathe forsaken his owne aulter, and is wrothe with his owne Sanctuarye, and hathe gyuen the walles of their towres in to the handes of the ennemye. Theyr ennemyes made a noyse in the house of the Lorde, as it hadde bene in a solemne feast daye.

HETH.

The Lorde thoughte to breake downe the walles of the doughter Syon: He stredde oute his lyne, and drewe not in his hande, tyll he hadde destroyed them. Therfore mourne the turrettes and the broken walles togyther.

TETH.

Her portes are fallen downe to the grounde, her barres are broken and smytten in sonder: her Kynge and Pynces are caryed awaye to the Gentyles. They haue neyther lawe ne Prophetes, nor yet any vysion frome the Lorde.

IOD.

The Senatoures of the doughter Syon syt vppon the grounde in sylence: they haue strowed asshes vpon theyr heedes, and gyrded them selues with sackcloth. The maydes of Jerusalem hange downe theyr heedes to the grounde.

CAPH.

Myne eyes begyn to fayle me thorow weping, my body is disquieted, my lyuer is poured vpon the erth, for the great hurt of my people, seing the children and babes dyd swowne in the stretes of the city.

LAMED.

Euen when they spake to theyr mothers: where is meat and drinke? for whyle they so sayd, they fel downe in the stretes of the city lyke as they had ben wounded, and some died in their mothers bosome.

MEM.

What shall I saye of the, O thou doughter Jerusalem, to whome shall I lyken the? To whome shall I compare the, O thou doughter Syon, to comforte the withall? Thy hurte is lyke a mayne see, who may heale the?

NVN.

Thy Prophetes haue loked out vayne and folisshe thinges for the, they haue not shewed the of thy wickednesse, to kepe the from captiuite: but haue ouerladen the, & thorow falsehed scattered the abrode.

SAMECH.

All they that go by the, clap their handes at the: hyssing and waggyng their heedes vpon the doughter Jerusalem, and saye: is this the citye that men call so fayre, wherin the hole lande reioyseth.

AIN.

All thyne enemyes gape vpon the, whispering and byting their tethe: saying: let vs deuoure, for the time that we loked for is come: we haue found and sene it

PHE.

The Lord hath fulfilled the thing that he was purposed to do: and performed that he had deuised long ago: he hath destroyed and not spared. He hath caused thyne aduersarye to tryumphe ouer the, and set vp the horne of thyne ennemy.

ZADE.

Let thyne herte crye vnto the Lorde, O thou citye of the doughter of Syon: let thy teares runne downe lyke a ryuer, daye and nyght: rest not, and let not the apple of thine eye leaue of.

KOPH.

Stande vp and make thy prayer in the first wateh of the night: poure out thyne hert like water before the Lorde: lift vp thyne handes for the lyues of thy yong children that dye of hongre in the stretes.

RES.

Beholde, O Lorde, and consyder, why hast thou gathered me vp so clene? Shal the women then eate theyr owne frute, euen children of a span longe? Shall the preestes and Prophetes be slayne thus in the Sanctuarye of the Lorde?

SIN.

Yong and olde lye behynde the stretes vpon the grounde, my maydens and yonge men are slayne with the swerde: whom thou in ye day of thy wrathful indignacion hast put to death: yea, euen thou hast put them to death, and not spared them.

THAV.

My neyghbours that are round about me, hast thou called, as it were to a feest daye: so that in the day of the Lordes wrath none escaped, neyther was any lefte behynde. Those that I had brought vp and nourished, hathe myne ennemy destroyed.

CAPI. III.

ALEPH.

I Am the man, that (thorowe the rod of his wrath) haue experience of misery.

He droue me forth, and led me: yea into darcknesse, but not in to light.

Agaynst me onely he turneth his hand, and layeth it euer vpon me.

BETH.

My flesshe and my skyn hath he made olde, and my bones hath he broken.

He hathe buylded rounde aboute me, and closed me in with gall and trauayle.

He hath set me in darcknesse, as they that be dead for euer.

GIMEL.

He hath so hedged me in, that I can not get out, and hath layed heuy fynckes vpon me.

Though I crye and call piteously, yet heareth he not my prayer.

He hath stopped vp my wayes with foure squared stones, and made my pathes croked.

DALETH.

He layeth wayte for me lyke a Beare, and as a Lyon in a hole.

He hathe marred my wayes, and broken me in peces, he hath layed me waste altogyther.

He hath bent his bowe, and made me as it were a marke to shoute at.

HE.

The arowes of his quyuer hath he shot, euen vnto my reynes.

I am laughed to scorne of all my people, they make songes vpon me, all the daye longe.

He hath filled me with bytternesse and gyuen me wormwod to drynke.

VAV.

He hath smytten my teth in peces, and rolled me in the dusse.

He hath put my soule out of rest, I forget all good thynges.

I thought in my self: I am vndone, there is no hope for me in the Lorde.

ZAIN.

O remembre yet my mysery and my trouble the wormwod and the gall.

Yea thou shalte remembre them, for my soule melteth awaye in me.

Whyle I cōsydre these thynges in my hert I get a hope agayne.

HETH.

Namely, that the mercyes of the Lorde are not cleane gone, and that his louynge kyndnes ceaseth not.

His fayethfulnesse is greate, and renneth it selfe as the mornynge.

The Lorde is my porcion, sayth my soule, therfore wyll I hope in him.

TETH.

O howe good is the Lorde vnto them, that put their truste in him, and to the soule that seketh after him.

O howe good is it with stylnesse to wayte and tary, for the helth of the Lorde?

O howe good is it for a man, to take the yocke vpon him from his youth vp.

IOD.

He sytteth alone, he holdeth him stylle, and dwelleth quietly by hym selfe.

He layeth his face vpon the earth, yf (percase) there happen to be any hope.

He offereth his cheke to the smyter, he will be content with reproues.

CAPH.

For the Lorde wyll not forsake for euer.

But though he do caste of, yet accordyng to the multytude of his mercyes, he recompeseth to grace agayne.

For he doth not plage, and caste out the chyldren of men from his herte.

LAMED.

To treade all the prysoners of the earthe vnder his fete.

To moue the iudgement of man before the most hyghest.

To condemne a man in his cause: The Lorde hath no pleasure in suche thynges.

MEM.

What is he then that sayth: there shulde somthynge be done without the Lordes cōmaundement?

Out of the mouth of the most hyghest goeth not euell and good?

Wherfore then murmureth the lyuynge man? lette him murmure at his owne synne.

NVN.

Let vs loke well vpon oure owne wayes, and remembre oure selues, and turne agayne to the Lorde.

Let vs lyfte vp oure hertes with our handes vnto the Lorde that is in heauen.

We haue bene dissemblers, and haue offended, wyll thou therfore not be intreated?

SAMECH.

Thou hast couered vs in thy wrathe, and persecuted vs, thou haste slayne vs without any fauoure.

Thou hast hyd thy selfe in a clowde, that our prayer shulde not go thorowe.

Thou haste made vs out cakes, and to be despysed amonge the heythen.

AIN.

All our ennemyes gape vpon vs.

Feare and snare is come vpon vs, yea destruction.

Holesprings of water gusshe oute of myne eyes, for the greate hurte of my people.

PHE.

Myne

Myne eyes runne, and can not ceasse, for there is no rest.
O Lorde when wylte thou loke downe frome heauen, and consydre?
Myne eye breaketh my hert, because of all the doughters of my cytye.

ZADE.

Myne ennempes hunted me out sharpely, lyke a byrde, yea and that wythout a cause.
They haue put downe my lyfe in to a pyt, and layed a stone vpon me.
They poured water vpon my heade, then thought I: nowe am I vndone.

KOPH.

I called vpon thy name, O Lorde, oute of the depe pytte
Thou haste herde my voyce, and haste not turned awaye thine eares fro my sygynge and crienge.
Thou haste enclyned thy selfe vnto me, when I called vpon the, and hast sayd: feare not.

RES.

Thou (O Lord) hast mayntayned the cause of my soule, and haste redemed my lyfe.
O Lorde, thou haste sene my blaphemers take thou my cause vpon the.
Thou hast well consydred howe they go a bout to do me harme, and that al theyr counsels are agaynste me.

SIN.

Thou hast herde theyr dispytfull wordes (O Lorde) yea and all theyr ymaginacyons agaynste me.
The lyppes of myne ennempes, and theyr deuyces that they take agaynste me, all the daye longe.
Thou seest also theyr sytynge downe and theyr rysynge vp, they make theyr songes of nothinge but of me.

THAV.

Rewarde theym (O Lorde) accordynge to the workes of theyr handes.
Gyue them the thynge, that theyr owne herte is afrayed of: euen thy curse.
Persecute them (O Lorde) with thyne indignacyon, and rote them out frome vnder the heauen.

CAPI. IIII.

ALEPH.

HOwe is the golde become so dymme? howe is the goodly coloure of it so sore chaunged? and the stones of the Sanctuarye thus scattered in the corner of euery strete.

BETH.

The chyldren of Syon that were alwaye in honour, and clothed with the moost precyous gold: howe are they now become like the erthen vessels whiche be made with the potters handes.

GYMEL.

The Lampes gyue theyr young ones sucke with bare brestes: But the doughter of my people is cruell, and dwelleth in the wylder nesse: lyke the Estrich es.

DALETH.

The tonges of the suckyng chyldren, cleue to the rofe of theyr mouthes for very thyrst. The younge children aske bred, but there is no man, that gyueth it them.

HE.

They that were wont to fare delycately, perysshe in the stretes: they that afore were brought vp in purple, make nowe meche of donge.

VAV.

The synne of the daughter of my people is become greater then the wyckednesse of Sodome, that sodenly was destroyed, and not taken with handes.

ZAIN.

Her abstayners (or Nazarees) were whyter then the snow or mylke: theyr coloure was freshe reed as the Corall, theyr beautye lyke the Saphir.

HETH.

But nowe theyr faces are very blacke: In so moch, that thou shouldest not know them in the stretes. Theyr skynne cleueth to theyr bones, It is wythered, and drome lyke a dyre stocke.

TETH.

They that be slayne with the swerde, are happyer then suche as dye of honger, and perisshe awaye famyshing for the fruites of the felde.

IOD.

The women (whiche of nature are pitefull) haue sodden theyr owne children with theyr handes that they myght be theyr meate in the miserable destruction of the doughter of my people.

CAPH.

The Lorde hath performed his wrath: he hath poured out the furyousnesse of his displeasure. He hath kyndled a fyre in Sion, which hath consumed the foundacions therof.

LAMED.

Neither the kinges of the earthe, ne all the inhabitauntes of the worlde, wolde haue beleued that the enemye & aduersary shoulde haue come in at the gates of the citie of Jerusalē.

MEM.

Which neuertheles is come to passe for the synnes of her prophetes, and for the wickednes of her preistes that haue shed innocentes bloude within her.

NVN.

So that these blynd men went stombling in the stretes, and stayned them selues with bloude, whiche els wolde touche no bloudy cloth.

SAMECH.

But they cryed vnto euery man: flee the defyyng, awaye, get you hence, touch it not. Yea (sayde they) ye must be vyle, ye must dwel among the Gentyles, & byde no longer hee.

AIN.

The counten aunce of the Lorde hath banished them, and shall neuer loke more vpō them: For they the selues neither regarded the preistes, nor pitied their elders.

PHE

Wherfore yet oure eyes fayle vs, while we loke for vayne helpe: seynge we be euer wayting vpon a people, that can do vs no good.

ZADE.

They laye so sharpe wayte for vs, that we cannot go safe vpon the streates: for oure ende is come, oure dayes are fulfylled oure ende is here.

KOPH.

Oure persecutours are swyfter then the Egles of the ayre, they folowed vpon vs ouer the mountaynes, and layed wayte for vs in the wildernes.

RES.

The very breth of our mouthe: euen the anoynted Lorde him selfe shall be taken in oure synnes, of whome we saye: Vnder his shadowe we shall be preserued amonge the heithen.

SIN.

And thou O (doughter Edom) that dwellest in the lande of Hus, be glad and reioyce: for the cuppe shall come vnto the also, which whan thou suppest of thou shalte be dronken.

THAV.

Thy syn is wel punyshed (O thou doughter Sion) he shall not suffre the to be carped awaye any more. But thy wickednesse (O doughter Edom) shall he vysyt, and for thy synnes sake, he shall leade the into captyuytye.

CAPI. V.

¶ The prayer of Jeremye.

CAll to remembraunce (O Lorde) what we haue suffred, consydre and se our confusyon. Oure inheritaunce is turned to the straungers, and oure houses to the aliantes, We are become carefull and fatherlesse, & our mothers are as the wydowes. We are fayne to drynke oure owne water for mony, and our owne wod must we bye with mony. Our neckes are vnder persecucyon, we are werye, and haue no rest.
Afore tyme we yelded oure selues to the Egyptians, and nowe to the Assyrians, onely that we myghte haue bred ynough. Oure fathers (whiche now are gone) haue synned, & we must bare their wyckednes. Seruauntes haue the rule of vs, and no man delyuereth vs out of their handes. We muste get our lyuynge with the peryll of oure lyues because of the drouth of the wyldernes.
Oure skynne is as it had bene drente in an ouen, for verye sore hunger. The wyues are rauyshed in Sion, and the maydens in the cytyes of Juda. The princes are hanged vp with the hand of the enempes, they haue not spared the old sage men, they haue take yong mens lyues from them, and the boyes are hāged vp vpō trees. The elders syt no more vnder the gates, and the young men vse no more playeng of Musyke. The ioye of our hert is gone, our mery quere is turned in to mournynge. The garlande of oure heed is fallen: alas, that euer we synned so sore.
Therfore oure herte is full of heuynesse, and oure eyes dymme: because of the hyll of Sion that is destroyed. In so moche, that the foxes run vpon it. But thou, O Lorde, that remaynest for euer more, and thy seate worlde without ende: wherfore wilt thou styll forget vs, and forsake vs so longe? O Lorde, turne thou vs vnto the, and so shal we be turned. Renue oure dayes as in olde tymes, for thou hast banysshed vs now long ynough, and hast bene sore displeased at vs.

¶ The ende of the lamentacyons of Jeremye.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE EZECHIEL.

¶ The tyme wherin Ezechiel prophecyed, and in what place. His offerynge and office. The vysyon of the four beastes. The vysyon of the wheles. The vysyon of the throne, and of the ymage about the throne.

CAP. I.

A IT chaunced in the thirtye yere the fyfth daye of the fourth Moneth, that I was amonge the prysoners by the ryuer of Cobar: where the heauens opened, and I sawe a vysyon of God. Nowe the fyfth day of the moneth made out the fyfth yere of kyng Joacins captruytye. At the same tyme came the worde of the Lorde vnto Ezechiel the sonne of Buzi the preest, in the lande of the Caldees by the water of Cobar, where the hande of the Lorde came vpon him.

And I loked, and beholde a stormy wynde came out of the Northe with a greate cloude full of fyre, which w his glystre lyghtened al rounde about. And in the myddest of the fyre it was all cleare, and as it were the lykenesse of foure beastes, whiche were fashyoned like a man: saue that euery one had foure faces and foure wynges.

B Their legges were streyght, but their fete were lyke bullockes fete, and they glystered, as it had bene fayre scoured metall. Vnder their wynges vpon al the foure corners they had mens handes. Their faces & their wynges were toward the foure corners: yet were the wynges so, that one euer touched an other. When they went, they turned the not about: but echone went streyght forwarde.

C Upon the ryghte syde of these foure, their faces were lyke the face of a man, and the face of a Lyon: But vpon the left syde, they had the face of an oxe, and the face of an Egle. Their faces also and their wynges were spred out aboue: so that two wynges of one touched euer two wynges of an other, and with the other they couered their body. Euery one when it went, it went streyght forwarde. Where as the spirite led them thither they went, and turned not about in their goynge.

D The fashyon and countenaunce of the beastes was lyke hote coles of fyre, euen as though burnynge cressettes had bene amõge the beastes: and the fyre gaue a glystre, and out of the fyre there went lyghtenyng. Whe the beastes went forwarde and backwarde, one wolde haue thoughte it had lyghtened. Nowe when I had well consydered the beastes, I sawe a worke of wheles vpõ the earth with foure faces also lyke the beastes.

E The fashyon and worke of the wheles was lyke the see. The foure wheles were ioyned and made (to loke vpõ) as it had bene one whele in an other. When one went forwarde, they went all foure, and turned them not about in their goinge. They were large, greate and horyble to loke vpon. Their bodyes we full of eyes rounde aboute them al foure. When the beastes went, the wheles went also with them: And when the beastes lyft them selues vp from the earth, the wheles were lyfte vp also. Whither soeuer the spirite went thyther went they also, and the wheles were lyfte vp, and folowed them: for the spirite of lyfe was in the wheles.

When the beastes went forth, stode still, or lyft them selues vp from the earth: then the wheles also went, stode still, and were lyfte vp, for the brethe of lyfe was in the wheles.

F Aboue ouer the hedes of the beastes there was a firmament, whiche was fashyoned as it had bene of the moste pure Chrystal, & that was spred out aboue vpon their heedes: vnder the same firmament were their wynges layde abrode, one towarde an other, and two winges couered the body of euery beest. And when they went forthe, I hearde the noyse of their wynges, like the noyse of greate waters, as it had bene the voyce of the greate God, & a rushyng togyther as it were of an hoost of men. And when they stode still, they let downe their wynges.

Nowe when they stode still, and had letten downe their wynges, it thondred in the firmament that was aboue their heedes. Aboue the firmament that was ouer their heades, there was the fashyon of a seate, as it had bene made of Saphir. Vpon ỹ seate there sat one lyke a man. I beheld him, and he was lyke a cleare lyghte, as it had bene all of fyre with in from his loynes vpward,

G And beneth when I loked vpon him vnder the loynes, me thoughte he was lyke a thynge fyre, that gaueth lyght on euery syde. Yea the shyne & glystre that lyghtened round aboute, was lyke a raynebowe, whiche in a raynye daye appeareth in the cloudes. Euen so was the symylitude, wherin the glorye of the Lorde appeared. When I sawe it, I fell vpon my face, and harkened vnto the voyce of him that spake.

¶ The prophete is sende to call agayne the people from theyr errour.

CAP. II.

AND then sayde he vnto me: Stande vp vpon thy fete (o thou sonne of man) & I wyl talke with the. And as he was cõmunyng with me, the spirite came in to me and set me vp vpon my fete: so that I marked the thyng, ỹ he sayd vnto me. And he sayde: Beholde, thou sonne of man: I wyll sende the to the chyldren of Israel, to those runnagates and obstinate people: for they haue taken parte agaynst me, and are runne awaye from me: both they and their forefathers vnto this daye.

Yea

Yea I wyll sende the vnto a people that haue rough byslages and styffe stomaches: vnto whom thou shalte saye on this maner: Thus the Lorde God him selfe hath spoken, that whether they be obedyẽt or no (for it is a frowarde housholde) they maye knowe yet that there hathe bene a Prophete amonge them.

L Therfore (thou sonne of man) feare them not, neither be afrayed of their wordes: for they shall rebell agaynste the, and despyse the.

Yea thou shalte dwell amonge scorpions: but feare not their wordes, be not abashed at their lokes, for it is a frowarde housholde.

M Se that thou speake my wordes vnto the, whether they be obedyẽt or not, for they are obstynate. Therfore thou sonne of man, obey thou all thynges, that I saye vnto the, & be not thou stynecked, lyke as they are a stynecked housholde. Open thy mouth and eate that I giue the.

N So as I was lokynge vp, beholde, there was sent vnto me an hande, wherin was a closed boke: and the hande opened it before me, and it was wryten within and without, full of carefull mournynges: alas, and wo.

¶ The Prophete beynge fedde with the worde of God with the constaunt boldenesse of the spirite, is sent vnto the people that were in captruytye. The punyshment of a curate that sheweth not the people theyr synnes.

CAP. III.

A FTer this sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, eate that, whatsoeuer it be: yea eate that closed boke and goo thy waye, and speake vnto the chyldren of Israel. So I opened my mouth, and he gaue me the boke for to eate, and sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thy belly shall eate, and thy bowels shalbe filled with the boke, that I gyue ỹ. Then dyd I eate the boke, & it was in my mouth swete then hony. And he sayde vnto me: thou sonne of man, get the soone vnto the house of Israel, and shewe them the wordes, that I commaunde the: for I sende the not to the people that hath a straunge, vnknowen, or harde speache, but vnto the house of Israel: Not to many nations, whiche haue dyuerse speaches and harde languages, whose wordes thou vnderstandest not. Neuertheles, yf I sent the to those people they wolde folowe the: But the house of Israel wyll not folowe the, for they wyll not folowe me: yea all the house of Israel haue styf foreheades and harde hertes. Beholde therfore, I wyll make thy face prevayle agaynste their faces, and harden thy foreheade agaynste their foreheades: so that thy foreheade shalbe harder then an Adamãt or flint stone: that thou mayste feare them the lesse, and be lesse afrayde of them, for they are a frowarde housholde.

He sayde moreouer vnto me: thou sonne of man, take dylygent hede with thyne eares to the wordes that I speake vnto the, & laye them in thine herte: and go to the prysoners of thy people, speake vnto them, and saye on this maner: Thus the Lorde God hath spoken: whether ye heare, or heare not. With that the spirite toke me vp. And I hearde the noyse of a greate rushynge and remouynge of the moste blessed glory of the Lorde out of his place. Ez. viii. a. c. d

I hearde also the noyse of the wynges of the beestes, that rushed one agaynst an other yea and the rattyng of the wheles, that were by them, which rushynge and noyse was very greate.

Nowe when the spirite toke me vp: and caryed me awaye, I went with an heuy and a sorowfull mynde, but the hande of the Lord comforted me ryght soone.

D And so in the begynnynge of the moneth Abib, I came to the prysoners (that dwelt by the water of Cobar, and remayned in that place, where they were: And so contynued I amonge them seuen dayes, beinge verye sorye.

And when the seuen dayes were expired, the Lorde sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of ma Ezec. xxxiii. b I haue made the a watchman vnto the house of Israel: therfore take good hede to the wordes, and gyue them warnynge at my cõmaundement.

E If I saye vnto the, concernynge the vngodlye man, that (without doubte) he muste dye, and thou gyuest hym not warnynge, ne speakest vnto him, that he maye tuerne frome his euyl waye, and so to lyue: Then shal the same vngodly man dye in his owne vnrighteousnes: but his bloude will I requyre of thyne hande. Neuertheles, yf thou gyue warnynge vnto the wycked, and he yet forsake not his vngodlynes: then shal he dye in his owne wyckednesse, but thou hast discharged thy soule. Preachers.

F Nowe yf a ryghteous man go from his righteousnesse, and do the thynge that is euell: I wyll laye a stomblynge blocke before him, & he shall dye, because thou hast not gyuen him warnynge: yea dye shall he in his owne syn, so that the vertue, whiche he dyd before, shal not be thought vpon: but his bloude wyl I requyre of thyne hande.

Neuertheless, yf thou exhorteste the righteous, that he synne not, and so the ryghteous do not synne: then shall he lyue, because he hath receyued thy warnynge, and thou hast dyscharged thy soule. And there came the hãd of the Lorde vpon me: and he sayde vnto me: Stande vp, and go into the felde, that I may there talke with the.

So when I had ysen vp, and gone forth in to the felde: Beholde, the glory of ỹ Lord Ezechel. i. d. stode there, lyke as I saw it afore, by the water of Cobar.

G Then fell I downe vpon my face, and the spirite came in to me, whiche set me vp vpon my fete, and sayd thus vnto me: Go thy way and sparre thy selfe in thyne house. Beholde (O thou sonne of man) there shall chaynes

be

be brought for the, to bynde the withall, so that thou shalt not escape out of them. And I wil make thy tunge cleue fast to the rofe of thy mouth, that thou shalte be domme, and not be as a chyder with them: for it is an obstynate housholde.

But when I speake vnto the, then open thy mouthe, and saye: Thus saythe the Lord God: who so heareth, let him heare: who so wyl not, let him leaue: for it is an obstynate housholde.

¶ The syege of the cytye of Jerusalem is signified. The longe contynuaunce of the captyuytye of Israel. An hunger is prophecyed to come in the captyuytye.

CAPI. IIII.

THou sonne of man: take a tyle stone, and laye it before the, and describe vpo it the citie of Jerusalem, howe it is besieged, howe bulwarkes and stronge dytches are grauen on euery syde of it: describe also tentes, and an hoost of men rounde about it.

Moreouer, take an yron pan, and sette it betwyxte the and the citie, in stede of an yron wal. Then set thy face towarde it, besiege it, and laye ordynaunce agaynst it, to wynne it. This shall be a token vnto the house of Israel.

But thou shalte slepe vpon thy left syde, and lay the synne of the house of Israel vpo the. Certayne dayes appoynted, thou shalte slepe vpon that syde, and beare their synnes. Neuertheles, I wyll appoynte the a tyme (to put of their synnes) e the nombre of the dayes: Three hundreth and.xc. dayes muste thou beare the wickednesse of the house of Israel. Whē thou hast fulfilled these daies, lye downe agayne, and slepe vpon thy right syde.xl. dayes, e beare the synnes of the house of Juda.

Numer. xiiii.e

A daye for a yere, a daye (I saye) for a yere, wyll I euer laye vpon the. Therfore set now thy face agaynst the besieged Jerusalē and discouer thyne arme, that thou mayste prophecy agaynst it.

Beholde, I wyll laye chaynes vpon the that thou shalt not turne the frome one side to an other, tyl thou hast ended the dayes of thy siege.

Wherfore, take vnto the wheate, barlye, beanes, grotwell sede Millium and fytches: and put these togyther in a vessel, and make the loues of breade therof, accordynge to the nombre of the dayes that thou muste lye vpon thy syde: that thou mayst haue breade to eate, for three hundreth and.xc. dayes.

And the meate that thou eatest, shall haue a certayne wayght appoynted: namely twen ty vnces euery daye. This appoynted meate shalt thou eate daylye, from the begynnynge to the ende.

Then shalte drynke also a certayne measure of water: Namely, the fyrste parte of an Hin shalt thou drynke daylye frome the begynnynge vnto the ende. Barlye cakes shalt thou eate, yet shalte thou fyrste strake them ouer with mans donge, that they maye be. And with that sayde the Lorde: Euen thus shal the chyldren of Israel eate their defyled breed in the myddest of the Gentyles, among whome I wyll scatter them.

Then sayd I: Oh Lorde God. Beholde, my soule was yet neuer stayned: for frō my youth vp vnto this hour. I yet neuer eate of a dead carkase, or of that whiche was slayne of wylde beastes, neither came there euer any vncleane flesshe in my mouth.

Wherunto he answered me, and sayde: Well then, I wyl graunt the to take cowes donge, for the dong of man, and to strake the breed ouer withall before them.

And he sayd vnto me: Beholde thou sonne of man, I will minysshe all the prouision of breed in Jerusalem, so that they shal wey their breed, and eate it with scarcenesse. But as for water, they shall haue a verye lytle measure therof to drynke. And when they haue no more breed ne water, one shall be destroyed with an other, and stampe awaye for their wyckednesse.

¶ The ryddle of the heares, by whiche is signified the destruction of the people. The causes of the angre of God towarde the people. The Lorde declareth the ryddle of the heares.

CAPI. V.

OThou sonne of man, take the thee a sharpe knyfe, namely a rasour. Take it, and shaue the heere of thy heed e beard. Then take the scales and the waighte, and deuyde the heere asunder. And burne the thirde parte therof in the fyre in the myddest of the citye, and cut the other thyrde parte in peces with a knyfe. As for the thyrde parte that remayneth, cast it in the wynde, and then drawe the bare knyfe.

Yet afterwarde take a lytle of the same, and bynde it in thy cote lappe. Then take a curtelye of it, and cast it in the myddest of the fyre, and burne it in the fire. Out of the same fire shal there go a flame vpon the hole house of Israel.

Moreouer, thus sayd the Lorde God: this same is Jerusalem, I set her in the myddest of the heathen and nacions that are rounde about her: but she hathe despised my iudgementes more then the Gentyles them selues, and broken my commaundementes more the the nacions that lye rounde about her: for they haue cast out mine ordinaunces, and not walked in my lawes. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: For so moche as ye with youre wyckednesse farre excede the heathen that dwell rounde about you: (for ye haue not walked i my lawes, neither haue ye kept myne ordinaunces.) Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God.

I wyll also come vpon the, for in the myddest of the, wyll I syte in iudgement, in the syght of the Heathen, and wyl handle the of suche a facion as I neuer dyd before, and as I neuer wyll do from that tyme forthe, and that bicause of all thyne abhominations. For in the, fathers shall de fayne to eate their owne sonnes, and the sonnes their owne fathers. Suche a sourse wyl I kepe in the, and the hole remnaunt wyll I scatter in to al the windes.

Wherefore as truelye as I lyue (sayth the Lorde God) seinge thou hast defyled my Sanctuarye with all maner abhominacions, and with all thy shamefull offences. For this cause wyll I also destroye the. Myne eye shall not owerse the, neither will I spare the.

One thyrde part within the, shal dye of the pestilence and of hōgre: An other thirde part shall de slayne downe round about the, with the swerde: The other thirde parte that remayneth wil I scatter abrode towarde al the windes, and drawe out the swerde after the. Thus I will perfourme my indignation, and stil my wrath against them and ease my selfe. So that when I haue fulfylled myne angre agaynste them, they shall knowe that I am the Lorde, whyche with a feruente gelousye haue spoken it.

Moreouer I wyll make the waste and abhorred before all the heathen that dwell about the, and in the syghte of all them that go by the: so that when I punisshe the in my wrathe, in myne angre, and with the plage of my hoote displeasure, thou shalte be a verye abhominacion, shame, a gasynge and wondring flocke amonge the Heathen that lye about the.

Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, e it shall come to passe, when I shote among them the perylious dartes of hongre, whiche shall be but deathy: Yea, therfore shall I shote them, bycause I wyll destroye you. I wyll encrease hongre, and minysh all the prouision of breed amonge you.

Plages and myserye wyl I sende you, yea and wylde beastes also to destroy you. Pestilence and bloodshedyng shal come vpon you, and the swerde will I bringe ouer you. Euen I the Lorde haue sayd it.

¶ The wrath that the people shall be plaged for the synne of Idolatrye. He prophecyeth the repentaunce of the remnaunt of the people, and their deliuerance. The destruction of the frowarde is also prayed.

CAPI. VI.

ANd the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou son of man, turne thy face to the mountaynes of Israel, that thou mayste prophecye vnto them, and saye: Heare the worde of the Lorde God, o ye mountaynes of Israell: Thus hath the Lorde God spoken to the mountaynes, hylles, valleys and dales.

Beholde, I wyll bringe a swerde ouer you, and destroye youre hye places: I wyll cast downe youre aulters, and breake downe your temples. Youre slayne men wyll I laye before youre goddes, and the dead carkases of the chyldren of Israel wyll I caste before their ymages, youre bones wyll I destroye rounde aboute youre aulters and dwellynge places.

The cityes shall be desolate, the hyll chapels layde waste: youre aulters destroyed, and broken: youre goddes caste downe, and taken awaye, your temples layd euen with the grounde, your owne workes clene rooted out.

Your slayne men shal lye among you, that ye maye learne to knowe howe that I am the Lord. Those that amonges you haue escaped Baruc.iiii.e the swerde will I leaue among the Gentiles, for I will scatre you among the nacions. And they that escape from you shall thynke vpon me amonges the heathen, where they shalbe in captiuitie.

As for that hoorishe and vnfaythful hert of theirs, wherwith they ran awaye fro me, I wil breake it: yea and put oute those eyes of theirs, that commit fornication with their idolles.

Then shal they be ashamed, and displeased with their selues, for the wickednesses and abhominations which they haue wrought, and shall learne to knowe howe that it is not in vayne that I the Lorde spake to bringe suche miserye vpon them.

The Lorde sayd moreouer vnto me: Smite thyne handes togyther, and stampe with thy fete, and saye: Wo worth all the abhominacions and wickednesses of the house of Israel, for bicause of them they shal perysh with the swerde, with hongre, e with pestilence. Who so is farre of, shall dye of the pestilence: he that is nye at hande, shall perysshe with the swerde / and the other that be besieged, shall dye of hongre.

Thus wyll I satisfye my wrothfull displeasure vpon them. And so shall ye lerne to know that I am the Lorde, when your slayne men lye amonge youre goddes, and aboute youre aulters: vpon all hye hylles and toppes of mountaynes, amonge all grene trees, amonge all thycke okes: euen in the places where they dyd sacrifyce to all their idolles. I wyll stretche myne hande oute vpon them, and wyll make the lande waste: so that it shall lye desolate and voyde, from the wyldernesse of Deblathath forthe, thorowe all their habitations, to lerne them for to know that I am the Lorde.

¶ The ende of all the lande of Israel shall sodenly come. The cause of the destruction therof. The prophete is commaunded to shewe the summe of the euylles that are at hande.

CAPI. VII.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me on this maner: the I call, o thou sonne of man. Thus sayth the Lord God vn to the lande of Israell: The ende commeth, yea verily the ende cōmeth vpon al the foure corners of the erth.

But now shal the ende come vpon the: for I wyll sende my wrathe vpon the and wyll punyshe the: accordynge to thy wayes, and rewarde the after all thy abhominacyons.

Eze.vii.b.iiii.c Myne eye shall not ouerse the, neyther wyl I spare the, but rewarde the accordynge to thy wayes, and declare thy abhompnacyons. Then shall ye knowe that I am the Lorde.

Thus sayethe the Lorde God: Beholde, one myserye and plage shall come after an other: the ende is here. The ende (I saye) that wayteth for the, is come alredye, the houre is come agaynste the, that dwellest in the lande.

B The tyme is at hande, the daye of sedition is harde by, and no glad tydynges vpon the mountaynes. Therfore I wyll shortly poure out my sore displeasure vpon the, and fulfill my wrathe vpon the. I wyll iudge the after thy wayes, and recompence the all thy abhominations.

Eze.vii.b.iiii.c C Myne eye shall not ouerse the, neyther wyll I spare the: but rewarde the after thy wayes, and shewe thy abhompnacyons, to lerne you for to knowe howe that I am the Lorde that smyteth. Beholde, the daye is here, the daye is come, the houre is runne oute, the rodde florysheth, wyl vnnelle waxeth greene, malicyous violence is growen vp, and the vngodly waxen to a staffe. Yet shall there no complaynte be made for them, nor for the trouble that shall come of these thynges.

D The tyme commeth, the day draweth nyer Who so bieth, let him not reioyce: he that selleth let him not be sory, for why? trouble shal come in the middest of all rest: so that the seller shall not come agayne to the byer, for neither of them bothe shall lyue.

For the vision shal come so greatly ouer al that it shall not be hyndred: No man also with his wyckednesse shall be able to saue his owne lyfe. The trompettes shal ye blowe and make you all redye, but no man shall go to the batel, for I am wroth with all the hole multitude.

E The swerde shall be without, pestylence and hongre within: so that who so is in the felde, shall be slayne with the swerde: and he Deut.xxxii.d. that is in the cite shall perisshe with hongre and pestilence.

And suche as escape and flee from amonge them, shal be vpon the hylles, lyke as the doues in the felde: euery one shal be afrayde because of his owne wickednesse.

All handes shal be let downe, and al knees F shall be weake as the water: they shal gyrde them selues with sacke clothe, feare shall fall vpon them. Their faces shall be confounded, *Esaye.xv.d Jere.xlviii.b *Sopho.i.d Eccle.v.b Prouer.xi.a. *& their heedes bald: their syluer shal lye in the stretes, and their golde shall be despysed: *Yea their syluer and golde maye not deliuer them, in the day of the fearfull wrath of the Lorde.

They shall not satisfye their hongry soules, neither fyll their empty belyes therwith: For it is become their owne decaye therowe their wickednesse: because they made therof not onely costlye iewels for their pompe and pryde, but also abhominable ymages and idols. For this cause wyl I make the to be abhorred.

Moreouer I wyll geue it in to the handes G of the straūgers to be spoyled, and to the wicked for to be robbed, and they shall destroye it. My face wyll I turne from them, my treasury shall be defyled: for the theues shall go in to it and suspende it. I will make clene rydaunce, for the lande is hole fylled with vnrighteous iudgement of innocent blood, & the cite is full of abhominations. Wherfore I wil bryng the moost cruel tyrauntes from amonge the heathen, to take their houses in possession. I will make their pompe to cease, and they shall take in their Sanctuarye. When this trouble commeth, they shal seke peax, but they shall haue none. One mischiefe and sorow shall folowe an other, and one rumour shall come after an other. Then shal they seke visions in vayne of their prophetes.

The lawe shall be gone from the preestes, and wysdome from the elders. The kynge shall mourne, the prynces shall be clothed in heupnesse, and the handes of the people in the lande shall tremble for feare. I wyll doo vnto them after their owne wayes, and accordynge to their owne iudgemenets wyll I iudge them: to lerne them for to know that I am the Lorde.

¶ In apperaunce of the similitude of God. Ezechiel is brought vnto Jerusalem in the spyrit. The Lorde sheweth the Prophete the Idolatries of the house of Israel, and chefely of the preestes.

CAPI. VIII.

IT happened that in the sixte yere, the fifte daye of the sixte moneth I sat in my house A and the Lordes of the counsel of Juda with me: and the hande of the Lorde God fell vpon there vpon me.

And as I loked vp, I saw as it were a lykenesse of fire from his loynes downeward, and and from his loynes vpwarde it shyned maruelous clere. This similitude stretched oute an hande, and toke me by the heery lockes of B my heed, and the spirite lyfte me vp betwixt Dani.ii.a heuen and earthe: and God broughte me in a vysyon to Jerusalem, in to the entrye of the inner porte that lyeth towarde the north: there stode an ymage, with whome be that hathe all thynges in his power, was berye wrothe.

And beholde, the glorye of the God of Israel was in the same place: euen as I hadde sene it afore in the felde. And he said vnto me: Thou sonne of man. Lyfte vp thyne eyes, and loke towarde the north. Then lyfte I vp C myne eyes towarde the north: and beholde, beside beside the port northward, there was an aulter, made vnto the ymage of prouocation in the very entryng in. And he sayd furthermore vnto me: Thou son of man, seist thou what these w? Seist thou the great abhominations that the house of Israel commit in this place which ought not to be done in my Sanctuary? But turne the aboute, and thou shalte se yet greater abhominations. And with þ broughte he me to the court gate: and when I loked: D beholde, there was an hole in the wal. Then sayd he vnto me: thou sonne of man, dygge thorowe the wall. And when I dygged thorowe the wall: beholde, there was a wore. And he sayd vnto me: Go thy waye in, and loke what wycked abhominations they wo there. So I went in and sawe: and beholde, there were all maner ymages of wormes and beestes, al idolles and abhominations of the house of Israell paynted euery one rounde aboute the wall.

There stode also before the ymages three score and ten lordes of the counsel of þ house of Israel: and in the myddest of them stode Jeazaniah the sonne of Saphan: And euery one of them had a censoure in his hande, and oute of the incense there wente a smoke, as it hadde ben a cloude. Then sayd he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, hast thou sene what the E matours of the house of Israel do secretly, euery one in his chambre? For they say: tush the Lorde seeth vs not, the Lorde regardeth not the worlde. And he said vnto me: Turne theyet agayne, and thou shalte se the greate abhominations that they do. And with that he brought me to the dore of the porte of the Lordes house towarde the north. And beholde there sate women mourenynge for Thamus. Then sayde he vnto me: haste thou sene this thou sonne of man? Turne the about, & thou shalt se yet greater abhominations.

F And so he brought me in to the inwarde courte of the Lordes house: & beholde at the porte of the Lordes house, betwixte the fore entrye and the aulter, there were fyue and twentye men, that tourned their backes vpon the temple of the Lorde, and their faces towarde the East, and these worshypped the sonne.

And he sayd vnto me: hast thou sene this þ G sonne of man? Thynketh the house of Israel that it is but a trysle, to do these abhominacions here? Shoulde they fyll the lande full of wyckednesse, and vndertake to prouoke me vnto vnger? Yea and purposely to caste vp their noses vpon me? Therfore wyll I also do some thynge in my wrothfull displeasure, so that myne eye shall not ouerse them, neyther wyll I spare them. Yea and though they crye in myne eares with loude voyce, yet wyll I not heare them.

¶ The destruction of Idolaters, and the conseruacyon of the ryghtous. They that shall be saued are marcked. They that are vnmarcked are slayne. A complaynte of the Prophete for the destruction of the people.

CAPI. IX.

HE cryed also with a loud voyce in myne A eares, sayinge: Come here ye rulers of the city, euery man with his weaponed hande to the slaughter. Then came there sixe men oute of the streete of the vpper porte towarde the Northe, and euery man a weapon in his hande to the slaughter. There was one amongest them that had on him a lynnen rayment, and a wryters pynchhorne by his syde.

These went in & stode besyde the brasen aulter/ for the glory of þ Lorde was gone away B Exod.xl.c from the Cherub, and was come vpon to the Rume.ix.c thresshold of the house, and he called the mā iii.Reg.viii.b that had the lynnen rayment vpon him, and the wryters pynchhorne by his syde, and the Lorde sayd vnto him: Go thy waye thorow the city of Jerusalem, & set this marke Thau Exod.xii.c vpon the foreheedes of them that mourne Ezech.vii.a and are sorye for all the abhominations that be done therin. And to the other he sayd that I might heare: Go ye after him thorow the city, slee, ouerse none, spare none, kyll and destroye both olde men and yong maydens, children and wyues.

But as for those that haue this marcke Thau vpon them, se that ye touch them not/ and begyn at my Sanctuarye. Then they be- Jere.xxv.b gan at the elders whiche were in the temple, xlix.b. for he had sayd vnto them: when ye haue de- i.Petri.iiii.c filed the temple, and fylled the courte with the slayne, then go your waye forth. So they went out, and slewe downe thorow the city. Now when they had wae the slaughter, and I yet escaped, I fell downe vpon my face, and cryed, sayinge: O Lorde, wilte thou then destroye all the residue of Israel in thy sore displeasure, that thou hast poured vpon Jerusalem? Then sayd he vnto me: the wyckednes of the house of Israell and Juda is verye great, so that the lande is full of bloode, and the city full of vnfaythfulnesse. For they say: Tushe the Lorde regardeth not the earthe, he seeth vs not.

Therfore wyll I vpon them, myne eye D Job.xxii.d shall not ouerse them, neyther wyll I spare Esaye.xxix.c them, but wyll recompence their wycked- Ezechiel.xxiii.d nesse vpon their heedes. And beholde, the Ezech.vii.a man that had the lynnen rayment vpon him and the wryters pynchhorne by his syde, tolde all the matter howe it happened, and sayde: Lorde, as thou hast commaunded me, so haue I done.

¶ Of the man that toke hote burnynge coles oute of the myddle of the wheles and of the Cherubyns, in token of the burnynge of Jerusalem. A rehersall of the vysyon of the wheles, of the beastes, and of the Cherubyns.

CAPI. X.

AND as I loked beholde in the firmament that was aboue the Cherubyns A Ezechiel.i.a there appered the symilitude of a stole of Saphir vpon them: Then sayde he that sate therin to him that had the lynen raymēt vpon him: Creepe in betwen the wheles that are vnder the Cherubins, and take thine hand full of hote coles out from betwene the Cherubyns, and cast them ouer the citye. And he creepte in that I myght se.

Now the Cherubyns stode vpon the right syde of the house, when the man went in, and the cloude fylled the innermer courte. But
ii. Para. viii. a the gloryo of the Lorde remoued frome the Cherubyns, and came vpon the threshold of the house, so that the temple was ful of cloudes, and the courte was full of the shyne of the Lordes glory. Yea and the sounde of the Cherubins wynges was herde in to the fore courte, lyke as it had ben the voyce of the almighty God when he speaketh.

Now when he hadde byddē the man that was clothed in lynen, to go and take the hote coles from the myddest of the wheles, which were vnder the Cherubyns: he wente and stode beside the wheles. Then the one Cherub reached forthe his hande from vnder the Cherubins, vnto the fire that was betwene the Cherubyns, and toke therof, and gaue it vnto him that hadde on the lynnen raymēt in his hande: whiche toke it, and went oute.

B And vnder the wynges of the Cherubyns, there appered the lykenesse of a mans hande: I sawe also foure wheles beside the Cherubyns, so that by euerye Cherub there stode a whele. And the wheles were (to loke vpon) after the facyon of the precyous stone of Thatis: yet (vnto the syght) they were facyoned and lyke as yf one whele had ben in an other.

When they wente forthe, they wente all
C foure togyther, not turnynge aboute in theyr goynge: But where the fyrst wente thyther wente they after also, so that they tourned not aboute in theyr goynge. Theyr hole bodyes, theyr backes, theyr handes and wynges, Ezechiel.i.b
yea and the wheles also were all full of eyes rounde aboute them all foure. And I herde him call the wheles Galgal (that is) a round boule. Euery one of them had four faces: so that the one face was the face of a Cherub, the seconde of man, the thyrde of a lyon, the fourth of an Egle, and they were lifted vp aboue. This is the beest that I saw at the water of Cobar. Now when the Cherubyns, went the wheles went with them, and when the Cherubyns shoke their wynges to lifte them selues vpwarde, the wheles remayned not behynde, but were with them also. Shortlye when they stode, these stode also: And when they were lyfte vp, the wheles were lyfte vp also with them, for the spirite of lyfe was in the wheles.

D Then the glory of the Lorde was lyfte vp Ezechiel.xi.d
from the threshold of the temple, and remayned vpō the Cherubins: And the Cherubins xliii.a.
flackred with their wynges, and lift them selues vp frome the earthe: so that I saw when they wente, and the wheles with them. And they stode at the east syde of the porte that is in the house of the Lorde. So the glorye of the Lorde was vpon them. This is the beast that I sawe vnder the God of Israel, by the water of Cobar. And I perceyued, that it was the Cherubyns. Euerye one had foure faces, and euerye one foure wynges, and vnder the wynges, as it were mennes handes. Nowe the fygure of their faces was, euen as I had sene them, by the water of Cobar, and so was the countenaunce of them: Euerye one in his goynge wente strayght forwarde.

¶ Who they were that made the people of Israel to straye. Agaynst these ye prophecyeth, shewynge them how they shall be dyspersed abrode. The reuynge of the herte commeth of God, otherwyse can we not walcke in his commaundementes. He threateneth them that leane vnto theyr owne counselles.

CAPI. XI.

MOreouer the spirite of the Lorde lyfte
a me vp, and brought me vnto the East porte of the Lordes house. And behold there were. xxv. men vnder the wore amonge whom I sawe Iaazaniah the sonne of Azur, and Pheltiah the sonne of Bananiah the rulers of the people. Then sayd the Lorde vnto me: thou son of man, these men ymagin mischiefe, and a wicked counsell take they in this citye, sayinge: tush, there is no destruction at hand, let vs buylde houses: this Ierusalem is the cauldron, & we be the flesh. Therfore shalt thou prophecy vnto them, yea prophecy shalt thou vnto them, o sonne of man. And with that fell ꝑ spirete of the Lord vpon me, and sayde vnto me: Speake, thus sayth the Lorde:

On this maner haue ye spoken (O ye house
b of Israel) and I knowe the ymaginacyons of youre hertes. Many one haue ye murthered in this citye, and fylled the stretes full of the slayne. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: The slayne men that ye haue layden the grounde in this citye, are the flesh and this citye is the cauldron: But I wyll bringe you oute of it: ye haue drawen oute Ezech.
the swerde, euen so wyll I also bringe a Matth.
swerde ouer you, sayth the Lorde God: I wyll dryue you oute of this citye and delyuer you in to your ennemyes hande, and wyll condemne you. Ye shall be slayne in all the costes of Israell, I wyll be auenged of you: to learne you for to knowe, that I am the Lorde.

This citye shall not be your cauldron, neither shall ye be the flesche therin: but in the costes of Israel wyll I punysshe you, that ye maye knowe, that I am the Lorde: in whose Leuit.
commaundementes, ye haue not walked ne Deuter.
kepte his lawes: but haue doone after the customes of the Heathen that lye rounde aboute you.

Now when I preached, Pheltiah the son of c Bananiah dyed, then fell I downe vpon my face, and cryed with a loude voyce: O Lorde God, wylt thou then vtterly destroye all the remnaunt remnaunt in Israel? And so the worde of the Lorde came to me on this maner: thou sonne of man: thy brethren, thy kynsfolke, and the hole house of Iuda, whiche dwell at Ierusalem, saye: they be gone farre from the Lord, but the lande is gyuen vs in possession. Therfore tell them, thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyll sende you farre of among the Gentyles, and scatre you amonge the nacions, and I wil halowe you but a litle in the landes where ye shall come.

Tell them also thus sayth the Lorde God: I wil gather you agayne out of the nacions, and bringe you from the countreyes where ye be scatred, and wil giue you the land of Israel agayne: and thyther shall ye come. And as for all impedimentes, and all your abhominacions, I will take them awaye.

d And I will giue you one herte, and I will plante a newe spirite within youre bowels. e. That stony hert wyll I take out of your body, and giue you a fleshly hert: that ye may f walke in my commaundementes, & kepe mine ordinaunces and do them, that ye maye be my people, and I your God. But loke whose hertes are disposed to folowe their abhomynacions, and wicked lyuynges: those mens dedes wyll I bringe vpon their owne heedes, sayeth the Lorde God.

After this dyd the Cherubins lifte vp their wynges, and the wheles went with them, & the glory of the Lorde was vpon them. So the glory of the Lorde went vp frō the myddest of the citye, and stode vpon the mountes of the citye towarde the east. But the winde tooke me vp, and in a vision (which came by the spirite of God) it brought me agayne in to Caldea amonge the pyssoners. Then the vision ꝑ I had sene, vanished awaye fro me. So I spake vnto the pyssoners al the wordes of the Lord whiche he had shewed me.

CAPI. XII.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me,
g saying: Thou son of man, thou dwellest in the myddest of a frowarde housholde whiche haue eyes to se, and yet se not: eares haue they to heare, and yet heare they not, for they are a stubborn houshold. Therfore (o thou son of mā) make thy gere redy to ryst, and go forth by fayre day light, that they maye se: Yea euen in their sight shalt thou go from thy place to an other place: ꝑ peraduenture they will consydre that they be an vnobedient houshold.

Thy gere that thou hast made redy to flye withall, shalt thou beare oute by fayre daye light, that they maye se: and thou thy selfe shalt go forth also at euen in their sight, as h commaunded when ye flytteth. Digge thou rowe the wall, that they maye se, and beare B thorow it the same thing that thou toteste vp in their sight. As for thy selfe, thou shalte go forth in the darke. Hyde thy face that thou se not the erth, for I haue made the a shewe token vnto the house of Israel. Now as ꝑ Lord cōmaunded me, so I dyd: the gere that I had made redy, brought I out by daye. At euen I brake downe an hole thorow the wall with my hande: and whē it was darke I toke the gere vpon my shoulders, and bare them out in their sight.

And in the morning came the worde of the i Lorde vnto me, saying: Thou son of man, yͤ E
Israel that frowarde housholde aske the, and saye: what doest thou there? Then tel them, thus sayth the Lorde God: This punishmēt toucheth the chiefe rulers at Ierusalem, and all the house of Israel that dwel among thē. Tell them, I am your shewe token: lyke as I haue done, so shall it happen vnto you. Fyue shal ye also, and go in to captiuitie. The chiefest that is among you, shal take his shoulders in the darke, & get him awaye. He shal breake downe the wall to cary stuffe therthorow. He shall couer his face that he se not the ground with his eyes.

My lyne wyll I spreade oute vpon hym, D and catche him in my nette and carye him to Babylon, in the lande of the Caldees, which Ezech. xvii. e he shall not se, and yet shall he dye there. As xxxii. a.
for all his helpers, and all his hoostes, that be aboute hym, I wyll scattre them towarde all the wyndes, and drawe oute a swearde after them. So when I haue scattered them amonge the Heathen, and strowed them in the landes, they shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

But I wil leaue a litle nombre of the from k the sweerde, hungre, & pestilence, to tel all their abhommacions amonge the Heathen, where they come, that they may knowe how that I am the Lorde.

l vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, with E a fearefull tremblynge shalte thou eate thy breed, with carefulnesse and sorow shalt thou drynke thy water. And vnto the people of the lande speake thou on, this maner. Thus sayth the Lorde God, to them that dwell in Ierusalem, and to the lande of Israel: Ye shall eate youre breed with sorowe, and drynke youre water with heynesse: Yea, the lande with the fulnesse therof shall be layd waste, for the wyckednesse of them that dwel therin. And the cityes that now be wel occupyed, shall be voyde, and the lande desolate, that ye maye knowe, how that I am the Lorde.

Yet came the worde of the Lorde vnto
m me agayne, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, F
what maner of byworde is that, whiche ye vse in the lande of Israell, sayinge: Tusshe seinge that the dayes are so slacke in commynge, all the vysions are of none effecte Tell theym therfore, thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyll make that byworde to cease, so ꝑ it shal no more be cōmonly vsed in Israel.

But say this vnto them: The dayes are at hande, that euery thing whiche hath ben prophecied, shal be fulfilled. There shal no vision be in vayne, neyther any prophecye fayle among the children of Israel: for it is ỹ Lord that speke it: and what so euer I the Lorde speake shall be performed, and not be slacke in commynge.

G Yea euen in youre dayes (O ye frowarde housholde) will I deuise somthyng, and bryng it to passe sayth ỹ Lorde God. And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Behold thou sonne of man: the house of Israel saye in this maner: Tush as for the vision that he hath sene, it wil be many a daye or it come to passe: It is farre of yet, the thyng that he prophecieth. Therfore saye vnto theym: Thus sayth the Lorde God. All my wordes shal no more be slacke: loke what I speke, that same shal come to passe, sayth the Lorde.

¶ The worde of the Lorde agaynst false prophetes, whiche teache the people the counselles of their owne hertes.

CAPI. XIII.

A THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man. Speake prophecye agaynste those prophetes, that preache in Israell: and saye thou vnto them that prophecye oute of theyr owne hertes: Heare the worde of the Lorde: Thus False prophetes. sayth the Lorde God: Wo be vnto those folyshe prophetes that folow their owne spirite, and speake where they se nothynge. O Israell, thy prophetes are lyke the foxes vpon the dyre felde: For they stande not in the gappes, neither make they an hedge for the house of Israel, that men might abide the peryll in the daye of the Lorde. Vayne thynges they se: and tell lyes to maynteyne their preachynges withall. The Lorde (saye they) hath spoken it, when in very dede the Lorde hathe not sent them. Vayne visions haue ye sene, and spoken false prophecyes, when ye saye: the Lorde hathe spoken it, where as I neuer sayd it.

B Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: Bicause your wordes be vayne, and ye seke oute lyes: Behold, I wyll vpon you, sayth the Lorde. Myne handes shall come vpon the prophetes that loke out vayne thynges, and preache lyes: they shall not be in the counsell of my people, nor wrytten in the boke of the house of Israel, neyther shal they come in the lande of Israell: that ye maye knowe, how that I am the Lorde God. And that for this

Jerem.viii.b cause: they haue discerned my people, and tolde them of pear, where no pear was. One letteth vp a walle, and they dawbe it with loose clape. Therfore tell them which dawbe

Math.vii.c. it with vntempered morter, that it shall fall. For there shall come a great showre of rayne, great stones shal fal vpō it, and a sore stourme of wynde shall breake it, so shall the wall come downe.

Shal it not then be said vnto you: where is nowe the morter, that ye dawbed it withall? Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyll breake oute in my wrothfull displesure with a stormye wynde, so that in myne anger, there shall come a myghtye showre of rayne and haylestones in my wrathe, to destroye withall.

As for the wall that ye haue dawbed with vntempered morter, I will breake it downe, make it euen with the grounde: so that the foundacion therof shall remoue, and it shall fall: yea and ye your selues shall perysshe in the myddest therof: to lerne you for to knowe I am the Lorde.

Thus wyll I perfourme my wrathe vpon this wall, and vpon them that haue dawbed it with vntempered morter, and then wyll I saye vnto you: The wall is gone, and the dawbers are awaye. These are the prophetes of Israel, whiche prophecye vnto the cytye of Jerusalem, and loke oute visyons of pear for them, where as no pear is, sayth the Lorde God.

Wherfore (O thou sonne of man) set thy face agaynste the doughters of thy people, whiche prophecye oute of theyr owne hertes: and speake thou prophecye agaynste theym, and saye: Thus sayth the Lorde God: Wo be vnto you ỹ sowe pyllowes vnder all arme holes, and bolsters vnder the heedes bothe of yonge and olde, to catche soules withall. For when ye haue gotten the soules of my people in youre captiuitie, ye promyse them lyfe, and dishonoure me to my people, for an handfull of barlye, and for a pece of breed: when ye kil the soules of them, that dye not, and promyse lyfe to them that lyue not: thus ye dissemble with my people that byleueth your lyes.

Wherfore thus sayth the Lord God: Behold, I wil also vpō the pillowes, wherwith ye catch the soules in fleing: them wil I take from your armes, and let ỹ soules go, that ye catche in fleing.

Youre bolsters also wyll I teare in peces, and deliuer my people oute of youre hande: so that they shall come no more in your handes to be spoyled, and ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

Seinge that with youre lyes ye discomforte the herte of the ryghtous whom I haue not discomforted. Agayne: For so moche as ye courage the hand of the wycked, so that he maye not bourne from his wycked waye and lyue: therfore shall ye spye oute no more vanitie, nor prophecye youre owne gestynges: for I wyll deliuer my people oute of youre hande, that ye maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

¶ The Lorde denyeth his worde to the people for theyr synnes sake. The dysyplers of the worde deth the Lorde somtyme deceyue by false prophetes. A comfort of them that tlede vnto Babylon.

CAPI. XIIII.

Thre

A THere resorted vnto me certayne of the elders of Israel, & sate downe by me.
Then came the worde of the Lord vn to me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, these men beare their Idolles in their hertes, and go purposly vpon the stombynge blocke of theyr owne wyckednesse: how dare they the aske counsell at me? Therfore speake vnto them, and saye: thus sayth the Lorde God: Euery man of ỹ house of Israel that beareth his Idolles in his herte, purposinge to stomble in his owne wyckednesse, and commeth to a prophet, to enquyre any thynge at me by hym: vnto that man wyll I the Lorde my selfe gyue answeere, accordynge to the multytude of his Idolles: that the house of Israell maye be snared in their owne hertes, because they be cleane gone fro me, for their Idolles sakes.

B Wherfore, tell the house of Israel: thus sayth the Lorde God: Be conuerted, forsake your Idolles, and turne your faces from all your abhominacions. For euery man, (whether he be of the house of Israel or a straunger, that soiourneth in Israel) whiche departeth fro me, and taketh Idolles in his herte purposyng to go still stombling in his owne wickednesse, and commeth to a Prophet, to aske counsell at me therowe him: vnto that man wyll I the Lord gyue answeere, by mine

C owne selfe. I wyll set my face agaynste that man, and wyll make him to be an example for other, yea and a comen by worde: and wil rote him out of my people. ỹ be maye know that I am the Lorde. And yf that Prophete be disceyued, when he telleth him a worde: then I the Lord my selfe haue disceyued that Prophete, and wyll stretche forth myne hand vpon him, to rote him oute of my people of Israel: and they both shall be punyshed for their wickednesse. Accordynge to the synne of him that asketh, shall the synne of the Prophete be: that the house of Israel be led no more fro me thorow errours, & be no more defyled in their wyckednesse: but that they maye be my people, and I their God, sayth the Lorde God. And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man when the land sinneth agaynst me, and goeth forth in wyckednesse: I wyll stretche oute myne hand vpon it, and destroye all the prouision of their breed, and sende derth vpon them to destroy man and beste in the lande. And thoughe Noe, Daniel, and Job, these thre men were amōg thē, yet shal they in their ryghtousnesse deliuer but their owne soules sayth the Lorde God. If I bringe noysome beastes into the lande, to waste it vp, and it be so desolate, that no mā may go therin for beastes: yf these thre men also were in the lande, as truly as I lyue (sayth the Lorde God) they shal sauc neither sonnes ne doughters, but be onely deliuered them selues: and as for the lande, it shall be waste.

Or yf I bringe a swearde into the lande, and charge it to go thorow the land: so that I slaye owne man & beaste in it, and yf these thre men were therin; As truly as I lyue (sayth the Lorde God) they shall deliuer neither sonnes ne doughters, but only be saued them selues. If I sende a pestylence into the land, and poure out my sore indignacō vpō it in bloude, so that I rote out of it both mā and beast, and yf Noe, Daniel, and Job, were therin: as truly as I lyue (sayth the Lorde God) they shall deliuer neither sonnes ne doughters, but saue their owne soules in their ryghtousnesse. Moreouer thus sayth the Lorde God: Though I send my foure frou blous plages vpon Jerusalem: the swearde honger, perelous beastes and pestylence, to destroye man and beaste oute of it: yet shall there be a remnaūt saued therin, which shall bringe forth their sonnes and doughters. Be holde they shall come forth vnto you, and ye shall se their waye, and what they take in hande, and ye shall be cōforted, as touchinge all the plages that I haue brought vpon Jerusalem. G Jere.xxvii.b

They shall comforte you, when ye se their waye and workes: and ye shall knowe, how that it is not without a cause, that I haue done so agaynste Jerusalem, as I dyd, sayth the Lorde God.

¶ Of the vnprofytable wodde of the vyne tree is taken to the fyre, so (sayeth he) that Jerusalem shall be brent.

CAPI. XV.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, A sayinge: Thou sonne of man: What commeth of the vyne amonge al other trees? and of the vyne stock among al other tymbre of the greue? Do men take of it, to make any worke withall? Or maye there a naple be made of it, to hang any thynge vpō? Beholde, it is caste in the fyre to be brent, the fyre consumeth both the endes of it, the middest is brente to asshes. Is it mete then for a ny worke? No.

Seing then, that it was mete for no worke B beinge hole: moche lesse may there any thing be made of it, when the fyre hath consumed and brēt it. And therfore thus sayth the Lord God: Lyke as I caste the vyne into the fyre for to be brent, as other trees of the wod: Euen so wyll I do with them that dwell in Jerusalem, and set my face agaynste them: they shall go out frome the fyre, and yet the fyre shall consume them. Then shal ye know that I am the Lorde, when I set my face against them, and make the hād waste: because they haue so sore offended, sayth the Lorde God.

¶ The prophete intendynge to speake of the abhominacyons of Jerusalem: doth fyrste shewe the benefytes of God towarde it. Jerusalem is reproued of vnkyndenes, for her fornication with Idolles. He iustifyeth the wyckednesse of other people in comparison of the synnes of Jerusalem. The cause of the abhominacyons is to whiche the Sodomytes fell. Mercy is promysed. o the repentaunt.

CAPI.

CAPI. XVI.

A Gayne, the worde of the Lorde spake vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of mā shewe the cytye of Ierusalem their abhompnacions, and saye: thus sayth the Lord God vnto Ierusaleth: Thy progeny and kynred came out of the lande of Canaan, thy father was an Amorite, thy mother a Cethite. In the daye of thy byrth when thou waste borne, the strynge of thy nauell was not cutte of: thou waste not bathed in water to make the clene: ne waste neither rubbed with salte, ne swadled in cloutes: No mā regarded the so moche, as to do any of these thynges for the, or to shewe the suche fauoure, but thou waste vtterly caste out vpon the felde, yea dispised waste thou in the daye of thy byrth.

Then came I by the, and sawe the troden downe in thyne owne bloude, and sayd vnto the: thou shalte be purged from thyne owne bloude, from thyne owne bloude (I say) shalt thou be clensed. So I plāted the, as the blossome of thy felde: thou arte growen vp, and waxen greate: thou hast gotten a maruelous pleasaunt beautye, thy brestes are come vp, thy heare is goodly growen, where as thou wast naked and bare afore.

B Nowe when I went by the, and loked vpō the: beholde, thy tyme was come yea euen the tyme to bowe the. Then spred I my clothes ouer the, to couer thy dishonestie: yea I made an othe vnto the, and maryed my selfe with the (sayth the Lorde God) and so thou becamest myne owne. Then washed I the with water, and pourged thy bloude frome the. I annoynted the with oyle, I gaue the chaunge of raymentes, I made the shoes of Taxus leather: I gyrded the aboute with white silke, I clothed the with kerchers, I decked the with costly apparell. I put ringes vpon thy fyngers: a chayne about thy necke, spanges vpō thy forheade, eare ringes vpon thine eares, and set a beautiful crowne vpon thyne heade. Thus waste thou decte with syluer and golde, and thy rayment was of fyne white silke, of nedle worke and of diuerse colowres.

Thou diddest eate nothyng but fynnels, honye and oyle: maruelous goodly wast þ and beautyfull, yea euen a very Quene wast thou. In so moch, that thy beauty was spoke of amonge the heithen, for thou wast excellent in my beauty, which I put vpō the saith the Lorde God.

But thou haste put confydence in thyne owne beauty, and played the harlot, when thou haddest gotten the a name. Thou haste committed bordedome, with all that wente by the, and hast fulfylled their desyres: yea thou haste taken thy garmentes of diuerse colours, and deckte thyne aulters therwith, whereupon thou myghtest fulfyll thine bordedome, of suche a fashyon, as neuer was done ne shall be. The goodly ornamēts & Iewels whiche I gaue the of myne owne golde and syluer, hast thou taken, and made the mens ymages therof, and committed bordedome with all.

Thy garmentes of diuers colowres hast thou taken, and deckte them therwith myne oyle and incense hast thou sette before them.

My meate which I gaue the, as symnels, oyle, and hony (to feede the withall) that hast thou set before them, for a swete fauoure. And this came also to passe, sayth the Lorde God: Thou haste taken thine owne sonnes and doughters, whom thou haddest begotte vnto me: and these haste thou offered vp vnto the, to be their meat. Is this but a smal bordedome of thyne (thinkest thou) that thou slayest my children, and gyuest them ouer, to be brent vnto them? And yet in all thy abhompnacions and bordedome, thou hast not remembred the dayes of thy youth, how naked and bare thou wast at that tyme, and troden downe in thyne owne bloude. After all these thy wickednesse, (wo wo vnto the, sayth the Lorde) thou haste buylded thy stewes and brodel houses in euery place: yea at the head of euery stretе hast thou buylded the an aulter: Thou haste made thy beauty to be abhorred, thou haste laied out thy legges to euery one that came by, and multyplied thine bordome. Thou hast committed fornycacion with the Egyptyans thy neighboures, whiche haue moche fleshe and thus hast thou vied thyne bordedome, to anger me.

Beholde, I will stretch out myne hande ouer the, and will myndysshe thy store of foode and deliuer the ouer into the wylles of the Philistines thyne enemyes, which are ashamed of thy abhompnable ways. Thou hast played the bore also with the Assyrias, wyth out myghte not satisfie the: Yea thou haste played the harlot, & not had ynough. Thus hast thou styll committed thy fornycacion frome the lande of Canaan vnto the Caldees, and yet thy lust not satisfied. How saith I circumcyse thine hert (sayth the Lord God) seinge thou doest all these thynges, thou presumptuous hoore: buyldynge thy stewes at the heade of euery stretе, and thy brodell houses in all places?

Thou hast not ben as an other hoore, that maketh boste of her wynnynge, but as a wife that breaketh wedlocke, and taketh other in stede of her husbande. Gyftes are geuen to all other hoores, but thou gyuest rewardes vnto all thy louers, and offrest them gyftes, to come vnto the oute of all places, and to commyt fornication with the. It is come to passe with the in thy bordedomes contrary to the vse of other women: yea there hath no such fornication ben committed after the, seinge that thou proferest gyftes vnto other, and rewarde is geuen the: this is a contrary thynge.

Therfore heare the worde of the Lorde, O thou harlot, thus sayth the Lorde God. For so moche as thou hast spente thy money, and discouered thy shame, thorowe thy bordome with al thy louers, and with all the abhominations of thy idols of thy abhominacions in the bloude of thy children, whome thou hast geuen them: Beholde therfore I will gather togyther all thy louers, vnto whome thou hast made thy selfe common: yea, and all them whom thou fauourest, and euery one that thou hatest: & will discouer thy shame before the, that they all maye se thy fylthynesse.

Moreouer, I will iudge the as a breaker of wedlocke and a murtherer, and recompēce the thine owne bloude in wrathe and gelousy. I wyl geue the ouer into their power, that shall breake downe thy stewes, and destroye thy brodell houses: they shall stepp the oute of thy clothes, all thy fayre and beautyfull Iewells shall they take from the, and so lefe the syt naked and bare: yea they shall bryng the common people vpon þ, which shal stone the, and slaye the downe with their swordes. They shall burne vp thy houses, and punysh the in the syght of many women. Thus wil I make thy bordedome to ceasse, so that thou shalte geue out no more rewardes.

Shulde I make my wrathe to be styll, take my gelousye from the, be content, & no more to be displeased? seinge thou remembrest not the dayes of thy youth, but hast prouoked me to wrathe in all these thynges? Beholde therfore, I will bringe thyne owne wayes vpon thyne head, sayth the Lorde God: how be it, I neuer dyd vnto the, accordyng to thy wickednesse and al thy abhompnacyons. Beholde, all they that vse common prouerbes, shal vse this prouerbe also agaynst the: such a mother, suche a doughter.

Thou arte euen thy mothers owne dought ter, that hath caste of her husbande and her children. Yea thou arte the syster of thy sisters, whiche forsoke their husbandes and their children. Your mother is a Cethite, and your father an Amorite. Thine eldest syster is Samaria, she and her doughters that dwell vpō thy left hande.

I But thy yōgest sister that dwelleth on thy right hande, is Sodoma and her doughters. Yet hast thou not walked after their wayes ne done after their abhompnacions: but in all thy wayes thou hast bene more corrupte then they. As truely as I lyue, sayth þ Lorde God: Sodoma thy sister with her doughters, hath not done so eupl, as þ & thy doughters. Beholde, the synnes of thy syster Sodoma were these: Pryde, fulnes of meate, aboū dance and Idelnes: these thynges had she and her doughters. Besides that, they reached not their hand to the poore & nedy, but were proude, and dyd abhompnable thynges before me: therfore them I toke away, whē I had sene it. Neither hath Samaria done halfe of thy synnes, yea thou haste exceaded them in wyckednes: In so moche that in comparyson of all the abhompnacions whiche thou hast done, thou haste made thy systers good women.

As for their captyuatye, namely the captyuatye of Sodoma and her doughters: the captyuatye of Samaria and her doughters: I will bringe them agayne, so will I also bringe agayne thy captyuatye amonge the:

that thou mayest take thyne owne confusyō vpon the, and be ashamed of all that thou hast done, and to comforte them. Thus thy sisters (namely) Sodoma and her doughters, Samaria and her doughters, with thy selfe and thy doughters, shall be brought agayne to your olde estate.

When thou wast in thy pryde, and before G thy wickednes came to the lyght: thou wouldest not heare speake of thy syster Sodoma, vntyll the tyme that the Sirians with all their townes, & the Philistines with all that lye round about them, brought the to shame and confusyon: þ thou myghtest beare thyne owne fylthynes and abhompnacīō, saith the Lorde.

For thus sayth the Lorde God: I shulde (by ryght) deale with the, as thou hast done. Thou hast despysed the othe, and broken the couenaunte. Neuertheles, I will remembre the couenaunte that I made with the in thy youth, and so moche that it shall be an euerlastynge couenaunt: so that thou also remembre thy wayes, and be ashamed of them: that thou shalt receyue of me thy elder & yonger systers whom I will make thy doughters, & that bely the thy couenaunt. And so I will renue my couenaunt with the, that thou mayst knowe that I am the Lord: that thou maist thynke vpon it, be ashamed, and excuse thyne owne confusyon no more: when I haue forgyuen the, all that thou haste done, sayth the Lorde God. Iere. xxxi. e Hebre. viii. b

¶ The parable of the two Egles sygnifyeth that Sedechias, whiche contrarye to his othe had forsaken the frendshyp of Nabuchodonosor, turned hym selfe to the kyng of Egypt, and therfore perysshed. In expositon of, the parrable. ¶ prophecye of Christe.

CAPI. XVII.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, A saying: Thou sonne of man: put forth a darcke speakynge and a parable, vnto the house of Israel. and saye: Thus sayth the Lorde God: There came a greate Egle with greate wynges, yea with myghtye long wynges, & full of fethers of dyuerse colours, vpon the mounte of Lybans, & toke away from a Cedre tree, and brake of the toppe of his twygge, and caryed it in to the lande of Canaan, and set it in a cytye of marchauntes. He toke also a braunche of the lande, & planted it in a frutefull grounde, he brought it vn to greate waters, and set it as a willye tree therby.

Then dyd it growe, and was a greate vine stocke, but lowe by the grounde: thus there came of it a vyne, and it brought forth blossomes, and spred out braunches.

But there was an other Egle, a greate one B which had greate wynges and many fethers, and beholde, the rotes of this vyne hadde an hunger after him, and spred oute his braunches towarde him, to water his frutes. Neuertheles it was planted vpon a good grounde beside beside greate waters: so that (by reason) it E shulde haue brought out braunches & frute, & haue bene a goodly tree. Speake thou therefore, thus saythe the Lorde God: Shal this tree, thus sayethe the Lorde God: Shal this tree prospere? shall not his rotes be plucked out, his frute be broken of, his grene braunches wither and fade away? yea without rither stronge arme or many people, shall it be plucked vp by the rotes. Behold, it was plāted: shall it prospere therfore. Shall it not be dryed vp and wythered, yea euē in the thy tynge out of his blossomes, as soone as the D eāst wynde bloweth?

Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came
vnto me sayinge: Speake to that frowarde houshold: knowe ye not, what these thyn-ges do sygnifye? Tell them: Beholde, the kynge of Babylon came to Jerusalem, and toke the kyng and his princes, & led them to Babylon.

He toke of the kynges sede, and made a couenaunt with him, and toke an oth of him:
The Princes of the lande toke he with him
also, that the lande myght be holden in subiection, and not to rebell, but kepe the cou-enaunt, and fulfyll it. But he fell frome him, and sent his Embassadours in to Egypt that he myght haue horses and moche people.
Shoulde that prospere? Shulde he be kepte safe, that doth suche thinges? Or shulde he escape, that breaketh his couenaunt? As tru-Couenaunt breakers. E lye as I lyue sayth the Lorde God: euē lye at Babylon, in the place where the king dwelleth, that made him kinge: whose othe
he hath despysed, and whose couenaunte he hath broken. Neither shall Pharao with his greate hoost and multytude of people, mayn teyne him in the warre: when they caste vp dytches, and set vp bulwarkes to destroye moche people. For seinge he hathe despysed the othe, and broken the couenaunte (where as he yet gaue his hande therupon) and done
all these thinges, he shall not escape.

F Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: As truelye as I lyue, I wyll bringe myne othe that he hath despysed, and my couenaūt that he hathe broken, vpon his owne heade. I wyll caste my net about him, and catche him Ezechie.xii.d in my snare. To Babylon will I carye hym, xxxii.d there will I punysshe hym, because of the great offence that he made me.

As for those that fle frome him out of the hoost, they shall be slayne with the swearde.
The residue shal be scatered towarde al the wyndes: and ye shall knowe, that I ỹ Lord
haue spoken it.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: I will also G take a braunche frome an hyghe cedre tree,
and wyl set it, & take the vppermost twigge,
that yet is but tender, and plante it vpon an hye hyll: Namely, vpon the hye hyll of Sion wyll I wyl plant it: that it may bring forth twygges, and gyue frute, and be a greate cedre tree: so that all maner of foules maye byde in it: and make their nestes vnder the shadowe of his braunches.

And all the trees of the felde shall knowe that I the Lorde hath brought downe the hyghe tree, and set the lowe tree vp: that I haue dryed vp the grene tree, and made the dry tree to florysshe: Euen I the Lorde that spake it, haue also brought it to passe.

The sheweth that euery man shall beare his owne synne. To hym that amendeth is saluacion promy-sed. Deathe is prophecyed to the ryghtous which turneth backe from the ryght waye.

CAPI. XVIII.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me
on this maner: what meane ye by this cōmon prouerbe, that ye vse in the lande of Israel, sayinge: The fathers haue eaten soure grapes, and the childrēs teth are set on edge? As truely as I lyue sayth the Lorde God, ye shall vse this by worde no more in Israel.

Beholde, all soules are myne. Lyke as the father is myne, so is the sonne myne also.
The soule that synneth, shall dye. If a man be godly, and do the thyng that is equall and ryght, he eateth not vpon the hylles: he lif-teth not his eyes vp to the Idols of Israel:
he defyleth not his neighbours wife: he medeleth with no wemstrous woman: he greeueth no body: he giueth his detter his pledge agayne: he taketh none other mans good by violence: he parteth his meate with the hūgrye, he clothed the naked: he lendeth no thynge vpon vsury, he taketh nothinge ouer,
he withdraweth his hand from doing wrōge:
handleth faythfully betwyxt man and man:
he walketh in my commaundementes, and kepeth my lawes, & perfourmeth them faith fully: This is a rygutous man, he shal surely lyue saith the Lorde God.

If he now get a sonne, that is a murthe-rer, a sheder of bloude: yf he do one of these thinges (thoughe he do not al) he eateth vp
the hilles, he defyleth his neyghbours wife,
he greeueth the poore and nedy, he robbeth
spoyleth, he gyueth not the detter his pledge agayne, he lyfteth vp his eyes vnto Idols, &
medleth with abhominable thinges, he taketh vpon vsurye, & taketh more ouer. Shal this man lyue? he shall not lyue. Seinge he hath done all these abhominacions, he shall dye his blonde shall be vpon him.

Now if this man get a sonne also, that seeth all his fathers synnes, whiche he hathe done: and feareth, neyther doth suche like Namely, he eateth not vpon the mountaynes he lifteth not his eyes vp to the Idols of Israel: he defyleth not his neighbours wyfe,
he vexeth no man, he kepeth no mans pledge he neither spoyleth, ne robbeth any man, he dealeth his meate with the hungrye, he clo-theth the naked, he oppresseth not the poore, he receyueth no vsurye, ne any thinge ouer, he kepeth my lawes, and walketh in my commaundementes, This man shall not dye in his fathers synne, but shall lyue without fayle. As for his father: because he oppressed and spoyled his brother, and did wickedlye amonge

among his people: lo, he is dead in his owne synne. And yet say ye: Wherefore then shulde not this sonne beare his fathers synne? Therefore: because the sonne hathe done equitye &
E right, hath kept all my commaundementes,
and done them: therfore shall he lyue in dede.
The same soule that synneth, shall dye. The sonne shall not beare the fathers offence, nei-Ezechie. xxxiii.b ther shal the father beare the sonnes offence.
Deutro. xxiiii.b The righteousnesse of the ryghtous shall be vpon him, and the wyckednes of the wicked shall be vpon him selfe also. But if the vngodly wyll turne away frome all his synnes that he hath done, and kepe all my comman-dementes, and do the thynge that is equall & right: doubtles he shal lyue, and not dye. As for al his sinnes that he did before, they shal
not be thought vpō: but in his rightousnes ỹ he hathe done, he shall lyue. For haue I any Ezechie. xxxiii.b pleasure in the death of a synner, saythe the Lorde God: but rather that he conuert, and lyue?

f Agayne: if the ryghtous turne awaye
frome his rightousnes, and do iniquyte, ac-cordinge to all the abhompnacions, that the wycked mā doth shal he lyue? All the ryghttousnes ỹ he hath done, shal not be thought vpon, but in the faute that he hath offended withall, and in the synne that he hathe done,
he shall dye.

Ezechie. xxxiii.b And yet ye saye: Tush, the waye of the Lord is not indifferēt. Here therfore ye house of Israel: Is not my waye ryghte? Or are not your wayes rather wicked? Whē a right-tous man turneth awaye from his rightous-nesse, and medleth with vngodlynes: he must dye therin: yea for the vnryghtousnesse that he hath done, muste he dye. Agayne: when the wycked man turneth awaye frome his wickednesse, that he hath done, and doth the thynge whiche is equall and ryght: he shall saue his soule alyue. For in so moch as he re membreth him selfe, and turneth him frome
all the vngodlynesse that he hath vsed, he shal lyue and not dye.

G And yet sayth the house of Israel: Tush,
the waye of the Lorde is not equall. Are my wayes vnright, O ye house of Israell: Are not your wayes rather vnequall? As for me I will iudge euerye man, accordynge to his wayes, O ye house of Israell, sayth the Lord God.

Wherfore be conuerted, and turne you cleane from all youre wyckednesse, so shall there no synne do you harme. Caste awaye from you al your vngodlynesse, that ye haue done: make you newe hertes and a new spi-rite. Wherfore wyll ye dye, O ye house of Israel? seinge I haue no pleasure in the death Ezechie. xxxiii.c of him that dyeth, sayth ỹ Lord God. Turne you then, and ye shall lyue.

¶ The captyuptye of Jechaz and Joacin is signi-fyed by the lyons whelpes, and by the lyon. He setteth oute the prosperytye of the cytye of Jerusalem that is past, and the mysery therof that is present.

CAPI. XIX.

BVt mourne thou for the princes of Is- A raell, and saye: Wherfore laye thy mother that lyonesse amonge the lyons, & norysshed her yonge amonge the lyons whelpes? One of her whelpes she brought vp, & it became a lyon: it lerned to spoyle, and to de-youre folke. The heithen herde of him, and toke him in their nettes, and brought him in chaynes vnto the lande of Egypte.

Now when the damme sawe that, al her hope and comforte was away, she toke an o- B
ther of her whelpes, and made a lyon of him:
whiche went amonge the lyons, and became a fearce lyon: lerned to spoyle & to devoure folke: he destroyed their palaces, and made their cytyes waste. In so moche that the hole lande and curry thynge therin, were vtterlye desolate, throwe the very voyce of his ro-ryngge.

Then came the heithen together on eue
ry syde out of all countreyes agaynste hym, layed their nettes for him, and toke hym in their pitte. So they bounde him with chay-nes, and brought him to the kinge of Babylon: which put him in pryson, that his voyce shulde no more be herde vpon the mountaynes of Israell. As for thy mother, she is like a vine in thy bloude, planted by the water
syde: her frutes and braunches are growen
out of many waters, her stalkes were so strōg
that men myght haue made staues therof
for officers: she grewe so highe in her stal-
kes.

So when men sawe that she exceaded the C heyght and multytude of her braunches, she was rooted out in displeasure and cast do wne
to the grounde.

The east wynde dryed vp her frut, her strōg
stalkes were broken of, wythered and brente
in the fyre. But now she is plāted in the wil Osee. xiii.d dernesse, in a dry and thursty grounde. And there is a fyre gone out of her stalkes, which hath brent vp her braunches and her frute: so that she hath no mo stronge stalkes, to be ta kes for officers. This is a piteous and miserable thynge.

¶ The Lorde denyeth that he wyll answere them
when they praye, for the offence of vnkyndenesse whiche he here obiecteth. He promyseth that his people shall returne from captyuptye. By the wode that shulde be brent is signifyed the burnynge of Jerusalem.

CAPI. XX.

IN the .xbij. yeare the tenth daye of the .v. A moneth, it happened, that certayne of the Ezech. xliii.a.
elders of Israel came vnto me, for to aske
counsell at the Lorde, and sat them downe by me. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me on this maner: Thou sonne of mā:
speake vnto the elders of Israel, and say vnto them: Thus sayth the Lorde God: Are ye come to aske any thinge at me? As truely as I lyue (sayth the Lorde) I will giue you

no

no answere. Wilt thou not reproue them (ỹ sonne of man) wilt thou not reproue theym?
Exod.iii.b Shewe theym the abhomynacions of their forefathers, and tell them: Thus sayth the Lorde God: In the daye when I chose Israel, and lyfte vp myne hande vpon the sede of the house of Iacob, and shewed my selfe
vnto them in the lande of Egypte: Yea whẽ
I lyfte vp myne hande ouer them, and sayde
I am the Lorde your God, euen in the daye that I lyft vp myne hand ouer them, to bring them out the lande of Egypte, in to a lande
that I had prouyded for them, which floweth
with milke and hony, and is a pleasaunt lãd
amonge all other: Then sayd I vnto them:
Deut.vii.a Cast awaye euerye man the abhomynacions that he hath before him, and defyle not your selues with the Idols of Egypte, for I am ỹ Lorde youre God.
B But they rebelled agaynste me, and wolde not folowe me: to cast away euery man the abhomynacions of his eyes, and to forsake the Idolles of Egypte. Then I made me to poure my indignacion ouer them, and to sa-tisfye my wrathe vpon theym: yea euen in the myddest of the lande of Egypte. But I wolde not do it, for my names sake: that it shulde not be vnhalowed before the Heithẽ, amonges whome they dwelt, and amonges whome I shewed my selfe vnto them that I wolde bringe them out of the land of Egipt.
Nowe when I had caryed them out of ỹ lãde
of Egypt, and brought them into the wyl-dernesse: I gaue them my commaundemen-Exod.xx.xxi.xxiii. tes, and shewed them my lawes: which who so kepeth shall lyue in them. I gaue them al Deute.iiii.b so my holy dayes, to be a token betwyxte me
Galath.iii.b and them, and therby to knowe, that I am ỹ Leuit.xviii.a Lorde, whiche haloweth them.
Exod.xvi.c xxxi.c.xxxii.c. And yet the house of Israel rebelled against me in the wyldernesse, they wolde not walk in my commaundementes, they haue cast away my lawes (which who so kepeth should Nume.xiiii.b lyue in them) and my Sabboth dayes haue Exodi.xvi.f they greatly vnhalowed.
C Then I made me to power out my indig-nacion vpon them, and to consume them in the wyldernesse. Yet I wolde not do it, for my names sake: lest it shulde be dishonoured
before the heythen, from the whiche I hadde caryed them awaye. But I swore vnto them in the wildernesse, that I wold not bring thẽ
into the lande, whiche I gaue them: a lande that floweth with mylke and hony, and is a pleasure of al landes: and that because they refused my lawes, and walcked not in my commaundementes, but had vnhalowed my Sabbothes, for their herte was gone after their Idolles.
Neuerthelesse myne eye spared thẽ, so that I wolde not vtterly slay them, and consume Eze.xviii. them in the wyldernesse. Moreouer, I sayde vnto their sonnes in the wyldernesse: walke
not in the statutes of your forefathers, kepe Exod.xvi.c xxxi.c.xxx.ii.c. not their ordynaunces, and defyle not youre selues with their Idols, for I am the Lorde your God. But walke in my statutes, kepe my lawes & do them, halow my Sabbothis
for they are a token betwixte me and you, that ye maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde.
Notwithstandynge, their sonnes rebelled
agaynst me also: they walked not in my statutes they kept not my lawes to fulfyl them (whiche he that doth shall lyue in them) neither halowed they my Sabboth dayes. The I made me agayne to poure oute my indigna
cion ouer them, and to satisfy my wrath vpõ them in the wildernes. Neuerthelesse I with D drewe my hande for my names sake, lest it shulde be vnhalowed amonges the heythen,
before whome I had brought them forthe.
I lyfte vp myne hande ouer them also in the wyldernesse, that I wolde scatre them amõg
the Heithen, and strowe theym amonge the nacions: because they had not kepte my lawes, but cast asyde my commaundementes, vnhalowed my Sabothes, and lyfte vp their eyes to their fathers Idols.
Wherfore I gaue them also commaunde-mentes not good, & lawes thorow the which they shulde not lyue, & I vnhalowed them in their owne gyftes (when I appoynted for my selfe all their fyrstborne) to make them desolate: that they myght know, how that I am
the Lorde.
Therfore (O thou sonne of man) tell the house of Israel, thus sayth the Lorde God: E Besyde all this, your forefathers haue yet blasphemed me more, and greatlye offended agaynst me: For after I had brought them in to the lande, that I promysed to gyue them, when they sawe euery hyghe hill and all the thick trees: they made there their offringes, & prouoked me with their oblacions, in brynge swete sauoures there, and poured out their drinckofferinges. Then I asked them: what haue ye to do withal, that ye go thither? And therfore is it called the hygh place vnto this daye.
Wherfore, speake vnto the house of Israel: Thus sayth the Lorde God: ye are euen as vnclene as your forefathers, and committe horedome also with their abhominaci-ons. In all your Idols, wherevnto ye brynge your oblacions, & to whose honoure ye burne
youre children: ye defyle your selues, euen vnto this daye: howe darre ye then come, & aske any question at me? O ye housholde of Israel? As truelye as I lyue (sayth the Lord God) ye get no auswere of me: and as for the thynge that ye go aboute, it shall not come to passe, where as ye say: we wyll be as the Heithen, and do as other people in the land,
wod and stone wyll we worshyp.
As truely as I lyue, sayth the Lorde God, F
I my selfe wyll rule you with a myghtye hand, with a stretched out arme, and with in-dignacion poured out ouer you: & will bring you out of the nacions and landes, wherin ye are scatered: & gather you togyther with a myghtye hande, with a stretched oute arme
and with indignaciõ poured out vpon you: & wyll bringe you into the wildernesse of the people. & there I wyll reason with you face to face. Like as I punished your forefathers
in

in the wyldernesse, so wyl I punysshe you also sayth the Lorde God.
I wyll brynge you vnder my iurisdiction, and vnder the bonde of the couenaunte. The forsakers also and the transgressours wyll I take from amonge you, and bryng them out of the lande of youre habitacyon: as for the lande of Israell, they shall not come in it:
that they maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde.
Goo nowe then (sayth the Lorde God) ye house of Israell, caste awaye and destroye e-uery man his ydols: then shall ye heare me, and no more blaspheme my holy name with youre offerynges and ydolles. But vpon my holye hyll, euen vpon the hye hyll of Israell shall all the house of Israell and all that is in the lande, worshyp me: and in the same place wyll I fauour them, and there wyll I requyre your heaueofferynges, and the fyrst-lynges of youre oblacyons, with all youre holy thynges.
G I wyll accepte youre swete sauoure,
when I brynge you frome the nacyons, and gather you togyther oute of the landes, wherin ye be scattered: that I maye be halowed in you before the Heathen, and that ye maye knowe, that I am the Lorde, whiche haue broughte you in to the lande
of Israell: yea, in to the same lande that I swore to gyue vnto youre forefathers.
There shall ye calle to remembraunce youre
owne wayes, and all youre ymagynacy-ons, wherin ye haue bene defyled: and ye shall be displeased with youre owne sel-ues, for all your wyckednesse which ye haue done.
And ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde,
when I entreate you after my name, not after youre wycked wayes, ne accordynge to your corrupte workes: O ye house of Israel,
sayth the Lorde.
Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came
vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, sette thy face towarde the Southe, and speake to the Southe wynde, and saye to the wodde towarde the Southe: Heare the worde of the Lorde, thus sayth the Lorde God: Be-holde, I wyll kyndle a fyre in the, that shall consume the grene trees with the drye. No man shall be hable to quenche his flame, but all that loketh from the South to the North shall be brente therin: and all fleshe shall se that I the Lorde haue kyndled it, so that no man may quenche it. Then sayd I: O Lorde, they wyll saye of me: Tusche, they are but fables that he telleth.

He threateneth the swerde, that is to saye, destruction to the cytye of Ierusalem. He sheweth the fall of kynge Sedechias. He is commaunded to prophecy the destruction of the children of Ammon.
After the slaughter of other, at the last the Lorde threateneth death vnto Nabuchodonozor hym selfe.

CAPI. XXI.

The worde of the Lorde came to me, A sayinge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face toward Ierusalem, speake against the Sanctuarye, and prophecye agaynste the lande of Israel, saye to the lande of Israell:
Thus sayth the Lorde God. Beholde I wyl vpon the, and wyll drawe my swerde out of the shethe, and rote out of the both the righ-tous and the wicked. Seing then that I wyl rote out of the both the rightous and wicked therfore shall my swerde go out of his shethe against all flesh from the north to the south:
that al flesh may know how that I the Lorde haue drawen my swerde out of the sheth, and it shall not be put in agayne.
Mourne therfore (O thou sonne of man)
that thy loynes cracke withall / yea mourne B
bytterly for them: And yf they saye, wherfore mournest thou? Then tell theym: for the tydynges that commeth, at the whiche
all hertes shall melte, all handes shall be letten downe, all stomackes shall faynte, and all knees shall waxe feble. Beholde, it commeth, and shall be fulfylled, sayth the Lorde God.
Agayne, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, pro- C
phecye and speake: Thus sayth the Lorde God: speake, the swerde is sharpened and well scoured. Sharpened is it for the slaughter, and scoured that it maye be bright. O, the destroyinge staffe of my sonne, shall brynge downe all wodde. He hath put his swerde to the dyghtynge, that good holde may be taken of it. This swerde is sharpened and dyghte, that it maye be gyuen in to the hande of the mansleer.
Crye (O thou son of man) and howle, for this swerde shall smyte my people, and al the D rulers in Israel, whiche with my people shal be slayne downe to the grounde thorow this swerde. Smyte thou vpon thy thyghe, for wherfore shoulde not the plage and staffe of iudgement come? Prophecy thou son of man and smyte thyne handes togyther: make the swerde two edged, yea make it thre edged, ỹ mansleers swerde, that swerde of the greate slaughter, whiche shall smyte theym, euen in theyr preuye chambres: to make them abas-shed and faynte at the hertes, and in all gates to make some of them fall. O how bright and sharpe is it / how well dyghte, and mete for the slaughter. Get the to some place alone either vpon the right hande or vpon the left, whyther so euer thy face courneth. I wyll smyte my handes togyther also, and satisfye my wrothfull indignacion. Euen I the Lord haue sayd it.
The worde of the Lorde came yet vnto me agayne, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, make the two stretes, that the swerde of the kynge of Babylon maye come. Bothe these stretes shall goo oute of one lande. He shall set him vp a place, at the heade of the strete shall he chose him out a corner. Make the a strete, that the swerde may come towarde Rabath of the Ammonites, and to the stronge citye of Ie-rusalem.

For the kynge of Babylon shall stande in Leuit.xix.f xx.a Deut.xviii b the tournynge of the waye, at the heed of the two stretes to aske counsell at the sothesayers, castynge the lottes with his arowes to aske counsell at the ydolles, and to loke in the lyuer.

But the sothesaynge shall poynte to the ryght syde vpon Jerusalem, that he maye set men of warre to smyte it, with a great noyse to crye out alarum, to set battelleammes agaynst the gates, to graue vp ditches, and to make bull workes.

Neuertheleße, as for the sothesayenge, they shall holde it but for vanite, euen as though a lesi were told them: yea, and they theym selues remembre theyr wyckednesse, so that by ryghte they muste be taken and wonne. Therfore sayth the Lorde God: For so moche as ye poure selues shewe poure offence / and haue opened poure wyckednesse, so that in all poure workes men may se poure synnes: yea in so moche (I saye) that ye poure selues haue made mencion therof, ye shall be taken by vyolence.

O thou shamefull wicked gyde of Jsrael whose day is come / euen the tyme that wickednesse shall haue an ende. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: take awaye the myter, and put of the crowne, and so is it awap: the humble is exalted, and the proude brought low. Punyshe, punyshe / yea punysh. The them will I, and ouerrope them: and that shal not be fulfylled vntyll he come, to whome the iudgement belongeth, and to whome I haue gyuen it.

And thou (O sonne of man) prophecye and
G Jere.xlix.c. Ezechie.xxi.a Amos.i.c. speake: Thus sayeth the Lorde God to the cyldren of Ammon, and to theie blasphemye speake thou: Sye the swerde, the swerde is drawen forthe alredye to the slaughter, and scoured that it glysstereth (because thou hast loked the out vanities, and prophecyed lyes) that it maye come vpon thy necke, lyke as vpon the other vngodlye, whiche be slayne: whose daye came, when theyr wyckednesse was full.

Thoughe it were put vp agayne in to the sheathe / yet will I punyshe the in the land where thou wast nouryshed and borne, and powre my indignacyon vpon the, and will blow vpon the in the fyre of my wrath, and delyuer the vnto cruell people, whiche are learned to destroye. Thou shalte fede the fyre, and thy bloode shall be shedde in the lande, that thou mayste be put oute of remembraunce. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it.

¶ The worde of the Lorde agaynst Jerusalem for manslaughter, and denyinge due honour to theyr fathers and mothers, and other wyckednesses. Of the wycked doctryne of the falle prophetes and pryestes, and of theyr vnlacyable couetousnesse. The tyrannye of rulers. The vnhyndernesse of the people.

CAPI. XXII.

MOreouer the worde of the Lorde came
H vnto me and sayd: thou sonne of man, wylt thou not reproue this bloudthyrsty cytie? Shewe them their abhommacions and tell them: Thus sayth the Lorde God. O thou cyte that shedest blood in the myddest of the, that thy tyme may come also/and makest the ydolles to defyle the withall. Thou hast made thy selfe gylty in the bloode that thou hast shed: & defyled the in the ydolles, whiche thou hast made.

Thou hast caused thy dayes to drawe nye, I and made ꝑ tyme of thy yeres to come. Therfore wil I make the to be confounded among the heathen, and to be despyted in all the landes, whether they be nye or farre frome the: they shall laugh the to scorne, thou that hast gotten the so foule a name, and arte full of myschiefe. Beholde, the rulers of Jsrael haue Ezech.xxii.a brought euery man his power, to shed blood in the. In the haue they despyted father and mother, in the haue they oppressed the straunger, in the haue they vexed the wydowe and the fatherlesse. Thou hast despyted my Sanctuarye, and vnhalowed my Sabboth. Pur- Deut.
therers are there in the, that shede blood, and Leuit.
eate vp the hylles, and in the they vse vnhappynesse.

In the haue they discouered theyr fathers
K shame, in the haue they vexed women in their syckenesse. Euery man hath dealte shamefully with his neighbours wife, and abhominably defiled his doughter in law. In the hath eue- Jere.
ry man forced his owne sister, euē his fathers doughter: yea gyftes haue ben receyued in ꝑ to shede bloode. Thou hast taken vsurye and encreace, thou hast oppressed thy neyghbours by extorcion, and forgotten me, sayeth the Lorde God.

Beholde, I haue smytten my handes vpon
L thy couetousnesse that thou haste vsed, and vpon the bloude whiche hathe ben shedde in the. Is thy herte able to endure it, or maye thy handes defende them selues in the tyme that I shall bringe vpon the? Euen I the Lorde that speake it, will bringe it to passe. I will scattre thy selfe among the heathen, and strow the about in the landes, and will cause thy fylthynesse to cease out of the: yea and I wil haue the in possession in the sight of the heathen, that thou mayste knowe that I am the Lorde.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me
M sayinge: Thou sonne of man, the house of Jsrael is turned to drosse. All they that shulde be brasse, tynne, yron, and leade are in the fyre become drosse. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: For so moche as ye all are tourned in to drosse: beholde, I wyll bringe you together vnto Jerusalē lyke as syluer, brasse, yron, tynne, and leade are put togither in the furnace, and the fyre blowen there vnder to melte them: Euen so will I gather you, put you in together, and melte you in my wrath and indignacyon. I wyl bringe you together, and kyndle the fyre of my cruell displeasure vnder you, that ye maye be melted therin.

Lyke

Lyke as the syluer is melted in the fyre, so shall ye also be melted therin: that ye maye know how that I the Lorde haue powred my wrath vpon you.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me
N saynge. Thou sonne of man, tell her: Thou art an vncleane lande, whiche is not rayned vpon in the day of thy cruel wrath: the Prophetes that are in the, are ioyned together to deuour soules, like as a rorynge Lyon that lyeth by his pray.

They receyue ryches and good, and make
O many wydowes in the. Thy preestes breake my law, and defyle my Sanctuary. They put no difference betwene ꝑ poly & vnpoly, neither discerne betwene the clene and vncleane: they turne their eyes fro my Sabothes, and I am vnhalowed amonge them. Thy rulers in the are lyke raueninge wolues to shede bloode, and to destroy soules for theyr owne couetous lucre. As for thy prophetes, they dawbe with vntempered clape/they se vanities, and prophesyes vnto them, sayeng: the Lorde God sayth so, where as the Lorde hathe not spoken. The people in the lande vseth bryberie extorcion and robberye. They vexe the poore and nedy, and oppresse the straunger agaynst ryght.

And I soughte in the lande for a man that
P sholde make vp the hedge, and set him self in the gap before me, in the landes behalfe, that I sholde not vtterly destroye it, but I coulde fynde none. Therfore wil I poure out my cruell displeasure vpon them, and burne them in the fyre of my wrath: their owne wayes wil I recompence vpon theyr heades, sayeth the Lorde God.

¶ Of the fornicacyon, meanynge the Idolatry of Samaria and Jerusalem: vnder the names of Oholah and Oholibah. In comparison of Samaria he sheweth that the fornicacyon of Jerusalem is the fylthyer. The destruction of Jerusalem is prophesyed. The abhoutrye of both the hores is found out. Theyr destruction.

CAPI. XXIII.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me,
1 saying: thou sonne of man, there were two women ꝑ had one mother: These (when they were yonge) began to playe the harlottes in Egypte. There were theyr breastes hosed, and the pappes of theis mayden-hed destroyed. The eldest of them was called Oholah, and her youngest syster Oholibah. These two were myne, and bare sonnes and doughters, theyr names were Samaria, and that was Oholah: and Jerusalem that was Oholibah. As for Oholah, she began to goo a hoorynge, when I had taken her to me. She was set on fyre vpon her louers the Assirians, which had to do with her: euen the pryuces and Lordes that were decently arayed: fayre yonge men, lusty ryders of horses.

Thus thorowe her hoordome, she cleued vnto all the yonge men of Assiria: Yea, she B was mad vpon them, and defiled her self with all their ydolles. Neyther ceased she from the fornicacion that she vsed with the Egyptias: for in her youthe they laye with her, they brosed the breste of her maydenhead, & poured their hoordome vpon her. Wherfore I delyuered her in to the handes of her louers, euen the Assirians whom she so loued. These Ezechi.xvi.b discouered her shame, toke her sonnes and doughters, and slewe her with the swerde. An cuyl name gat she of all people, and they punished her.

Her syster Oholibah sawe this, and be-
C stroyed her self with moredinate loue, more then she, and exceded her syster in hoordome, she loued the Assirians (whiche also lay with her) namely the pryuces and great lordes, that were clothed with al maner of gorgyous apparell, all-lusty horsemen, and fayre yong persones. Then I sawe that they both were defyled alyke.

But she increased styll in hoordome: for
D when she sawe men paynted vpon the walle, the ymages of the Caldees set forthe with freshe colowres, with fayre gyrdles about them, and goodly bonettes vpon theyr heades, louynge all lyke Pryuces (after the maner of the Babylonyans and Caldees in theyr owne lande, where they be borne) immediatlye as soone as she sawe them, she brente in loue vpon them, and sent messengers for them in to the lande of the Caldees.

Now when the Babylonians came to her
E they laye with her, and defiled her with theyr hoordome, and so was she polluted with them. And when her lust was abated frome them, her hoordome and shame was discouered and sene, then my herte forsoke her, lyke as my herte was gone frome her syster also. Esaye.xlvii.d Naum.iii.d Ezech.xvi.c

Neuertheleße, she vsed her hoordome euer
F the moger the more, and remembred the dayes of her youth, wherin she had played the harlot in the land of Egypt / she brent in lust vpō them, whose flesh was like the flesh of Asses, & their seed lyke the seed of horses. Thus thou hast renued the filthinesse of thy youth, when thy louers brosed thy pappes, & marred thy brestes in Egypte.

Therefore (O Oholibah) thus sayethe the G Lorde God. I will rayse vp thy louers (with whom thou hast satisfied thy lust) against the and gather them togyther rounde about the: namely the Babyloniās, and all the Caldees: Pecod, Schoa and Coa, with al the Assirias, all yonge and fayre louers, pryuces and lordes, knyghtes, and gentylmen, whiche be all good horse men: these shall come vpon the with horses, charettes, and a great multitude of people, which shall be harnelled about the on euery syde, with brestplates, sheldes and helmettes. I will punyshe the before them, yea they them selues shall punyshe the, according to their owne iudgement. I will put my gelously vpon the, so that they shall deale cruelly with the.

KK ij. They

They shall cut of thy nose and thyne eares, and the remnaunt shall fall thorow the swerde. They shall carye awaye thy sonnes and doughters, and the resydue shall be brent with the fyre. They shall strype the oute of thy clothes, and carye thy costly iewelles awaye with them.

C Thus will I make an ende of thy fylthynesse and hoordome, which thou hast brought out of the lande of Egypt: that thou shalte tourne thyne eyes no more after theym, and cast thy mynd no more vpõ Egypt. For thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde, I wyll delyuer the in to the handes of them whom thou hatest: yea, euen in to the handes of them, with whome thou hast fulfylled thy luste, whiche shal dele cruelly with the. All thy labour shal they take with them, and leue the naked and bare/ and thus the shame of thy fylthy hordome shal come to light. All these thinges shal happen vnto the, bycause of thy hoordome, whiche thou hast vsed amonge the Gentyles with whose ydols thou hast defiled thy selfe. Thou haste walked in the waye of thy syster, therfore wyll I gyue the her cup in thy hande.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: Thou shalte drynke of thy systers cuppe, howe depe and large so euer it be to the botome. Thou shalt be laughed to scorne, and hadde as greatlye in derysyon, as is possible. Thou shalte be full of dronkennesse and sorowe, for the cup of thy syster Samaria, is a cuppe of destrucion and wastynge: the same shalte thou drynke and suppe it oute, euen to the dregges: yea thou shalte eate vp the broken peces of it, and to teare thyne owne brestes: For euen I haue spoken it sayth the Lorde God.

E Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: For so moche as thou hast forgotten me, and cast me asyde, so beare nowe thyne owne fylthynesse and hoordome.

The Lorde sayd moreouer vnto me: thou sonne of man, wylte thou not reproue Oholah, and Oholibah? Shewe them their abhominacions: namely that they haue broken their wedlocke, and stained their handes with bloode: yea euen with their ydols haue they committed aduoutrye, and offered them their owne chyldren (to be deuoured) whome they iii.Reg.xxi.a had borne vnto me.

Yea, and this haue they done vnto me
Ezech.xvi.c also: they haue defyled my Sanctuarye, in that same daye, and haue vnhalowed my Sabboth. For when they hadde slayne their children for their ydolles, they came the same daye in to my Sanctuary to defyle it. Lo, this haue they done in my house.

Besyde all this, thou haste sente thy messengers for men oute of farre countreyes: and when they came, thou haste bathed, trymmed and set forthe thy selfe of the beste
Exod.xx. facion: thou sattest vpon a goodly bed, and a table spred before the, wherupõ thou hast set myne incense and myne oyle.

G Then was there great chere with her, and the men that were sent from farre countreys ouer the deserte, vnto these they gaue bracelettes vpon theyr handes, and set gloryous crownes vpon theyr heedes: then thought I no doubte, these wyll vse theyr harlotry also with yonder olde hoore. And they went in to her, as one vnto a cõmon harlot. Euen so went they also to Oholah and Oholibah those fylthy women.

O ye all that loue vertue and righteousnes Leuit.xx.
iudge them, and punysshe them: as aduouterers Ezech.xvi. and murtherers ought to be iudged and punysshed. For they are breakers of wedlocke and the bloude is in theyr handes. Wherfore thus saythe the Lorde God: Brynge a a greate multitude of people vpon them, and make theym be scattered and spoyled: these shall stone theym, and gore them with their swerdes. They shall slee theyr sonnes and doughters, and burne vp theyr houses with fyre.

Thus wyll I destroye all suche fylthynesse oute of the lande, that all women may learne, not to doo after youre vnclennesse. And so they shall laye your fylthynesse vpon youre owne selues, and ye shall be punysshed for the synnes that ye haue committed with youre ydolles / and ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

C He proueth the kyrynge of Ierusalem by a parable of a sethynge potte. The parable of Ezechiels wyfe beynge dead, whiche he after expoundeth.

CAPI. XXIIII.

In the nineth yere, in the tenth moneth, the A tenth daye of the moneth, came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, saying: O thou sonne of man, wryte vp the name of this daye, yea euen the houre of this presente daye, when the kynge of Bylon set him selfe agaynst Ierusalem. Shewe that stubborne housholde Ezech.xi.
a parable, and speake vnto them. Thus sayth Ezech.xii. the Lorde God. Set the a pot, set it on, and poure water in to it / put all the peces togyther in it, all the good peces / the loyne & the shoulder, and fyll it with the best bones. Take one of the best shepe, and an heape of bones with all / let it boyle well, and let the bones sethe well therin.

With that sayde the Lorde God on this B maner: Wo be vnto the bloudy citye of the Nahum.iii. pot, wherupon the rustynesse hangeth, and Abacu.ii. is not yet scoured awaye. Take oute the peces that are in it, one after an other / there nede no lottes be cast therfore, for the bloude is yet in it. Upon a playne drye stone hath she poured it, and not vpon the grounde, that it myghte be couered with duste. And therfore haue I letten her poure her bloude vpon a Gene.iiii.
playne drye stonye rocke, bycause it shoulde Esa.i. not be hydde, and that I myghte brynge my wrothful indignacion and vengeaunce vpon her.

Wherfore, thus saythe the Lorde God: C
Woo be vnto that bloude thyrstye citye, for whome I wyll prepare a heape of wodde:
beare

beare thou the boones togyther, kyndle thou the fyre, sethe the fleshe, let all be well sodden, that the bones maye be sucked oute. Moreouer set the potte emptye vpon the coles, that it maye be warme, and the metall hote, that the fylthe and rustynesse maye be consumed.

D But it wyll not goo of, there is so moche of it: the rustynesse muste be brent oute. Thy fylthynesse is abhominable, for I wold haue clensed the, but thou woldest not be clensed. Thou canst not be pourged frome thyne vnclennesse, tyll I haue poured my wrothfull indignacion vpon the. Euen I the Lorde haue so deuysed: Yea, it is come therto alredye that I wyll do it. I wyll not go backe I wyll not spare, I wyll not be intreated: but accordynge to thy wayes and ymaginacyons, thou shalte be punysshed saythe the Lorde God.

E And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, beholde, I will Hiere.xvi. take awaye frõ the pleasure of thyne eyes with a plage: yet shalte thou neyther mourne nor wepe, ne water thy chekes therfore: yu mayst mourne by thy selfe alone: but vse no dedly lamentacion. Holde on thy bonet, and put on thy shoes vpon thy feete, couer not thy face, and eate no mourners breed.

So I spake vnto the people bytymes in the mornynge, and at euen my wyfe dyed: then vpon the nexte morowe I dyd as I was commaunded. And the people said vnto me: wilt thou not tell vs what that signifieth whiche thou doest?

F I answered them, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Tell the house of Israel, thus sayth the Lorde God: beholde, I wyll suspende my Sanctuarye: euen the glorye of your power, the pleasure of your eyes, and the thyng that ye loue: your sonnes and doughters whom ye haue left, shall fall thorowe the swerde.

Lyke as I haue done, so shall ye doo also: Ye shall not hyde youre faces, ye shall eate no mourners breed: youre bonnettes shall ye haue vpon your heedes, and shoes vpon youre fete.

G Ye shall neyther mourne nor wepe, but in youre synnes ye shall be sorowfull, and one repente with an other. Thus Ezechiel is your shew token. For loke as he hath done so (when this commeth) ye shall doo also: that ye maye lerne to knowe, that I am the Lorde God.

But beholde, O thou sonne of man: In the daye when I take frome theym theyr power, theyr ioye and honoure, the luste of theyr eyes, the burthen of theyr bodyes: namely theyr sonnes and doughters. Then shall there one escape, and come vnto the / for to shewe the. In that daye shall thy mouthe be opened to him whiche is escaped, that thou mayste speake, and be no more domme: yea, and thou shalte be theyr shewe token, that they may knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

C The worde of the Lorde vpon the sonnes of Ammon, whiche reioyced at the fall of Ierusalem. Agaynst Moab and Seir. Agaynst Idumea. Agaynst the Philistynes.

CAPI. XXV.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, set thy face A agaynste the Ammonites: Prophecye Ezechi.xxi.d.
vpon them, and saye vnto the Ammonites: Iere.xlix.a. heare the worde of the Lorde God. Thus sayth the Lorde God. For so moche as thou speakest ouer my Sanctuarye. A ha, I trowe it be nowe suspended: and ouer the lande of Israel/ I trowe it be nowe desolate, yea and ouer the house of Iuda, I trowe they be nowe ledde awaye prysoners. Beholde, I wyll delyuer the to the people of the Easte, that they maye haue the in possession: these shall sette theyr castles and houses in the. They shall eate thy frute, and drynke vp thy mylke. As for Rabath, I wyll make of it a stall for camelles, and of Ammon a shepe folde: and ye shall knowe, that I am the Lorde.

For thus saythe the Lorde God: In so B
moche as thou hast clapped with thyne handes, and stamped with thy fete / yea reioysed in thyne herte ouer the lande of Israel with despyte: beholde, I wyll stretche oute myne hand ouer the also, and deliuer the to be spoyled of the Heathen, and rote the oute from among the people, and cause the to be destroyed oute of all landes / yea I will make the be layd waste, that thou mayst know that I am the Lorde.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: For so moche Esay.xv.xvi.
as Moab and Seir do saye: As for the house Esay.xlvi.a.
of Iuda, it is but lyke as all other Gentiles Sophon.ii.b.
be. Therfore beholde, I will make the cities of Moab weaponlesse, and shall take awaye theyr strengthe: their cityes and chiefe costes of their lande, which are the pleasures of the countrey: As namely Bethiesimoth, Baalmeon, and Cariathaim: these wyll I open vnto them of the Easte, that they maye fall vpon the Ammonites: and wil gyue it them in possession / so that the Ammonites shal no more be hadde in remembraunce amonge the Heathen. Euen thus wyll I punysshe Moab also, that they maye knowe how that I am the Lorde.

Moreouer, thus saythe the Lorde God:
Bicause that Edom hath auenged and eased Esay.xxxiiii.b.
him selfe vpon the house of Iuda / therfore Ierem.xlix.b.
thus sayth the Lorde: I wil reache out mine Ezech.xxxv.f.
hand vpon Edom, and take awaye man and xxxv.a.
beast out of it. Psal.cxxxvii.b.
From Theman vnto Dedan will I make Gene.xxv.d.
it desolate/ they shal be slayne with yͤ swerde. Thorow my people of Israell wyll I auenge i.Macha.v.a.
me agayn vpon Edom: they shal handle him according to my wrath and indignacion, so yͭ they shall knowe my vengeaunce, saythe the Lorde God.

Thus sayth the Lord God: For so moche D
as the Philistines haue done this: namely

Esaye.xiiii.c taken vengeaunce with despytefull stomac-
Jere.xlvii.a kes, and often tymes euyll wyll set them sel-Sophon.ii.a ues to destroye. Therfore thus sayethe the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyll stretche oute myne hande ouer the Philistines, and destroy the destroyer, and cause all the remnaunt of the see coste to perysshe. A greate vengeaunce wyll I take vpon them, and punysshe them cruelly: that they maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde, whiche haue auenged me of
them.

¶ He prophecyeth that Tyrus shall be ouerthrowen, because it reioyced at the destruction of Jerusalem. The wonderynge and astonyshment of the marchauntes, for the desolacyon of Tyrus.

CAPI. XXVI.

A IT happened that in the .xi. yere, the fyrste
daye of the moneth, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of mã, Esaye.xxiii.a bicause that Tyre hath spoken vpon Jerusa-Jere.xlvii.b lem: A ha, now I trow the portes of the peo-Ezechi.xxvii. ple be broken, and she turned vnto me, for I haue destroyed my bely full.
Yea, therfore sayeth the Lorde God: Be-holde, O Tyre, I wyl vpon the, I wyl bryng
a great multytude of people agaynste the,
lyke as when the see aryseth with his wa-
ues: These shall breake the walles of Tyre, and caste downe her towres: I wyll scrape
the grounde frome her, and make her a bare stone: yea as the dryinge place where the fisshers hange vp the nettes by the see syde.
Euen I haue spoken it, sayethe the Lorde
God. The Gẽtiles shal spoyle her/her doughters vpon the felde, shall perysshe with the swerde, that they may knowe how that I am
the Lorde.
B For thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde,
I wyl brynge hyther Nabuchodonosor (whiche is the kynge of Babylon, and a kynge of kynges) from the North vpon Tyre, with horses, charettes, horsmen, and with a greate multitude of people. Thy doughters that are in the land, shal he slee with the swerde: but agaynste the he shall make bulworkes, and graue vp dyches aboute the, and lyfte vp his shylde agaynste the. His slynges and battell rammes shall he prepare for thy walles, and with his weapons breake downe thy towres.
The duste of his horses shall couer the, they shall be so manye, thy walles shall shake at the noyse of the horsemen, charettes, and wheles, when he commeth to thy portes, as men doo in to an open citye. With the hoffes of his horse fete, shall he treade downe al thy stretes.
He shall slee thy people with the swerde, &
C breake downe the pyllers of thy strengthe.
They shall waste awaye thy rychesse, and spoyle thy marchaundyse. Thy walles shall they breake downe, and destroye thy houses Jeremi.xxv.d of pleasure. Thy stones, thy tymbre and foundacions shall they caste in the water. Thus wyll I brynge the melodye of thy songes, &
the voyce of thy mynstrelsye to an ende, so that they shall no more be herde. I wyll make a bare stone of the / yea a dryinge place for nettes, and shalte neuer be bylded agayne:
For euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, sayth
the Lorde God: thus hathe the Lorde God spoken concernynge Tyre. The Iles shall be moued at the noyse of thy fall, and at the cry of the slayne that shall be murthered in the.
All kynges of the see shall come downe from their seates regall: they shall laye awaye
theyr robes, and put of their costly clothing:
Yea with tremblynge shall they be clothed,
they shall syt vpon the grounde: they shall be afrayde at thy sodeyn fall, and be abas-shed at the.
They shall mourne for the, and saye vnto D
the: O thou noble city that hast ben so greatly occupyed of olde, thou that haste ben the strongest vpon the see with thyne inhabitaũ-tes, of whom all men stode in feare: how art thou now so vtterly destroyed? Nowe at the tyme of thy fall the inhabitauntes of the yles / yea and the yles them selues shall stand in feare at thyne ende.
For thus sayeth the Lorde God: when I make the a desolate citye (as other cities be,
that no man dwell in) and when I bring the depe vpon the, that greate waters maye couer the: Then wyll I caste the downe vnto them that descende in to the pytte: vnto a people that hath ben longe deed, and set the
in a lande that is benethe, lyke the olde wyl-dernesse, with them which go downe to their graues, so that no man shall dwell more in the. And I wyll make the to be no more in honoure in the lande of the lyuynge. I wyll make an ende of the, and thou shalt be gone.
Thoughe thou be sought for, yet shalte thou
not be founde for euermore, sayth the Lorde
God.

¶ The Prophete is moued to bewayle the desolacyon of Tyrus. He setteth out the prayse of Tyrus for the hauntyng of marchauntes therto.

CAPI. XXVII

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, A sayinge: O thou sonne of man, make a lamentable complaynt vpon Tyre, and saye vpon Tyre, whiche is a porte of the see, that occupieth with moche people and many yles: Thus speaketh the Lorde God. O Tyre, thou hast sayde: What, I am a noble citye: Thy borders are in the myddest of the see, and thy buylders haue made the merueylous goodlye, all thy tables haue they made of Cypre trees of the mount of Sanir. From Libanus haue they takẽ Cedre trees to make the mastes: and the okes of Basan to make the rowers.
Thy bordes haue they made of yuery, and B of costly wod out of the yle of Cethim. Thy sayle was of whyte smal nedle worke out of the lande of Egypt, to hange vpon thy mast:
and thy hangynges of yelowe sylke purple,
oute of the yles of Elisah.
They

They of Sidon and Arvad were thy maryners, and the wisest in Tyre were thy ship-masters. The eldest & wysest at Gebal were they, that mended and stopped thy shyppes.
All shyppes of the see with their shypmen occupyed their marchaũdyes in the. The Per-ses, Lidians, and Libiãs, were in thine host, & helped ye to fight: these hãged vp their shelde and helmettes with the, these sette forth thy beautye. They of Arvad were with thyne host round aboute thy walles, and were thy watchmen vpon thy towres, these hanged
C vp their shildes round about thy walles, and made the merueilous goodly. Tharsis occu-pyed with the in all maner of wares, in syluer, yron, tynne, and leade, and made thy market greate. Jauan, Tubal, and Mesech were thy marchauntes, which brought the men &
ornamentes of metall for thy occupyinge.
They of the house of Thogarma broughte vnto the at the tyme of thy marte, horse, horsmen and mules.
They of Dedan were thy marchauntes: &
manye other Iles that occupyed with the,
brought the wethers, Elephant bones and Paycockes for a present. The Sirians occu-pyed with the, because of thy diuers workes,
and increased thy marchaundyse, with Sma-ragdes, with scarlet, with nedle worke, with white lynen cloth, with sylcke & with Chrystall.
D Juda and the land of Israel ocupyed with the, and brought vnto thy markettes, wheat balme, hony, oyle, and tryacle, Damascus also vsed marchaundyse with the, in the best wyne and white woll: because thy occupy-
enge was so great, and thy wares so manye.
Dan, Jauan, & Meusal haue broughte vnto thy markettes, yron redy made, with Cassia & Calamus, accordynge to thyne occupyenge.
Dedan occupyed with the, in fayre tapestrye worke and quysshyns. Arabia and al the princes of Cedar haue occupyed with ye, in shepe, wethers and gootes.
E The marchauntes of Seba and Rema
haue occupyed also with ye, in al costly spyces in all precious stones and golde, whiche they broughte vnto thy markettes. Haran, Chene and Eden, the marchauntes of Saba, Assiria and Chelmad, were all doers with the, & occupyed with the: in costly rayment, of ye-lowe sylke and nedle worke (very precious, & therfore packte and bounde togyther with ropes) Yea and in Cedre wod, at the time of of thy markettes. The shyppes of Tharsis were the chiefe of thy occupyenge.
F Thus thus thou arte full, and in worshyp euen in the myddest of the see. Thy maryners were euer bryngynge vnto the oute of many waters. But the east wynde shall ouerbeare the into the myddest of the see: so that thy wares, thy marchaũdyse, thy ryches, thy maryners thy shypmasters, thy helpers, thy occupyers (that broughte the thynges necessary)
the men of warre that are in the: yea and all thy comens shall perysshe in the myddest of the see in the daye of thy fall.
The suburbes shall shake at the loude cry of thy shypmen. All whirry men, and all maryners vpon the see, shall leape oute of their bootes, and set them selues vpon the lande.
They shall lyfte vp their voyce because of ye,
and make a lamentable cry. They shall caste dust vpon their heades, and lye downe in the asshes. They shal shaue them selues, and put sacke cloth vpon them for thy sake.
They shall mourne for the with hertfull G
sorow, and heuye lamentacion, yea their children also shall wepe for the. Alas, what cyty hath so bene destroyed in the see, as Tyre is?
When thy wares and marchaundyse came from the sees, thou gauest al people ynough.
The kynges of the erth hast thou made rich,
thorow the multytude of thy wares and oc-cupyenge.
But thou arte nowe cast downe into the depe of the see, all thy resorte of people is perisshed with the. All they that dwell in the Iles are abasshed at the, and all their kynges are afrayed, yea their faces haue chaunged coloure. The marchauntes of the naciõs wondre at the. In that thou art so cleane brought to nought, and cõmest no more vp.

¶ The worde of God agaynst the kynge of Tyrus for his pryde. Daniel. The Prophete is moued to bewayle the kynge of Tyrus. The worde of the Lorde agaynst Sydon. The Lorde promyseth to gather togyther the chyldren of Israel.

CAPI. XXVIII.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me,
sayinge: Thou sonne of man, tell the A prince of Tyre. Thus sayth the Lorde God: because thou haste a proude herte and Ezechie.xxvi.
haste sayde: I am a God, I haue my seate in xxvii.
the myddest of the see like a God: where as thou art but a man and not God, and yet stã- Esaye.xiiii.c
dest in thine owne concept, ye thou art God:
Behold, thou thinkest thy selfe wyser then Daniel.ii.
Daniel, that there is no secretes hyd frome
the
With thy wysdome and thy vnderstan-dynge, thou hast gotten the great welthines
and gathered treasure of syluer and golde:
With thy greate wysdome and occupyenge
haste thou increased thy power, and because B
of thy greate ryches, thy herte is proude.
Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: For so moch as thou hast lyfte vp thine herte, as though thou were God behold, I wyl bring ennemyes vpon the, euen the tyrauntes of ye Heithen: these shall drawe out their swear-des vpon thy beautye and wysdome, and shal
defyle thy glory.
They shall cast the downe to the pytte, so that thou shalte dye in the myddest of the see
as they that be slayne.
Let se, yf thou wilte say then (before them that slaye the) I am God: where as thou art
but a man & not God, in the handes of them that slaye the.
Dye shalt thou, euen as the vncircumcy-sed in the handes of the enemyes: for I my selfe haue spoken it: sayth the Lorde God.
Morouer

Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, make a lamentable complaynte ouer the kynge of Tyre, and tell him: Thus sayethe the Lorde God: Thou art a seale of a lykenesse, ful of wysdome and excellent beautye. Thou hast bene in the pleasaunt garden of God: thou art dect with all manir of precyous stones: with Rubye, Topas, Christal, Jacynere, Onix, Jaspis, Saphir, Smaragde, Carbuncle, and golde. Thy beautye and the holes that be in the were set forthe in the daye of thy creacion. Thou art a fayre Cherub, stretched wyde out for to couer.

D I haue set the vpon the holy mounte of God, there hast thou bene, & walked amonge the fayre glysterynge stones. Frome the tyme of thy creacion thou hast ben ryght excellit, tyll wickednesse, was founde in the. Because Ezaye.lxv. of thy greate marchaundyse, thy herte is full of wyckednes, and thou hast offended. Therfore wyll I cast the from the mount of God (O thou coueryng Cherub) and destroye the amonge the glysterynge stones. Thy herte was proude in thy fayre beautye, and thorow thy beauty thou hest destroyed thy wisdome, I will caste the downe to the ground, & that in the sighte of kinges.

E Thou hast defyled thy Sanctuary, with the greate wickednesse of thy vnrighteous occupyenge. I will bringe a fyre from the middest of the, to consume the: and will make the to ashes, in the syght of all the that loke vpon the. All they that haue bene acquaynted with the emonges the Heithen, shall be abashed at the: seinge thou arte so cleane vnoughte to noughte, and commest no more vp.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto F me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face agaynste Sidon.

Prophecye vpon it, and speake. Thus saith Ioel.iiii.a the Lorde God: Beholde O Sidon, I wyll zacharp.ix.a. vpon the, and get me honoure in the: that it maye be knowen, howe that I am the Lorde when I punyshe her, and get me honoure in her. For I wyll sende pestylence and bloude sheddyng into her streates, so that those whiche be slayne with the swearde, shal lye roūde aboute in the myddest of her: and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde. She shall ne more be a prickinge thorne, and an hurtynge breer vnto the house of Israel, ne vnto them that lye rounde about her and hate her: and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: when I ga- G ther the housholde of Israel togyther againe from the nations among whome they be scattered: then shal I be sanctified in them, in the syght of the Gentyles, and they shall dwell in ꝑ land, that I gaue to my seruaūte Jacob. They shall dwell safely therin, buylde houses and plante vynyardes: yea safelye shall they dwell therin, when I haue punyshed al those that despyte them rounde aboute: and then shall they knowe, that I am the Lorde their God.

The prophecyeth agaynst Pharao. He prophecieth the desolation of Egypt, and the scatteryng abrode of the Egyptians. The Lorde promyseth that he will restore Egypt agayne after forty yeares. Egypte is the rewarde of kynge Nabuchodonozor for the labour which he toke agaynst Tyrus.

CAPI. XXIX.

In the tenth yeere vpon the twelueth daye of the tenth moneth, the worde of the Lord A came vnto me sayinge: O thou sonne of Ezay. man, set nowe thy face agaynste Pharao the Jerem. kynge of Egypte, prophecye agaynste hym, & Ezech. agaynste the hole lande of Egypte: Speake and tell him, thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde, O Pharao thou kinge of Egypte, I wyll vpon the, thou greate dragon, that lyest in the waters: thou that sayest: the water is mine. I haue made it my selfe. I wyll put an hooke in thy chawes, and hange all the fysche in thy waters vpon thy skales: after that I wyll drawe the oute of thy waters: Yea and all the fysche of thy waters that hange vpon thy skales. I will caste the oute vpon the dry land with the fysche of thy waters, so that thou shalte lye vpon the felde. Thou shalte not be gathered ne taken vp: but shalt be meate for the beastes of the felde, and for the fowles of the ayre: that all they whiche dwell in Egypte, maye knowe, that I am the Lorde: because thou hast bene a staf of rede to the house of Israel. Whē they toke B holde of the with their hande thou brakest pyrchest them on euery syde: and yf they leaned vpon the, thou brakest and hurtest the Ezech. reynes of their backes. Therfore, thus sayethe the Lorde God: beholde, I will bringe a swearde vpon the, and rote out of the bothe man and beaste. Yea the lande of Egypt shal be desolate and waste, and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde: Because he sayde: ꝑ water is myne, I my selfe haue made it: Beholde therfore, I wyll vpon the, and vpon thy waters: I wyll make the lande of Egypte waste and desolate, from the towre of Syenes, vnto the borders of the Morians lande so that in.xl. yeres there shal no fote of man walke therin, neither fote of cattell goo there, neither shall it be inhabyted. I wyll make the lande of Egypte to be desolate, amonges other waste countreyes, and her cyties to lye voyde.xl. yeres, amōg other wast countreyes: And I will scatre the Egyptians amōg the heithen and nations.

Againe, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Whē C the.xl. yeres are expired, I wyll gather the Jerem. Egyptians to gyther againe, out of the nations, amonges whome they were scattred, & wyll bringe the pryseners of Egypt againe into the lande of Pathures their owne natyue countrey, that they may be there a lowly small kingome: yea they shal be the smalest amonge other kyngdomes lest they exalte them selues above the Heithen: for I will so mynishe them that they shal no more rule the Heithen.

They shall no more be an hope vnto the house of Israel, neither prouoke them any more more to wickednes, to cause the turne backe and to folowe them: and they shall knowe that I am the Lorde God.

D In the.xxvij. yere, the fyrst daye of the fyrst moneth, came the worde of the Lorde vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babylon hath made his hoste, with greate trauayle and laboure to come before Tyre: that euery heed maye be balde, and euery shoulder bare. Yet hathe Tyre gruen neither him ne his hoost any rewarde, for the greate trauayle that he hath taken there.

Therfore thus sayethe the Lorde God: beholde I wyll gyue the lande of Egypt vn to Nabuchonozor the king of Babylon, that he may take away all her substaunce, rob her robberyes, and spoyle her spoyles, to pay his host their wages withal. I wil gyue him the lād of Egypt for his labour, that he toke for me before Tyre.

At the same tyme wyll I cause the horne of the house of Israel to growe forthe, and open thy mouth agayne amonge them: that they maye knowe, how that I am the Lorde.

¶ The destruction of Egypte and of his cytyes is bewayled.

CAPI. XXX.

The worde of the Lord came morcouer vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, prophecye and speake: thus sayethe the Lorde God: Mourne, wo worth this daye, for the daye is here, the daye of the Lorde is come: the darcke daye of the Heithen, the houre is at yande, the swearde commeth vpon Egypte.

Whē ꝑ waūed mē shal downe in Egypte, whē her people are taken away, & when her foundacions are destroyed, the Morians lād shall be afrayed, yea the morians lande, Libia and Lidia, all theie common people, and Chub, all that be confederate vnto theym, shall fall with them thorowe the swearde.

B Thus sayeth the Lorde: the mayntayners of the lande of Egypte shall fal, the pride of her power shall come downe: euen vnto the towre of Syenes shall they be slayne downe with the swearde, sayeth the Lorde God: amonge other desolate countreyes they shall be made desolate, and amonge other waste cytyes they shall be wasted. And they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I kyndle a fyre in Egypte, and when all her helpers are destroyed.

At that tyme shall theie messengers goo forth fro me in shyppes, to make the careles Morians afrayed, and sorow shall come vpō them in the daye of Egypte for doubtlesse it C shall come.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: I wyl make an ende of the people of Egypte thorow the hande of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilō. Jerem. & his people with him, yea and the cruel tyrauntes of the Heithen shalbe brought to destroye the lande.

They shall drawe out their swearde vpō Egypte and fyll the lande full of slayne mē I wyll drye vp theie floudes of watter, and sell the lande into the handes of wicked people. The lande and all that is therin, wyll I destroye thorow the ennemyes. Euen I the Lorde haue sayde it.

And thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll D destroye the Idolles, and bringe the ymages Zach.xiii.a of Noph to an ende. There shall no more be a prince of Egypte, and a fearfulnesse wyll I sende in to ꝑ Egiptians land. As for Pathures, I wil make it desolate, and kyndle a fyre in Zoan. Alexandria wyll I punyshe, and poure my wrothfull indignacion vpon Sin whiche is the strength of Egypte. All the substaunce of Alexandria wyll I destroye, and kyndle a fyre in Egypt.

Sin shall be in greate heynesse, Alexan- E dria shall be rored out, and Noph shall haue daylye sorowe. The best men of Helyopolis and Bubasta shall be slayne with the swerd, and carped awaye captyue. At Taphnis the daye shall be darke, when I breake there the septer of the lande of Egypte, and when the pompe of her power shall haue an ende. A cloude shal couer her and her doughters shal be led awaye into captyuyte. Thus wyl I punyshe Egypt, that they may knowe, how that I am the Lorde.

It happened in the.xi. yeare, vpō ꝑ seuenth F daye of the fyrste moneth, that the Lordes worde came vnto me, saying: Beholde thou sonne of man, I wyl breake the arme of Pharao kynge of Egypte: and lo it shall not be bound vp to be healed, neither shal any playster be layde vpon it. for to ease it, or to make it so strong, as to holde a swearde. Therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyll vpon Pharao the kynge of Egypt, and breke his stronge arme (yet is it but a broken one) and wyll smyte the swearde out of his hand.

As for the Egyptians, I wyll scatre theym among the Heithen, and strow them in ꝑ landes aboute. Against I wyl strength the arme of the kyng of Babylō, & giue him my swerd in his hād: but I wyl breake Pharaos arme so that he shall holde it before him piteously lyke a wounded man.

Yea I wyll stablyshe the kynge of Baby- G Pharao. lons arme: and the armes of Pharao shall fal downe: that it maye be knowen, that I am the Lorde, whiche gyue the kynge of Babylon my swearde in his hande, that he maye drawe it oute vpon the lande of Egypte: & that when I scatre the Egyptians amonge the Gentyles, and strowe them in the landes aboute, they maye knowe, that I am the Lorde.

¶ A comparyson of the prosperetye of Pharao, with the prosperetye of the Assyrians. He prophecyeth a lyke destruction vnto them bothe.

CAPI. XXXI.

Moreouer

A Moreouer, it happened in the. xi. yeare
the fyrste daye of the thirde moneth that the worde of the Lorde came vn
to me sayinge: Thou sonne of man speake vnto Pharao the kinge of Egypte, and to al (Ezechi.e.xxix. xxx.xxxii.)
his people: Who art thou lyke in thy greate nesse: Beholde Assur was lyke a Cedre tree
vpon the mount of Lybanus with fayre braũ ches: so thicke, that he gaue shadowes and shot out very hyghe. His toppe reached vnto the cloudes. The waters made him greate, & the depe set him vp an hyghe. Rounde about the rotes of him ranne there floudes of wa= ter he sente oute his lytle ryuers vnto all ye B trees of the felde. Therfore was he hygher then all the trees of the felde, and thorowe ye multytude of waters that he sent from him he optayned many longe braunches. All fou les of the ayre made their nestes in his braun
ches, vnder his bowes gendred all their bea= stes of the felde, and vnder his shadow dwelt all people. Fayre and beautyfull was he in his greatnesse and in the length of his braun
ches, for his rote stode besyde greate waters
C no Cedre tre myghte hyde him. In the plea= saunt gardẽ of God, there was no Fyrre tre lyke his braũches, the playne trees were not like the bowes of him. All the trees in the garden of God might not be compared vnto him in his beauty so fayre and goodlye had I made him with the multytude of his braun= ches: In so moche that all the tres in the pleasaunt garden of God, had enuye at him.
D Therfore thus sayth the God: for so moche
as he hathe lyfte vp him selfe so hyghe and stretched his top into the cloudes, and seinge his herte is proude in his hyghnesse: I wyll
delyuer him in to the handes of the myghty
est amonges the heythen, whiche shall rote him out. Accordinge to his wyckednesse will I cast him awaye, the ennemyes shal destroy him, and the myghtye men of the Heithen shall so scatter him that his braunches shall lye vpon all mountaynes and in al valleyes, his bowes shall be broken downe to the grounde thorow out the lande. Then all the people of the lande shal go from his shadow and forsake him. When he is fallen, all the E foules of the ayre shall syt vpon him, and all wylde beastes of the felde shall go about amonges his braunches: so that frome hēce forthe, no tree in the water shall attayne to his hyghnes, nor reache his toppe vnto the cloudes, neither shall any tree of the water stande so hyghe, as he hath done. For vnto death shall they all be delyuered vnder the earth, and go downe to the graue, lyke other
men.
F Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde God: In the daye when he goeth downe to the graue
I wyll cause a lamentacion to be made, I wyl couer the depe vpon him, I will staunche his floudes, and the greate waters shal be re strayned. I shall cause Libanus to be sorow full for his sake, and all the trees of the felde shall be smytten.
(Esaye.xiiii.c / Ezech.xxvi.c) I wyl make the Heithen shake at the sond of his fall, when I caste him downe to hell, with them that descende in to the pytte. All G
the trees of Eden, withal the chosen and best trees of Lybanus, yea and all they that are planted vpon the waters, shal mourne with him also in the lower habytacyons: for they shall go downe to hell with him, vnto them that be slayne with the swerde, which dwelt afore vnder the shadowe of his arme among the heithen. To whom shalte thou be lyke= ned, that art so gloryous and great, amonge
the trees of Edē? yet art thou cast downe vn
der ye erth (amonges the trees of Eden) wher thou must lye amonges vncircumcysed, with them that be slaine with the swearde. Euen thus is it with Pharao and all his people, sayth the Lord God.

¶ The Prophete is cōmaunded to bewayle Pha
rao. He prophecyeth that destruction shall come vn to Egypt thorughe the kynge of Babylon.

CAPI. XXXII.

In the. xij. yeare, the fyrste daye of the. xij. A moneth, the worde of the Lorde came vn= to me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, take vp a lamentacion vpon Pharao kynge of E= gypte, and saye vnto him: Thou art counted
as a lion of the heithen, and as a whalefisshe
in the see.
Thou castest thy waters aboute the, thou troublest the waters with thy fete, and stam pest in their floudes. Thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyll spred my net ouer the, namely,
a greate multytude of people: these shall dryue the in to my yarne, for I will caste the vpon the lande, and let the lye vpon the felde
that all the foules of the ayre maye syt vpon
the: I wyll gyue all the beastes of the felde ynough of the.
Thy fleshe wyll I caste vpon the hilles, & B
fyll the valleyes with thy hyghnesse. I wyll water the lande with the aboundaunce of thy bloude euen to the mountaynes, and the valleyes shall be full of the. When thou arte put out, I wyll couer the heauen, and make his starres dymme. I will sprede a cloude o= uer the Sunne, and the Moone shal not gyue
her lyght.
All the lyghtes of heuen wyll I put oute
ouer the, and brynge darckenesse vpon thy lād sayth the Lorde God. I wyl trouble the her= tes of many people, when I brynge thy de= struction amonges the Heithen & countreyes whom thou knowest not. Yea I wyll make many people with their kynges so afrayde thorowe the, that their heere shall stand vp, when I shake my swearde at their faces. So deynly shall they be astonyed, euery man in him selfe, at the daye of thy fall.
For thus sayth the Lorde God: the kyng C of Babylons swearde shall come vpon the,
with the sweardes of the worthyes wyll I smyte downe thy people.
All they that be myghtye amonge the Ge tyles, shal waste the proude pompe of Egypt and brynge downe al her people. All the cattel also

also of Egypte wyll I destroye, that they shal come no more vpon the waters: so that neither mans fote ne beastes claw, shal stere them any more. Then wyll I make their wa ters cleare, and cause their floudes to runne lyke oyle, sayth ye Lord God: when I make the lande of Egypte desolate, and when the countreye with all that is therin, shall be layde waste: and when I smyte all them
whiche dwell in it, that they maye knowe, that I am the Lord. This is the mournyng, that ye doughters of the Heithen shal make:
yea a sorow and lamentacion shal they take vp, vpon Egypte and all her people, sayth ye Lorde God.
D In the. xij. yere, the. xv. daye of the mo=
neth came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man. Take vp a la= mentacion vpon the people of Egypte, and cast thē downe, yea and the myghtye people of the Heithen also euen with thē that dwel beneth: and with them that go downe in to the graue. Downe (howe fayre so euer thou be) and laye the with the vncircumcised. A= monges those that be slayne with the swerde,
shall they lye.
The swerde is gyuen alredye. he shall be drawen forth and al his people. The myghty worthies & his helpers, that be gone downe
and lye with the vncircumcised & with them
that be slayne with the swerde: shall speake
to him out of the myddest of hell.
E Assur is there also with his company, and their graues round about, which were slayne and fel al with ye swerde, whose graues lye be syde him in the lowe pyt. His commons are buryed rounde about his graue: all togither wounded and slayne with the swerde, which men afore tyme brought feare into the land of the lyuynge.
There is Elam also with all his people, & their graues rounde about: which all being wounded and slayne with the swerde, are gone downe vncircumcysed vnder the earth, whiche neuertheles somtyme brought feare
into the lande of the lyuynge: for the whi= che they bare their shame, with ye other that be gone downe to the graue.
F Their buryal is gyuen them and all their people, amonges them that be slayne. Their graues are round about all them which be vncircumcysed, and with them that be slaine thorowe the swerde: for seinge that in times past they made the lād of the lyuyng afrayde,
they muste nowe beare their owne shame,
with them that go downe to the pyt, & lye a monge them that be slayne.
There is Mesech also and Tubal, & their people, and their graues round about. These all are amonges the vncircumcysed, and thē that be slayne with the swerde, because afore tyme they made the lande of the lyuynge a= frayed.
Shulde not they then lye amonges the worthyes, and vncircumcysed Gyauntes?
whiche with their weapons are gone downe to hell: whose swerdes are layed vnder their heades, whose wickednesse is vpon their bo= nes: because that as worthyes, they haue brought feare in to the lande of the lyuyng?
Yea amonges ye vncircumcysed shalt thou be de stroyed, and slepe with them, that perysshed thorow the swearde.
There is the lande of Edom with her kin G
ges & prynces also, which with their strength (Jerem.xlix.b) are layed by them that wer slayne with the (Ezechi.xxv.b) swearde, yea amonge the vncircumcised, and (xxxv.a.)
them whiche are gone downe into the pit.
Moreouer, there be all the princes of the north, with all the Sidonians, whiche are gone downe to the slayne.
With their feare & strength they are come to confusyon, and lye there vncircumcysed, amōges those that be slayne with the swerde and beare their owne shame, with them that be gone downe to the pyt.
Nowe when Pharao seith this, he shal be comforted ouer all his people, that is slayne with the swerde: both Pharao and all his hooste, sayth the Lorde God. For I haue gy= uen my feare in the land of the lyuyng. But Pharao and al his people shall lye amonges
the vncircumcysed, and amonges them that be slayne with the swearde sayth the Lorde
God.

¶ He setteth out the offyce of a preacher. He streng= theneth them that despayre, and boldeneth them with the promyse of mercy. As the former ryghtous= nesse helpeth not the ryghtous, yf he gyue hym selfe agayne to synne: so the synnes done before are not imputed to the wycked that amendeth. The worde of the Lorde agaynst the rest of the people. Agaynst
the mockers of the wordes of the Prophet.

CAPI. XXXIII.

A Agayne, the worde of the Lorde came (A Preachers be watchmē.)
vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of mā Speake to the chyldren of thy peo= ple, and tell them: When I sende a swearde vpon a lande, yf the people of the land take a man of their countrey, and sette him to be their watchman: the same man (whan he (iiii.Reg.ix.d.) seyth the swerde come vpon the lande) shall blowe the trompette, and warne the peo= ple.
If a man now heare the noyse of the trom
pet and wyll not be warned, and the swerde come and take him awaye: his bloude shall be vpon his owne heed: for he herde ye sound of the trompette, and wolde not take hede, therfore his bloude be vpon him. But yf he wyll receyue warnynge, he shall saue his lyfe.
Agayne, yf the watchman se the swearde
come and shewe it not with the trompet, so ye the people is not warned: if the swerd come then, and take any man from amonges the:
the same shall be taken awaye in his owne synne, but his bloude wyll I requyre of the watchmans hand.
And nowe (O thou sonne of man) I haue (Ezechie.iii.c.)
made the a watchman vnto the house of Is= rael:

rael: that where as thou hearest any thynge
out of my mouth, thou mayste warne them on my behalfe. If I saye vnto the wycked thou wycked, thou shalte surely dye: and ỹ geuest hym not warnynge, that he maye be= ware of his vngodly waye: then shall the wycked dye in his own synne, but his bloude wyll I requyre of thy hande. Neuertheles yf thou warne ỹ wicked of his way, to turne from it, wher as he yet will not be turned from it, thẽ shal he dye because of his synne,
but thou haste delyuered thy soule.
C Therfore (O thou sonne of man) speake vnto the house of Israel. Yea say thus: Our offences and synnes lye vpon vs, and we be corrupte in them: how shulde we then be re stored vnto lyfe? Tell them: As truly as I lyue sayth the Lorde God, I haue no plea= Ezech. xviii. e sure in the death of the wycked, but moche rather that the wicked turne from his waye and lyue. Turne you, turne you from youre vngodly wayes, O ye of the house of Israel.
Oh, wherfore wyl ye dye?
Ezec. xviii. d Thou sone of man, tell the children of thy people: The rightousnesse of the ryghy= tous shall not saue him, whan so euer he tur neth awaye vnfaythfully: Agayne, the wic=
kednes of ỹ wicked shal not hurte him, whan
soeuer he conuerteth frome his vngodlynes.
And the ryghtousnesse of the ryghtous shall not saue his lyfe, whansoeuer he sin=
neth.
If I saye vnto the ryghtous, that he shall surelye lyue, and so he trust to his owne righ tousnesse, and do synne: then shal his righ= tousnesse be no more thought vpon, but in the wyckednesse that he hathe done he shall dye.
D Agayne, yf I saye vnto the wicked: thou Esaye. lv. b shalte surely dye: and so he turne frome his Iere. xviii. a synnes, and do the thinge that is lawfull &
ryght: In so moch that the same wicked mã geueth the pledge agayne, restoreth that he had taken awaye by robberye, walketh in ỹ commaundementes of lyfe, & doth no wrõg:
Then shal he surly liue, and not dye. Yea the synnes ỹ he hath done, shal neuer be thought vpon.
For in so moche as he doth now the thing that is lawfull and right, he shall lyue. And yet the children of thy people say: Tush, the way of the Lord is not ryght, where as their owne waye is rather vnryght.
When the rightous turneth from his righ
tousnesse, and doth the thyng that is wicked,
he shal dye therfore. But if the wicked turne Ezech. xviii. f from his wickednesse, doinge the thinge that Roma. ii. a is lawfull and ryght, he shall lyue therfore.
Yet ye saye: the waye of the Lorde is not e= quall. O ye house of Israel, I wyll iudge eue ry one of you after his wayes.
E In the twelueth yere the .v. day of ỹ .x. mo= neth of oure captyuite, it happened, that one whiche was fled out of Ierusalẽ, came vnto me, and sayde: the citye is destroyed. Nowe the hande of the Lord had bene vpon me the euening afore this man (which was escaped)
came vnto me, & had opened my mouth, vn= tyll the mornyng that he came to me: yea he opened my mouth, so that I was no more domme.
Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto
me, and sayde: Thou sonne of man, these that dwell in the wasted lande of Israel, say Abraham was but one man, and he had the lande in possessyon nowe are we many, & the lande is geuen vs to possesse also.
And therfore tell them: Thus sayth the F
Lorde: In the bloude haue ye eaten, youre eyes haue ye lyfte vp to Idols, and haue shed
bloud: shal ye then haue the land in possessi= on.
Ye leane vpon youre swerdes, ye worke
abhominacyõs, euery one defyleth his neigh= bours wyfe: and shall ye then possesse the lande? Say thou these wordes vnto them:
Thus sayth the Lorde God: As truely as I lyue all ye that dwell in this wildernes, shal be slayne with the swerde: what so euer is vpon the felde, wyll I gyue vnto the beestes to be deuoured: those that be in stronge hol
des and dennes, shall dye of the pestilence.
For I wyl make the lande so desolate and waste, and the pomp of her strẽgth shal come to an ende. The mountaynes in Israel shall be so waste that no man shall trauayle ther=
by.
Then shall they learne to knowe, that I G
am the Lorde, when I make the lande waste and desolate, because of al their abhomyna= cions, that they haue wroughte. And thou sonne of man, the children of thy people that talke of the, by the walles & in the dores of their houses, sayinge one to an other: Come lette vs heare, what worde is gone forthe frome the Lorde: These come vnto the, after the maner of a great people: ye my people sit downe before the, and heare thy wordes but they do not therafter: for i their mouthes they shewe them selues, as though they were fer H
uent, but their herte goeth after their owne couetous lucre.
And as a ballet ỹ hath a swete tune, & is ple
saunt to synge, so shalte thou be vnto them:
thy wordes shall they heare, but they wil not do therafter. When this commeth to passe (for lo, it commeth in dede) then shall they knowe, that there hathe bene a Prophete a= monge them.

¶ Agaynst Byshoppes and Curates that despyse the flocke of Chryste, and seke theyr owne. The Lorde sayeth that he wyll vysette his dysperpled flocke, and gather them togyther. He reproueth the malyce of certayne of the flocke. He promyseth the true shepherde Chryste, and with hym peace.

CAPI. XXXIIII.

And the worde of the Lorde came vn= A
to me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, prophecye agaynste the shepherdes
of Israel, prophecye and speke vnto them:
Thus sayth the Lorde God: Wo be vnto
the shepherdes of Israel, that fede the selues
Shulde not the shepherdes fede the flockes?
Ye

B Ye haue eaten vp the fatte, ye haue clo= thed you with the woll: the best fedde haue
ye slayne, but the flocke haue ye not nourys= shed. The weake haue ye not holden vp, the sycke haue ye not healed: the broken haue ye not bounde togyther, the outcastes haue ye not brought agayne: the lost haue ye not soughte, but churlyshly, and cruelly haue ye ruled them. Thus are they scattered here and there without a shepeherde: yea all the bea stes of the felde deuoure them, and they goo astraye.
C My shepe goo wandrynge vpon all moun= taynes, and vpon euery hye hyll. Yea they be scattred abrode in all feldes, and there is no man that careth for them, or seketh after thẽ.
Therfore, O ye shepherdes, heare the worde of the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lord God. As truly as I lyue, for as moche as my shepe are robbed, and deuoured of all the wylde bea= stes of the felde hauynge no shepeherde: and seinge that my shepherdes take no regarde of my shepe, but fede them selues onely and not my shepe. Therfore heare the worde of the Lord, o ye shepherdes: Thus sayth the Lord God: Behold, I my selfe wil vpon the shep= herdes, and requyre my shepe from their han= des, and make them cease from fedyng of my shepe: yea the shepherdes shal fede them sel=
ues no more: For I wyll delyuer my shepe oute of their mouthes, so that they shall not D deuour them after this. For thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyl loke to my shepe
my selfe, and seke them. Lyke as a shepeherde amonges the flocke, seketh after ỹ shepe that are scatred abrode, euen so wil I seke after my shepe, and gather them togyther oute of all places, where they haue ben scattered in the cloudy and darke daye. I wil bring them out from all people, and gather them togyther oute of all landes. I wyll brynge them in to their owne lande, and fede them vpon the mountaynes of Israell by the ryuers, and in all the places of the countrey. I wyll fede thẽ in ryght good pastures, & vpon the hye moun= taynes of Israel shall there foldes be. There shall they lye in a good folde, and in a fatte pasture shall they fede: euen vpon the moun taynes of Israel.
E I wyll fede my shepe my selfe, and brynge them to their rest, sayth the Lord God. Such as be lost, wil I seke / suche as go astraye, wil
I bring agayne / suche as be wounded, wil I bynde vp / suche as be weake, wyll I make strong: suche as be fat and wel likinge, those wil I preserue, and fede them with the thyng that is laufull. And as for you, O my shepe, sayth the Lorde God: I wil put a difference amonge the shepe, amonges the wethers and the gotes. Was it not inough for you to eate vp the good pasture, but ye must treade downe
the residue of your pasture with your fete al= so? Was it not ynough for you to drynk clere water, but ye must trouble the residue also w
youre fete?
F Thus my shepe muste be fayne to eate
the thynge, that ye haue troden downe with youre fete, and to drynke it, that ye with your fete haue defyled. Therfore, thus sayth the Lorde God vnto theym: Beholde, I wyll seuer the fatte shepe frome the leane / for so moche as ye haue put the weake shepe vpon
the sydes and shoulders, and ran vpon them with youre hornes, so longe tyll ye haue vt= terly scattered them abrode. I wyll helpe my shepe, so that they shall be no more spoyled:
yea I wyll discerne one shepe from an other.
I wyll rayse vp vnto them one onely shepe=
herde: euen my seruaunt Dauid, he shal fede Iob. x. b.
them, & he shal be their shepherde. I the Lorde Esaye. xv. c wyll be their God, and my seruaunte Da= xlv. b uid shall be their prynce: Euen I the Lorde Deut. ix. g
haue spoken it.
Moreouer, I wyll make a couenaunte of peace with them, and dryue all euyll beastes
oute of the lande, so they that maye dwelle safelye in the wyldernesse, and slepe in the woddes. Good fortune and prosperitie wyll
I gyue them, and vnto all that be rounde a= boute my hylle. A prosperous showre and rayne wyll I sende them in due season, that the trees in the wodde maye brynge forthe theyr frutes, and the grounde her increase.
They shall be safe in theyr lande, and shall knowe that I am the Lorde, whiche haue broken their yoke, and delyuered them oute
of the handes of those that helde them in sub iection.
They shall no more be spoyled of the Hea= G
then, nor deuoured with the beastes of the lande / but safely shal they dwell, and no man shall fraye them. I wyll set vp an excellente plante for theym, so that they shall suffre no more hunger in the lande, neyther beare the reprofe of the Heathen any more. Thus shall they vnderstande that I the Lorde theyr God am with them, and that they (euen the house of Israell) are my people, sayth the Lorde God. Ye men are my flocke, ye are the shepe Iohn. x. b of my pasture; and I am youre God, sayth the Psal. xc. a. b. c Lorde God.

¶ The destruction that shal come on the hyll Seir, that is on ỹ Idumeans, bicause they troubled the peo ple of the Lorde.

CAPI. XXXVIII.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came A vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man,
turne thy face towarde ỹ mount Seir,
prophecy vpon it, & saye vnto it: Thus sayth
the Lorde God: Beholde, O thou mounte Seir, I wyl vpon the, I wil reache out myne
hande ouer the / yea waste and desolate wyll
I make the. Thy cityes wil I breake downe, and thou shalte lye voyde / that thou mayste know how that I am the Lord. For so moche as thou bearest an olde enimitye agaynst the the chyldren of Israell / and with a cruell
hande haste made them afrayde, what tyme as they were troubled and punysshed for their synne. Therfore as trulye as I lyue, sayth B
the Lorde God, I wyll prepare the vn=
to bloude, yea bloude shal folowe vpon thee

ſeynge thou lapeſt wayte for blonde, therfore ſhall blond perſecute the. Thus will I make the mount Seir deſolate and waſte, and bring to paſſe that there ſhal no man go thither, ne come from thence. His mountaynes will I fil with his ſlayne men: thy hylles, dales, and valeys ſhall lye full of them that are ſlayne with the ſwerde. I wyll make the a perpetuall wyldernelle, ſo that no man ſhal dwell in thy cityes: that ye maye knowe how that I am the Lorde.

And bycauſe thou haſt ſayd: what, bothe
theſe nations, and bothe theſe landes muſte
be myne, and I wyll haue them in poſſeſſion, where as the Lorde was there. Therfore,
thus ſayth the Lord God: As truly as I liue
I wyll handle the accordynge to thy wrathe
and geloulye, lyke as thou haſt dealte cruelly with them: that I maye be knowen among them, bowe I haue punyſhed the. Yea, and that thou maſt be ſure that I the Lorde haue herde all thy deſpytfull wordes, which thou haſt ſpoken agaynſte the mountaynes of Iſ-rael, ſayinge: Lo, they are made waſte, and gyuen vs to deuoure. Thus with your mou-thes ye haue made youre booſte agaynſte me, yea, and multiplyed youre proude wordes
agaynſte me, whiche I haue herde all togy-ther. Wherunto thus ſayth the Lorde God:
When the hole worlde is in wealthe, then wyll I make the waſte. And lyke as thou (O mount Seir) waſt glad, bycauſe the heritage of the houſe of Iſrael was deſtroyed: euen ſo wyll I wo vnto the alſo, that thou and hole Edom ſhal be deſtroyed, and know that I am the Lorde.

The promyſeth deliueraunce from the Gentyles vnto Iſrael. The benefytes done vnto the Jewes are to be aſcrybed to the mercye of God, not vnto their deſeruynges. God renueth our hertes that we maye walcke in his commaundementes.

CAPI. XXXVI.

Thou ſonne of man, prophecie vpon the mountaynes of Iſrael, and ſpeke. Heare the worde of the Lorde. O ye mountaynes of Iſrael. Thus ſayth the Lorde God: Beſeuſe your enemye hath ſayd vpon you: A ha, the hye euerlaſtynge places are now become ours: Prophecye therfore and ſpeake: thus ſayth the Lorde God: Seing ye be waſted and troden downe on euery ſyde, and become a poſſeſſyon vnto the reſydue of the Gentiles, whiche haue brought you in to mennes mouthes, and vnto an euyll name amonges the people. Therfore heare the worde of the Lorde God, O ye mountaynes of Iſrael: Thus ſayth the Lorde God vnto the mountaynes and hylles, valleyes and dales, to the voyde wyldernelles, and deſolate cytyes, whiche are ſpoyled, and habde in derilyon on euery ſyde, amonge the reſydue of the Heathen: Yea, euen thus ſayth the Lorde God: In the fyre of my geloulye haue I ſaken a deuyce, agaynſte the reſydue of the Gentyles, and agaynſt all Edom; whiche haue taken in my lande vnto them ſelues for a poſſeſſion, whiche alſo reioyſed from their hole herte, with a deſpyteſull ſtomache to waſte it and to ſpoyle it.

Prophecye therfore vpon the lande of Iſrael, ſpeake vnto the mountaynes and hylles, to valleys and dales, thus ſayth the Lord God. Beholde, this haue I deuiſed in my geloulye and terrible wrathe: For ſo muche as ye haue ſuffred reproſe of the Heathen: therfore, thus ſayth the Lorde God: I ſhall ſwore that the Gentyles whiche lye about you, ſhall beare youre confuſyon them ſelues. And as for you (O mountaynes of Iſrael) ye ſhall ſhoute out youre braunches, and bringe forthe youre frute to my people of Iſrael: for it is harde by that wyll come. Beholde, I come vnto you, and vnto you wyll I tourne me, that ye maye be tylled and ſowen.

I wyl ſende you moche people, which ſhal be all of the houſe of Iſrael: the cityes ſhall be inhabited, and the decayed places ſhall be repayred agayne. I wyll prouyde you with moche people & catel, which ſhal encreaſe and bringe frute. I will reſtore you alſo to youre olde eſtate, and ſhewe you more kyndenelle then euer ye habde before: whereby ye ſhall knowe that I am the Lorde. Yea, people wil I ſende vnto you (O my folke of Iſrael) whiche ſhall haue the in poſſeſſion, and thou ſhalt be their inheritaunce. ſo that thou ſhalt no more be without them. Agayn, thus ſayth the Lorde God: for ſo moche as they ſaye vn to you: Thou art an eater vp of men, & a waſter of thy people: therfore thou ſhalt eate no mo men, neyther deſtroye thy people any more, ſayth the Lord God. And I wil not ſuffer the to heare thyne owne confuſyon amonge the Gentyles from henceforth. Thou ſhalte not beare the reproſe of the nations, nor cauſe oute thyne owne people any more, ſayth the Lorde God.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lord came vn to me, ſaying: O thou ſon of man, when the houſe of Iſrael dwelt vpon their own ground they defyled theym ſelues with their owne wayes and ymagynacions / ſo þ in my ſyght their waye was lyke the vncleanneſſe of a me-ſtruous womā. Wherfore I poured my wrath full diſpleaſure vpon them, bycauſe of the bloude that they had ſhed in the lande, and bicauſe of their ydols, wherwith they had defyled them ſelues. I ſcatred them alſo among the Hethen, ſo that they were ſtrowed about in the landes. Accordynge to their wayes, and after their own inuencions, ſo dyd I punyſhe them.

Nowe when they were gone vnto the Hea then, and come in amonges them, they diſho noured my holy name: ſo that it was ſayd of them: Are theſe the people of God, and muſt go out of their owne land? Then ſpared I my holy name which the houſe of Iſrael had diſ-honoured amonges the Gentyles, to whome they came. Therfore tell the houſe of Iſrael: Thus ſayth the Lorde God: I wo not this for youre ſakes (O houſe of Iſrael) but for my holye names ſake, whiche ye diſhonou-red amonge the Heathen, when ye came to them. Therfore, I wyll halowe my greate name agayne, whiche amonge the Gentiles is euyl ſpoken of: for ye your ſelues haue diſ honoured it amonge them. And the Gentiles ſhall knowe that I am the Lorde, when I am honoured in you before their eyes, ſayth the Lorde God.

As for you, I wyll take you from amonges the Heathen, and gather you together oute of all countreyes, and bringe you agayne in to youre owne lande. Then wyll I poure clene water vpon you, and ye ſhall be clene: yea from all your vncleanneſſe, and from all youre Idols ſhall I clenſe you. A newe herte alſo wyll I gyue you, and a newe ſpirite will I put into you: As for that ſtonye herte, I wyll take it oute of youre bodye, and gyue you a fleſhly herte. I wyll gyue my ſpirite a-monge you, and cauſe you to walke in my commaundementes, to kepe my lawes, and to fulfyl them.

And ye ſhall dwell in the lande that I gaue to your fore fathers, and ye ſhall be my people, and I wyll be youre God. I wil helpe you out of all youre vncleanneſſe. I wyll call vn to the corne, and wyl encreaſe it, and wyl let you haue no hongre. I wil multiplye the frutes of the trees, and the encreaſe of the felde for you, ſo that ye ſhal beare no more reproſe of honger amonge the Heathen. Then ſhall ye remembre youre owne wicked wayes, and your ymaginations, whiche were not good: ſo that ye ſhall take diſpleaſure at your owne ſelues, by reaſon of youre ſynnes and abgom nacions.

But I wyll not doo this for youre ſakes (ſayth the Lorde God) be ye ſure of it. Therfore, O ye houſe of Iſrael be aſhamed of youre ſynnes. Moreouer, thus ſayth the Lorde God: what tyme as I ſhall clenſe you from all youre offences, then wyll I make the cityes to be occupyed agayne, and wyl repayre the places þ be decayed. The deſolate land ſhall be buylded agayne, whiche afore tyme laye waſte in the ſyght of all them that wente by.

Then ſhall it be ſayd: this waſte lande is become lyke a gardeyn of pleaſure, and the hode, deſolate and broken downe cities are nowe ſtronge and fenſed agayne. Then the reſydue of the Heathen that lye rounde a-boute you, ſhall knowe that I am the Lorde which repayre that was broken downe, and plante agayne that was made waſte. Euen I the Lorde haue ſpoken it, and wyll do it in dede.

Thus ſayth the Lorde God: I wyl yet ones be founde agayne of the houſe of Iſ-rael, and doo this for them: I ſhall en-creaſe them as a flocke of men. Lyke as the holy flocke, and the flocke of Jeruſalem are in the hygh ſolemne feaſtes: ſo that alſo the wylde waſted cityes be fylled with flockes of men: and they ſhall knowe that I am the Lorde.

The prophecyeth the bryngynge agayne of the people be ynge in captyuyte. He ſheweth the vnyon of the ten trybes with the two. Chriſte is the kynge of the Chriſten people alone, and the onely euer-laſtynge ſhepherde therof.

CAPI. XXXVII.

The hande of the Lorde came vpon me, and caryed me oute in the ſpirite of the Lorde, & let me downe in a playne feld, that laye ful of bones, and he led me rounde about by them: and beholde the bones that laye vpon the felde were verye manye, and marueylous dre alſo. Then ſaid he vnto me: Thou ſonne of man: tyynkeſt thou theſe bones maye lyue agayne? I anſwered: O Lord God, thou knoweſt. And he ſayde vnto me: Prophecy thou vpon theſe bones, and ſpeake vnto them: Ye dreye bones, heare the worde of the Lorde. Thus ſayth the Lorde God vnto theſe bones: Beholde I wyl put breth in to you, that ye may liue: I wil gyue you ſi-nowes, and make fleſh grow vpon you and co uer you oute with ſkin, and ſo gyue you breth that ye maye lyue and knowe that I am the Lorde.

So I prophecied as he habde commaunded me. And as I was prophecyinge, there came a noyſe and a greate motion, ſo that the bo-nes came euery one to an other. Now when I had loked, beholde, they had ſynowes, and fleſh grewe vpon them, and aboue they were couered with ſkynne, but there was no breth in them: Then ſaid he vnto me: Thou ſonne of man, prophecye thou towarde the wynde: prophecye, and ſpeake to the wynde: Thus ſayth the Lorde God: a come (O thou ayre) from the four wyndes, and blow vpon theſe ſlayne, that they maye be reſtored to lyfe. So I prophecied, as he had cōmaunded me, then came the breth in to them, and they receyued lyfe, and ſtode vp vpon their fete, a marueylous greate hoſte.

Moreouer, he ſayd vnto me: Thou ſonne of man, theſe bones are the hole houſe of Iſrael. Beholde, they ſaye: Oure bones are dryed vp, oure hope is gone, we are clene cut of. Therfore prophecye thou, and ſpeake vn-to them: thus ſayth the Lorde God: Be-holde, I wyll open your graues (O my peo-ple) and take you oute of your ſepulcres, and bringe you in to the lande of Iſrael agayne. So ſhal ye knowe that I am the Lorde, whē I open youre graues, and bringe you oute of them. My ſpirite alſo wyll I put in you, and ye ſhall lyue: I wyll ſette you agayne in your owne lande, and ye ſhall knowe, that I am the Lorde, whiche haue ſayd, and fulful-led it in dede.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, ſayinge: Thou ſonne of man, take a ſtycke and wrype vpon it: Vnto Juda and to the chyldren of Iſrael his companions. Then take an other ſticke, and wrype vpon it: Vnto Joſeph þ ſtok of Ephraim, and to al the houſ-holde of Iſrael his companions. And the take bothe theſe ſticke ogyther in thyne hande, ſo ſhall

C there be one stycke therof. Now yf the chyldren of thy people saye vnto the: wylte thou not shew vs what thou meanest by these? thē gyue them this answere: thus sayth ye Lorde God: beholde I will take the stocke of Joseph, whiche is in the lande of Ephraim, and of the trybes of Israel his felowes, and will put them to the stocke of Juda, and make thē one stocke, and they shall be one in my hand. And the two stickes wherupon thou wrytest shalt thou haue in thyne hand, that they may se, and shalt saye vnto them: (Osee.i.d)

F Thus saythe the Lorde God: beholde, I wyll take awaye the chyldren of Israel from among the heathē, vnto whom they be gone and wil gather them togyther on euery syde, and bryng them agayn in to their owne land. yea I wyll make one people of the in ye land, vpon the mountaynes of Israel, and they al shall haue but one kyng. They shall no more be two peoples frome hencefurthe, neyther be deuyded in to two kyngdomes: they shall also defile them selues no more with their abhominacions, ydols, and all their wicked doinges. I wil helpe them out of al their dwellyng places wherin they haue synned, & wyll so clense them, that they shall be my people, and I their God.

G Dauid my seruaunt shall be theyr kynge, and they all shall haue one shepeherde onely. They shall walke in my lawes and my commaundementes shal they bothe kepe and fulfyll. They shall dwell in the lande that I gaue vnto Jacob my seruaunt, where as your fathers also haue dwelt. Yea euē in the same lande shall they, theyr chyldren, and theyr chylders chyldren dwell for euer more: and my seruaunte Dauid shall be theyr euerlastynge prynce. (Eze.xxxiiii.d / Johñ.x.b.)

Moreouer, I wyll make a bonde of peace with them, which shal be vnto them an euerlasting couenaunt. I wil settle them also, and multiply them, my Sanctuarye will I set among them for euermore. My dwellyng shal be with them: yea I wil be their God, and they shal be my people. Thus the Heathē also shall knowe that I the Lorde am the holy maker of Israel: when my sanctuary shal be amonges them for euer more.

¶ He prophecyeth that Gog and Magog shal come with an appoynted host in to the lande of promyse. Theyr intent. He reherseth that the commynge of Gog was before prophecyed of the Prophetes. The destruction of hym.

CAPI. XXXVIII.

A And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, tourne thy face towarde Gog in the lande of Magog, whiche is the chiefe prynce at Mesech and Tubal: Prophecye agaynste hym, and saye: Thus sayth the Lorde God: O Gog thou chiefe prynce Mesech and Tubal: Beholde, I wyll vpon the, and wyll tourne the about, and put a bytte in thy chawes: I wyll brynge the forth and all thyne hoste, bothe horse and horse men, whiche be all weaponed of the best facyon, a great people, that handle all togyther speres, shyldes, and swerdes: the Perses, Morians, and with them the Lybians, whiche all beare shyldes and helmettes: Gomer and all his hoostes: the house of Thogorma oute of the Northe quarters, and all his hostes, yea and moche people with the. (Ezech.xxxix. / Apoca.xx.c)

Therfore prepare the, set thy selfe in araye with all thy people that are come vnto B the by heapes, and be thou theyr defence. After many dayes thou shalte be vysited, and in the latter yeres thou shalte come in to the lande, that hathe bene destroyed with the swerde, and now is replenysshed agayn with dyuers people vpon the mountaynes of Israel, whiche haue longe lyen waste. Yea, they be broughte oute of the nacyons, and dwell all safe. Thou shalte come vp lyke a stormye wether, to couer the lande, and as it were a darke cloude: thou with all thyne hoostes, and a greate multytude of people with the.

Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde God: At C the same tyme shall many thinges come in to thy mynde, so that thou shalte ymagen myschief and say: I wil vp to yonder playne land seing they syt at ease, and dwell so safely (for they dwel all without any walles, they haue neyther barres nor dores) to spoyle them, to robbe them, to laye hande vpon theyr so wel inhabited wyldernesse: agaynst that people, that is gathered togyther frome amonge the heathen, whiche haue gotten catell and D good, and dwell in the myddest of the lande. Then shall Saba and Dedan, and the marchauntes of Tharsis with all their worthies saye vnto the: Art thou come to robbe? hast thou gathered thy people togyther, bycause thou wylte spoyle? to take syluer and golde: to cary awaye catell and good: and to haue a greate praye?

Therfore, O thou sonne of man, thou E shalte prophecye, and saye thus vnto Gog: Thus saythe the Lorde God: In that daye thou shalte knowe that my people of Israel dwelleth safe: and shalte come frō thy place out of the North partes: thou & moche people with the, whiche ryde vpon horses, wher of there is a great multitude and an innumerable sorte. Yea, thou shalte come vpon my people of Israell, as a cloude to couer the lande. This shall come to passe in the latter dayes. I wyl bryng the vp in to my land, that the Heathen maye knowe me, when I gette me honoure vpon the, O Gog, before their eyes.

Thus saythe the Lorde God: Thou arte F he, of whome I haue spoken afore tyme, by my seruauntes the Prophetes of Israel, whiche prophecyed in those dayes and yeres, that I shoulde brynge the vpon theym. At the same tyme, when Gog commeth vp in to the lande of Israel (saythe the Lorde God) shall my indignacion goo forthe in to my wrathe. For in my gelousye and hoote displeasure I haue haue deuysed, that there shall be a great trouble in the lande of Israell at that tyme. The verye fysshes in the see, the foules of the ayre, the beastes of the felde, and all the men that are vpon the earthe, shall tremble for feare of me.

G The hylles also shall be tourned vp syde downe, the stayres of stone shall fall, and all walles shall syncke to the grounde. I wyll call for a swerde vpon them in all my mountaynes, saythe the Lorde God: so that euery mans swerde shal be vpon an other. With pestilence and bloode wyll I punysshe hym: stormye rayne and hayle stones, fyre & brymstone wyll I cause to rayne vpon him, and al his heape: yea and vpon all that great people that is with him. Thus wyl I be magnified, honoured, and knowen amonges the heathen: that they maye be sure how that I am the Lorde.

¶ He sheweth the destruction of Gog and Magog. The graue of Gog and of his hoste. He prophecieth that Gog and his company shal be deuoured of byrdes and beastes. Wherfore the house of Israel is wasted. Theyr bryngynge agayne from captyuyte is promysed.

CAPI. XXXIX.

A Therfore, O thou sonne of man, prophecye agaynste Gog, and speake. Thus sayth the Lord God: Beholde, o Gog thou chiefe prince at Mesech and Tuball: I wyll vpon the, and tourne the aboute, and carye the forthe, and lede the from the North partes, and brynge the vp to the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy bowe I will smyte it out of thy lefte hande, and cast thyne arowes out of thy right hand. Thou with al thyne heape and all the people that is with the, must fall vpon the mountaynes of Israel. Then wil I gyue the vnto the foules and wyld beestes of the feld, to be deuoured: there must thou lye vpon the felde: for euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, sayth the Lorde God.

B Into Magog, and amonge those that syt so carelesse in the yles: wyll I sende a fyre, and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde. I wyll make also the name of my holynesse to be knowen amonges my people of Israel: & I wil not let my holy name to be euyll spoken of any more: but the very heathen also shal knowe ye I am the Lorde, the holye one of Israell. Beholde it commeth and shall be fulfylled in dede, sayth the Lorde God. This is the day wherof I haue spoken: They that dwell in the cityes of Israel, shall goo forth and set fyre vpon the weapons, and burne them: shyldes and speres, bowes and arowes byles and clubbes: seuen yeres shall they be burnynge therof, so that they shall elles bryng no styckes from the felde, neither haue nede to hewe downe any oute of the wodde: for they shal haue wepons ynough to burne. They shall robbe those that robbed theym, and spoyle those that spoyled them, saith the Lorde God.

At the same tyme wyll I gyue vnto Gog C a place to be buryed in, in Israell: euen the valey, wherthorow men go from the East to the see ward. Those that trauaile therby shal abhorre it: There shall Gog and all his people be buryed: and it shal be called the valey of the people of Gog. Seuen monethes long shall the house of Israel be buryinge of them, that they maye clense the lande. Yea all the people of the land shall bury them. O it shal be a gloryous daye, when I get me that honoure, saythe the Lorde God. They shall ordeyne men also to be deed buryers, euer goynge thorowe the lande, and appoynte them certayne places to burye those in whiche remayne vpon the felde, that the lande may be clensed. From ende to ende shall they seke, & that seuen monethes longe. Now those that go thorow the lande, where they se a mannes bone, they shal set vp a token by it, til the deed buryers haue buryed it also, in the valey of ye people of Gog. And the name of the city shal be called *Hamonah: Thus shall they make the land clene. (*That is, multytude.)

And thou sonne of man: thus saythe the Lord God: Speake vnto al the foules, and D euery byrde, yea and to all the wylde beastes, of the felde, heape you togither and come, gather you round about vpon my slaughter, that I haue slayne for you: euen a great slaughter vpon the mountaynes of Israel: eate fleshe, and drynke bloode. Ye shall eate the fleshe of E the worthyes, and drynke the bloode of the princes of the land: of the wethers, of the lābes, of the gotes, and of the oxen that be all slayne at Basan. Eate the fat your bely full, and drynke bloode tyll ye be dronken of the slaughter which I haue slayne vnto you. Fyll you at my table, with horses and stronge horse men: with capitaynes and all men of warre sayth the Lorde God. (Apoca.xix.d)

I wyll brynge my glorye also amonges F the Gentyles, that all the Heathen maye se my iudgement that I haue kepte, and my hande whiche I haue layde vpon them: that the house of Israel maye knowe how that I am the Lorde their God, from that day forth. And the Heathen shal knowe, that where as the house of Israel were led in to captiuitie: it was for their wickednesse sake, bicause they offended me.

For the whiche cause I hydde my face G frome theym, and delyuered them in to the handes of theyr ennemyes, that they myghte all be slayne with the swearde. Accordynge to theyr vncleannesse, and vnfaythfull dealynges, so haue I entreated them, and hydde my face from them. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: Now wyll I bryng agayne the captyues of Jacob, and haue mercye vpon the hole house of Israel, and be gelous for my holye names sake. All theyr confusion and offence, that they haue done agaynst me, shal be taken awaye, and so safely shall they dwel in their lande, that no man shall make them afrayde. And when I haue brought the agayne from amonges the people, when I haue gathered them togyther out of theyr ennemyes handes, and am prayſed in them before ma-nye Heathen: then ſhall they knowe that I am the Lorde their God, which ſuffred them to be ledde in to captiuitie amonge the Heathen, but now haue brought them agayne in to their owne land, and not lett one of them ponder.

After that will I hide my face no more from them, but will poure out my ſpirite vpon the Ezec. xxxix.d houſe of Iſrael, ſayeth the Lorde God.

¶ The reſtorynge of the cytye and of the temple
that was to come is ſhewed vnto the Prophete.

CAPI. XL.

IN the .xxv. yere of our captiuitie, in the begynnynge of the yere, the tenth day of the moneth: that is the .xiiij. yere after that ꝑ city was ſmytten downe: the ſame day came the hand of the Lord vpon me, and caried me forth, euen in to the lande of Iſrael brought me in the viſions of God: & ſet me downe vpon a marueylous hye mountayne, where-vpon there was a buyldyng (as it had ben of a city) towarde the north.

Tyther he caryed me: and beholde, there was a man, whoſe ſimilitude was like braſſe whiche had a threde of flaxe in his hande, and a meterod alſo. He ſtode in the wore and ſayde vnto me: marke well with thyne eyes, harken to with thyne eares, and faſten it in thine hert what ſo euer I ſhal ſhewe the, for to the entent that they myght be ſhewed the, therefore arte thou brought hyther, and what ſo euer thou ſeist, thou ſhalt certifie the houſe of Iſrael therof.

B Beholde, there was a wall on the outſyde rounde aboute the houſe: the meterod that he had in his hand was fyue cubites long and a ſpanne. So he meaſured the bredth of the buyldyng, which was a meteroo, & the heigth alſo a meteroo. Then came he vnto the Eaſt dore, and wente vp the ſteyres, and meaſured
the poſtes of the dore, whereof euery one was a meteroo thicke. Euery chambre was a mete roo longe and brode, betwene the chambres were fyue cubites. The poſt of the dore within the porche, was one meteroo. He meaſured alſo the porche of the innermer wore, whiche conteyned a meteroo. Then meaſured he the entrye of the dore that conteyned eight cubi-tes, and his pillers two cubites: and this en
trye ſtode inwarde.

The chambres of the dore Eaſtward, were C thre on euery ſyde, alyke brode and long. The pyllers alſo that ſtode of both the ſides, were of one meaſure. After this, he meaſured the wideneſſe of the dore, which was ten cubites,
and the length of the dore thyrtene cubytes.
The edge before the chambres was one cubit
brode vpon both the ſides, and the chambres fyue cubites wide of either ſide. He meaſured ꝑ dore from the rygge of one chambre to an other, whoſe wydneſſe was .xxv. cubites, and one dore ſtode agaynſt an other. He made pillers alſo twye ſcore cubites hye, rounde about the courte dore. Before the inwarde part vnto the fore entrye of the innermer dore, were fyftye cubites. The chambres and their pillers within, rounde aboute vnto the wore, hadde lyght wyndowes: So hadde the fore en
trye alſo, whoſe wyndowes wente rounde about within. And vpō the pillers there ſtode date trees.

Then brought he me in to the fore courte, D
where as were chambres and paued workes,
made in the fore court rounde aboute thyrtye chambres vpon one paued worke. Nowe the paued worke was alonge beſyde the dores, and that was the lower paued worke. After this, he meaſured the bredth from the lower dore vnto the innermer court of the out ſyde
which had an hundred cubites vpon the Eaſt and the Northe parte. And the doore in the vttermoſt courte towarde the Northe, mea-ſured he after the length and bredth, his thre chambres alſo on either ſyde, with his pillers and fore entreyes, whiche had euen the meaſure of the fyrſt doore. His heygth was fifty cubites, the bredth .xxv. cubites: his wyndewes and porches with his date trees, had euen lyke meaſure as the doore towarde the Eaſt, there were ſeuen ſteppes to go vp vpon and their porche before them. Now the wore of the innermer courte ſtode ſtreyght ouer a-gainſt the wore that was towarde the North Eaſt. From one wore to an other he meaſured an hundred cubites.

After that, he brought me to the South
ſyde, where there ſtode a doore towarde the South: whoſe pillers and porches he meaſu red, lyke had the firſt meaſure, and with their porches, they had wyndowes rounde aboute, lyke the firſt windowes. The heygth was .l.
cubites, the bredth .xxv. with ſteppes to go vp vpon: his porche ſtode before him, with his pyllers and date trees on either ſyde. And the wore of the innermer court ſtode towarde the South, and he meaſured from one wore to an other an hundred cubites.

So he brought me in to the innermer court thorow the wore of the South ſyde, which he meaſured, and it had the meaſure afore ſayd.
In lyke maner his chambres, pyllers, & fore
entreyes, had euen the fore ſayd meaſure alſo.
And he had with his porches rounde aboute
wyndowes of fyftye cubites heygth, and fyue and twenty cubites brode. The porches rounde aboute were .xxv. cubites longe, and fyue cubytes brode: and his porche reached vnto the vttermoſt courte: vpon his pyllers there were date trees, and eyghte ſteppes to goo vp vpon.

He brought me alſo in to the inmoſte E courte vpon the Eaſt ſyde, and meaſured the wore, accordynge to the meaſure afore ſayd.
His chambres, pyllers, and porches had euen
the ſame meaſure as the firſt had: and with his porches he had wyndowes round about.
The heygthe was fifty cubites, the bredthe
.xxv. cubites: His porches reached vnto the vttermoſt courte: his pyllers alſo hadde date trees on either ſyde, and eyght ſteppes to goo vp vpon.

And he brought me to the north dore, and meaſured it, whiche alſo had the fore ſayde meaſure. His chambres, pyllers and porches had windowes rounde about: whoſe heigth was .l. cubites, & the bredth .xxv. His pillers ſtode towarde the vttermoſt courte, and vpō them both were date trees, and eyght ſteppes
to go vp vpon. There ſtode a chambre alſo, whoſe intraunce was at the dore pyllers and there the burntoffrynges were waſched.

In the dore porche, there ſtode on either ſide
F two tables for the ſlaughtrynge: to ſlaye the brentoffrynges, ſynneoffrynges and treſ-paſſoffrynges therupon. And on the outſide as men go forth to the north dore, there ſtode
two tables. Foure tables ſtode on either ſide of the dore, that is eyght tables, wherupon
they ſlaughted. Foure tables were of hewen ſtone for the burntoffrynges, of a cubyte and a halfe longe & brode, and one cubyte hyghe:
wherupon were layed the veſſels and orna-mentes, whiche were vſed to the burnt and ſlayne offrynges, when they were ſlaughted.
And within ther were bokes foure fyngers
brode faſtened rounde aboute, to hang fleſh vpon and vpon the tables was layde the offrynge fleſhe. On the outſyde of the inner-mer doze were the ſyngers chambres in the inwarde courte beſyde the Northe dooze ouer agaynſt the ſouth. There ſtode one alſo, beſyde the eaſt doze northwarde.

And he ſayde vnto me: This chambre on G the South ſyde belongeth to the prieſtes that kepe the babytacion: and this towarde the North, is the Prieſtes that wayte vpon the aulter: whiche be the ſonnes of Sadoch, ꝑ do ſtruyue before the Lorde in ſteade of the children of Leui. So he meaſured the fore courte, whiche had in length an .C. cubytes,
and as moche in bredth by the foure corners.
Nowe the aulter ſtode before the houſe: And he brought me to the fore entry of the houſe
and meaſured the walles by the entry doze:
which were fyue cubytes long on either ſide.
The thickneſſe alſo of the doze on either ſide was thre cubytes. The length of the porche was .xx. cubytes, the bredth .xi. cubytes, and vpon ſteppes went men vp to it: by the wal les alſo were pyllers, on either ſyde one.

¶ The diſpoſicyon and deuyce of buyldyng agayn
the temple, and of the other thynges therto belon-gynge.

CAPI. XLI.

AFter this he brought me to the temple and meaſured the poſtes: which were
of both the ſydes .vi. cubites thicke, accordynge to the wydeneſſe of the tabernacle.
The bredth of the doze was .x. cubytes & the walles of the doze on either ſyde fyue cubites.
He meaſured the length therof, whiche con-teyned fourty cubytes, and the bredth .xx. The dore he in, & meaſured the doze poſtes, whiche were two cubytes thicke: but the doze it ſelfe was ſyxe cubites, and the bredth of the doze was ſeuen cubytes. He meaſured the length & bredth therof, which were euery one
.xx. cubites before the temple.

And he ſayde vnto me: this is the holyeſt
of all. We meaſured alſo the wall of ꝑ houſe, whiche was ſyx cubytes. The chambres that ſtode rounde about the houſe, were euery one foure cubytes wyde, and one ſtode harde vpon
another, wherof there were thyrtie and thre.
And there ſtode poſtes beneth by the walles rounde about ꝑ houſe, to beare the vp: but in the wal of the houſe, they were not faſtened.
The ſyde chambres were the hyghter ꝑ wynder, and had ſteppes thorowe them rounde aboue the houſe. Thus was it wyder aboue, that from the loweſt men myght go to the hyeheſt and myd chambers. I ſawe alſo that the houſe was very hyghe rounde aboute.
The foundacion of the ſide chambres was a meteroo (that is .vi. cubytes) brode. The thic neſſe of the ſyde wall without, conteyned .v.
cubytes, and ſo hyd the out wall of the chabres in the houſe.

Betwene the chambres, was the wydenes
.xx. cubytes rounde about the houſe. The cha- B
bre dores ſtode ouer agaynſte the out wall, ꝑ one doze was towarde the northe, the other toward the South: and the thickneſſe of the out wall was fyue cubytes rounde aboute.
Now the buyldynge that was ſeperated to-warde the weſt, was thre ſcore and ten cubi-tes wyde: the wall of the buyldynge was .v.
cubites thicke rounde about, and the length foure ſcore cubites and ten. So he meaſured
the houſe whiche was an .C. cubytes longe, and ſeperated buyldynge with the wal were an .C. cubytes longe alſo. The wydeneſſe before the houſe and of it that was ſeparated
towarde the eaſte, was an .C. cubytes.

And he meaſured the lengthe of the buyldynge before and behinde with the chambres C
vpon both the ſydes: and it conteyned an .C cubytes. The innermer temple, the porch of the fore courte, the ſyde poſtes, theſe thre had ſyde wyndowes, and pyllers rounde aboute
ouer agaynſte the poſtes, from the grounde vp to the wyndowes.

The windowes them ſelues were ſyled ouer with bordes: and thus was it aboue
the wre, vnto the inmoſt houſe, and without alſo: yea the hole wall on euery ſyde bothe
within and without was ſyled ouer with greate bordes.

There were Cherubyns and date trees made alſo, ſo ꝑ one date tre ſtode euer betwixt D twe Cherubyns: One Cherub hadde two faces, the face of a man loking alyde toward the date tree, and a lyons face on the other ſyde.

Thus was it made rounde about in al the houſe: Yea the Cherubims and date trees were made from the grounde vp aboue the dore and ſo ſtode they alſo vpon the wall of the temple.

The by poſtes of the temple were foure ſquared, & the faſhyon of the Sanctury was euen as it appeared vnto me afore in ꝑ viſi-
on. The table was of wod .iij. cubytes highe and .ij. cubytes longe: his corners, the length
and

and the walles were of wod.

And he sayde vnto me: This is the table that shall stande before the Lorde. The temple and the holyest of all had either of them two dozes & euery doze had two lytle wickettes whiche were folden in one vpon another, on euery syde two. And vpon the dozes of the temple there were made Cherubins & date trees, like as vpon the walles: & a greate thicke balke of wod was before on the oute syde of the porche. Upon both ꝑ sydes of the walles of the porche, there were made depe windowes and date trees, hauyng beames & balkes, lyke as the house had.

¶ Of the chambres of the temple for the preastes, and the holy thynges.

CAPI. XLII.

Then caryed he me oute in to the fore courte towarde the north and brought me into the chambre that stode ouer agaynste the backe buylding northward, whiche had the length of an. C. cubytes whose doze turned towarde the north. The wydenesse contayned. L. cubites: ouer againste the xx. cubites of the inner mer court, and against the paued worke that was in the fore court. Besyde all these thre, there stode pylles, one ouer agaynst an other: And before this chambre, there was a walkynge place of. x cubites wyde, and within was a waye of one cubite wyde, and their dozes towarde the north. Thus the hyghest chambres were alway no lower then the lowest and mydlemost of the buylding: for they bare chambre vpon chambre & stode thre togyther one vpon an other not hauynge pylleres lyke the fore court: therfore were they smaller then those beneth & in the mydest, to reken frome the grounde vpwarde.

The wall without that stode by the chambres towarde the vttermost court vpon the forsyde of the chambres, was. L. cubytes log for the length of the vttermost chābres in the fore courte was. L. cubytes also: but the legth therof before the temple was an. C. cubites. These chambres had vnder thē an intraunce of the east syde, whereby a man myght go in to them oute of the fore courte, (before ꝑ the thicke wall of the fore courte toward ꝑ east, eyght ouer agaynste the seperated buylding. Before ꝑ same buylding vpō this syde there were chambres also whiche had away vnto them, lyke as ꝑ chambres on the north syde. of the same length & wydenesse.

Their intraunce, fashyon and dozes were also of the same maner. Yea euen lyke as the other chambre dozes were, so were those also of the southside. And before the way toward the syngers steppes on ꝑ east syde, there stode a doze to go in at. Then sayde he vnto me: The chambers towarde the northe and the south which stand before the backe buylding those be holye habytacions, wherin the preastes that do serupce before the Lorde, muste eate the moste holy offrynges: and there must they laye the most holy offrynges: meatofferynges, synne offrynges & trespacesacrynges for it is an holy place. Whē the preastes come therin, they shall not go oute in to the fore court: but (seinge they be holye) they shall leaue the clothes of their mynystracion, and put on other garmētes, when they haue any thynge to do with the people.

Now when he had measured all the inner mer house, he brought me forth thorowe the east porte, and measured the same rounde about. He measured the east side with ꝑ meterod, whiche rounde about conteyned fyue C. meterodes. And the north syde measured he, whiche conteyned rounde about euen so moche. The other two sides also toward the south and the west (which he measured) conteyned eyther of them. v. C. meterodes. So he measured all the foure sydes where there went a wall rounde about. v. C. meterodes longe, and as brode also which separated the holy from the vnholy.

¶ He seyth the glory of God goynge in to the temple, from whence it had before departed. He misconeyueth the Idolatrye of the children of Israel, for whiche they were consumed and brought to nought. He is commaunded to call them agayne to repentaunce.

CAPI. XLIII.

So he brought me to the doze, that lyeth towarde the east. Beholde, then came ꝑ glory of ꝑ God of Israel from out of the east, whose voyce was lyke a greate noyse of waters, and the earth was lyghtened with his glory. His syght to loke vpon was lyke the tryall, that I sawe, when I went in, what tyme as the cyte whose haue bene destroyed: and lyke the vysyon that I sawe by the water of Cobar. Then fell I vpon my face, but the glory of the Lorde came into the house thorow the east doze. So a wynde toke me vp, and brought me in to the inner mer court: and beholde, the house was ful of the glory of the Lorde.

I herde one speakyng vnto me out of the house, and there stode one by me, that sayde vnto me: O thou sonne of man, this towne is my seate, and the place of my fotesteppes: where as I wyll dwell amonge the children of Israel for euer more: so that the house of Israel shal no more defyle my holy name: neyther they, ne their kinges, thorow their horedome thorowe their highe places, and thorow the dead bodyes of their kinges: which haue builded their threcholdes in maner harde vpon my threcholdes, and their postes almost at my postes: so that there is but a bare walle betwyxt me and them.

Thus haue they defyled my holy name with their abhominacions, that they haue committed. Wherfore I haue destroyed them in my wrath: But now they shall put away their horedome and the dead bodyes of their kynges out of my syght, that I may dwell among them for euermore. Therfore (O thou sonne of man) shewe thou the house of Israel a temple, that they maye be ashamed of their wickednesse, and measure them selues an example therat.

And when they be ashamed of all their workes, then shewe them the fourme and fashyon of the temple: the cōmynge in, the goynge out, all the maner and descripcion therof, yea all the vses and ordynaunces of it, that they may kepe and fulfyl al the fashions and customes therof.

This is the descripcyon of the house: About vpon the mount rounde about all the comers, it shall be the holyest of all. Beholde, that is the descripcion and fashyon of the house: This is the measure of the aulter (after the true cubyte: whiche is a spanne longer then an other cubyte) his become in the mydest was a cubite longe and wyde, & the ledge that went rounde about it, was a span brode. This is the heigth of the aulter: From the grounde to the lower steppes the length is two cubytes, and the bredth one cubyte: and from the lower steppes to the higher are foure cubites, and the bredth but one cubyte.

The aulter was foure cubytes hyghe, and frome the aulter vpwarde stode foure horns, and it was. xij. cubytes longe and. xij. cubytes brode, vpon the foure corners: the cōmynge of the aultare was. xiiij. cubytes log and brode vpon the foure cornors, and the ledge that went rounde about, had halfe a cubite: and the botome therof rounde about one cubite: his steppes stode towarde the east. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thus sayth the Lorde God: These are the ordynaunces & lawes of the aulter, in the daye when it is made to offre burntoffrynges, and to sprincle blonde therupon. To the preastes, to the Leuites that be of the sede of Sadoch and treade before me to do me seruice, sayth the Lorde God: Unto these gyue thou a yonge bullocke, for a synne offrynge: and take the blond of him and sprincle his foure horns withal and the foure corners of the aultre couerynge, with the ledge that goeth rounde about: here with shalte thou clense it, and reconsile it. Thou shalte take ꝑ bullocke also of ꝑ sinoffringe, & burne him in a seuerall place without the Sanctuarye.

The nexte daye, take a gotebuck without blemysh for a synneoffrynge, to reconsyle the aulter withall: lyke as it was reconcyled with the bullock. Nowe when thou haste made it clene then offre a younge bullocke without blemysshe, and a ramme out of the flock without blemysh also: Offre them before ꝑ Lord and let the preest cast salt therupon, and sprue them so vnto the Lorde for a burntoffrynge. Seuen dayes shalt thou prynge, euerye day a gotebucke. A yonge bullocke and a ráme of the flocke (both without blemysshe) shal they offre. Seuen dayes shall they reconcyle and clense the aulter, and offre vpon it. Whē thyse dayes are expired, then vpon the. viij. daye and so forth, the preastes shall offre their burntoffrynges and healthy offrynges vpon the aulter: so wyll I be mercyfull vnto you sayth the Lorde God.

¶ She sheweth what doze of the temple is shutte: He is commaunded to vpbrayde the people with theyr offence. The vncircumcysed in herte and in the flesshe, who are to be admytted to the seruyce of the temple, and who to be refused. He sheweth what preastes he wolde haue admytted in to the holy place, and also theyr offryce.

CAPI. XLIIII.

After this, he brought me agayne to ꝑ outwarde doze of the Sanctuarye on the east syde, and that was shut. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: This doze shal be kept shut, and not opened for any man to go thorow it, but onely for the Lorde God of Israel: yea he shall go thorowe it, els shal it be shutte kept shut. The prynce hym selfe shall come thorow it, that he maye eate bread before the Lorde. At the porche shall he come in, & there shal he go out agayne. Then brought he me to the doze, vpon the North side of the house. And as I loked about me, beholde, ꝑ glory of the Lord fylled the house, and I fell downe vpon my face. So the Lorde spake vnto me: O thou sonne of man, fasten this to thyne herte, beholde, and take diligent hede to all that I wyll saye vnto the, concernyng all the ordynaunces of the Lorde, and all the lawes: ponder well with thyne herte the commynge in of the house and the goynge forthe of the Sanctuarye: and tell that obstynate housholde of Israel: Thus sayth the Lord God: O house of Israel, ye haue now done ynoughe with all youre abhominacions, seinge that ye haue brought in to my Sanctuary straungers, hauynge vncircumcysed hertes and flesshe, where thorowe my Sanctuary is defyled, when ye offre me bred, fat, and blonde.

Thus with all youre abhominacions ye haue broken my couenaunte, and not kepte the holy ordinaunces of my Sanctuary: but set kepers of my Sanctuary, euen after your owne mynde. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: Of all the straungers that dwell amonges the children of Israel, no straunger (whose herte & flesh is not circumcysed) shall come within my Sanctuarye: No, not the Leuites that be gone backe fro me, and haue deceyued the people of Israel with all errours, goyng after their idols: but they shal beare their owne wickednesse. Shulde they be set & ordeyned to mynyster vnder ꝑ dozes of the house of my Sanctuarye? And to do seruyce in the house: & slaye burntoffrynges and sacrifyces for the people: to stand before them, & to serue them: seing the seruyce that they do them, is before their Idols, & cause ꝑ house of Israel to stomble thorowe their wickednesse? For the which cause I haue pluckt out myne hande ouer them (sayth the Lord) so that nowe they muste beare their owne iniquyte, and not to come nyghe me, to serue me with their preasthode, in my Sanctuarye, & moste holyest of all: that they maye beare their owne shame and abhomynacions, whiche they haue done. Shulde I vse them to be porters of the house, and to all the seruyce ye is done therin? But the prestes the Leuytes the sonnes of Sadoch, that kept the holy ordynaunces of my sanctuarye, when the children of Israel were gone fro me: shall come to me, to do me seruyce, to stande before me, and to offre me the fat and the bloude, saithe the Lorde God.

Preestes. Ezech.xliiij.d Exo.xx.b.

E They shall go in to my Sanctuarye, and treade before my table, to do me seruyce, and to wayte vpon myne ordynaunces. Now whe they go in at the dores of the innermer court they shall put on lynen clothes, so that no wollen come vpon them: whyle they do seruyce vnder the dores of the innermer court, and within. They shall haue fayre lynnen bonettes vpon their heades, and lynnen breches vpon their loynes, whiche in their laboure they shall not put aboute them: And when they go forth to the people in to the outwarde court, they shal put of the clothes wherin they haue mynystred, and laye them in the habitacion of the Sanctuary, and put on other apparel, lest they vnhalow ye people with their clothes.

They shall not shaue theyr heades, ne norysshe the bushe of theyr heere, but rounde theyr heades only. All the prestes that go in to the inmost courte, shall drinke no wyne. They shal mary no widow, neither one that is put from her husbande: but a mayde of the sede of the house of Israel, or a wydow, that hath had a prest before.

F They shall shewe my people the dyfference betwene the holy, and vnholy, betwixte the clene and vnclene. If any discorde aryse, they shall discern it, and gyue sentence after my iudgementes. My solemne feastes, my lawes and ordynaunces shal they kepe, and halowe my Sabbothes. They shal come at no dead persoune, to defyle them selues (excepte it be father or mother, sonne or daughter, brother or syster, that hathe had yet no husbande) in such they maye be defyled.

Leuit.xix.f xxi.a. Leuit.x.xxi.b Deu.xx.iii.a

G And when he is clensed, there shall be rekened vnto him .vij. dayes: and yf he go into the Sanctuarye agayne to do seruyce, he shal bringe a synneoffrynge sayth the Lorde God. They shall haue an herytage, yea I my selfe wyll be their herytage: els shall ye gyue the no possession in Israel, for I am their possession. The meatoffrynge, synneoffrynge, and trespaceoffrynge shall they eate, and euery dedycate thinge in Israel, shall be theirs. The fyrstlynges of all the fyrste frutes, and all fre will offrynges shall be the prestes.

Deut.xviii.a Nume.xviii.c Iosue.xiii.b.

Ye shall gyue vnto the preste also the firstlynges of your dowe, that God maye prospere the resydue. But no dead caryon shall preaste eate, ne suche as is deuoured of wilde beestes, foules or catell.

Exod.xxii.b Leuit.xxii.a.

¶ Out of al the lande of promyse are there seperate foure porsyons, of whiche the fyrste is gyuen to the prestes and to the temple, the seconde to the Leuites the thyrde to the cytye, the fourth to the Prynce. An exhortation to the heades of Israel. Of iuste weyghtes and measures. Of fyrste frutes &c.

CAPI. XLV.

When ye deuyde the land by the lot, ye shall put asyde one parte for the Lord, to be holye frome other landes: namely .xxv.M. meterroddes longe, and .x.M. brode. This shall be holy, as wyde as it rounde about. Of this parte there shall belong vnto the Sanctuarye .v.C. meterroddes in all the foure corners, & .l. cubytes wyde round about to ye suburbes. And from this measure, namely of .xxv.M. meterodes long, and .x.M. brode thou shalte measure, wherin the Sanctuary and the holyest of all maye stande.

The resydue of that holy grounde shall be the prestes, whiche do seruyce in the Sanctuary of the Lorde, & go in before the Lord to serue hym, that they may haue rowme to dwell in.

B As for the Sanctuary: it shall stande for it selfe: and to the Leuites that serue in the house, there shal be gyuen .xx. habitacions, of the .xxv.M. length: and .x.M. bredth, ye shall gyue also vnto the cytye a possessyo of .v.M. meterroddes brode, and .xxv. thousonde longe besyde the parte of the Sanctuary: that shal be for the hole house of Israel. Upon bothe sydes of the Sanctuaryes parte, and by the cytye, there shall be gyuen vnto the prince, whatsoeuer lyeth ouer agaynste the cytie, as farre as reacheth westwarde and eastwarde: whiche shall be as longe as one parte, from the west vnto the east.

C This shall be his owne lande in Israel, ye my princes be no more chargeable, vnto my people. And soche as remayneth yet ouer in ye lande, shall be gyuen to the house of Israel according to their trybes. Thus saythe the Lorde God: O ye prynces, ye haue now oppressed & destroyed ynough: now leaue of, ye dle nowe accordynge to the thinge, that is equal and lawfull: and thruste out my people no more, sayth the Lorde God. Ye shall haue a true weight, a true Ephah, & a true Bath. The Ephah and the Bath shall be a lyke. One Bath shall conteyne the tenth parte of an Homer, and so shall one Ephah do: D their measure shall be after the Homer. One Sycle maketh .xx. Geras, so .xx. Sycles, and .xxv. and .xv. Sycles make a pounde. This is the heaueoffrynge, that ye shall gyue to be heaued: namelye, the .xvi. part of an Ephah, out of an Homer of wheate: & the .xvi. parte of an Ephah, out of an Homer of barly. The oyle shall be measured with the Bath: euen the tenth parte of one Bath oute of a Cor.

E Ten Bathes make one Homer: for one Homer fylleth ten Bathes. And one lambe from two hundreth shepe out of the pasture of Israel, for a meteoffrynge, burntoffrynge and healthoffrynge, to reconcyle them, sayth the Lorde God.

All the people of the lande shall gyue this heaueoffrynge with a free wyll. Agayne, it shall be the princes parte to offre burntofferynges, meate offerynges, and drynckofferinges vnto the Lorde, in the holy dayes, newe newe Moones, Sabbothes and in all the hyghe feastes of the house of Israel. The sinoffrynge, meateoffrynge, brentofferynge and healthofferynge shall he gyue, to reconcyle the house of Israel. Thus sayth the Lorde God: The firste daye of the fyrste moneth thou shalte take a yonge bullocke withoute blemysh, and clense the Sanctuary. So the preste shall take of the blood of the sinneoffrynge, and sprinckle it vpon the postes of the house, and vpon the foure corners of the aulter, with the dorepostes of the innermer courte. And thus thou shalte do also the .vij. daye of the moneth (for such as haue synned of ignoraunce, or beynge disceyued) to reconcyle the house withall. Upon the .xiiij. daye of the fyrste moneth ye shall kepe Easter. Seuen dayes shall the feaste contynue, wherein there shall no sowre ne leuened bread be eaten.

6 Upon the same daye shall the prince giue for him selfe and all the people of the lande a bullocke for a synoffryng. And in the feaste of the seuen dayes he shall offre euery day a bullocke and a ramme, that are without blemysh, for a burntoffrynge vnto the Lorde: & a he gote dayly for a synneoffryng. For the meatofferinges, he shal gyue euer an Ephah to a bullocke, an Ephah to a ramme, and an Hin of oyle to an Ephah. Upon the .xv. daye of the seuenth moneth, he shall kepe the seuen dayes holye one after an other, euen as the other seuen dayes: with the synneofferynge, burntoffrynge, meatoffrynge, & with the oyle.

¶ The sacrifyces of the Sabboth and of the newe moone. Throughe whiche dores they must go in, or come out of the temple, &c.

CAPI. XLVI.

1 Thus saythe the Lorde God: the dore of ye innermer courte toward the East, shall be shut the .vi. worke dayes: but in the Sabboth and in day of the new mone it shall be open. Then shall the prynce come vnder the dore porch, and stande styll without by the dore cheke. So the preestes shall offre his burnt and healthoffrynges. And he shall worshyp at the doreposte, and go his way forth agayne: but the dore shal no more be shut tyll the euenynge.

3 On the same maner shal the people of the lande also do their worshyp before the Lord without this dore vpon the Sabbothes and newe Moones. This is nowe the the burnt offrynge, that the prince shall brynge vnto ye Lord vpon the Sabboth: syxe lambes withoute blemysh, and a ram withoute blemysh, and an Ephah for a meatoffrynge, with the ram. As for the lambes, he maye gyue as many meatoffrynges to them, as he wyll, and an Hin of oyle to an Ephah. In the daye of the newe moneth, it shal be a yong bullocke without blemysh, syxe lambes and a ram also without blemysh. With the bullock he shall gyue an Ephah, and with the ramme an Ephah also for a meatoffryng: but to the C lambes, what he may come by: And euer an Hin of oyle to an Ephah. When the prince commeth he shall go vnder the dore of the porche, and there departe forth agayne. But when the people of the lande come before ye Lorde in the hygh solempne feaste, as many as come in by the north dore to do worshyp, shall go oute agayne at the South dore. And they that come in at the South dore, shal go forth agayne at ye North dore. There shall none go out at the dore where he came in, but shall go forth ryght ouer on the other syde and the prince shal go in and out among them.

D Upon the solemne and highe feaste dayes this shall be the meatoffrynge: An Epha to a bullocke and an Epha to a ram, and to the lambes: as many as he wil, but euer an Hin of oyle to an Epha. Nowe when the prynce bryngeth a burntofferynge or an healthofferynge with a free wyll vnto the Lorde, the east dore shall be opened vnto him, that he maye do with his burnt and healthofferinges, as he doth vpon the Sabboth, and whe he goeth forth, ye dore shal be shut after hym agayne. E He shall dayly bring vnto the Lord a lambe of a yere olde without blemysh for a burntoffrynge: this shall he do euery mornynge. And for a meatoffrynge he shal giue the sixte part of an Epha, and the thyrde part of an Hin of oyle (to myngle with the cakes) euery mornynge. Yea this shall be a daylye meatoffrynge vnto the Lorde, for an euerlastynge ordinaunce: and thus shal the lambe, the meatofferynge and oyle be gyuẽ euerye mornynge, for a daylye burntofferynge.

F Moreouer, thus saythe the Lorde God. If the prince gyue a gyfte vnto anye of his sonnes, then shall it be his sonnes herytage perpetuall, that he may possesse it. But If he wyl gyue one of his seruauntes some of his heritage, it shall be his to the fre yeare, and then to returne agayne vnto the prince: for his heritage shall be his sonnes onely. The prince also shall take none of the peoples enherytaunce, ne put them from their possessiõ but to his owne sonnes shal he gyue his possessiõ, that my people be not scatered abrode, but that euery man maye haue his owne.

Leuit.xxv.b Num.xxxvi.c iii.Reg.xxi.a ii.Reg.xix.

G And he brought me thorow the intraunce at the syde of the dore to the habytacion of the Sanctuarye, that belongeth to the prestes and stode toward the north, and beholde there was a place vpon the West syde; then sayde he vnto me: This is the place, where the prestes shall dyght the trespace and synoffrynges, and bake the meatoffrynges: that they nede not beare them in to the outward court and so to vnhalowe the people. So he brought me in to the vttermost courte, roũde about all the foure corners. Beholde, in euerye corner of the fore courte, there was yet a litle court.

Yea in all the foure corners of the courte there was a lytle courte of .xl. cubytes lõge & .xxx. cubites brode: these foure litle courtes

were

were of one lyke measure, annd there wente a rygge wall rounde about them al foure, vnder the wiche there were hatches made rounde about. Then sayd he vnto me: This is the kitchin, where the mynyster of ỹ house shal dyght the slayne offringes of ỹ people.

¶ The vysyon of the waters that come out of the temple. The costes of the lande of promysse, and the deuysyon therof by tribes.

CAPI. XLVII.

A After this he brought me agayne before the dore of the house: and beholde there gusshed out waters from vnder the postes of ỹ house eastward (for the house stode towarde the east) that ranne downe vpon the ryght syde of the house, whiche lyeth to the auster south ward. Then caried he me out to the nozthe dore, and brought me forth there rounde about by the vttermost dore that turneth eastwarde. Beholde, there came forthe the water vpon the ryghte syde. Nowe when the man that had the measured in his hande went vnto the east dore, he measured a. M. cubites, and then he brought me thorowe the water, euen to the ancles: so he measured yet a thousande, and brought me thorowe the water agayne vnto the knees: yet measured he a thousand, and brought me thorowe the water vnto the loynes. After this he measured a thousande agayne, then was it such a ryuer, that I myght not wade thorowit: The water was so depe, ỹ it was needefull to haue swymmed, for it myght not be waded ouer. And he sayd vnto me: hast ỹ sene this, O thou sonne of man? and with that, he brought me to the ryuer bancke agayne.

B Nowe when I came there, there stode many trees vpon either syde of the ryuer bäcke. Then sayd he vnto me: This water that floweth out toward the east, & runneth downe in to the playne felde, commeth into the see: and from the see it runneth out, and maketh the waters hole. Yea all that lyue and moue wherevnto this ryuer commeth, shall recouer. And where this water commeth, there shall be moch fysh. For all that comme.h to this water, shall be lusty and hole. By this ryuer shal the fyshers stande from Engaddi vnto En Eglaim, & there spreade out their nettes: for there shal be great heapes of fish lyke as in the mayne see. As for his clappes and pyttes, they shal not be hole, for why, it shal be occupyed for salte.

C By this ryuer vpon bothe the sydes of the shore, there shall growe all maner of fruteful trees, whose leaues shall not fall of, neither shall their frute perysh: but euer be rype at their monethes, for their water runneth out of their Sanctuary.

His frute is good to eat, and his leafe profitable for medycine. Thus sayth the Lorde God: Let this be the border, wherin ye shal deuide the land vnto the xij. tribes of Israel with the lyne.

Parte it indifferently vnto one as vnto an other: of the whiche lande I swore vnto your fathers, that it shulde fall to your inheritaunce.

This is the border of the lande vpon the nozthsyde, from the mayn see, as men goo to Zadada: namely Hemath, Berotha, Sibraim: from the borders of Damascus and Hemath vnto Hazar Hichõ, and that lyeth vpõ the costes of Hauetam.

Thus the borders from the see forth, shall be Hazar Enan, the border of Damascus the nozth, and the borders of Hemath: that is the nozth parte.

The east syde shall ye measure from Hauetam and Damascus from Galead and the land of Israel by Jordan and so forth, from the see cost, that lyeth eastwarde: and this is the east parte.

The southsyde is, from Thamar forthe to the waters of stryfe vnto Cades, the ryuer, to the mayne see: and that is the southe parte.

The west parte: namely the greate see hõ the borders therof tyll a man come vnto Hemath: this is the west parte.

This lande shall ye part amonge you, according to the tribes of Israel, & deuyde it to be an heritage for you, & for the straungers that dwell amonge you, and beget children. For ye shal take them amonge ỹ children of Israel, lyke as though they were of youre own houshold & countrey, and they shal haue heritage with you amonge the children of Israel.

Loke in what trybe the straunger dwelleth, in the same tryde shall ye geue him his heritage, sayth the Lorde God.

¶ The lottes of the seuen tribes. The partes of the possessyon of the preestes and of the temple, of the Leuytes, of the cyte, of the prynce, are rehearsed. The lottes of the other tribes. The gates of the cyte.

CAPI. XLVIII.

THese are the names of the tribes that lye vpon the nozthsyde, by the wape of Hetlon, tyll thou comest vnto Hemath and Hazar Enam, the borders of Damascus towarde the Nozthe beside Hemath: Dan shall haue his portion frome the east quarter vnto the west. Vpon the borders of Dan frome the east syde vnto the west, shall Asser haue his portion. Vpon the borders of Asser from the east part vnto the west shal Nephthali haue his portion.

Vpon the borders of Nephthali from the east quarter vnto the west, shall Manasses haue his portion. Vpon the borders of Manasses from the east syde vnto the west, shall Ephraim haue his portion.

Vpon the borders of Ephraim frome the east part vnto ỹ west, shall Ruben haue his portion. Vpon the borders of Ruben frome the

the east quarter vnto the west shal Juda haue his portion. Vpon the borders of Juda from the east parte to the west, ye shal set aside one portion of xxv. M. metes rodes longe & brode, (lyke as an other portion from the east syde vnto the weste) therin the Sanctuarye shall stande.

As for the portion that ye shal separate out for the Lorde, it shal be xxv. M. longe, and ten thousand brode. Which separated holy portiõ shal belong vnto these: namely to the preestes towarde the nozth xxv. M. and towarde ỹ west ten thousand brode, toward the east ten thousand brode also, and toward the south xxv. M. long, wherin the Sanctuary of the Lord shal stand. Yea this same place shal be the preestes that are of the children of Sadoch, and haue kept my holy ordinaunce, which went not astraye in the errour of the children of Israel, like as the Leuites are gone allray: and this separated peece that they haue of the lãd, shal be the moste holy, harde vpon the borders of the Leuites.

And next vnto the preestes, shal the Leuites haue xxv. thousande long, and ten. M. brode. This shal be on euery syde xxv. M. long, and ten. M. brode. Of this portion they shal sel nothing, ne make any permutacion therof, lest the chief of the lande fall vnto other, for it is halowed vnto the Lorde.

The other fiue. M. after the bredth that lyeth by the xxv. thousand, shall be commen: it shal belong to the city and to the suburbes for habitacions, and the citye shall stande in the midst therof. Let this be ỹ measure: toward the nozth part fiue hundred and four. M. toward the south part, fiue. C. and four. M. towarde the east part. v. C. and four. M. toward the west part. v. C. and four thousand.

The suburbes hard vpon the city, shal haue toward the north. I. and two. C. towarde the south. I. and two. C. toward the east. I. and. ij. C. towarde the west also. I. and two hundred. As for the residue of the length ỹ lyeth harde vpon the separated holy grounde: namely. x. M. toward the east, and ten. M. towarde the west, vnto the holye portion: it and the encrease therof, shall serue for their meate that laboure in the the cirye. They ỹ labour for the welth of the city, shal mayntein this also, out of what tribe so euer they be in Israel.

E All that is separated of the xxv. thousande long and xxv. thousand brode on the foure parties, that shall ye put a syde for the separated portion of the sanctuary, and for the possessiõ of the city. The residue vpon bothe the sydes of the sanctuary and possession of the city shal belonge to the prince, before the place of the xxv. thousande vnto the east ende, and before the place of the xxv. M. westwarde, vnto the borders of the citye: this shall be the prynces portion. This shall be the holy place, and the house of the sanctuary shall stand in the midest. Moreouer, from the Leuites and ỹ citties possession that lye in the middest of the princes part: loke what remayneth betwixt the border of Juda and the border of Ben Jamin, it shal be the princes.

Now of the other tribes.

D From the east part vnto the west shal Ben Jamin haue his portion. Vpon the borders of Ben Jamin from the east side vnto the weste, shal Simeon haue his portion. Vpon ỹ borders of Symeon from the east part vnto the west shall Issakar haue his portion. Vpon the border of Issakar frome the east side vnto the west, shal Sabulon haue his portion. Vpon the borders of Sabulon from the east part vnto the west shal Gad haue his portion. Upon the borders of Gad southward, the costes shal reache from Thamar forthe vnto the waters of stryfe to Cades, and to the floode, euen vnto the mayne se.

This is the land with his portions which ye shall distrybute vnto the tribes of Israell sayth the Lord God. Thus with shal the city reache: Vpon the nozth part fiue. C. and foure thousande measures. The portes of the citye shall haue the names of the trybes of Israel. Three portes of the nozth syde: one Ruben, an other Juda, the thirde Leui. Numer. xxxiij. Josu. xiiij. xvij.

Upon the east side fiue. C. and foure thousand measures, with three portes: The one Joseph an other Ben Jmin, the thirde Dan. Upõ the south side fiue hundred and four thousand measures, with the three portes: the one Symeon, an other Issakar, the thirde Sabulon. And vpon the west side fiue. C. and foure. M. measures, with three portes also, the one Gad an other Asser, ỹ thirde Nephthali. Thus shal it haue. xviij. thousand measures round about. And from that time forth the name of the city shalbe: The Lorde is there.

¶ The ende of the prophecye of Ezechiel.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE DANIEL.

¶ The Prophet: sheweth the captyuytye of Joakym kynge of Juda. Of the sonnes that were in captyuytye, the kynge commaundeth to chose whyche of them shoulde be taught the lernyng and language of the Caldees. They are alowed the kynges kechynge. Daniel abstayneth from the meate of the kynge of Babylon. The science and instruction of these chyldren.

CAPI. I.

IN the thyrde yere of the raygne of Joakim kynge of Juda, came Nabuchodonozor kyng of Babylon vnto Jerusalem, and besieged it: and the Lorde delyuered Joakim the kynge of Juda in to his handes: with certayne ornamentes of the house of God: which he caryed awaye vnto the land of Sennar, to the house of his God, and there he broughte them in to his goddes treasury. And the kynge spake vnto Asphanaz the chiefe chamberlayne, that he sholde brynge him certayne of the children of Israel that were come of the kinges seed, and of Prynces, yonge spryngoldes without any blemysshe, but faire and welfauoured in facte in all wysdome, conning and vnderstandynge, which were able to stande in the kinges palace, to rede, and to lerne for to speake Caldeish.

Vnto these the kynge appoynted a certeyn porcion of his owne meate, and of the wyne, whyche he dranke him selfe, so to nourysshe them thre yere, that afterwarde they myght stande before the kynge. Amonge these nowe were certayne of the chyldren of Juda/namely Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias. Vnto these the chefe Chamberlayne gaue other names, and called Daniel Balthasar: Ananias Sydrach: Misael Misach: and Azarias Abednago. But Daniel was at a poynte with him selfe, that he wolde not be defyled thorowe the kynges meat, nor the wyne whiche he dronke. And this he desyred of the chiefe chamberlayne, lest he sholde be defyled him selfe. So God gaue Daniel fauour and grace before the chiefe chamberlayne, that he sayde vnto him: I am afrayde of my lorde ꝑ kyng, whyche hathe appoynted you your meate and dryncke, lest he spye youre faces to be worse lykynge then the other spryngoldes of youre age, and so ye shall make me lose my heed vnto the kynge.

Then Daniel answered Melasser, whome the chiefe chamberlayne had set ouer Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias, and sayde: O proue but ten dayes with thy seruauntes, and let vs haue potage to eate, and water to dryncke / then loke vpon oure faces, and eueryes that eate of the kynges meate. And as thou lest it, so deale with thy seruauntes. So he consented to them in this matter, and proued them ten dayes. And after the ten dayes their faces were better lykynge, and fatter then all the yonge spryngoldes which ate of ꝑ kynges meate.

Thus Melassar toke away their meat and wyne, and gaue them potage therfore. God gaue nowe these foure spryngoldes cunnyng and lernyng in all scripture and wysdome, but vnto Daniel specially he gaue vnderstanding of all visions and dreames. Nowe when the tyme was expyred that the kyng had appoynted to brynge in these yonge spryngoldes vnto him: the chiefe chamberlayne broughte them before Nabuchodonozor, and the kynge communed wᵗ them. But amonges them all were founde none suche as Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias.

Therfore stode they before the kynge, whyche in all wysdome, and matters of vnderstandyng that he enquyred of them, founde them ten tymes better then all the sothesayers and charmers, that were in al his realme. And Daniel abode styll vnto the fyrste yere of kynge Cyrus.

¶ The dreames of Nabuchodonozor. He calleth vnto hym sothsayers, and requyreth of them, both the dreame and the interpretacyon therof. They answere that they can not shewe it. The kynge commaundeth all the wyse men of Babylon to be slayne. Daniel requyreth tyme to solute the question. The Lorde openeth the mystery vnto Daniel. Daniel is brought vnto the kynge, and sheweth him his dreame and the interpretation therof. Of the euerlastynge kyngdome of Chryste. The stone Chryste. Daniel is exalted and promoted of the kynge.

CAPI. II.

IN the seconde yere of the raygne of Nabuchodonozor, had Nabuchodonozor a dreme where thorowe his spirite was vexed, and his slepe brake from hym. Then the kynge commaunded to call togyther all the sothesayers, charmers, witches and Caldees, for to shewe the kyng his dreame. So they came and stode before the kynge. And the kyng sayd vnto them: I haue dreamed a dreame, and my spirite was so troubled therwith, that I haue clene forgotten what I dreamed. Upon this the Caldees answered the kynge in the Syryans speche: O kynge, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Shewe thy seruauntes the dreame, and we shal shewe the what it meaneth. The kynge gaue the Caldees their answere, and sayde: It is gone fro me: Yf ye wyll not make me vnderstande the dreame, with the interpretacion therof, ye shall dye, and youre houses shall be pylled. But yf ye tell me the dreame and the meanynge therof, ye shall haue of me gyftes, rewardes, and great honoure: onely, shewe me the dreame and the signification of it.

They

They answered agayne and sayde: The kynge muste shewe his seruauntes the dreme and so shall we declare what it meaneth. Then the kynge answered, sayinge: I perceyue of a trouthe, that ye do but prolonge the tyme: for so moche as ye se that the thyng is gone fro me. Therfore ye will not tell me the dreame, ye shal all haue one iudgement. But ye layne and dissemble with vayne wordes, whyche ye speake before me, to put of the tyme.

Therfore tell me the dreame, and so shall I knowe yᵗ ye can shewe me what it meaneth. Upon this the Caldees gaue answere before the kynge, and sayde: there is no man vpon earthe that can tell the thynge, whyche the kynge speaketh of: Yea, there is neyther kynge, Prynce nor Lorde, that euer asked suche thynges at a sothesayer, charmer or Caldee: for it is a harde matter, that the kynge requyreth. Neyther is there any, that can certifye the kynge therof, excepte the goddes: whose dwelynge is not among the creatures.

For the whiche cause the kyng was wrothe with greate indignacion, and commaunded to destroye all the wyse men at Babylon, and the proclamacion went forthe, that the wyse men shoulde be slayne. They soughte also to slē Daniel with his companions. Then Daniel enquyred Arioch the kynges stewarde, of the iudgement and sentence, that was gone forthe at edye to spill suche as were wyse at Babylon.

He answered and sayd vnto Arioch beinge then the kinges deputie: Why hath the kyng proclaymed so cruell a sentence? So Arioch tolde Daniel the mater. Upon this went Daniel in, and desyred the kynge that he myght haue leasure to shewe the kyng the interpretation/and then came he home agayne, and shewed the thyng vnto Ananias, Misael, and Azarias his companions, that they shoulde beseche the God of heuen for grace in this secrete, that Daniel and his felowes, with other suche as were wyse in Babylon, peryshed not.

Then was the mistery shewed vnto Daniel in a vysyon by nyght. And Daniel prayed ꝑ God of heuen. Daniel also cryed loude and sayd: O that the name of God might be praysed for euer and euer, for wysdome & strength are his owne / he chaungeth the tymes and ages: he putteth downe kynges / he setteth vp kynges: he gyueth wysedome vnto the wyse, and vnderstandynge to those that vnderstande: he openeth the depe secretes: he knoweth the thynge that lyeth in darknesse, for the lyght dwelleth with him. I thanke the, and prayse the (O thou God of my fathers) that thou hast lent me wysedome and strength, and hast shewed me the thynge that we desired of the, for thou hast opened the kinges mater vnto me.

Upon this went Daniel in vnto Arioch, whome the kynge had ordeyned to destroye the wyse at Babylon: he went vnto him and sayd: destroye not suche as are wyse in Babylon, but bryng me in to the kynge, and I shall shewe the kynge the interpretacion.

Then Arioch brought Daniel in to the kyng in all the haste, and sayde vnto him: I haue founde a man amonges the prysoners of Juda, that shall shewe the kynge the interpretacion. Then answered the kynge, and sayd vnto Daniel, whose name was Balthasar: Art thou he that canst shewe me the dreame, whyche I haue sene, and the interpretacion therof? Daniel answered the kynge to his face, and sayd: As for this secret, for the whyche the kynge maketh inquisicion: it is neyther the wyse, the sorcerer, the charmer, ne the deuyll coniurer, that can certifye the kynge of it: Onely God in heauen can open secretes, and he it is that sheweth the kyng Nabuchodonozor, what is for to come in the latter dayes. Matth.xi.c

Thy dreme, and that which thou hast sene in thyne heed, vpō thy bed, is this: O kyng ꝑ dyddest cast in thy mynde what shoulde come hereafter. So he ꝑ is the opener of misteries, telleth ꝑ what is for to come. As for me, this secret is not shewed me for any wysdom that I haue more then any other lyuyng: but only that I myght shewe the kynge the interpretacion, and that he might know ꝑ thoughtes of his owne hert. Thou kyng sawest, and beholde, there stode before the a great ymage, whose figure was marueylous great, and his bryght glemme. The ymage heed was of fine golde, his brest and armes of syluer, his bodye & loynes were of copper, his legges were of yron, his fete were parte of yron and parte of earthe. E

This thou sawest, till the tyme (ꝑ without any handes) there was hewen of a stone, whyche smote the ymage vpon the fete, that were bothe of yron and erth, and brake thē to pouther: then was the yron, the erth, the coppre the syluer and gold broken all togither in peces: and became lyke the chaffe of corne, that the wynde bloweth awaye from the commen floores, that they can no more be found. But the stone ꝑ smote the ymage became a greate mountayne, which fulfilleth ꝑ hole erth: this is the dreme. And now will we shew before ꝑ king, what it meaneth. Matth.xvi.c Luce.xx.b

O kynge, thou arte a kyng of kynges: For the God of heauen hathe gyuen the a kyngedome, sytheffe, strengthe, and maiestye: and hathe delyuered the all thynges that are amonges the chyldren of men: the beastes of the feld, and the foules vnder the heuen, and gyuen the dompnion ouer them all. Thou arte that golden heed. After the, there shall aryse an other kyngdome, whiche shall be lesse then thyne. The thyrde kyngdome shall be lyke copper, and haue dampnacion in all landes. The fourthe kyngdome shall be as stronge as yron. For lyke as yron broseth and breaketh all thynges: Yea euen as yron beateth euerye thynge downe, so shall it beate downe and destroye. F Daniel.b.v

Where as thou sawest the feete and toes parte of earth and parte of yron, that is a deuyded kyngdome, whyche neuertheles shall

haue some of the yron grounde myxte with it for so moche as thou hast sene the yron myxte with claye.

The toes of the fete that were part of yrō and part of claye, signifieth that it shall be a kyngdome partly stronge, and partly weyke. And where as ỹ sawest yron mixt with claye, they shall myngle them selues with the seed of symple people, and yet not continue one wᵗ an other, lyke as yron will not be ioulded with a potsherd.

Eclay.ij.b 6 In the dayes of these kynges, shall the God of heuen set vp an euerlastynge kyngedome, whiche shall not perysshe, and his kyngdome shal not be gyuen ouer to an other people: yea the same shall breake and destroy all these kyngdomes, but it shall endure for euer.

Hebr.xiij.e And where as ỹ sawest that without anye handes there was cut out of the mount a stone, which brake the yron, the copper, the erth, the syluer and golde in peces: by that hathe the great God shewed the kynge what wil come after this. This is a true dreme, and the interpretacion therof is sure.

Then the kynge Nabuchodonosor fell downe vpon his face, and bowed him self vnto Daniel, and commaunded that they sholde offer swete sacrifyces and swete sauoures vnto him. The kynge answered Daniel, and sayd: yea of a truthe youre God is a God aboue all goddes, a Lorde aboue all kynges, and an opener of secretes, seinge thou canste discouer this misterie. So the kinge made Daniel a great man, and gaue him many ỹ great gyftes.

He made him ruler of all the countreyes of Babylon, and lorde of all the nobles that were at Babylon. Nowe Daniel entreated the king for Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago so that he made them rulers ouer all the offices in the lande of Babylon. But Daniel him selfe remayned styll in the courte by the kynge.

¶ The kynge setteth vp a golden Image, whiche he commaundeth to be worshypped. Sydrach, Misach, and Abednago are accused, because they disobeyed the kynges commaundement. They are brought vnto the kynge and commaunded to worshyp the Image. They refuse to do it, and are put in to a burnynge ouen. By byleue in God, they are delyuered from the fyre. Nabuchodonosor confesseth the power of God after the syght of the myracle.

CAPI. III.

A NAbuchodonosor the kynge caused a golden ymage to be made, which was thyrtye cubites hygh, and sixe cubites thik. This he made to be set vp in the felde of Dura in the lande of Babylon, and sente oute to gather togyther the dukes, lordes, and nobles, ỹ iudges and officers, the debities & shyrues, with al the rulers of the land: that they myghte come to the dedicacion of the ymage which Nabuchodonosor the kynge hadde set vp. So the dukes, lordes and nobles / the iudges and officers, deputyes and shyrues / with all the rulers of the lande gathered the togither, and came vnto the dedicating of the ymage that Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

Nowe when they stode before the ymage, whiche Nabuchodonosor sette vp, the herald cryed oute with all his myght: O ye people, kynredes and tunges, to you be it sayd: that when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes wythe shall be blowen, with the harpes, shawmes, psalteryes, symphonyes, and all maner of musyke: ye fall downe and worshyp the golden ymage that Nabuchodonosor the kynge hathe set vp. Who so then falleth not downe and boweth him selfe, shall euen the same houre be cast in to an hote burnynge ouen. Therfore, when all the folke herde the noyse of the Trompettes that were blowē, with the Harpes, Shawmes, Psalteryes, Symphonyes, and all kynde of melodye: then all the people, kynredes and nacions fell downe, and bowed them selues vnto the golden ymage that Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

Now were there certayne men of the Caldees that went euen then and accused the Iewes, and sayd vnto the kynge Nabuchodonosor: O king, God saue thy lif for euer. Thou being kynge, hast gyuen a commaundement, that all men, when they heare noyse of the trompettes, harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonyes, and all the other melodyes: shall fall downe and bow them selues toward the golden ymage: who so then fell not downe, and worshypped not, that he sholde be cast in to an hote burning ouen.

Now are there certeyn Iewes, whom thou hast set ouer the offices of the land of Babylon: namely, Sidrach, Misach and Abednago. These men (o kyng) regarde not thy commaundement, yea they wil not serue thy goddes, ne bow them selues to the golden ymage that thou hast set vp.

Then Nabuchodonosor in a cruell wrathe and displeasure, commaunded, that Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago sholde be brought vn to him. So these mē were brought before the kyng. Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnto the and sayd: what? O Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, wyll not ye serue my goddes? nor bowe your selues to the golden ymage, that I haue set vp? wel be redye hereafter, whē ye heare the noyse of the trompettes blowe with ỹ harpes, Shawmes, Psalteryes, Symphonyes, and all the other melodyes: that ye fall downe and worshyp the ymage whiche I haue made. But yf ye worshyp it not, ye shall be caste immediatlye in to an hote burnynge ouen. Lette se, what God is there, that maye delyuer you oute of my handes? Sydrach, Misach, and Abednago answered the kynge, and sayde: O Nabuchodonosor, we ought not to consent vnto the in this matter, for why? oure God whome we serue, is able to kepe vs from the hote burnynge ouen (O kynge) and can ryght well delyuer vs out of thy handes. And though he will not, yet yet shalt thou knowe (O kynge) that we wyl not serue thy goddes, nor doo reuerence to the ymage, which thou hast set vp. Then was Nabuchodonosor ful of indignacion, so that the countenaunce of his face chaunged vpon Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago. Therfore he charged & commaunded that the ouen sholde be made seuen tymes hoter then it was wont to be, and spake vnto the strongest worthyes that were in his hoste, for to binde Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, and to cast them in to the hote burnyng ouen.

So these men were bounde in their cotes, hosen, shoes, with their other garmentes, and cast in to the hote burning ouen: for the kinges commaundement was so strayte, and the ouen was exceedyng hote. As for the men that put in Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, the flame of the fyre destroyed theym. And these three men: Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, fell downe in the hote burnynge ouen, being fast bounde.

Then Nabuchodonosor the kyng maruey-led, and rose vp in all haste: he spake vnto his counsell and sayde: dyd ye not cast three men bounde in to the fyre? They answered, and sayde vnto the kynge: Yea, O kynge. He answered and sayde: Lo for all that, yet wo I se foure men goynge loose in the myddest of the fyre, and nothynge corrupte, and the fourthe is lyke an aungell to lose vpon.

Vpon this wente Nabuchodonosor vnto ỹ mouth of the hote burninge ouen: he spake also, and said: O Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, ye seruauntes of the hye God, go forth and come hyther. And so Sydrach, Misach, and Abednago went oute of the fyre. Then the dukes, lordes, and nobles, and the kynges counsell came togyther to se these men, vpon whom the fyre had no maner of power in their bodyes. In so moche ỹ the very heere of their hed was not burnt, and their clothes vnchaunged: yea there was no smell of fyre felt vpon them.

Then spake Nabuchodonosor and sayde: Blessed be the God of Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago: whiche hathe sente his aungell, and defended his seruauntes, that put their trust in him / that haue altered the kynges commaundement, and ieoparde their bodyes therebyon, rather then they wolde serue or worshyp any other God, except their owne God onely.

Therfore I wyll and commaunde, that all people, kynredes and tunges, whiche speake anye blasphemye agaynste the God of Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, shall dye, and their houses shall be pyld: Bycause there is no God that maye saue, as this. So the kynge promoted Sydrach, Misach, and Abednago, in the lande of Babylon.

¶ Nabuchodonosor dreameth agayne. Daniel interpreteth. Nabuchodonosor is put oute of his realme, and eateth with beastes. He confesseth the power of God, and is restored in to his kyngdome.

CAPI. IIII.

NAbuchodonosor kynge vnto all people, kynredes and tunges that dwell vpon the hole earthe: peax be multiplyed amonges you: I thought it good to shew the tokens and maruelous workes, that the hye God hath wroughte vpon me. O howe greate are his tokens, and how mighty are his wonders? His kyngdom is an euerlastyng kyngdome, and his power lasteth for euer and euer. Psal.lv.b Daniel.vij.d Luke.i.c.

I Nabuchodonosor beynge at rest in myne house, and flourysshynge in my palace, sawe a dreame, whiche made me afrayde / and the thoughtes that I had vpon my bed, with the visions of my heed troubled me. Then sent I out a commission, that all they which were of wysdome at Babylon sholde be brought before me, to tell me the interpretacyon of the dreame.

So there came the sothsayers, charmers, Caldees and conuerters of deuyls / to whome I tolde the dreame, but what it betokened they could not shew me: tyl at the last there came one Daniel (otherwyse called Balthasar, accordynge to the name of my God) whi che hath the spirite of the holy goddes in him: to whome I tolde the dreame, sayinge: O Balthasar, thou Prynce of sothesayers: ỹ for so moche as I knowe that thou hast the spirite of the holy Goddes, and no secrete is hyd from the: tell me therfore what the vysyon of my dreame (that I haue sene) maye signifye. I sawe a vision in my heed vpon my bed: and beholde there stode a tre vpon the grounde whiche was very hyghe, greate, and myghtye: the heygth reached vnto the heuen, and the brede extended to all the endes of the earthe: his leaues were fayre, he hadde very moche fruite, so that euery man had ynoughe to eate therin.

The beastes of the felde hadde shadowes vnder it, and the foules of the ayre dwelte in the bowes therof. Shortly, all creatures fed of it. I sawe in my heed a vysion vpon my bedde: and beholde, a watcher came downe from heuen, and cryed myghtyly, sayinge: Hewe downe the tree, breake of his braunches, shake of his leaues, and scatre his fruite abrode: that all the beastes maye geete them a waye from vnder him, and the foules from his braunches. Neuertheles, leaue the grounde of his roote styll in the earthe, and bynde him vpon the playne felde, with cheynes of yron and stele. With the dewe of heuen shall he be wet, and he shall haue his part in the herbes of the ground with other wylde beastes.

That mannes herte of his shall be taken from him, and a beastes herte shall be gyuen him, till seuen yeres be come and gone vpon him.

This errande of the watcher, is a commaundement grounded and sought oute in the counsell of him that is moste holye: to leme men for to vnderstande that the highest hath power ouer the kyngdomes of men, and gyueth them to whom it lyketh him, & bryngeth the verye outcastes of men ouer them. This is the dreame that I kynge Nabuchodonosor haue sene: therfore, O Balthasar, tel thou me what it signifieth: for so moche as all the wyse men of my kyngdome are not hable to shewe me what it meaneth. But thou canst do it, for the spirite of ẏ holy goddes is in the.

D Then Daniel (whose name was Balthasar) helde his peax by the space of an hour, and his thoughtes troubled him. So the kynge spake, and sayd: O Balthasar, let neither the dreame ne the interpretacion therof fear the. Balthasar answered, sayinge: O my Lorde, this dreame happen to thyne enemies, & the interpretacion to thyne aduersaryes. As for the tree that thou sawest, whiche was so greate and mightye, whose heyghe reached vnto the heuen, & his bredth in to all ẏ worlde whose leaues were fayre, and the frute moch vnder the whiche the beestes of the felde had their habitacion, and vpon whose braunches the foules of the ayre dyd syt.

Euen thou (O kyng) art the tree, great and stronge. Thy greatnesse encreaseth, and reacheth vnto the heuen, so dothe thy power to the endes of the erth. But where as the king sawe a watcher, euen an holy aungell, that came downe frome heuen, and sayde: hewe downe the tree, and destroye it: yet leaue the grounde of the roote in the earthe: and bynd him vpon the playne felde, with cheynes of yron and stele. He shall be wet with the dewe of heauen, and his parte shall be with the beastes of the felde, tyll seuen yeres be come and goae vpon him. This (O kynge) is the interpretacion/yea it is the very deuice of him that is hyest of all, and it toucheth my Lorde the kynge.

E Thou shalte be cast oute fro men, and thy dwellynge shall be with the beastes of the felde: with grasse shalte thou be fed lyke an oxe. Thou must be wet with the dewe of heuen: Yea, seuen yeres shall come and goo vpon the, tyll thou knowe that the hiest hath power vpon the kyngdomes of men, and gyueth them to whom he list. Moreouer, where as it was sayd that the roote of the tre sholde be lefte styll in the grounde: it betokeneth ẏ thy kyngdome shall remayne hole vnto the, after thou haste learned to knowe, that the power commeth from heauen. Wherfore, O kynge, be content with my counsel, that thou mayste loose thy synnes with ryghteousnesse, and thyne offences with mercy to poore people/for suche thynges shal prolong thy peax. All these thynges touche the kyng Nabuchodonosor.

Job.xiiii.b Daniel.v.a Daniel.ii.c Iere.xxii.a. Luke.xi. Thobi.iiii.

F So after twelue monethes, the kyng walked vp and downe in the palace of the kyngdome of Babylon, and sayd: This is ẏ great citye of Babylon, which I my selfe (with my power and strengthe) haue made a kynges courte for the honour of my maiestie. While these wordes was yet in the kynges mouthe, there fell a voyce from heuen saying: O kyng Nabuchodonosor, to the be it spoken: Thy kyngdome shall departe from the, thou shalt be cast out of mens company: thy dwellynge shall be with the beastes of the felde, so that thou shalt eate grasse lyke as an oxe, til seuen yeres be come and gone ouer the, euen vntyll thou knowest that the hyest hath power vpō the kyngdomes of men, and that he maye gyue them vnto whome it pleaseth him.

The verye same houre was this matter fulfylled vpon Nabuchodonosor / so that he was caste out of mennes companye, and ate grasse lyke an oxe. His bodye was wet with ẏ dewe of heuen, tyll his heeres were as great as Egles fethers, and his nayles like byrdes clawes.

G When this tyme was past, I Nabuchodonosor lyfte vp myne eyes vnto heauen, and myne vnderstandynge was restored vnto me againe. Then gaue I thankes vnto ẏ highest. I magnified and praysed him that lyueth for euer more, whose power endureth alwaye, and his kyngdom from one generacion to another: in comparyson of whom, all they that dwelle vpon the earthe, are to be reputed as nothynge.

He handleth accordyng to his will among the powers of heuen, and amonge the inhabitauntes of the earth / and there is none that maye resyst his hande, or saye: what doest thou? At the same tyme was myne vnderstanding gyuen me agayne, and I was restored to the honour of my kingdome, to my dignitie, & to myne owne shape agayne. My great estates and prynces sought vnto me, and I was set in my kyngdome agayne, so that I had yet greater worshyp.

Then dyd I Nabuchodonosor loue, magnifie and prayse the kynge of heuen, for all his workes are true, and his wayes right. As for those that goo proudly, he is hable to brynge them downe.

Dani. Psal. Job.

¶ Balthazar kynge of Babylon abusynge the vessels of the temple, seeth an hande wrytyng in the wall. The sothsayers called of the kynge, cannot expounde the wrytynge. Daniel is called, whiche readeth it, and interpreteth it also. Balthazar beynge slayne, Darius succedeth in his rowme.

CAPI. V.

KYng Balthazar made a great banket to a thousande Lordes: with all these thousand he made great chere, and whē he was dronken with wyne, he commaunded to bring him the golden & syluer vessels, whiche his father Nabuchodonosor had takē out of the temple at Jerusalem: that the kyng & his lordes wt his queue and concubines might drynke therin.

So they brought the golden vessell ẏ was taken oute of the temple of the lordes house at Jerusalem. Then the kynge and his lordes with his quene and concubynes dronke of them. They dronke wyne, and prayed they ydolles of golde, syluer, copper, yron, wod and stone.

In

A In the verye same houre there appeared fyngers, as it had bene of a mans hande wrytynge, right ouer agaynste the candelstycke vpon the playne wall in the kynges palace: and the kynge sawe the palme of the hande that wrot. Then chaunged the king his coūtenaunce, and his thoughtes troubled him, so that the ioyntes of his bodye shoke, and his knees smote one agaynst the other. Wherfore the king cryed myghtely, that they shuld brynge him the charmers, Caldees and coniurers of deuyls. The kyng spake also to the wise men of Babylon, and said: Who so cā rede this writinge, and shewe me the playne meanynge therof: shall be clothed with purple, haue a cheyne of golde about his necke, and rule the thyrde parte of my kingdome.

Upon this, came all the kynges wyse mē: but they coulde neither reade the writing, ne shew the king what it signified. Then was the kinge sore afrayed: in so moche, that his coloure chaunged, and his lordes were sore vexed. C So by reason of this matter, that had happened to the king and his lordes, ẏ quene went vp her selfe into the bancket house, & spake vnto the kinge, sayinge: O king, God saue thy lyfe for euer: Let not the thoughtes trouble the, and let not thy coūtenaunce be chaunged. For why? there is a man in thy kingdom, that hathe the spirite of the holye goddes within him, as it was sene in thy fathers dayes. He hath vnderstandynge & wisdome lyke the goddes. Yea the kinge Nabuchodonosor thy father made this man cheife of the sothsayers, charmers, Caldees and deuil coūiurers: because that such an aboūdaūt spirite, knowledge and wysdome (to expoūde dreames, to opē secretes, and to declare hard doubtes) was found in him: yea euen in Daniel, whome the king named Balthazar. Let this same Danyel be sent for, and he shall tell, what it meaneth.

D Then was Danyel brought before the kinge. So the kinge spake vnto Danyel, and sayde: Arte thou that Danyel, one of ẏ prysoners of Juda, whome my father the kynge brought out of Jurye? I haue hearde speake of the, that thou hast the spirite of the holy goddes, experience and vnderstandynge, and that there hath bene great wysdome founde in ẏ. Now haue there ben brought me, wyse and cunnynge charmers to reade this wrytynge and to shewe me the meanynge therof. But they coulde not tell me, what this mater signifyed. Thē herde I saye, that thou couldest expound darcke thynges, and declare harde doubtes. Wel than, yf thou canst rede this wrytynge, and shewe me the meanynge therof: thou shalte be clothed with purple, haue a cheyne of golde about thy necke, and rule the thirde parte of my kingdome.

E Daniel answered, & sayd before the king: As for thy rewardes, kepe them to thy selfe, & gyue thy ryche gyftes to an other: yet neuerthelesse, I wyll reade the writtinge vnto ẏ kinge and shewe him the interpretacion therof. O kyng, God the hyghest gaue vnto Nabuchodonosor thy father, the dygnytie of a kinge, with worshyp and honoure: so that all people, kynredes & tunges stode in awe and fear of him, by reason of the hygh estate that he had set him. For why, he slew whom he wolde: he smote, whome it pleased him. Agayne: whom he wolde, he set vp: & whom he lyst, he put downe. But because his herte was so prowde, and his stomacke set so faste vnto wylfulnesse: he was deposed from his kyngly trone, and his maiestye was taken from him He was shot out from amonges men, his hert was lyke a beastes herte, & his dwellyng was with the wylde asses: he was fayne to eate grasse like an oxe, and his body was wet with the dewe of the heauen: tyll he knewe that the hyghest had power vpon the king domes of mē, and setteth ouer them whom he lyst. Daniel.iiii.d.

F And thou his sonne (O Balthazar) for al this, hast not submytted thine hert, thoughe thou knewest al these thinges: but hast magnyfyed thy selfe aboue the Lord of heuen, so that ẏ vessels of his house were broughte before the: that thou, and thy Lordes, with thy quene & concubines, might drincke wyne therin, And haste praysed the Idols of syluer and gold, copper and yron, of wod and stone. As for the God in whose hande consysteth thy breth and all thy wayes: thou haste not loued him. Iere.xvii.c

G Therfore is the palme of this hande sent hither from him, to token vp this wrytynge. And this is the scrypture, that is writen vp: Mane, Thetel, Phares. Now the interpretacion of the thing is this: Mane, God hath nombred thy kyngdom, and brought it to an ende: Thetel, thou art weyed in the balaūce & arte found to light: Phares, thy kingdom is delte in partes, and gyuen to the Medes and Perses.

Then commaunded Balthazar, to clothe Danyel with purple, to hange a cheyne of gold about his necke, and and to make a proclamacyon concernynge him, that he shuld be the ruler of the thyrde parte of his kyngdome. The very same nyght was Balthazar the king of the Caldees slayne, and Darius oute of Medea toke the kyngedome, beynge lxij yere of age. Esay.xlvii.b xxi.a. Daniel.ix.a.

¶ Daniel is made ruler ouer the lordes. The imagynacyon of an acte agaynst Daniel. The proclamacyon of the acte, wherof Daniel is accused vnto the kynge as a transgressour. He is put in to a denne of lyons by the commaundement of the kyng. He is delyuered by fayth in God. Danels accusers are put in to the lyons to be torne in sondre. Darius by the proclamacyon of a decree, magnifyeth the God of Daniel.

CAPI. VI.

IT pleased Darius to sette ouer his kingdom an. C. and. xx. Lordes, whiche shulde be in all his kyngdom about. Aboue these he set thre Prynces (of whome Danyel was one) that the lordes myght gyue accomptes A

vnto

vnto them, and the kynge to be vnbilcealed.

But Daniel exceded all theie princes and lordes, for the spirite of God was plenteous in him: so that the kynge was minded to set him ouer the hole realme. Wherfore the princes and Lordes sought̃e, to pycke oute matter in Daniel some quarel against the kingdom yet could they fynde none occasion ne faute vpon him. For why? he was so faythfull, that there was no blame ne dishonestye founde in him.

B Then sayde these men: we wyll get no quarell agaynste this Daniel, except it be in the lawe of his God. Upon this, wente the prynces and lordes together vnto the kinge, and sayde thus vnto him: kinge Darius God saue thy ly͛fe for euer. All the great estates of the realme: as the princes, Dukes, Senatours, and Judges, are determed to put out a cõmaundement of the kynge, & to make sure statute namely, that who so desireth any petition, either of any God or mã (within this .xxx. dayes) except it be onely of the, O kinge: the same person maye be cast into the lyons denne. Wherfore, O kinge confirme this statutes, and make a wrytyng that the thinge which the Medes and Perses haue ordeyned be not aultered ne broken.

So Darius made the wrytynge, and cõfirmed it. Nowe when Danyel vnderstode C that the wrytinge was made, he went in to his house: and the windowes of his hall, to warde Jerusalem stode open. There kneled he downe vpon his knees, thre tymes a day there he made his petition, and praysed his God, lyke as his maner was to doo afore tyme.

Then these men made searche, and founde Danyel makinge his petition, and prayenge vnto his God: So they came to the kynge, & spake before him concernynge his commaũdement, sayinge: O kynge, hast thou not subscribed the statute, that within thirty dayes who so requyreth his petition of anye God or man but only of thy self, O kyng: he shal be cast into the den of the lyons? The kinge answered, and sayde: yea it is true. It must be as a law of the Medes and Perses, that maye not be broken.

Then answered they, and sayde vnto the D kinge: Daniel one of the prysoners of Juda O king, regardeth neither the, ne thy statute that thou hast made, but maketh his petition thre tymes a day. When the kynge heard these wordes, he was sore greued, and wold haue reused Daniel, to delyuer him & put of the matter, vnto the Sunne went downe to the intent that he myght saue him.

These men perceyuynge the kinges mynde sayde vnto hym: knowe this, O kynge, that Dani.vi.c the lawe of the Medes and Perses is that the commaundement and statute which the kinge maketh, maye not be altered. Then the kynge had them bring Daniel, and they cast him into the lyons den.

The kynge also spake vnto Daniel, and sayd: thy God, whom thou alwaye serueth, euen he shall defende the. And there was E brought a stone, and layde vpon the hole of the den, this the kinge seled with his owne ringe, & with the signet of his princes: that the kynges commaundement concernynge Daniel, shulde not be broken.

So the kinge wente into his palace, and kept him sober all nyght, so that there was no table spred before him, neither coulde he take any slepe. But by tymes in the morninge at the breake of the daye, the kynge arose, and went in all haste vnto the denne of the Lyons.

Now as he came nygh vnto the denne, he cryed with a piteous voyce vnto Daniel: yea the kinge spake, and sayde vnto Daniel: O Danyel, thou seruaunt of the lyuynge God is not thy God (whom thou alway seruest) able to delyuer the from ỹ Lyons? Danyel sayde vnto the kinge: O kinge, God saue thy lyfe for euer. My God hath sent his aun gell, which hath shut the Lyons mouthes, so that they myght not hurte me. For why? myne vnguiltynesse is founde out before him. And as for the, O kynge, I neuer offended the.

Then was the kynge exedyng glad, and F commaunded to take Daniel out of the den. So Daniel was brought out of the denne, & no maner of hurt was founde vpon him. For he put his truste in his God. And as for those men which had accused Danyel, the kinge commaunded to bringe them, and to caste them in the lyons denne, them their chyldren and their wyues. So the Lyons had the maistry of them, and brake all their bones a sondre, or euer they came at the grounde.

After this, wrote kynge Darius vnto all people kynredes, and tunges, that dwelte in all landes: peace be multyplyed with you: G My cõmaunde ment is, in all my dompynon and kyngdome, that men feare and stande in awe of Daniels God.

For he is the lyuynge God, which abideth euer: his kyngdome shall not fayle, and his power is euerlastynge. He is he that delyuereth, & saueth: he with wõders & maruelous workes, in heauen and in earthe: he hathe preserued Danyel from the power of the lyons. This Daniel prospered in the regne of Darius and Cirus of Persia.

¶ Vision of foure beastes is shewed vnto Daniel. The vyson is interpreted of foure kyngdomes of the world. Of the power and increase of Antichrist. Of the euerlastynge kyngdome of Christe.

CAPI. VII.

IN the fyrste yeare of Balthazar kynge of A Babylon, sawe Danyel a dreame, and a vyson was in his heade vpon his bedde. Which he came he wrote, and the summe of the matter is this: Danyel spake, and sayde, I sawe in my vyson by nyght, and beholde the foure windes of the heauen stroue vpon the see, and foure greate beestes came vp frõ the see one vnlyke an other.

The fyrst was as a lyõ, and yet had he Eagles wynges. I sawe, that his wynges were pluckt from him, and he taken awaye from ỹ earth: that he stode vpon his fete as a man and that there was gyuen hym a mans hert.

B Behold, the seconde beast was lyke a beer, & stode vpon ỹ one syde. Amonges his teeth in his mouth he had thre greate long teth, & it was sayde vnto him: Arise, eate vp, moche flesshe.

Then I loked, and beholde, there was another lyke vnto a Leoparde: this had wings as a foule, euen foure vpon the backe. This beast had foure heades, and there was power gyuen him.

After this I sawe in a vyson by nyght, & behold the fourth beast was grym & horrible, and meruelous stronge. It had greate yron teth, it deuoured and destroyed, and stamped the residue vnder his fete. It was farre vnlyke the other beastes that were before it: for it hadde ten hornes, wherof I toke good hede.

C And beholde, there came vp among them another lytle horne, before whome there were thre of the fyrste hornes pluckte away. Behold this horne had eyes lyke a man, and a mouth speakyng presumptuous thynges. I loked tyll the seates were prepared, and tyl the old aged sat him down. His clothing was as whyte as snowe, and the heares of his heed lyke the pure woll. His trone was lyke the fyry flame, and his wheles as the burnynge fyre. There drewe forthe a fyrye streme, and went out from him. A thousande tymes a thousande serued hym. x. M. tymes ten thousande stode before him. The iudgement was set, and the bokes opened. Then toke I hede therunto, because of the voyce of the proude wordes, which that horne spake ỹ beholde, tyll the beast was slayne, and his body destroyed, and gyuen ouer to be brente in the fyre.

D As for the power of the other beastes also it was taken awaye, but their lyues were prolonged for a tyme and season. I sawe in a vision by nyght, and beholde, there came one in the cloudes of heauen lyke the sonne of a man, whiche went vnto the olde aged, before whom they brought him: Then gaue he hym power & dignytie regall, that al people, trybes and tunges shulde serue him. His power is an euerlastynge power, which shall neuer be put downe: and his kingdome endureth vncorrupt. My herte was vexed, and I Daniel had a troubled spirite within me, & the visions of my head made me afrayde: till I gate me vnto one of them that stode by, to knowe the truth, concernynge all these thinges. So he tolde me, and made me vnderstãde the interpretacion of these thynges.

E These foure great beastes, are foure kynges whiche shal aryse out of the earth. These shall take in the kyngdome of the saynctes of the most hyghest, and possesse it styl more and more for alonge season. After this I requyred diligently to knowe the truthe, concernynge the fourth beaste, which was so farre vnlike the other beastes, & so horrible: whose teeth were of yron, and his nayles of brasse: which deuoured and destroyed, and stamped the residue vnder his fete. I desyred also to Ipoca.xiii.a know the truth, as touchinge the ten hornes xvii.c that he hadde vpon his heade, and this other ff which came vp afterwarde, before whose face there fell downe thre: which horne had eyes and a mouth that spake presumptuous thinges, and loked with a grymmer vysage then his felowes. I beheld, and ỹ same horne made battayle agaynst the saynctes, yea and gat the victorye of them vntyl the tyme that the old aged came, that the iudgemente was gyuen to the chiefest saynctes: and tyll the tyme that the saynctes had the kyngdome in possession. He gaue me this answere: That fourth beast shall be the fourth kyngdome vpon earth: it shall be more then all other kyngdomes, it shall deuoure, treade downe, and destroye all other landes.

The ten hornes, are ten kinges, that shall G aryse out of the kingdom, after whome there Zacha.i.c shall stande vp an other, which shal be greater then the fyrste. He shall subdue thre kinges, and shall speake wordes agaynste the vyghest of all: he shall destroye the saynctes of the most hyghest, and thynke, that he may chaunge tymes and lawes. They shal be gyuen vnder his power, but yll a tyme, two tymes, and halfe a tyme. Daniel.ii.c Ipoc.xii.d

But the iudgement shall be kepte, so that his power shal be taken from him, for ye shal be destroyed, and perysshe at the laste. As for the kyngdome, power, and all myght that is vnder the heuen: it shall be gyuen to the holye people of the most hyghest, whose kyng Luke.i.c dome is euerlastynge / yea all powers shall Daniel.xiiii.f serue and obeye hym. Thus farre extende the wordes. Neuertheles, I Daniel was so vexed in my thoughtes, that my countenaũce chaunged but the wordes I kepte styll in my herte. Luke.ii.e

¶ Vyson of a stryke betwene a ramme and an he gote. The vnderstandyng of the vyson, is of the battell betwene the kynge of Persia, and the kynge of the Grecians. Of the shameles kynge Antiochyste.

CAPI. VIII.

IN the thyrde yere of the rayne of kynge A Balthazar, there appeared a vyson vnto me Daniel, after that I had sene the fyrst I sawe in a vyson (and when I saw it, I was at Susis in the chiefe city, whiche lieth in the lande of Elam) and in the vision me thought Daniel.ii.e I was by the ryuer Ulai.

Then I loked vp, and sawe: and beholde, there stode before the ryuer, a ramme, which had hornes: and these hornes were hygh, but one was hygher then an other, & the highest came vp laste.

I sawe that this ramme pushed with his hornes, agaynste the weste, agaynst the north and & agaynst the southe: so that no beastes might stande before hym, ne defende them from his power: but he dyd as him lysted, and waxed greatly. ¶ to take hede vnto this, and then came there an he gote from the west ouer the hole earth, and touched not the grounde.

B This goote had a maruellous goodly horn betwixte his eyes, and came vnto the ramme þ had the .ij. hornes (whom I had sene afore by the ryuer Ulai) and ranne fearcely vpon him with his might. I sawe hym drawe nigh vnto the ramme, beinge verye feare vpon hym: yea he gaue him suche a stroke, that he brake his two hornes: Neither had the ram so moch strength as to stand before hym: but he cast him downe, trod him vnder his fete: and no man was able to deliuer the ram out of his power.

C The goote waxed exceadynge greate, and when he was at the strongest, his great horn was broken also. Then grewe there other foure suche lyke in the stede, towarde the .iiij. Da. vii. a. 8. wyndes of the heauen. Yea out of one of the 1. Machab. 1. a ierst of these hornes, there came vp yet an other horne, whiche waxed meruelous great: towarde the southe, towarde the east, and towarde the fayre pleasaunt lande. It grewe vp to the hoste of heauen, wherof it did cast some downe to the grounde, and of the starres also, and trode them vnder fete.

Yea it grewe vp vnto the prince of the hoost, from whom the dayly offeryng was taken, and the place of his Sanctuary casten downe. And a certayne season was geuen vp to it, agaynst the dayly offeryng (because of wyckednesse) that it myght cause downe the beepe to the ground, and so to prosper in al thinges, that it went about.

D Upon this I herd one of the Saintes speakinge, whiche sayntc sayde vnto one that asked this question: How long shall this vysyon of the dayly sacrifice and of þ wastyng abhominacion endure: that the Sanctuary and the power shall so be trodden vnder fote? And he answered him: Vnto the euenyng & the morninge, euen two thousande and thre hundreth dayes: then shall the Sanctuarye be clensed agayne.

E Nowe when I Daniel had sene this vysyon, and sought for the vnderstandynge of it: beholde, there stode before me a thynge lyke vnto a man. And I herd a mans voyce in the ryuer of Ulai, whiche cryed, and sayd: O Gabryel, make this man vnderstande the vision. So he came, and stode by me. But I was afeareyde at his commynge, and fell downe vpō my face.

Then sayd he vnto me: O thou sonne of man, marke well, for in the laste tyme shall this vysyon be fulfylled. Nowe as he was speakynge vnto me, I waxed sayntc, so that I sunke downe to the grounde. But he toke hold vpon me, and set me vp agayne, saying: Beholde, I will shewe the, what shall happen in the laste wrath: for in the tyme appoynted it shall be fulfylled.

The ramme whiche thou sawest with the two hornes, is the kinge of the Medes and Perses: but the goote is the kyng of Grecia lande: the greate horne that stode betwixte his eyes, that is the principall kinge. But where as it brake, and foure other rose vp in the stede: it signifyeth, that out of this people shall stande vp foure kyngdomes, but not so myghty as it.

After these kyngdomes (whyle vngodlynesse is a growynge) there shall aryse a kinge of an vnshamefast face, whiche shall be wise in darke speakinges.

He shall be myghty and stronge, but not in his owne strength. He shall destroy aboue measure, and all that he goeth aboute shall prosper: he shall slaye the stronge and holy people. And throwe his craftynesse, falsehed shall prospere in his hande, his herte shall be proude, and manye one shall he put to death in his welthynes, he shall stande vp agaynste the Prince of Princes, but he shal be destroyed without hande. And this vysion that is shewed vnto the, is as sure as the euenynge and the morninge. Therfore wryte thou vp this syghte, for it wyll be longe or it come to passe.

Upon this was I Daniel beery sayntc, so that I laye sycke certayne dayes: but when I rose vp, I went aboute the kynges busynesse, and maruepled at the vysyon, neuertheles no man knewe of it.

¶ Daniel desyreth to haue that performed of God whiche he had promysed concernynge the returne of the people from theyr banyshment in Babylon. A true confessyon. Daniels prayer is herde. Gabryel the Aungell expounderh vnto hym the vysyon of the thre score and ten wekes. The annoynteynge of Chryste. The buyldynge agayne of Jerusalem vnder Nehemias. The death of Chryste. The destruynge ouer of the wycked Jewes.

CAP. IX.

IN the fyrste yere of Darius the sonne of Assuerus, whiche was of the sede of the Medes, and was made kinge ouer the realme of the Caldees: yea euē in the fyrst yere of his raygne, I Daniel desyred to know the yerely nombre out of the bokes, wherof the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy the Prophet: that Jerusalem shulde lye wast thre score and ten yeres: and I turned me vnto God the Lord for to praye & make myne intercession, with fastyng, sackcloth and asshes, I prayed before the Lorde my God, and knowledged, sayinge:

O Lorde, thou greate and fearfull God, thou that kepest couenaunt and mercy with them, which loue the, and do thy commaundementes: We haue synned, we haue offended, we haue bene disobedyent & gone backe: yea we haue departed from all thy precepters and iudgementes.

We wolde neuer folowe thy seruauntes the Prophets, that spake in thy name to our kynges and prynces, to our fore fathers and to al the people of the lande. O Lorde, ryghteousnesse belongeth vnto the, vnto vs perteyneth nothynge but open shame: as it is come to passe this daye vnto euery man of Iuda, and to them that dwell at Jerusalem: Yea vnto al Israel, whether they be farre or nyghe thorow out all landes: wherin thou hast strowed them, because of the offences þ they had done agaynste the.

E Yea O Lorde, vnto vs to our kynges and prynces, to oure forefathers: euen to vs all, that haue offended þ, belongeth open shame. But vnto the, O Lorde our God, perteyneth mercy and forgyuenesse. As for vs, we are gone backe from him, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lord our God, to walke in his lawes, whiche he layed before vs by his seruauntes the Prophetes: yea al Israel haue transgressed, and gone backe from thy lawe, so that they haue not herkened vnto thy voyce.

Wherfore the curse and oth, that is written in the lawe of Moses the seruaunte of God (agaynst whom we haue offended) is powred vpō vs. And he hath performed his wordes, which he spake agaynste vs, and agaynst our iudges that iudged vs: to bringe vpon vs suche a greate plage, as neuer was vnder heauen lyke as it is nowe come to passe in Jerusalem. Yea all this plage, as it is wryten in the lawe of Moses, is come vpon vs. Yet made we not oure prayer before þ Lorde our God, that we myght turne agayne from oure wyckednesse, & to be lerned in thy veryte. Therfore hath the Lorde made haste, to bringe this plage vpon vs: for the Lord our God is righteous, in all his workes whiche he dothe: for why, we wolde not herken vnto his voyce.

And now, O Lorde oure God, thou that with a myghty hande hast brought thy people out of Egypt, to get thy selfe a name, whyche remayneth this daye: we haue synned, O Lorde, and done wyckedly agaynste all thy righteousnes: pet let thy wrothfull displeasure be turned awaye (I beseche the) fro thy cytye Jerusalem thy holy hyl. And whye for our synnes sake and for the wickednesse of our fore fathers is Jerusalem and thy people abhorred, of all them that are about vs. Nowe therefore, O oure God, here the prayer of thy seruaunte, and his intercession. O let thy face shyne ouer thy Sanctuary, that lyeth wast.

O my God, enclyne thyne eare, and heare (at the leest for thyne owne sake) open thyne eyes: behold how we be desolated, yea and the cytye also, whiche is called after thy name: for we do not cast oure prayers before the in our owne righteousnesse, no: but only in thy great mercyes, O Lorde, heare: O forgyue Lorde: O Lorde consyder, tarye not ouer longe: but for thyne owne sake do it. O my God: for thy cytye and thy people is called after thy name.

As I was yet speakinge at my prayers, knowledgynge myne owne synnes, and the synnes of my people, makynge so myne intercession before the Lorde my God, for the holy hyls sake of my God: yea whyle I was yet speakinge in my prayer, beholde, the man Gabriel (whom I had sene afore in the visiō) came flyinge to me, and touched me aboute the offeryng tyme in the euenynge. He informed me and spake vnto me: O Daniel sayde he, I am nowe come to make the vnderstande it: For as soone as thou begannest to make thy prayer, it was so deuised, & therfore am I come to shewe the. And why? For thou art a man greatly beloued. Dan. ix. b. Daniel. x. c. d Wherfore, ponder the matter well, that thou mayste lerne, to vnderstande the vision, thre score and ten wekes are determed ouer thy people, and ouer the holye cyty: that the wickednesse maye be consumed, that the sin maye haue an ende, that the offence maye be reconcyled, and to bringe in euerlasting righteousnesse, to fulfyll the visions and the prophetes, and to anoynte the moost holye one. Understande this then, and marcke it well that frome the tyme it shall be concluded, to go & repayre Jerusalem agayne, vnto Christe (or the anoynted) prince: there shall be seue wekes. Then shall the stretes and walles be buylded agayne. lxij. wekes, but with harde troublous tyme. After these. lxij. wekes, shal Christe be slayne, and they shall haue no pleasure in hym. Then shall there come a people with the prince, and destroye the cytye and the Sanctuarye: and his ende shal come as the water floude. But the desolacion shall contynue tyll the ende of the battayle.

He shall make a stronge bonde with manye, for the space of a weke: and when the weke is halfe gone, he shall put downe the offryng and meatofferyng. And in the temple there shall be an abhompnable desolacion, tyll it haue destroyed all. And it is concluded, that this wastynge shal contynue vn to the ende. Matth. xxiiij. xxiij. Marke. xiij. b

¶ There appereth vnto Daniel a man clothed in lynen, whyche sheweth hym wherfore he is sent.

CAP. X.

IN the thyrde yeare of kynge Cirus of Persia, there was shewed vnto Daniel (other wise called Balthazar) a mater, yea a true matter, but it is yet a longe tyme vnto it. He vnderstode the mater wel & perceyued what the vysion was. At the same tyme, I Daniel mourned for the space of thre wekes, so that I had no luste to eat brede: as for flesh & wyne there came none within my mouthe. No, I dyd not ones anoynte my selfe, tyl the hole thre wekes were out.

Upon the .xxiij. daye of the fyrste moneth, I was by the greate floude, called Tigris: I lyfte vp myne eyes, and loked: and beholde, a man clothed in lynnen, whose loynes were gyrded vp with fyne golde of Arabye: his body was lyke the Chrysolite stone, his face (to loke vpon) was lyke lyghtenynge, his eyes as the flame of fire, his armes and fete were lyke fayre gylsterynge metall, but the voyce of his wordes was lyke the voyce of a multytude. Daniel. viii. b. Apocal. i. c

I Daniel

B I Danyel alone sawe this vision, the men that were with me, sawe it not: but a greate fearfulnesse fell upon them, so that they fled awaye and hyd them selues. I was left there my selfe alone, and sawe this greate vision, so long tyl there remayned no more strength within me: yea I loste my coloure cleane, I wasted awaye, and my strength was gone. Yet herde I the voyce of his wordes, and as soone as I herde it faintnesse came upon me, and I fel downe flat to the the grounde upon my face. And beholde, an hande touched me, whiche set me up upon my knees and upon ỹ palmes of my handes, sayinge unto me: O Danyel, thou well beloued man: take good hede of the wordes, that I shall saye unto the, and stande right up, for unto the am I nowe sent.

Daniel.iii.c Isa.lx.a Dani.ix.b

C And when he had sayde these wordes, I stode up tremblynge. Then sayde he unto me, feare not Daniel: for why sence the fyrst daye that thou set thyne herte to understand & dyddest chaste thy self before thy God: thy wordes haue bene herde. And I hadde come unto the, whẽ thou beganneste to speake had not the prince ouer the kingdome of the Persses withstande me .xxi. dayes. But lo Michael one of the chiefest, princes, came to helpe me, hym haue I left by the king of Persia, & am come to shewe the what shall happen unto thy people in ỹ latter dayes: For it wyll be longe yet or the vysyon be fulfylled.

Josue.v.d Dan.xii.a

Nowe when he had spoken these wordes unto me, I cast down my heed to the ground and helde my tunge. Beholde, there touched my lyppes one very lyke unto a man. Then opened I my mouth, & sayde unto him, that stode before me: O my Lorde, my ioyntes are lowsed in the vision, and there is no more strength within me: Howe may my Lordes seruaunt then talke with my Lorde? seinge there is no strength in me, so that I can not take my breth? Upon this there touched me agayne, one moche lyke a man, and comforted me sayinge: O thou man so wel beloued, feare not: be content, take a good herte unto the, and be stronge.

Daniel.ix.b

D So when he had spoken unto me, I recouered, and sayd: Speake on my Lord, for thou hast refreshed me. Then sayde he: knowest thou wherfore I am come unto the? nowe wyll I go agayne to fyght with ỹ prynce of the Perses. As soone as I go forthe, lo, the prince of Greke lãd shal come. Neuertheles, I wyll shewe the ỹ thyng, that is faste noted in the scripture of truthe. And as for all yonder matters, there is none that helpeth me in them, but Michael youre prince.

¶ A prophecye of the kynges of Persia. Of the kyngdome of Grece. Of the kyngdome of Egypt, and of the bonde therof, and of the battell with the kyngdome of Siria. Of the Jewes that lyue under the kynge of Egypt, whom Antiochus the kyng of Siria persecuteth, whiche fygureth unto us Antichrist. The pryde of Antiochus.

CAPI. XI.

AND in the fyrst yere of Darius of Media, I stode by him, to comforte him, & to strength him, and now wyl I shew the the truthe. Beholde, there shall stande up yet thre kinges in Persia, but the fourthe shall be farre rycher then they all. And when he is in ỹ chiefest power of his riches, he shall prouoke euery man agaynste the realme of Grekeland. Then shal there aryse yet a mighty king that shall rule with greate dominion, and do what him list. And as soone as his kingdome cometh up, it shall be destroyed, & deuided towarde the foure windes of the heuẽ. They that come after him, shal not haue suche power and domynyon as he: but his kingdome shall be scatered, yea euen amonges other then those. And the kynge of the southe shall be myghtyer, then his other princes. Agaynste hym there shall one make hym selfe stronge, and shall rule his domynyon with greate power.

B But after certayne yeares they shal be ioyned togyther, and the kinges doughter of ỹ south shall come to the kynge of the North, for to make frendshyp, but she shall not obtayne the power of that arme, neither shall she be hable to endure thorowe his myght: but she, and suche as brought her (yea and he that begat her, & cõforted her for his tyme) shall be delyuered up. Out of the braunches of her rote, there shal one stãd up in his stede whiche with power of armes shal go thorow the kinges land of the north, and handle him accordynge to his strength.

As for their Idols and princes, with their costly Jewelles of golde and sylver, he shall cary them awaye captyues into Egypte, & he shal preuayle agaynste the kinge of the north certayne yeares. And when he is come in to ỹ kynges realme of the south, he shall be fayne to turne agayne in to his owne lande. Wherfore his sonnes shall be displeased, and shall gather togyther a myghtye greate hoost of people: and one of them shall come, and go thorowe like a water floude then shall he returne, and go forth with defyinge & bostinge unto his owne lande.

C Then the kynge of the south shal be angry and shall come forth to fyghte agaynste the kynge of the northe, yea shall bringe a great multytude of people togyther, and a greate heape shal be gyuen into his hand, these shall he cary awaye with greate pryde, for so moch as he hath cast downe so many thousandes. Neuertheles he shall not preuayle. For the kinge of the northe shall gather (of the newe) a greater heap of people thẽ afore, and come forth (after a certayne time and yeares) with a myghtye hoost and exceadyng greate good.

At the same tyme there shall many stande up agaynst the kinge of the south, so that the wicked chyldren of thy people also shall exalte them selues (to fulfyll the vision) & then fall.

So the kynge of the north shall come to laye sege, and to take the stronge fensed cyties: And the power of them of the southe shall not be hable to abyde him, and the best men of the people shall not be so strong as to resist him. Shortly, when he commeth, he shal handle him as he lyst, and no man shall be so hardy as to stande agaynst him. He shal stande in the pleasaunt countrey, which thorow him shall be destroyed. He shal set his face with al his power to optayne his kyngdome, and to be like it. Yea that shall he do, and gyue him unto the doughters amonges women, to destroye him. But he shall fayle, neither shal he optayne his purpose.

D After this shall he set his face unto the yles, and take many of them. A prince shal stop him, to do him a shame, besyde the confusyon that els shall come unto him. Thus shall he turne agayne to his owne land, stomble and fall, and be no more founde: so he that came upon him, and dyd him vyolence, shall stande in his place, and haue a pleasaunt kingdome: and after few dayes he shal be destroyed, and that neither in wrath, ne in battayle. In his stede there shall aryse a vyle person, not holden worthye of a kynges dignitie: this shall come in craftelye, and obteyne the kyngedome with fayre wordes: he shall fyghte agaynste the armes of the myghtye (and destroye them) yea, and against the prynce of the couenaunt.

So after that he hath takẽ truce with him, he shal handle disceytfully: that he maye get up, and ouercome him with a small flocke, and so with craftynesse to get him to the fattest place of the lande, and to deale otherwyse then eyther his fathers or graundfathers did. For he shal destroye the thinge that they robbed and spoyled, yea and all their substaunce, ymagenynge thoughtes agaynste the strong holde, and that for a tyme. His power and herte shal be styrred up with a great armye agaynst the kinges of the south, wherethorowe the kynge of the south shall be moued then unto batell with a great and myghtye hoste also. Neuerthelesse he shall not be hable to stande, for they shal conspyre against him. Yea, they that eate of his meat shal hurte him, so that his hoste shal fall, and manye be slayne downe.

E These two kynges shal be minded to do mischief, and talke of disceyte at one table / but they shal not prospere: for why? the ende shal not come yet, unto the time appoynted. Then shal he go home againe in to his own land wt great good, and set his herte against the holy couenaunt, he shall be busy against it, and thẽ returne home. At the tyme appoynted he shal come agayne, and go towarde the south. So shall it happen otherwise then at the first: yet ones agayn. And why? the shyppes of Cithim shall come upon him, that he may be smytten and turne agayne, that he may take indignacion agaynst the couenaunt of holynesse, to meddle againste it. Yea he shall tourne hym, and drawe suche unto him as leaue the holye couenaunt.

F He shall set myghtye men to unhalowe the Sanctuarye of strengthe, to put downe the daylye offerynge, and to set up the abhominable desolacion, and suche as breake the couenaunte shall he flattre with fayre wordes. But the people that wyll knowe theyr God, shall haue the ouer hande and prospere. Those also that haue understandyng amongest the people, shal enfourme the multitude: and for a longe season they shall be persecuted with swerde, with fyre, with captiuitie, and with the takyng awaye of theyr goodes. Nowe when they fall, they shall be sette up with a lytle helpe, but many shall cleue unto them faynedly.

Yea some of those which haue understãding shal be persecuted also, that they may be tried, purified and clensed, tyll the time be oute, for there is yet an other time appointed. The kynge shal doo what him lyst, he shall exalte and magnifye him self aboue al, that is God. Yea he shall speake marueylous thynges agaynst the God of all goddes, wherin he shall prospere, so longe tyl the wrath be fulfylled, for the conclusion is deuised alredye. He shal not regarde the God of his fathers, but his luste shall be upon women: Yea he shall not care for any God, for he shall magnifye hym selfe aboue all. In his place shall he worshyp the myghty ydols: and the God whome his fathers knewe not, shal he honour with gold and syluer, with precyous stones, and pleasaunt iewels.

Apoca.xv.a

G This shall he doo, sekynge helpe and succour at the myghtye ydols and straunge goddes. Suche as wyl receyue him, and take him for God, he shall gyue them greate worshyp and power: yea and make them lordes of the multitude, and gyue them the lande with rewardes.

In the latter tyme shall the kynge of the south stryue with him, and the kynge of the Northe in lyke maner shall come agaynste him with charrettes, horsemen, and with a great many of shyppes. He shal come in to the landes, destroye and go thorow: he shal entre also in to the fayre pleasaunt land. Many cyties and countreys shal decaye, except Edom, Moab, and the best of the children of Ammon whiche shall escape from his hande. He shall stretche forth his handes upon the countreys, and the lande of Egypt shall not escape hym. For thorow his going in, he shal haue dominion ouer the treasures of syluer and golde, & ouer all the precious iewels of Egypte, Lybia, and Ethiopia.

Neuerthelesse the tydynges out of the East and the North shall trouble him, for the whiche cause he shal goo forth to destroye & curse a greate multitude. The tentes of his palace shal be pytched betwixt the two sees, upõ the hylle of the noble Sanctuarye, for he shall come to the ende of it, and then shall no man helpe him.

Apoca.xi.c Ap.xix.d, xx.c

¶ He prophecyeth the resurrection of the deed. The darcknesse of the prophecye of Daniel.

CAPI. XII.

A Apoca.xij.c The tyme will come also that the great prince Michael, whiche standeth on thy people spoc that arple vp, for there shal come a time of trouble, such as neuer was sis there began to be any people, vnto that same tyme. Then shal thy people be deliuered, yea all those that be founde written in the boke.

Mat.xxiiij.b Many of them that slepe in the dust of the erth Job.v.c shal awake, some to the euerlasting lyfe, some 1.Cozint.xv.c to perpetuall shame and reproze. The wyse (suche as haue taught other) shall glyster as Math.xiij.c the shynyng of heuen/and those that haue instruct the multitude vnto godlynesse, shall be as the sterres, world without ende.

B And thou, O Daniel, shut vp these wordes, and seale the boke til the last time. Many shal go about here and there, and then shal knowlege increase. So I Daniel lokes, and behold, there stode other two: one vpon this shore of the water, the other vpo ponder syde. And one of them said vnto him, which was clothed in linen, and stode aboue vpō the waters of the floode: Howe longe shall it be to the ende of thy se wonderous workes?

Apoca.x.a C Then herd I the man with the line clothes which stode aboue vpon the waters of the flood Apo.xij.c.xiij.c when he held vp his right and left hand vnto heuen, & sware by him which liueth for euer: that it shall tary for a time, two times & half a time: when the power of the holy people is clene scatred abrode, then shall all these thinges be fulfylled.

D I herd it wel, but I vnderstode it not. Then sayd I: O my Lord, what shal happen after that? He answered: Go thy way Daniel, for these wordes shal be closed vp, and sealed, til the last time: and many shal be purified, clensed, and tried. But the vngodly shal liue wickedly, and those wicked (as many of them as Wath.xiij.b they be) shall haue no vnderstandinge. As for suche as haue vnderstanding, they shal regarde it. And from that tyme forth that the daylye offeringe shall be put vowne, and the abhominable desolation set vp, there shall be a thousande, two hundreth, and.xc. dayes. O well is him that wayteth, and commeth to the. Thyze hundred, and.xxxv. dayes. Goo thou thy waye now tyl it be ended, take thy rest, and byde in thy lot, tyll the dayes haue an ende.

¶ The ende of the prophecye of Daniel.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE OSEAS.

¶ The tyme wherin Oseas prophecyed. Oseas by takynge an harlotte to his wyfe, signifyeth the Idolatrye of the people. The destruction of the offsprynge of Jehu, and of the Israelites is prophecyed.

CAPI. I.

THis is the word of the Lorde, that came vnto Oseas the sonne of Beery i the dates of Oseas, Joathā, Achas, and Ezechias kynge of Juda: and in the time of Jeroboam the son of Joas kynge of Israell.

E First when the Lord spake vnto Oseas, he sayd vnto him: Go thy waye, take an harlot to thy wyfe, and get chyldren by her: for the land hath committed great hoordom against the Lorde. So he went, and toke Gomer the doughter of Deblaim: which conceyued and brought forth a sonne. And the Lorde sayd vnto him: cal his name Jesrael, for I wil shortly auenge the bloode of Jesrael vpon the house of Jehu, and wyll brynge the kyngdome of the house of Israel to an ende. Then wil I breake the bowe of Israel in the valey of Jesrael.

She conceyued yet agayne, and bare a dougter. And he sayde vnto him: Call her name Lorubamah (that is, not optaynynge mercye) for I wyll haue no pitie vpon the house of Israell, but forget them, and put them clene out of remembraunce. Neuertheles, I wyll haue mercy vpon the house of Juda, and wyll saue theym, euen thorowe the Lorde their God. But I wil not helpe them thorowe anye bowe, swerde, batell, horses or horsemen.

Now when she had weaned Lorubamah, she conceyued againe, and bare a sonne. Then D sayd he: call his name. Lo amy. For wyze ye are not my people, therfore wyll not I be youres. And thoughe the nombre of the chyldren of Israell be as the sande of the see, whi che can neither be measured ne tolde: yet in the place, where it is sayde vnto them, ye be not my people: euē there shal it be thus reported of them: they be the chyldrē of the lyuinge God. Then shal the children of Juda, and the chyldren of Israell be gathered togyther a gayne and chose them selues one heed, & then departe out of the land: for great shal be the daye of Jesrael.

¶ The people is called vnto repentaunce.

CAPI. II.

TEll your brethren, that they are my people: and youre systeren, that they haue obteyned mercy. As for your mother, ye shall chyde with her, and reproue her: for she is not my wyfe, neyther am I her husbande, tyll she put away her hoordome out of my sight, and her aduoutrye from her brestes. Yf no, I shal strip her naked, and set her euen as she came in to the worlde: yea, I shal lay her wast, and make her lyke a wyldernesse, and slee her for thyrste. I shall haue no pitie also vpon her children, for they be the children of fornication.

2 Their mother hathe broken her wedlocke, and she that bare them, is come to confusion. For she sayde, I wyll goo after my louers, that geue me my water and my breed, my wolle and flaxe, my oyle and my drynke. But I wyll hedge her waye with thornes, and stoppe it, that she shall not fynde her fote-steppes: and thoughe she runne after her louers, yet shall she not get them: she shal seke them, but not fynde them. Then shall she say wel, I wyll goo tourne agayne to my fyrste husbande, for at that tyme was I better at ease, then nowe. But this wolde she knowe, where as I yet gaue her corne, wyne, oyle, siluer and golde, whiche she hath hanged vpon Baal.

Wherefore nowe wyll I go take my corne and wyne agayne in their season, and set agayne my wolle and my flaxe whiche I gaue her to couer her shame. And now wyll I discouer her foolysshenesse, euen in the syght of her louers, and no man shall delyuer her oute of my handes. Moreouer, I wyll take away all her myrth, her holy dayes, her newe moones, her Sabothes, and all her solemne feastes. I wyll destroye her vynyardes and figge trees, thoughe she saythe: lo, here are my rewardes that my louers haue gyuen me. I wil make it a wodde, and the wylde beestes shall eate it vp: I wyll punysshe her also for the dayes of Baal, wherin she censed him, decked him with her eare rynges and cheynes: when she folowed her louers, and forgat me, sayth the Lorde.

C Wherefore beholde, I wyl call her agayne, bynge her in to a wyldernesse, and speake frendlye vnto her: there wyll I gyue her her vynyardes agayne: yea, and the valleye of Achor also to shewe her hope and comforte. Then shall she synge there, as in the tyme of her youthe, and lyke as in the daye when she came out of the land of Egypt.

Then (sayth the Lorde) she shall saye vnto me: O my husbande, and shall call me no more Baal: for I wyll take awaye those names of Baal from her mouth/ yea she shal neuer remembre their names any more. Then wyll I make a couenaunte with them, with the wild beastes, with the foules of the ayre, and with euery thyng that creepeth vpon the earthe.

D As for bowe, swerde and battayle, I will destroye suche oute of the lande, and wyll make them to slepe safely. Thus wyll I marye the vnto myne owne selfe for euer more: yea, euen to my selfe wyll I marye the, in ryghtousnesse, in equitie, in louynge kyndenesse and mercye. In fayth also wyll I marye the vnto my selfe, and thou shalte knowe the Lorde. At the same tyme wyll I shewe my selfe frendly and gracyous vnto the heuens, sayth the Lorde; and the heuens shall helpe the earth, and the earth shal helpe the corne, wyne and oyle. And they shall helpe Jesrael. I wyll sowe them vpon earthe, for a seed to myne owne selfe, and wyll haue mercye vpon her that was without mercye. And to them Roman.ix.c which were not my people, I wyll saye: 1.Peter.ii.b thou arte my people. And he shall saye: thou art my God.

¶ Of the loue of God towarde the people.

CAPI. III.

THen sayd the Lorde to me: Go yet thy waye, and wow an aduoutrous woma whome thy neyghbour loueth, as the Lorde doth the chyldren of Israel: how be it they haue respecte to straunge goddes, and loue the wyne cannes. So I gat her for. xv. syluerlynges, and for an Homer and an half of barleye, and sayde vnto her: thou shalte byde with me a long season, but se that thou playest not the harlot, and loke thou medle with none other ma, and then wil I kepe my selfe for the.

Thus the chyldre of Israel shal sye a great B whyle without kyng and prynce, without offering and aulter, without preest and true lacosh. But afterwarde shal the chyldren of Israel conuert, and seke the Lord their God, and Ezec. xxxiij.d Dauid their kynge: and in the latter dayes they shall worshyp the Lorde, and his louing kyndnesse.

¶ A complaynte against the people and the preestes of Israel.

CAPI. IIII.

HEare the worde of the Lorde, O ye chyldren of Israell: For the Lorde muste punysshe them that dwell in the lande. And why? There is no faythfulnesse, there is no mercye, there is no knowlege of God in the lande: but swearynge, lyenge, manslaughter, thefte, and aduoutrye, haue gotten the ouer hande, and one bloudgyltynesse folowethe an other. Therfore shall the lande be in a miserable case, and all thy that dwel there in, shall mourne. The beastes in the felde, the foules in the ayre, and the fysshes in the see shall dye. Yet is there none that wyll chasten nor reproue an other. The preestes whiche shoulde refoureme other men, are become lyke the people.

Therfore stomblest thou in the daye tyme B and the Prophet with the in the night. I wil Daniel.iij.c bynge thy mother to silence/ and why? my Esay.v.b. people perysshe, because they haue no know- Malach.ib Exod.xix.c

lege. Seinge then that thou hast refused vnderstandynge, therfore wyl I refuse the also:
so that thou shalt no more be my preest. And for so moche as thou hast forgotten the lawe of thy God, I wyll also forget thy children.
The more they increased in the multytude,
the more they synned agaynste me, therefore wyll I chaunge theyr honoure in to shame.
They eate vp the synnes of my people, and courage them in theyr wyckednelle. Thus the preest is become lyke the people. Wherfore I wyll punyshe them for theyr wycked wayes, and rewarde them accordyng to their owne ymagynacions. They shall eate, and not haue ynoughe: They haue vsed hooredome, therfore shall they not prospere: and why? they haue forsaken the Lorde, and not regarded him.

Horedome, wyne, and dronkennelle take the herte awaye. My people aske counsell at their stockes, their staffe must tell them. For an hoorysshe mynde hath discoyed them, so that they commyt fornication agaynste theyr
God. They make sacrifices vpon the hye mos-taynes, and burne their incense vpon the hylles, yea amonges the okes, greues and bus-shes, for there are good shadowes. Therfore youre doughters are become harlottes, and youre spouses haue broken their wedlocke, I wyll not punyshe youre doughters for besynge defyled, and youre hyres that became hoores: seinge the fathers them selues haue medled with harlottes, and offered with vnchast-tes: but the people that wil not vnderstande must be punyshed.

D Though thou Israel arte disposed to play
the harlot, yet shouldest not thou haue offended, O Juda: thou shouldest not haue runne
to Galgala, nor haue gone vp to Bethauen, ne haue sworne, the Lorde lyueth. For Israel is gone backe lyke a wanton cowe. The Lorde therfore shall make her fede as the lambe that goeth astraye. And where as Ephraim is become partaker of idolles / well let him goo. Their dronkennelle haue put the backe, and brought them to hoorsome. Their rulers loue rewardes, bringe (saye they) to their owne shame. A wynde shall take holde of their fethers, and they shall be confounded
in their offeringes.

¶ Agaynst the preestes and rulers of Israel. The helpe of man can do nothynge agaynst God.

CAPI. V.

A Oye preestes: heare this, take hede, O
thou houshold of Israel: gyue eare, O thou kyngly house: for this punishmēt
wil come vpon you that are becom a snare vn to Mizphah, and a spred net vnto the mount of Thabor. They kyll sacrifices by heapes, to begyle the people therwith: therfore wyll I punish them al. I know Ephraim wel inough and Israell is not hyd fro me: for Ephraim is become an harlot, & Israel is defiled. They are not mynded to turne vnto their God, for they haue an hoorish herte, so that they can not knowe the Lorde.

But the pryde of Israell wyll be rewarded B
him in his face: yea both Israel and Epha- Osee.
im shall fall for their wickednelle, and Juda with them also. They shall come with theyr Jeremie shepe and bullockes to seke the Lorde, but Ezech.
they shall not fynde him, for he is gone from them. As for the Lorde, they haue refused him and brought vp bastarde children: a moneth therfore shall deuour them, with their porc-ons. Blowe with the trawmes at Gabaa, & with the trompet in Ramah, crye oute at Bethauen vpon the backelyde of Ben Jamin.
In the tyme of the plage shall Ephraim be layde waste, therfore byd I faythfully warne the tribes of Israel. Yet are the princes of Ju da become like them that remoue the landemarkes, therfore wil I poure out my wrathe
vpon them lyke water.

Ephraim is oppressed, & can haue no right C
of the lawe: for why? they folowe the doctrines of men. Therfore wyll I be to Epha-im as a moth, and to the house of Juda as a caterpyller.

When Ephraim sawe his sycknelle, and Ju D da his disease: Ephraim went vnto Assur, & Osee.
sent vnto king Jareb, yet could not he helpe
you, nor ease you of youre payne. I am vnto Ephraim as a lyon, and as a lyons whelpe to the house of Juda. Euen I wyll spoyle them and goo my waye. I wyll take them with me and no man shall rescue them. I wyll go, and returne to my place, tyll they waxe sayne,
and seke me.

¶ Affliction causeth a man to returne to God. The wyckednesse of the preistes.

CAPI. VI.

IN theyr aduersitie they shall seke me, and g saye: come lette vs tourne agayne to the Lorde: for he hath smitten vs, and he shal Jsaie.
heale vs: he hath wounded vs, and he shall bynde vs vp agayne: after two dayes shal he quicken vs, in the thyrde daye he shall rayse Luce.
vs vp, so that we shall lyue in his syght. Then h
shal we haue vnderstandynge, and endeuour
our selues to knowe the Lorde. He shall goo forthe as the spryngе of the daye, and come vnto vs as the euenyng and mornynge rayne
vpon the erth.

O Ephraim, what shall I do vnto the? O i Juda how shall I entreate the? seinge youre
loue is like a morning cloude, and like a dewe that goeth early awaye. Therfore haue I cut downe the Prophetes, and let them be slayne
for my wordes sake: so that thy punishment shall come to light.

For I haue pleasure in louyng kyndnelle, & k
not in offeryng: yea in the knowlege of God
more then in burntsacrifice. But euen like as Osee.
Adam did, so haue they broken my couenaunt and set me at nought. Galaad is a city of wic ked wers, of malicious people & bloudschedders. The multytude of the preestes is lyke an hepe of theues, murtherers, and bloudthurs-tye

for they haue wrought abhominacion. Hor-ryble thynges haue I sene in the house of Is rael, there playeth Ephraim the harlot, and Israell is defyled: but Juda shall haue an harueste for him selfe, when I returne the cap
tiuite of my people.

¶ Of the vyces and wantonnelle of the people.

CAPI. VII.

A WHen I vndertake to make Israel hole,
then the vngratiousnelle of Ephraim,
and the wyckednelle of Samaria commeth to lyghte: then goo they aboute with lyes, at home they be theues, and without they fall to robbynge. They consydre not in their hertes that I remembre all their wyc-kednelle. They goo aboute with theyr owne inuencions, but I se them well ynoughe.
They make the kynge and the Pynces to haue pleasure in their wyckednelle and lyes.
B All these burne in aduoutrye, as it were an ouen that the baker heateth, when he hathe
lefte kneadynge, tyll the dowe be leuended.
Euen so goeth it this daye with oure kynges
and Pynces, for they begynne to be wodde dronken thorowe wyne: they vse familiaritie with suche as discoyne them. They with the ymagination of theyr herte are lyke an ouen, theyr slepe is all the nyghte lyke the slepe of a baker, in the mornyng is he as hote
as the flame of fyre: they are all togyther as hote as an ouen.

C They haue deuoured their owne Judges,
all theyr kynges are fallen, yet is there none of them that calleth vpon me. Therfore must Ephraim be mixte amonge the Heathen. Ephraim is become lyke a cake, that no man tourneth: Straungers haue deuoured his strengthe, yet he regardeth it not: he waxeth full of greye heeres, yet wyll he not knowe
it: and the pryde of Israell is cast downe
before theyr face, yet wyll they not tourne to the Lorde theyr God, nor seke him for all this.

Ephraim is lyke a doue that is begyled and hath no herte. Nowe call they vpon the Egyptians, nowe goo they to the Assirians:
But whyle they be goynge here and there, I shall spreade my nette ouer them, and drawe them downe as the foules of the ayre: and accordynge as they haue ben warned, so wyl
I punysh them. Wo be vnto them, for they haue forsaken me.

D They must be destroyed, for they haue set me at nought. I am he that haue redemed them, and yet they dissemble with me. They call not vpon me with their hertes, but lye houlyng vpon theyr beddes. Where as they come togyther, it is but for meate and dyncke, and me wyll they not obeye. I haue taught them and defended their arme, yet do they ima-gyn mischefe agaynste me, they tourne them selues, but not ryghte, and are become as a broken bowe. Their pynces shall be slayne with the swerde, for the malyce of their tunges, suche blasphemyes haue they learned in the lande of Egypte.

¶ The destruction of Juda and Israel, because of theyr Idolatrye.

CAPI. VIII.

SEt the horne to thy mouthe, and blowe:
get the (swyftly (as an Egle) vnto the house of the Lorde: for they haue broken A my couenaunt, and transgressed my lawe. Israel can saye vnto me: thou art my God, we Deute. xxvi.
know the, but he hath refused the thyng that is good, therfore shall the enemy folowe hyȝ
him. They haue ordeyned kynges, but not tho row me: they haue made pynces, and I must not knowe of it. Of their syluer & golde haue 3. Regyllis they made them ymages, to bring them selues to destruction.

Thy calfe, O Samaria, shall be taken a- B
waye, for my wrothfull indignacion is gone forth agaynst the. Howe longe wyll it be, or they can be cleansed? For the calfe came from Israel, the workeman made it, therfore can it be no God, but euen to a spyders webbe shall the calfe of Samaria be tourned. They haue sowne wynde, therfore shall they repe a storme.

They seede shall beare no corne, there C
shall no mele be made of theyr encrease: thoughe they repe, yet shal straungers deuour it vp. Israel shall perish, the Gentyles shall encreate him as a foule vessell. Hence they went vp to the Assyrians, they are become lyke a wylde
asse in the wyldernesse.

Ephraim gyueth rewardes to get louers, C therfore are they scattered amonge the Heathen, there wyl I gather them vp. They shal soone be weryed of the burthen of kynges and pynces. Ephraim hathe manye aulters to doo wyckednelle, therfore shall the aulters tourne to his synne. Thoughe I shewe them my lawe neuer so mothe, they counte it but straunge doctryne. Where as they doo sacri-fyce, offeryng the fleshe, and eatynge it:
the Lorde wyll haue no pleasure therin: but D
wyll remembre their wyckednelle, and pu-nyshe theyr synnes. Israell tourneth agayne in to Egypte, they haue forgotten him that made them, they buylde churches, and Juda maketh many stronge cityes: therfore will I sende a fyre in to theyr cityes, and it shal consume their places.

¶ Of the hungre and captyuytye of Israel.

CAPI. IX.

DO not thou tryumphe, O Israel, make A
no boastynge more then the Heathen,
for thou hast commytted aduoutrye a- Isaie. lxi.
gaynste thy God: thy straunge reward was hast
thou loued, more then all the corne flores.
Therfore shall they no more emoye the corne flores and wine presses, and their swete wine shall fayle them. They wyll not dwell in the Lordes lande, but Ephraim tourneth agayne

into Egypte, and eateth vncleane thynges amonge the Assyrians. They poure oute no wyne for a dyrnke offerynge vnto the Lorde, neyther gyue they hym their slayne offerynges: but they be vnto me as mourners meates, wherin all they that eate them are defiled. For the breed that they haue suche lust vnto, shall not come in to the house of the Lorde. What wyl ye do then in the solemne dayes, and in the feaste of the Lorde? Loo, they shall get them away for the destruction, Egypte shall receyue theym, and Noph shall bury them.

The nettles shall ouergrowe their pleasaunt goodes, and burres shal be in theyr tabernacles. Be ye sure (O Israel) the tyme of visitacion is come, the dayes of recompensynge are at hande. As for the Prophete, ye holde him for a foole: and him that is ryche in the spirete for a madde man: so greate is youre wyckednelle and malyce. Ephraim hathe made hym selfe a watche man of my God, a Prophete that is become a snare to wo turte in euery streete, and abhomination in the house of his God. They be gone to farre, and haue destroyed them selues, lyke as they did afore time at Gabaa. Therfore their wickednelle shall be remembred, and their synnes punyshed.

I founde Israell lyke grapes in the wyldernelle, and sawe theyr fathers as the fyrste fygges in the top of the fygge tree, but they are gone to Baal Peor, and runne awaye fro me to that shametull ydoll, and are become as abhomynable as their louers. Ephraim fleeth lyke a bryde, so shall theyr glorye also. In so moche that they shall neyther begette, conceyue ne beare chyldren. And though they bringe vp any, yet wyll I make them childelelle among men. Yea wo shal come to them, when I departe frō thē. Ephraim (as me thinke) is planted in welthinelle, lyke as Tyrus, but now must the bringe her owne chyldren forth to the manslear.

O Lorde thou shalt gyue them/what shalt thou gyue them? Gyue them an vnfrutefull wombe, and drye brestes. All their wickednes is come at Galgal, there wo I abhorre them. For the vngraciousnelle of their owne inuentions, I will dryue them oute of my house. I will loue them no more, for all their princes are vnfaythfull. Ephraim is hewen downe, their rote is dryed vp, so that they shal bryng no more frute: yea, and though they bringe forth any, yet wil I slee euen the best beloued frute of their body. My God shall cast them awaye, for they haue not ben obedient vnto hym, therfore shall they goo astraye amonge the Heathen.

¶ Agaynste Israel and his Idols.

CAPI. X.

ISrael was a goodly vyne, but he bathe brought forth vnprofitable frute: yea the more frute he had, ỹ mo aulters he made: the more good I dyd to their lande, the more frent shyp shewed they vnto their ymages. Their herte is deuyded, therfore wyll they be destroyed. The Lorde shall breake downe their ymages, he shall destroye their aulters. Then shall they saye: we haue no kynge: for why? we haue not feared the Lorde. And what shal then the kyng do to vs? They common togither, and sweare vayne othes: they be cōfederate togither, therfore groweth their punyshment, as the wedes in the forowes of the lande.

They that dwell in Samaria haue worshypped the calfe of Bethauen: therfore shal the people mourne ouer them: yea, and the preestes also that in theyr welthynelle reioyced with theym: and why? It shall passe awaye from them. It shall be brought to the Assyrians for a present vnto kynge Jareb. Ephraim shall receyue full punyshment: Israel shell be confounded for his owne ymaginacions / Samaria with his kynge shall vanyth awaye as the scomme in the water. The hye places of Auen, where Israel dyd synne, shal be caste downe: thystles and thornes shall grow vpon their aulters. Then shall they say to the mountaynes, couer vs/and to the hylles, fall vpon vs.

O Israel, thou hast synned as Gaba dyd afore tyme, where they remayned: shold not the battayle then come vpon the wycked children as well as vpon the Gabaonites? I wil chasten them, euen after myne owne desyre, the people shall be gathered togyther ouer them, when I punyshe them for their greate wyckednelle.

Ephraim was vnto me, as a cowe that is vsed to go to plow, therfore I loued him, and fell vpon his fayre necke. I dyde Ephraim, Juda plowed, and Jacob played the husbandman: that they myght sowe vnto ryghtousnelle, and repe the frutes of well doing: that they myght plowe vp their freshe lande, and seke the Lorde, tyll he came, and learned them ryghteousnelle.

But nowe they haue plowed them wyckednelle, therfore shall they repe synne, and eate the frute of lyes. Seinge thou puttest thy confidence in thyne owne wayes, and leanest to the multitude of thy worthyes: there shall growe a sedition amonges thy people. All thy stronge cityes shall be layde waste, euen as Salmana was destroyed with his symplytes, thosowe vpon that was auenged of Arbell in the daye of battayle, where the mother perysshed with her chyldren. Euen so shall it goo with you (O Bethel) bycause of your malicious wickednelle. Lyke as the morninge goeth awaye, so shall the kynge of Israel passe.

¶ Agaynste the vnkyndenelle of Israel.

CAPI. XI.

WHen Israel was yong, I loued him/and called him my sonne out of the lande of Egypt. But the more they were called, the more they went backe, offeryng vnto Idols and censynge Images: I learned Ephraim to go, and bare them in myne armes, but they regarded not me, that wolde haue holped them. I led them with cordes of frendshyp, and with bandes of loue. I was euē he, that layed the pocke vpon their neckes. I gaue them their fodder my selfe, that they shulde not go agayne into Egypte. And nowe is Assur their kinge: For they wolde not turne vnto me. Therfore shall the sweardе begynne in their cities, the sloze that they haue layed vp, shall be destroyed and eaten: and that be cause of their owne ymaginacions. My people hath no lust to turne vnto me, their prophetes lay the pocke vpon ehē, but they ease them not of their burthen.

What great thynges haue I gyuen the, O Ephraim? how faythfully haue I defended the, O Israel? haue I dealt with the as with Adama: or haue I intreated the lyke Seboim? Nay: my hert is otherwyse mynded. Yea my mercy is so feruent: therfore haue I not turned me to destroye Ephraim in my worthiul displeasure. For I am God and no man, I am euen that holy one in the myddest of the, though I come not within the cytye.

The Lorde rozeth lyke a lyon, that they may folowe him: yea as a lyon rozeth he ỹ they may be afrayde lyke the children of the sea: that they maye be scattered awaye from Egypt, as men scatre byrdes: and frayed awaye (as doues vse to be) from the Assyrians land: and that because I wolde haue them tary at home, sayeth the Lorde. But Ephraim goth about me with lyes, and the house of Israel dissembleth. Only Juda yoloeth him with God, and with the true holy cyynges.

¶ Agaynst the vayne trust of the people.

CAPI. XII.

EPhraim kepeth the ayre, and foloweth after the east wynde: he is euer increasing lyes and destruction. They confederate with the Assirians, their oyle is caryed into Egypt. The Lorde hath a courte to holde w Juda, and wyll punysh Jacob: After their owne wayes accordyng to theyr owne inuencions, shal he recō pēse thē. He toke his brother by the hele, when he was yet in his mothers wombe: & in his strength he wrestled with God. He stroue with the angel, and gat the victorye: so that he prayed and desyred hym. He found him at Bethel, and there he talked with vs.

Yea the Lorde God of hoostes, euen the Lorde him selfe remembreth hym: Therfore turne to thy God, kepe mercy and equite, and hope styll in thy God. But the marchaunt hath a false weight in his hande, he hath a pleasure to occupy extorcion. Ephraim thynketh thus Tush, I am rych, I haue goos ynough: In all my workes shall not one faut be founde, that I haue offended. Yet am I the Lorde thy God, euen as whē I brought the out of the lande of Egypt, and set the in thy tentes, and as in the highe feaste dayes.

I haue spoken thorow the Prophetes, and shewed dyuerse visions, and declared my selfe by the mynystracion of the prophetes. But at Galaad is the abhomynacion, they are fallen to vanitie. At Galgall they haue slayne oxen: and as many heapes of stones as they had in their lande forowes, so many aulters haue they made. Jacob fled into the lande of Syria, and Israel serued for a wyfe, and for a wyfe he kept shepe.

By a Prophete the Lorde brought theym out of Egypte, and by a Prophet he preserued them. But Ephraim hath prouoked him to displeasure thorow his abhomynacyōs, therfore shall his bloud be poured vpon him selfe and the Lorde his God shall rewarde hym his blasphemyes.

¶ Of the abhominacyons of Israel.

CAPI. XIII.

THe abhomination of Ephraim is come also into Israel. He is gone backe to Baal, therfore muste he dye. And nowe they synne more and more: of theyr siluer they make the molte Images, lyke the Idolles of the Heithen, and yet all is nothynge but the worke of the craftesman. Notwithstandyng they preache of the same: who so wyll kysse the calues, offereth to men. Therfore they shal be as the morynge cloude, and as the dewe that early passeth awaye, and lyke as the dust that the winde taketh away from the floure, and as smoke that goeth out of the chymney.

I am the Lorde thy God, whiche brought the out of the land of Egypt: that thou shuldest knowe no God but me onely: and that thou shuldest haue no Sauioure but onely me. I toke diligent hede of the in the wyldernelle that drye lande. But when they were wel fed and had ynough, they waxed proude and forgat me. Therfore wyl I be vnto them as a lyon, and as a Leopard in the waye to the Assirians. I wyll come vpon them as a she beer, that is robbed of her whelpes, and I wyll breake that stubburne hert of theirs. There wyll I deuoure them as a lyon: yea the wyld beastes shall teare them.

O Israel, thou wilt but destroye thy selfe. In me onely is thy helpe. Where are thy kinges nowe, that shulde helpe the in all thy cities? Yea and thy iudges, of whom thou saidest, gyue me a kynge and Princes? well, I gaue the a kynge in my wrath, and in my displeasure wyll I take him from the agayne. The wyckednelle of Ephraim is bounde togyther, and his synne layed vnder. Therfore shall sorowes come vpon him, as vpon a woman that trauayleth. An vndiscrete sonne is he, for he consydreth not, that he shulde not haue bene hable to haue endured in ỹ tyme of his byrth, had not I rekenyd him from the greaue, and deliuered him from death.

O death, I wyll be thy death: O hell, I wyl be thy stynge. Yee can I se no comforte, [Hebr.xiii.b] [Ezechi.xix.d] for when he is nowe the goodlyest amonge the brethren,the east wynde(euen the wynde of the Lord)shall come downe from the wildernesse,and drye vp his condites,and drinke vp his welles: he shall spoyle the treasure of all pleasaunt vessels.

As for Samaria,they shal be made waste, and why? they are disobedyente vnto their God. They shall perysshe with the swerde; [iiii.Re.xvii.a] their children shall be slayne and their women great with childe shall be rypte vp.

¶ The destruction of Samaria.

CAPI. XIIII.

[A] [Iere.xviii.a] [Ezech.xviii.e] [xxxiii.c] [iii.Re.xii.c] O Israel,turne the nowe,vnto the Lorde thy God,for thou hast taken a greate fal thorow thy wickednes. Take these wordes with you,when ye turne to þ Lorde and saye vnto him: O forgiue vs al our sinnes receyue vs graciouslye,and then wyl we offre the bullockes of our lyppes vnto the. Assur shall be no more oure helper, neither wyll we ryde vpon horses any more. As for the workes of oure handes,we wyll no more call vpon them: For it is thou that arte our God,thou shewist euer mercye vnto the fatherlesse.

[B] O(yf they wolde do this) I shulde heale their sores: yea with all my herte wolde I loue them:so that my wrath shulde clene be turned awaye from them. Yea I wolde be vnto Israel as the dewe,and he shulde growe as the lylye,and his rote shulde breake oute as Lybanus. His braunches shulde sprede out abrode and be as fayre as the olyue tree, [C] and smell as Lybanus. They that dwel vnder his shadowe, shulde come agayne, and growe vp as the corne, and florysshe as the vyne:he shulde haue as good a name, as the wine of Lybanus.

O Ephraim what haue I to do with Idolles any more? I will graciously heare him,& lede him forth. I wyll be vnto the as a grene Fyrre tree,vpō me shalt thou finde thy frute.

[D] Who so is wise,shal vnderstand this:and he that is ryght enstructe,wyll regard it. For the wayes of the Lorde are ryghtous such as be Godly wyll walke
in them: As for the wycked,they wil stomble
therin.

¶ The ende of the prophecye of Oseas.

THE BOKE OF IOEL THE PROPHETE.

¶ A prophecye agaynst the Iewes. He exhorteth the prestes to prayer and fastynge, for the mysery that was commynge at hande.

CAPI. I.

This is the word of the Lorde, that came vnto Ioel the sonne of Phatuel: Heare,O ye elders: ponder this wel all ye that dwell in the land: if euer there happened suche a thinge in youre dayes, or in the dayes of youre fathers. Tell youre children of it,and let them shewe it vnto their chyldren,and so they to certyfye their posteritye therof. Loke what the caterpiller hath left, that hath the greshopper eaten vp: what the greshopper lefte,that hath the locust eaten vp: and what the locust hath left,that hath the blastynge consumed. Wake vp ye drounkardes,and wepe: mourne all ye wynesuppers,because of youre swete wyne,for it shal be taken awaye frome youre mouthe. [B] Yea a myghtye and an innumerable people shall come vp in to my land: these haue teeth like the teeth of lyons,and chaftbones lyke the lyonesses. They shal make my vinyard wast [Deut.xxviii] they shall pyll of the barckes of my fygtrees, stryp them bare,caste them away, & make the braunches whyte.

Make thy mone as a vyrgyn dothe that gyrdeth her self with sack,because of her bridegrome. For the meate and drinckoffryng shal be taken awaye from the house of the Lord: and the prestes the Lordes ministers shall mourne. The felde shall be wasted,the lande shall be in a mysirable case: for the corne shall be destroyed,the swete wyne shal come to confusion,and the oyle vtterlye desolate. The housbande men and the wyne gardeners shal loke pyteously & make lamentaciō for the whete,wyne and barly, and because the haruest vpon the felde is so cleane destroyed. [C] The grape gatherers shall make greate mone,when the vyneyarde and fygtrees be so vtterlye wasted.

Yea all the pomgarnetes,palmetrees, aple trees,and the other trees of the felde shal wyther awaye. Thus the the mery cheare of the chyldren of men, shall come to confusyon.

Gyrde you,and make your mone,O ye prestes: mourne ye mynysters of the aulter go youre waye in,and slepe in sack clothe, O ye [D] officers of my God: for the meate and drink offerynge shall be taken awaye from þ house of youre God. Proclayme a fastynge,cal the congregacion,gather the elders and al the inhabyters of the lande togither into þ house of the Lorde your God,and crye vnto þ Lord alas,alas,for this daye. And why? the daye of the Lorde is at hande,and commeth as a destroyer destroyer

destroyer from the almyghtye. Shal not the meates be taken awaye before oure eyes,the myrth also and ioye from the house of oure God? The seed shal perysh in the ground,the garners shal lye wast,þ floores shalbe broken down,for the corn shal be destroyed. O what a syghinge make the catel? the bullockes are very euell lykinge,because they haue no pasture: and the shepe are famysshed awaye.

O Lorde,to the wyll I crye: for the fyre hath consumed the goodlye pastures of the wyldernesse,and the flame hath brent vp all the trees of the felde, Yea the wylde beastes crye also vnto the: for the water ryuers are dryed vp,and the fyre hath consumed the pastures of the wyldernesse.

¶ He prophecyeth the commynge and crueltye of theyr enemyes. An exhortation to moue them to conuert.

CAPI. II.

[A] Blowe out the trompet in Sion, & crye vpon my holy hyll, that all suche as dwell in the the lande, maye tremble at it: for the day of the Lord commeth,and is hard at hand: a darcke day,a gloomyng day a cloudy day,yea & a stormy day, lyke as þ mornynge spredeth out vpon the hylles: Namely,a great and myghty people: suche as haue not bene sene sens the begynnynge, neither shal be after them for euermore. Before him shall be a consumynge fyre and behynde him a burnynge flame. The lande shall be as a garden of pleasure before him, but behynde him shall it be a very waste wyldernesse, and there is no man,that shall escape him. They are to loke vpon lyke barded horses, & runne lyke horsmen. They skyppe vp vpon the hilles,as it were the sound of charrettes,as the flame of fyre that consumeth the strawe,and as a myghtye people redy to the battel.

[B] The folke shall be afrayed of him,all faces shall be as blacke as a pot. These shall runne lyke gyauntes,and leape ouer þ walles lyke men of warre. Euery man in his goinge shall kepe his araye,and not go out of his path. There shal not one dryue an other, but eche shall kepe his owne way. They shal breake in at the wyndowes,and not be hurt They shal come into the citie,and runne vpō the walles: They shall clyme vp vpon the houses,and styp in at the windowes lyke a thefe The earth shall quake before him, yea the heauens shall be moued: The sonne and Moone shall be darckened and the starres shall withdraw their shyne. The Lord shall shewe his voyce before his host,for his hoste is greate,stronge and myghtye to fulfyll his commaundement. This is that greate and maruelous fearfull daye of the Lorde: And who is hable to abyde it.

[C] Nowe therfore sayeth the Lorde: Turne you vnto me with all youre hertes,with fastynge wepynge and mournynge,rent youre hertes,and not your clothes. Turn you vnto the Lorde your God,for he is gracyous and mercyfull,longe suffringe and of great compassion: and redy to pardon wickednes. Who [Psal.lxxxvi.a] (no doubte)he also shal turne,and forgyue: & [Ionas iii.a] after his chastenynge, he shall let youre increase remayne,for meat and drinckofferynges vnto the Lorde youre God: [Ioel.i.c] [D] Blowe out with þ trompet in Sion,proclayme a fasting, cal the congregacyon,and gather the people togither: warne the cōgregation,and gather the elders,bring the children and suckelynges to gyther. Let the the brydgrome go forthe of his chambre, & the bryde out of her closet. Let the prestes serue the Lorde betwene the porche and the aulter wepinge and sayinge: be fauourable,O Lorde,be fauourable vnto thy people: let not thine heritage be brought to suche confusion,leest the Heithen be lordes therof. Wherfore shulde they saye amonge the Heithen where is nowe their God? [Psal.lxxix.b]

[E] Then shall the Lorde be gelous ouer his lande,and spare his people: yea the Lorde shall answere,and saye vnto his people: Beholde,I wyll sende you corne,wine, & oyle, so that ye shal haue plentye of them: and I wyll no more gyue you ouer to be a reprofe amonges the heithen. Agayne,as for hym of the north,I shall dryue him farre from you: and shut him out in to a dry and waste land his face towarde the east see. and his hindre partes toward the vttermost see. The stynck of hym shall go vp,and hys fylthy corruptiō shal fal vpon him selfe,because he hath dealt so proudely.

Feare not(O land)but be glad and reioice for the Lorde wyl do great thinges. Be not ye afrayed neither(O ye beastes of the felde) for the pastures shall be grene and the trees shal beare their frute: the fygtrees and vine yardes shal gyue their increase.

[F] Be glad then(O ye chyldren of Sion)and reioyce in the Lorde youre God,for he hath gyuen you a teacher of ryghtousnesse: and he shall sende you downe shoures of rayne,early and late in the fyrste moneth: so that the garners shall be full of corne,and the presses [Leuiti.xxvi.a] plenteous in wine and oyle. [Deut.xi.b] And as for the yeres that the greshopper,locuste, blastynge [xxviii.b.] and caterpyller(my greate hooste, whiche I sent amonge you)haue eaten vp, I shall restore thē to you agayne: so that ye shall haue ynough to eate, and be satysfyed: & praise the name of the Lord your God,that so maruelously hath dealte with you.

And my people shal neuer be confounded any more. Ye shal wel knowe, that I am in the myddest of Israel,and that I am youre God yea & þ there is none other, & my people shall no more be brought to confusion.

After this,wil I poure out my spirite vpō [G] all flesshe: and youre sonnes and doughters shall prophecye: youre old men shal dreame dreames,and youre yonge men shall se visions, yea those dayes wyll I power oute my spirite vpon seruauntes and maydes. I wyl shew wonders in heauen aboue, and tokens in the earthe beneth: bloude and fyre, and the vapoure of smoke. The sunne shall be turned turned turned into darckenesse, and the moone in to bloude: before the greate and notable daye of the Lorde come. And the tyme shall come that who so euer calleth on the name of the Lorde, shall be saued. For vpon the mounte Sion and at Jerusalem, there shall be a saluacion, lyke as the Lord hath promysed: yea and amonge the other remnaunt, whom the Lorde shall call.

¶ Of the iudgement of God agaynst the enemyes of his people.

CAPI. III.

A For take hede: in those dayes & at y same tyme when I turne agayne the captyuitie of Juda and Jerusalē: I shal gather all people togither, and bringe theym in the valleye of Josaphat: and there wyll I reason with them: because of my people and heritage of Israel: whome they haue scatered about in the nacions, and parted my land: yea they haue cast lottes for my people the yong mē haue they set in y brodel house, and solde the Damsels for wyne that they myght haue to drincke. B Thou Tirus and Sidon and all ye borders of the Philistines: what haue ye to do w me? Wyl ye defy me? wel, if ye wil nedes defye me, I shal recōpēce you, euen vpon your heade, and that ryghte shortly: for ye haue taken awaye my siluer and golde, my fayre and goodly Jewels, and brought them into your goddes houses. The chyldren also of Juda and Jerusalem haue ye solde vnto that Grekes, that ye myghte brynge them farre frome the borders of their owne countryes.

Beholde therfore, I wyll rayse them out of the place, where ye haue solde them, & will rewarde you euen vpon youre heade. Youre sonnes & your doughters wyl I sel thorowe the handes of the chyldren of Juda, and so they shall gyue them forth to sel, vnto them of Saba, a people of a farre countrey, for the Lorde hym selfe hath sayde it. Cry out these thinges amonge y Gētyles, proclayme warre wake vp the giauntes, let them drawe nygh,

C let them come vp all the lusty warryours of the. Make you swerdes of your plowshares, and speares of youre sycles and sythis. Let the weake man saye: I am stronge. Muster you, and come, al ye Heithen rounde aboute: gather you togyther, there shal the Lord lay al the gyauntes to the grounde. Let the people aryse, and get them to the valley of Josaphat: for there wyll I syt, and iudge all Heithen rounde about. Laye to your sythes, for the haruest is rype, come get you downe, the winepresse is ful, yea the winepresses runne ouer, for their wickednesse is waxen greate.

D In the valley appoynted, there shal be many, many people, for the day of the Lorde is nyghe in the valley appoynted. The sunne & moone shall be darkened, and the starres shal withdrawe their lyght. The Lorde shal rore out of Sion, and crye out of Jerusalem, that the heuens and the earth shal quake withal. But the Lord shalbe a defēce vnto his owne people, & a refuge for the children of Israel. Thus shall ye knowe, that I the Lord your God dwell vpon my holy mount of Sion. Then shal Jerusalem be holy, and there shal no straungers go thorow her any more. Then shall the mountaynes droppe swete wyne, & the hilles shal flowe with mylcke. Al the ryuers of Juda shal haue water ynoughe, and out of the Lordes house there shal flowe a sprynge to watre the broke of Sittim: but Egypte shal be layed waste, and Edom shalbe desolate: because they haue dealte so cruelly with the children of Juda, and shed innocēt bloude in their lande. Agayne, Juda shalbe inhabyted for euermore, and Jerusalem from generacion to generaciō: for I wyll not leaue their bloude vnauenged. And the Lorde shal dwel in Sion.

¶ The ende of the prophecye of Joel.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE AMOS.

¶ The tyme of the prophecye of Amos. The worde of the Lorde agaynst Azah, agaynst Tyre, agaynst Edom, and agaynst the sonnes of Ammon.

CAPI. I.

These are the sermōs that were shewed vnto Amos (whiche was one of the shepherdes at Thecua) vpon Israel, in the tyme of Osiah kinge of Juda, & in the time of Jeroboam the sonne of Joah kinge of Israel, two yere before the earth quake. And he sayd: The Lord shall rore out of Sion, & shewe his voyce frō Jerusalem: so that the pastures of the shepherdes shall be in a miserable case, and the top of Charmel dryed vp. Thus sayth the Lord: for thre and foure wickednesses of Damascus, I will not spare her: because they haue threshed Galaad with yron flailes: But I will sende a fyre into the house of Hazael, y same shal consume the palaces of Benadab. Thus will I breake the barres of Damascus, and rote out the inhabiter from the feld of Auen, and him that holdeth the scepter, out of the plesaūt house so y the people shal be dryuen out of fayre Siria, saith the Lord.

B Thus saith the Lorde: For thre and foure wickednesse of Gaza, I wyll not spare her: because they make the prysoners yet more captyue, and haue driuen them in to the lāde of Edom. Therfore will I sende a fyre in to the walles of Gaza, whiche shall deuoure her houses. I wyll rote out them that dwel at Asdod and him that holdeth the scepter of Ascalon, and stretch out myne hande ouer Accaron, that the remnaunt of the Philistines shal perysshe sayth the Lorde.

C Thus saith the Lorde: for thre and foure wickednesses of the cytye of Tire, I wyl not spare her: because they haue increased the captiuite of the Edomytes, and haue not remembred the brotherly couenaunt. Therfore wyll I sende a fyre in to the walles of Tire that shall consume her palaces. Thus saythe the Lorde: For thre and foure wickednesses of Edom I will not spare him, because he persecuted his brother with the swerde, destroyed his mothers wombe, bare hatred very lōg and so kept indignacion alway by him. Therfore will I sende a fyre into Theman whiche shall deuoure the palaces of Bosra.

D Thus sayth the Lord: For thre and foure wickednesses of the children of Ammon I wil not spare them: because they ryppe vp y women great with chylde in Galaad, to make the borders of theyr landes the wyder. Therfore I wyll kyndle a fyre in the walles of Rabbath, that shall consume her palaces with a greate crye, in the daye of battayle, in tempest and in the day of storm: so that their kinge shall go into captiuitie he and his prynces togither, sayth the Lorde.

¶ Agaynst Moab, Juda, and Israel.

CAPI. II.

A Thus saythe the Lorde: For thre and four wickednesses of Moab, I wil not spare him: because he brente the bones of the king of Edom to asshes. Therfore wyll I sende a fyre into Moab, whiche shall consume the palaces of Carioth: so that Moab shall perisshe with a noyse and the soūde of a shawme. I wil rote oute the iudge from amonge them and slaye all his princes with him sayth the Lorde. B Thus sayth the Lorde: for thre and foure wickednesses of Juda, I wyll not spare him: because he hath caste asyde the lawe of the Lorde, and not kept his commaundementes: for why, they wolde nedes be disceyued with y lyes, that their forefathers folowed. Therfore wyl I send a fyre into Juda, which shall consume the palaces of Jerusalem.

Esay.xv.a

Jerem.xxv.a

C Thus sayth the Lorde: for thre and foure wickednesses of Israel, I wil not spare him: because he hath solde the ryghtous for money, and the poore for shoes. They treade vpon poore mens heades, in the duste of the earth, and croke the wayes of the meke. The sonne and y father go to the harlot, to dishonoure my holye name, they lye besyde euery aulter vpon clothes taken to pledge, and in the house of their goddes they drinke y wine of the oppressed.

Yet destroyed I the Amorite before theym that was as hygh as the Cedre trees, and as stronge as the okes: not withstandynge I destroyed his frute frome aboue and his rote frome vnder.

D Agayne: I brought you oute of the lande of Egypt, and led you .xl. yeares thorowe the wildernesse, that ye myght haue the Amorites lande in possession. I raysed vp Prophetes amonge your chyldren, and abstayners amonge youre yonge men. Is it not so, O ye children of Israel, sayth the Lorde? But ye gaue the abstayners wine to drynke, yea ye commaunded the prophetes, saying, Prophecy not. Beholde, I wil crasshe you in sondre lyke as a wayne crassheth, that is ful of sheaues, so that the swyfte shall not escape, neither the stronge be hable to do any thinge, no, the giaunt shall not saue his owne lyfe. The archer shall not abyde, & the swyfte of fote shall not escape. The horsman shall not saue his lyfe, and he that is as manly of stomacke as a giaunt, shall in that daye be faine to runne his waye naked, sayth the Lorde.

¶ He reproueth the house of Israel of wyckednes.

CAPI. III.

A Heare, what the Lorde speaketh vnto you (O ye chyldren of Israel) namely, vnto all the trybes, whom I broughte out of Egipt and said: you only haue I accepted from all the generacions of the earthe: therfore wyll I vysite you in all youre wickednesses. Maye twayne walke togither excepte they be agreed amōg them selues? Doth a lyon roare in the wod, except he haue a praye?
B Or crieth a lyons whelpe out of his denne, excepte he haue gotten some thinge? Doth a byrde fal in a snare vpon the earth where no fouler is? Taketh a man his snare vp frō the grounde, afore he catch somwhat? Crye they oute Alarum with the trompette in the citie, and the people not afrayde? Commeth there any plage in a citye without it be ŷ Lordes doinge? Nowe doth the Lorde God no maner of thinge, but he telleth his secrete before vnto his seruauntes the prophetes. When a lyon roreth, who will not be afrayed? Seinge then that the Lorde God him selfe speaketh, who wyl not prophecye?

Preache in the palaces at Asdod, and in
C the palaces of the lande of Egypt, and saye: gather you togyther vpon the mountaynes of Samaria, lo shall ye se great murther and vyolent oppressyon amonges them: for why, they regard not the thyng that is right sayth the Lorde, they gather to gyther euell gotten goodes, and laye robbery in their houses.

Therfore thus sayth the Lord God: This D lande shall be troubled and besieged rounde about, thy strength shal be plucked from the, and thy palaces robbed. Thus sayth ŷ Lord, lyke as an herdeman taketh two legges or a pece of an eare out of the lyons mouth: Euen so the chyldren of Israel (that dwell in Samaria, hauynge their couches in the corner, and their beddes at Damascus) shall be pluckte awaye. Heare, and beare recorde iiii. Reg. xvi. xvii. in the house of Jacob (sayth the Lorde God of hoostes) that when I begyn to vyset the wyckednesse of Israel, I wyll vyset the aulters at Bethel also: so that the hornes of ŷ aulter shall be broken of, and fall to the grounde.

As for the winter house and somer house, I will smyte them downe: and the houses of Juery, yea and many other houses shal perysshe, and be destroyed, sayth the Lorde.

¶ Agaynst the gouerners of Samaria.

CAPI. IIII.

A O Heare this worde ye fat kyne, that be vpon the hyll of Samaria: ye that do poore men wronge, and oppresse the nedy: ye that saye to your lordes: bring hither let vs drinke. Therfore ŷ Lord hath sworne
Psal.xxii.b by his holynesse: The dayes shall come vpon you, that ye shall be lyfte vp vpon speares, & your posteritie caryed away in fysshers pannyers. Ye shal get you out at ŷ gappes one after an other, and in Armon shal ye be cast away, sayth the Lorde.

Ye came to Bethel for to worke vngraciousnesse, and haue increased youre synnes at Galgal: ye brought your sacrifices in the mornynge and your tythes vnto the thirde daye. Ye made a thanckofferynge of leuen, ye promy- B sed frewyllofferinges, and proclaymed them. Such luste had ye, O ye children of Israel, saith the Lorde God. Therfore haue I gyuē you ydle teeth in al your cytyes, and scarcenesse of bred in all your places yet wyll ye not turne vnto me sayth the Lord. When there were but thre monethes vnto the haruest, I withhelde the rayne from you: yea I rayned vpon one citie, and not vpon an other one pece of groūd was moistured with raine and the grounde that I rayned not vpō was
dry. Wherfore two, yea thre cytyes came vn- C to one to drincke water: but they were not satisfyed, yet wil ye not turne vnto me, saith the Lorde.

I haue smytte you with drouth & blasting and loke how many orchardes, vineyardes, fygtrees and olyue trees ye had: the caterpyller hathe eaten them vp. But yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, sayth ŷ Lord. Pestilence haue I sent among you, as I dyd in Egypte your yong men haue I slayne with the swerd and caused your horses be taken captyue: I made the stinckinge sauoure of your tentes to come vp in to your nostrels: Yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, saythe the Lorde. Some of you haue I ouerthrowen, as I ouerthrew D
Sodome and Gomorre: so that ye were as a brande pluckt out of the fyre. Yet wil ye not turne vnto me, sayth the Lorde. Therfore thus will I handle the agayne, O Israel, ye euen thus wyll I handle the. Make the ready then to mete thy God, O Israel For lo, he maketh the mountaynes, he ordeyneth the wynde, he sheweth man what he is about to do, he maketh the mornynge and the darknes, he treadeth vpon the hygh places of the earth: the Lorde God of hostes is his name.

¶ A complaynt of the captyuytye of Israel.

CAPI. V.

Heare this worde, O ye house of Israel, and why? I must make this mone for A you: The virgin Israell shall fall, and neuer ryse vp agayne: she shall be cast downe vpon her owne grounde, and no man shall helpe her vp. For thus sayth the Lorde God: Where as there dwelte a thousande in one cytye, there shall be left scarce an hundreth therin: and wher there dwelte an hundreth there shall scarce ten be lefte for the house of Israel.

Neuerthelesse, thus sayth the Lorde vnto the house of Israel: Seke after me, and ye shall lyue but seke not after Bethel. Come B not at Galgal, & go not to Bersaba: for Galgal shall be caryed awaye captyue, and Bethel shall com to nought. Seke the Lorde, ŷ ye maye lyue: lest the house of Joseph be brent with fire and consumed, & lest ther be none to quenche Bethel.

Ye turne the lawe to wormwod, and caste downe ryghtousnesse vnto the grounde. The Lorde maketh the seuen sterres and the Oryons, he tourneth the nyghte in to daye, and of the daye he maketh darckenesse. He calleth the waters of the see, and poureth them oute vpon the playne grounde: the Lorde is his name.

C He rayseth destruction vpon the myghtye people, and bryngeth downe the strong holde: but they owe him euyll wyll that reproueth them openly: and who so telleth them the playne truth, they abhorre him. For so moche then as ye oppresse the poore, and robbe him of his best sustenaunce: therfore where as ye haue buylded houses of square stone, ye shall not dwell in them. Maruelous pleasaunte vyneyardes shall ye plante, but the wyne of them shall ye not drynke: and why? as for the multitude of youre wyckednesses, and youre stoute synnes, I knowe them ryghte well. Enemyes are ye of the ryghtous, ye take rewardes, ye oppresse the poore in iudgemente. Therfore the wyse muste nowe be fayne to holde his tonge, so wycked a tyme is it.

D Seke after the thynge that is good, and not euyll, so shall ye lyue: yea the Lord God of hostes shall be with you, accordynge to youre owne desyre: Hate the euyll, and loue the good: set vp ryghte agayne in the porte: and (no doubte.) the Lorde God of hoostes shall be mercyfull vnto the remnaunt of Joseph. Yf no (sayth the Lorde God, the God of hoostes) there shall be mournynge in all stretes: yea they shall saye in euerye strete, alas alas.

They shall cal the husbande man to lamentacion, and suche as can mourne to mournynge. In all vyneyardes there shall be heuynesse, for I wyll come amonges you, sayth the Lorde.

E Wo be vnto them that desyre the daye of the Lorde: Wherfore wolde ye haue it: As for that daye of the Lorde, it shall be darcke and not clere: Yea lyke as when a man runneth from a lyō, and a bere meteth with him: or when he commeth in to the house, and leaneth his hande vpon the wall, and a serpent biteth him. Shall not the day of the Lorde be darke, and not clere? Shall it not be cloudy, & no shyne in it?

F I hate and abhorre youre holye dayes, and where as ye sense me when ye come togyther I wyll not accepte it. And though ye offre me brent offerynges and meate offerynges, yet haue I no pleasure therin. As for youre fat thankeofferynges, I wyll not loke vpon them.

G Awaye with that noyse of thy songes, I wyll not heare thy playes of musycke: but let that equitie flowe as the water, and ryghtousnesse as a myghtye streme. O ye house of Israell, gaue ye me offerynges and sacrifyces those fortye yeres longe in the wyldernesse? yet haue ye set vp tabernacles to youre Moloch, and ymages of youre ydolles, yea and the sterre of your god Rempha, fygures which ye made to worshyp them. Therfore wyll I cause you be caryed awaye beyonde Damascus, sayth the Lorde, whose name is the God of hostes.

¶ Agaynst the prynces of Israel lyuynge in pleasures.

CAPI. VI.

O Wo be to the proude welthy in Syon A to suche as thynke theym so sure vpon Luke.vi.e
the mount of Samaria? whiche holde them selues for the beste of the worlde, & rule the house of Israel, euē as they lyst. Go vnto Calne, and se: and from thence get you to Hemath the great citye, & so go downe to Gath of the Philistines: be they better at ease then these kyngdomes, or the border of theyr land wyder then youres? Ye are taken oute for the euyll daye, euen ye that syt in the stoole of wylfulnesse: Ye that lye vpon beddes of B Jurye, and vse youre wantonnesse vpon youre Job.xxi.b
couches: ye that eate the beste lambes of the Esay.v.b
flocke, and the fattest calues of the droue: ye that synge to the Lute, and in playinge the instrumentes compare youre selues vnto Dauid: ye that drincke wyne oute of goblettes, and annoynte youre selues with the beste oyle, but no man is sorye for Josephs hurte. Therfore nowe shall ye be the fyrste of them, that shall be ledde awaye captyue and the lusty chere of the wylfull shall come to an ende.

The Lorde God hath sworne euen by him C selfe (sayth the Lorde God of hostes) I hate Jeremy.li.c
the pryde of Jacob, and I abhorre his palaces: Amos.viii.a and I wyll gyue ouer the citye, with all that is therin: so that thoughe there remayne ten men in one house, they shal dye. So their next kynsfolkes, and the deed buryers shall take them, and carye awaye theyr bones, and saye vnto hym that is in the innermer house: is there yet any mo by the? And he shal answere they are all gone: holde thy tunge (shall he saye) for they wolde not remembre the name Deut.viii.b
of the Lorde.

Beholde, the Lorde is mynded to smyte D
the greate houses, so that they shall decaye: and the lytle houses ŷ they shal cleaue asunder. Who can run with horses, or plow with oxen vpon the harde rockes of stone? For why, ye haue tourned true iudgemente in to bytternesse, and the frute of ryghtousnesse in to wormewodde. Yea, euen ye that reioyse in vayne thynges / ye that saye: haue not we ob- Deut.xxvii.c
teyned hornes in oure owne strengthe? Well take hede, O ye house of Israell, sayth the Lorde God of hostes: I wyll bryng a people vpon you, whiche shall trouble you, from the waye that goeth towarde Hemath in to the broke in the medowe.

¶ Of the captyuytye of Israel and Juda.

CAPI. VII.

A The Lorde God shewed me suche a vysion: beholde there stode one that made gresshoppers, euen when the corne was shotinge forth, after the kynge had clypt his shepe.

Nowe when they undertoke to eate vp al the grene thynges in the lande, I sayde: O Lorde God, be mercyfull I beseche the: who shoulde elles helpe vp Jacob that is brought so lowe? So the Lorde was gracious therin, and the Lorde sayde: well, it shall not be.

Agayn the Lorde shewed me this vision: beholde, the Lorde God called the fyre to punysshe withall, and it deuoured the greate depe: yea it consumed a parte alredye. Then sayd I: O Lorde God, holde thyne hande: for who shoulde elles helpe vp Jacob that is brought so lowe? So the Lorde was mercyfull therin, and the Lorde God sayd: well, it shall not be.

B Moreouer he shewed me this vysyon: Beholde, the Lorde stode vpon a plastered walle, and a masons trowell in his hande. And the Lorde sayd vnto me: Amos, what seest thou? I aunswered: a masons trowell. Then sayde the Lorde: Beholde, I wyll laye the trowell amonge my people of Israell, and wyll no more ouerse them: but the hyghe hyll chapells of Isaac muste be layde waste, and the churches of Israell made desolate, and as for the house of Jeroboam, I wyll stande vp agaynst it with the swerde.

C iii.Reg.xvii.a Upon this sente Amasiah the Preest to Bethel, vnto Jeroboam the kynge of Israel, sayinge: Amos maketh the house of Israell to rebell agaynste the, the lande can not awaye with his wordes. For Amos sayth, Jeroboam shall dye with the swerde, and Israel shall be led awaye captyue oute of theyr owne lande.

And Amasiah sayde vnto Amos: Get the hence (thou that canste se so well) and flee in to the land of Juda: get the there thy liuing and prophecye there, and prophecye no more at Bethel, for it is the kynges chapell, & the kynges courte. Esaye.xxx.b

D Zachari.xiii.a Amos aunswered and sayde to Amasiah: As for me, I am neyther Prophete ne Prophetes sonne, but a keper of cattell. Now as I was breakynge downe mulberyes, and goynge after the cattell, the Lorde toke me, and sayde vnto me: Goo thy waye and prophecye vnto my people of Israell. And therfore heare thou now the word of the Lord: Thou sayest: prophecye not agaynste Israell, and speake nothynge agaynste the house of Isaac. Wherfore thus sayth the Lorde: Thy wyfe shall be defyled in the cytye, thy sonnes and doughters shall be slayne with the swerde, and thy lande shall be measured out with the lyne. Thou thy selfe shalte dye in an vnclene lande, and Israell shall be dryuen out of his owne countrey.

¶ Agaynst the rulers of Israel. The Lorde sweareth that he wyll fulfyll the thynges whiche he hath determyned agaynst Israel.

CAPI. VIII.

A The Lorde God shewed me this vision: and beholde, there was a maunde with sommer frute. And he sayd Amos, what seest thou? I answered: a maunde with sommer frute. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: the ende commeth vpon my people of Israel, I wyll no more ouerse them. In that daye shall the songes of the temple be turned in to sorowe, sayth the Lorde God. Many dead bodyes shall lye in euerye place, and be cast forth secretly.

B Heare this, O ye that oppresse the poore, and destroye the nedye in the lande, sayinge: When wyll the newe moneth be gone, that we may sell vytayle, and the Sabboth, that we maye haue scarcenesse of corne: to make the busshell lesse, and the sycle greater? We shall set vp false wayghtes, that we may get the poore vnder vs with their money, and the nedye also for shoes: yea let vs sell the chaffe for corne.

C The Lorde hath sworne agaynst the pryde of Jacob: these workes of theirs wyl I neuer forget. Shall not the land tremble, & all they that dwell therin mourne for this? Shal not their destruction come vpon them lyke a water streme, and flowe ouer them, as the floode of Egypt? At the same tyme (sayth the Lorde God) I shall cause the sunne to go downe at none, and the lande to be darke in the cleare daye. Your hye feestes wyl I turne to sorow, and youre songes to mournynge: I wyll brynge sacke clothe vpon all your backes, and baldnesse vpon euery heed: yea suche a mournyng wyll I sende them, as is made vpon an onely begotten sonne, and they shall haue a miserable ende.

D Beholde, the tyme commeth (sayth the Lorde God) that I shall sende an hunger in to the earthe, not the hunger of breed, nor the thyrste of water: but an hongre to heare the worde of the Lorde: so that they shall goo frome the one see to the other / yea from the Northe vnto the East, runnynge aboute to seke the worde of the Lorde, and shall not fynde it. In that tyme shall the fayre virgins and the yonge men perysshe for thyrste / yea euen they that sweare in the offence of Samaria, and saye: as truly as thy God lyueth at Dan, and as truly as thy God lyueth at Bersaba. These shall fall, and neuer ryse vp agayne.

¶ Threatenynges agaynst Israel. No man can escape the hande of God.

CAPI. IX.

A I Sawe the Lorde standynge vpon the aulter, and he sayde: smyte the dore cheke, that the postes maye shake withall. For theyr couetousnesse shall fall vpon all theyr heades, and theyr posteritie shal be slayne with the swerde. They shall not flee awaye, there shall not one of them escape, ne be delyuered.

Though

Thoughe they were buryed in the hell, my hande shal fetche them from thence: though they clymme vp to heauen, yet shall I caste them downe: though they hyde them selues vpon the toppe of Charmel, yet shall I seke them oute, and brynge theym frome thence: Thoughe they crepe downe fro my syghte in to the depe of the see, I shall commaunde the serpent euen there to byte them: Yf they go awaye before their ennemies in to captiuitie, then shall I commaunde the swerde there to slee them.

B Thus wyll I set myne eyes vpon theym, for theyr harme, and not for theyr welth. For when the Lorde God of hoostes toucheth a lande, it consumeth awaye, and all they that dwelle therin, muste nedes mourne: And why? theyr destruction shall aryse as euerye streame, and runne ouer them as the floode in Egypte.

He that hath his dwellynge in heuen, and groundeth his tabernacle in the earthe: He that calleth the waters of the see, and poureth them out vpon the playne grounde: his name is the Lorde. O ye chyldren of Israell are ye not vnto me, euen as the Morians, sayth the Lorde? haue not I brought Israell oute of the lande of Egypte, the Philistynes frome Capthor, and the Sirians frome Kyr? Beholde, the eyes of the Lorde are vpon the realme that synneth, to roote it cleane out of the earthe: Neuerthelesse I wyl not vtterly destroye the house of Jacob sayth the Lorde.

C For lo, this I promyse: though I syfte the house of Israell amonges all nacyons (lyke as they vse to syfte in a syue) yet shal not the smallest grauell stone fall vpon the earthe: But all the wicked doers of my people, that saye: Tusshe, the plage is not so nye, to come so hastely vpon vs: those shall perysshe with the swerde.

At that tyme wyll I buylde agayne the tabernacle of Dauid, that is fallen downe, and hedge vp his gappes: and loke what is broken, I shall repayre it: Yea I shal buylde it agayne, as it was afore tyme, that they maye possesse the remnaunte of Edom / yea, and all suche people as call vpon my name with them, sayth the Lorde, whiche doeth these thynges. Act.xv.b Miche.vii.b

D Joel.iii.d Beholde, the tyme commeth (sayth the Lorde) that the plowman shall ouertake the mower, and the treader of grapes hym that soweth seed. The mountaynes shall droppe swete wyne, and the hylles shall be frutefull, and I wyll tourne the captiuitie of my people of Israell: they shall repayre the waste cityes, and haue them in possession: they shal plant vyneyardes, and drynke the wine therof: they shall make gardens, and enioye the frutes of theym. And I wyll plante theym vpon theyr owne grounde, so that I wil neuer roote them out agayne frō theyr land whiche I haue gyuen them, sayth the Lorde thy God.

a Ezec.xxviii.b xxxv.a Amos.i.c

THis is the vysyon that was shewed vnto Abdi: Thus hath the Lord God spoken vpō Edom: We haue herd of the Lorde that there is an imbassage sent amonges the heathen: Vp, lette vs aryse and fyght agaynste them. Beholde, I wyll make the small amonge the heathen, so that thou shalt be vtterly despysed. The pryde of thyne herte hath lyfte the vp, thou that dwellest in the strong holdes of stone, and hast made thy habytacion hye: Thou saist in thyne hert: who shall caste me downe to the grounde? But though thou wentest vp as hye as the Egle, and madest thy nest aboue amonge the sterres: yet wolde I plucke the downe frome thence. Jf the theues and robbers came to the by nyght, thou takynge thy rest, shoulde they not steale, tyll they hadde ynoughe? Jf the grape gatherers came vpon the, wolde they not leaue the some grapes? But howe shall they serche Esau, and seke oute his treasures?

Shalt not I of the same tyme destroy all the wyse men at Edom, and those that haue vnderstandyng from the mount of Esau? Thy gyauntes, O Theman, shall be afrayde, for thorowe the slaughter they shal be all ouerthrowen vpon the mount of Esau. Shame shall come vpon the, for the malyce that thou shewedst to thy brother Jacob: yea for euermore shalt thou perysshe, and that because of the tyme when thou didst set thy selfe agaynste him, euen when the enemyes caryed awaye his hoste, and the alyauntes came in at his portes, and caste lottes vpon Jerusalem, & thou thy selfe wast as one of them.

Thou shalte no more se the daye of thy brother, thou shalte no more beholde the tyme of his captyuitie, thou shalt no more reioyse ouer the childzen of Juda, in the day of their destruction, thou shalte triumphe no more in the tyme of their trouble. Thou shalt no more come in at the gates of my people, in the tyme of their decay, thou shalt not se their misery in the day of their fall.

Thou shalte sende oute no man agaynste their hoste, in the daye of their aduersitie: neyther shalte thou stande waytynge anye more at the corners of the stretes, to murther suche as are fledde, or to take them prysoners, that remayne in the daye of their trouble.

For the daye of the Lorde is harde by vpon all the heathen. Lyke as thou halt done, so shalte thou be dealte withall: yea, thou shalte be rewarded euen vpon thyne hed. For lykewyse as ye haue dronken vpon myne holye hyll, so shall all heathen dryncke contynually: yea, dryncke shall they, and swalowe vp, so that ye shall be, as though ye had neuer ben.

Jerem. Joel.iii.

F

But vpon the mounte Syon, there shall a remnaunt escape: there shall be holy, and the house of Jacob shall possesse euen those that had them selues afore in possession. Moreouer, the house of Jacob shall be a fyre, the house of Joseph a flame, and the house of Esau shall be the strawe, whiche they shall kyndle and consume, so that nothyng shal be left of the house of Esau, for the Lorde him selfe hath sayd it.

Jerem.

G

They of the South shall haue the mount of Esau in possession, and loke what lyeth vpon the grounde, that shall the Philistines haue: the playne feldes shal Ephraim & Samaria possesse: and the mountaynes of Galaad shall Ben Jamin haue. And this hoste shal be the childrē of Israel is prysoners. Now what so lyeth from Canaan vnto Zareptah, and in Sepharad, that shall be vnder the subiection of Jerusalem: and the cityes of the south shall enherete it. Thus they that escape vpon the hyll of Sion, shall go vp to punysh the mounte of Esau, and the kyngdome shall be the Lordes.

The ende of the prophecye of Abdi.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE IONAS.

Of the flyghte of Jonas when he was sent to preache. A tempest aryseth, and casteth him in the see for his disobedience.

CAPI. I.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto Jonas the sonne of Amithai, sayinge: Aryse, and get the to Niniue that great cite, & preache vnto them, how that their wickednesse is come vp before me. And Jonas made him redye to flee vnto Tharsis from the presence of the Lord, and gat him downe to Joppa, where he found a shyp redye for to goo vnto Tharsis. So he payde his fare, & went aborde, that he might goo with them vnto Tharsis, from the presence of the Lorde. But the Lorde hurled a greate wynde in to the see, and there was a myghty tempest in the see, so that the shyppe was in iopardye of goynge in peces. Then the mariners were afrayde, and cryed euery man vnto his god: and the goodes that were in the shyppe, they cast in to the see to lighten it of them. But Jonas gat him vnder the hatches, where he layde him downe and slept.

1

So the master of the shyp came to him and sayd vnto him, why slomberest thou? Vp, call vpon thy God: yf God (happily) wil thinke vpon vs, that we perysshe not. And they sayd one to an other: come, let vs cast lottes, that we may knowe for whose cause we are thus troubled. And so they caste lottes, and the lot fell vpon Jonas.

2

Then sayd they vnto him: tel vs for whose cause are we thus troubled? what is thyne occupacion? whence commest thou? what countrey man art thou, and of what nacion? He answered them: I am an Ebrue, and I feare the Lorde God of heuen, whiche made bothe the see and drye lande. Then were the men exceedingly afrayde, and sayde vnto him: why hyddest thou so? (for they knewe that he was fled from the presence of the Lorde, because he had tolde them) and sayd moreouer vnto him: What shalde we do vnto the that the see maye ceasse from troublynge vs? (for the see wrought and was troublous) he answered them: Take me and cast me in to the see, so shall it let you be in rest: for I wote, it is for my sake, that this great tempest is com vpon you.

Neuertheles, the men assayed with rowynge to bryngе the shyp to lande, but it wolde not be, because the see wrought so, and was so troubleous agaynste them. Wherfore they cryed vnto the Lorde, and sayd: O Lorde, let vs not perysshe for this mans death, neyther laye thou innocent bloude vnto oure charge, for thou, O Lorde, hast done euen as thy pleasure was.

So they toke Jonas and cast him in to the see, and the see lefte ragyng. And the men feared the Lorde exceedingly, doing sacrifices and making vowes vnto the Lorde.

Jonas is swallowed of a whale. The prayer of Jonas.

CAPI. II.

BVt the Lorde prepared a great fyshe to swalowe vp Jonas. So was Jonas in the bely of the fish, thre dayes and thre nyghtes. And Jonas prayed vnto the Lorde his God out of the fishes bely, and sayd: In my trouble I called vnto the Lorde, and he herde me: out of the bely of hell I cried, and thou herdest my voyce. Thou haddest caste me downe depe in the myddest of the see, and the floude compassed me about: yea all thy waues and floudes of water wente ouer me, I thoughte that I had ben cast awaye oute of thy syght: but I wyll yet agayne loke towarde thy holye temple.

The waters compassed me, euē to the very soule: the depe laye about me, and the wedes were wrapt about myne hed. I went downe to the bottome of the hylles, and was barred in with erth for euer. But thou, O Lorde my God, hast brought vp my lyfe agayne out of corruption. When my soule fainted within me, I thought vpon the Lord, and my prayer came in vnto the, euen in to thy holy temple. They that holde of vayne vanities will forsake his mercy. But I will do the sacrifice of the voyce of thankesgyuynge, and wyll paye that I haue vowed: for why? saluacion commeth of the Lorde. And the Lorde spake vnto the fysshe, and it cast out Jonas agayne vpon the drye lande.

CAPI. III.

THen came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jonas agayne, sayinge: vp & get the to Niniue that great city, and preache vnto them the preching which I bad the. So Jonas arose, an went to Niniue at the Lordes commaundement. Niniue was a great cite vnto God, namely of thre dayes iourney.

Josue.i.a

And Jonas went to, & entred in to the cite euē a dayes iourney, and cried, sayinge: There are yet .xl. dayes, and then shal Niniue be ouerthrowen. And the people of Niniue byleued God, and proclaymed fasting, and arayed the selues in sackcloth, as wel the great as the smal of them. And the tidinges came vnto the king of Niniue, which arose out of his seate, & did his apparell of, and put on sackcloth, and sat him downe in asshes.

b

And it was cried and commaunded in Niniue, by the auctorite of the king and his lordes sayinge: se that neither man nor beest, ore or shepe taste ought at all, and that they neither fede, ne drynke water, but put on sackcloth both

man and beest, & cry mightyly vnto God: yea se that euery man turne from his euil waye, &
from the wickednesse that he hath in hand.
D Who can tell? God may turne, and repent Ioa.xxv.iii.d and cease frō his fearce wrath, that we perish not. And when God sawe their workes, how they turned from their wicked wayes, he repented on the euil which he sayd he wolde do vnto them, and did it not.

¶ Jonas is reproued of God.

CAPI. IIII.

A THerefore Jonas was sore discontent and angry. And he prayed vnto the Lorde, & sayd: O Lord was not this my saying (I pray the) when I was yet in my countrey?
therfore I hasted rather to flie vnto Tharsis,
for I know wel ynough that thou art a mercyful God, ful of compassion, longe suffering, and of great kyndnesse, and repentest when thou shuldest take punishment. And now, O Lorde, iii.Reg.xix.a take my syle fro me (I beseche the) for I had rather dye then lyue. Then sayde the Lorde:
art thou so angry? And Jonas gat him out of the city, and sate downe on the east side therof,
and there made him a boothe, and sat vndre it in the shadowe tyll he might se, what shulde chaunce vnto the city.

And the Lord God prepared a wylde vine, B which sprange vp ouer Jonas, that he might haue shadowe aboue his heed to deliuer him oute of his payne. And Jonas was exceding glad of the wylde vine. But vpon the nexte morow against the spring of the day, the Lorde ordeyned a worme, whiche smote the wylde vine, so that it withered awaye. And when the sunne was vp, God prepared a feruent East C
wynd: and the sunne bet ouer the head of Jonas that he fainted agayn, and wished vnto his soule, that he might dye, and sayde: It is better for me to dye, then to lyue. And God sayd vnto Jonas: Art thou so angrye for the wylde vine? And he said: yea, very angry am I, euen vnto death. And the Lorde sayd: thou D hast compassion vpon a wylde vine, whereon
thou bestowedst no labour, ne madest it grow:
which sprang vp in one night, and perished in an other, and shold not I then haue compassi on vpon Ninive that great city, wherin there are aboue an hundred and twenty thousande persons, that knowe not their ryghte hande fro their lefte, besydes moche cattell?

¶ The ende of the prophecye
of Jonas.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE MICHEAS.

¶ Of the destruction of Samaria, because of their Idolatrye.

CAPI. I.

THis is the word of the Lorde that came vnto Micheas the Mo-rasthite, in the dayes of Jothan, Achas and Ezechias kinge of Ju da: which was shewed him vpō Samaria and Jerusalem. Heare al ye people marke this well, O earthe, and that therin is: Yea the Lorde God him self be witnesse amonge you, euen the Lorde from his holye temple. For why? beholde, the Lord shal go out of his place, and come downe, and treade vpon the hyghe thinges of the earth. The mountaynes shall consume vnder him, and the valleyes shal cleaue a sondre: lyke as wax cō meeth at the fyre, and as the waters runne downwarde. And al this shal be for the wickednesse of Jacob, & the synnes of the house of Israel.
B But what is the wickednesse of Jacob? Is not Samaria? Which are the high places of Juda? Is not Jerusalem? Therfore I shal make Samaria an heape of stones in the felde to lay about the vineyard: her stones shal I cast in to the valley, and discouer her foundations. Al her Images shalbe broken down and all her winninges shall be brent in the fyre: yea all her Idols will I destroye: for why, they are gathered out of the hyre of an hore, and into an hores hyre shal they be tur ned agayne. Wherfore I wyll mourne and make lamentation, bare and naked will I go I must mourne like the dragons, and take sorowe as the Estriches: for their wound is past remedy: And why? it is come in to Juda and hath touched the port of my people at Jerusalem afredye. Wepe not, lest they at Geth perceyue it.
Thou at Betaphra, welter thy selfe in the C dust and asshes. Thou that dwellest at Sephir, get the hence with shame. The proude shall boost no more for very sorowe: & why?
her neighboure shal take from her what she hath. The rebellyous citie hopeth, that it shall not be so cruel: but for al that, the plage shal come from the Lorde, euen into the porte of Jerusalem. The great noyse of the charettes shal feare them: that dwel at Lachis, which is an occasion of the synne of the doughter of Sion, for in came vp the wickednes of Is rael. Yea she sent her coursers into the lande of Geth.
D The houses of Lyes wyll disceyue the kinges of Israel. And as for the (O thou that dwellest at Morasta) I shall bringe a possessi oner vpon the, and the plage of Israell shall reach vnto Odolla. Make the balde, & shaue the, because of thy tender children: Make the cleane balde as an Egle for they shall be ca-ryed awaye captyue from the.

they couet land, they take it by violēce, they rob men of their houses.
Thus they oppresse a man for his house, & euery man for his heritage. Therfore thus sayth the Lord: Behold agaynst this house-holde haue I deuysed a plage, wherout ye shal not pluck your neckes: Ye shal no more go so proudly, for it will be a perlous tyme.
In that daye shall this terme be vsed, and a mournynge shall be made ouer you on this maner: We be vtterly desolate, the porcyon of my people is translated. When wyll he part vnto vs the land, that he hath taken frō vs?
Neuertheles there shall be no man to be- B side the thy porcion in the congregacion of Num.xxvi.d
the Lord. Tush, holde your tunge (say they) Je shall not fall vpon this people, we shall not come so to confusion, sayth the house of Jacob? Is the spirite of the Lorde so cleane awaye? or is he so mynded? Truth it is, my wordes are frendly vnto the that lyue right

Ye haue turned youre selues to fighte, the C women of my people haue ye shot out from their good houses, and taken away my excel lent giftes frō their children. Vp, get you hēce for here shall ye haue no rest.
Because of their Idolatrye they are corrupt, and shall myserably perysshe. If I were a fleshly felowe and a preacher of lyes, & told thē that they myght syt bybbyng & bollinge and be dronken: O that were a Prophet for D
this people. But I wyll gather the in dede, O Jacob, and dryue the remnaūt of Israel al
togither I shal cary them one with an other as a flocke in the folde, and as the cattell in their stalles, that they maye be disquyeted of other men. Who so breaketh the gappe, he shal go before. They shal breake vp the port and go in and out at it. Their kinge shall go before them, and the Lorde shal be vpon the heade of them.

lawfull and right? But ye hate the good, & Psal.lxxxii.a loue the euel: ye plucke of mens shynnes, &
the

the fleshe from their bones: ye eate the flesh of my people, flaye of their skynne: ye breake their bones, ye chop them in peces as it were into a cauldrō, and as flesh into a pot. Nowe the tyme shall come, that when they call vn to the Lord, he shall not heare them, but hide his face frome them, because that thorowe their owne ymaginacions they haue dealt so wyckedly.

B And as concernynge the Prophetes that disceyue my people, thus the Lorde sayeth agaynste them: When they haue anye thyng to byte vpon, then they preache that all shal be well: but yf a man put not some thing in to their mouthes, they preache of warre agaynste him.

C Therfore your vision shall be turned to nyght, and youre prophecying to darcknesse. The sunne shall go downe ouer those Prophetes, and the daye shal be darcke vnto thē. Then shall the vision seers be ashamed, and the sothsayers confounded: yea they shal be fayne, all the packe of them, to stoppe their mouthes, for they haue not Gods worde. As for me, I am full of strengthe, and of the spirite of the Lord, full of iudgement and boldnesse: to shewe the house of Jacob their wickednesse, and the house of Israel their synne.

D O heare this ye rulers of the house of Jacob, and ye iudges of the house of Israel: ye that abhorre the thinge that is lawfull, and wrest asyde the thinge that is streight: Ye y^t buylde vp Sion with bloude, and Jerusalē with doinge wronge. O ye iudges, ye gyue sentence for gyftes: O ye prestes, ye teache for lucre: O ye prophetes, ye prophecy for monye. Yet wyll they be taken as those that holde vpon God, and saye: Is not the Lorde amōg vs? Tush, there can no mysfortune happen vs. Therfore shall Sion (for your sakes) be plowed lyke a feld, Jerusalem shal become an heape of stones, and the hyll of the tēple shall be turned to an hye wod.

At the same tyme sayeth the Lord, will I gather vp the lame and the out castes and suche as I haue chastened: and wyl giue yssue vnto the lame, & make of the outcastes a greate people and the Lorde him selfe shal be their kinge vpon the mount Sion, frome this tyme forth for euermore.

C And vnto the (O thou towre of Eder, thou stronge holde of the doughter Sion) vnto the shal it come: euen the lordship and kingdom of the doughter Jerusalem. Why then arte thou nowe so heuye? is there no kinge in the? are thy councelers awaye that thou arte so payned, as a woman in her trauayle? ¶ Of the destruction of Jerusalem.

CAPI. X.

A AFter y^t shalt thou be robbed thy selfe, O thou robbers doughter: they shall laye siege agaynste vs, and smyte the iudge of Israel with a rodde vpon the cheke. And thou Bethleem Ephrata, arte lytle amonge the thousandes of Juda, Out of the shall come vnto me, whiche shall be the gouernoure in Israel: whose out goynge hath bene from the begynnynge, and from euerlastynge.

In the meane whyle he plageth them for a season, vntyl the tyme that she (which shal beare) haue borne: then shall the remnaunt of his brethrē be cōuerted vnto y^e childrē of Israel. He shall stande faste, and gyue fode in the strength of the Lorde, and in the vyctory of the name of the Lorde his God & when they be conuerted, he shall be magnifyed vn to y^e farthest partes of the worlde.

B Then shall there be peace, so that the Assirian maye come into oure lande, and treade in oure houses. We shall bringe vp seuen shepherdes and eyght prynces vpon theym: these shall subdue the lande of Assur with y^e swerde, and the lande of Nimrod with their naked weapons. Thus shall he delyuer vs from the Assirian, when he commeth within oure lande, and setteth his fote within oure borders.

C And the remnaūt of Jacob shalbe amōges the multytude of people, as the dew of the Lorde, and as the droppes vpon the grasse, that taryeth for no man, and wayteth of no body. Yea the resydue of Jacob shall be amōges the Gentyles and the multytude of people, as the lyon amonge the beastes, of the wodde, and as the lyons whelpe amonge a flocke of shepe: whiche when he goeth thorowe treadeth downe, teareth in peces, and there is no man that can helpe. Thine hande shall be lyfte vp vpon thine enemyes, and al thyne aduersaryes shal perish.

D The tyme shall come also, sayth the Lord, that I wyll take thine horses from the, and destroye thy charettes. I will breake downe the cytyes of thy lande, and ouerthrowe all thy stronge holdes. All witchcraftes wyll I rote oute of thine hande, there shall no mo sothsayenges be within the. Thyne Idols and thyne Images wyl I destroye out of y^e, so that thou shalt no more bowe thy selfe vn to the workes of thyne owne handes. CAPI. VI.

A HErken now what the Lorde sayth: Up reproue the mountaynes, and let the hylles heare thy voyce. O heare y^e punyshment of the Lorde, ye mountaynes and ye myghtye foundacions of the earthe: for the Lord will reproue his people, and reason with Israel: O my people, what haue I done vnto the? or wherin haue I hurt the? gyue me answere.

What acceptable thinge shall I offre vnto the Lorde? shall I bowe my kne to the high God? Shall I come before him with brente offerynges, and with calues of a yere olde? Hath the Lorde a pleasure in manye thousande rammes, or innumerable streames of oyle? Or shal I gyue my fyrstborne for mine offences, and the frute of my body for the sin of my soule? I wyll shewe the, o man, what is good, and what the Lord requireth of the:

C Namely, to do ryght, to haue pleasure in louinge kindnesse, to be lowlye, and to walcke with thy God: that thou mayst be called a citye of the Lord, and that thy name may be ryghtousnesse. Heare (O ye tribes) who wold els gyue you suche warnynge? Shulde I not be displeased, for the vnrightous good in the houses of the wicked, and because the measure is mynyshed? Or shulde I iustyfye the false balaunces and the bagge of disceytfull weyghtes, among those that be full of ryches vnryghtously gotten: where the citisyns deale with falshed, speake lyes, & haue disceytful tunges in their mouthes?

shal laye their hande vpon their mouth, and stoppe their eares. They shall lycke the dust lyke a serpēt,& as the wormes of the earthe, that tremble in their holes. They shall be afrayde of the Lorde oure God,and they shal feare the.

Where is there such a God as thou? that pardoneth wyckednesse,and forgyueth the offences of the remnaunte of thyne heritage
He kepeth not his wrath for euer. And why?
his delite is to haue compassiō: he shal turne agayne,and be mercyfull to vs:he shall put downe oure wickednesses,and caste all oure synnes into ỹ bottome of the see. Thou shalte kepe thy trueth with Jacob,and thy mer cy for Abraham,lyke as thou hast swoorne vnto our fathers
longe agoo.

¶ The ende of the prophecy of Micheas,

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE NAHVM.

¶ Of the destruction of Ninive, and of the delyue-raunce of Israel.

CAPL. I.

THis is the heuye burthen of Ninive, whiche Nahum of Elchos dyd write as he sawe it. The Lord is a gelous God and a taker of venge aunce: yea a taker of vengeaunce is the Lorde,and wrothful. The Lorde taketh ven geaunce of his ennemy,and reserueth displea sure for his aduersaryes. The Lorde suffereth longe,he is of greate power,and so innocent that he leaueth no man fautelesse before him. The Lord goth forth in tempest and stormy wether,the cloudes are the dust of his fete. When he reproueth the see,he dryeth it vp,& turneth all the floudes to drye lande. Basan is desolate. Charmel and the pleasure of Li-banus wasteth awaye. The mountaynes tre ble for him,the hilles consume. At the sighte of him,the earth quaketh,yea the hole world and al that dwell therin. Who may endure before his wrath? Or who is hable to abyde his grym displeasure? His angre taketh on lyke fyre,and the hard rockes burste in sun-der before him.

Full gracious is the Lorde,and a stronge holde in the tyme of trouble,he knoweth the that put their trust in him: when the floude renneth ouer,and destroyeth the place, and when the darckenesse foloweth tyll vpō his ennemyes. What do ye ymagyn then against the Lorde on this maner? (Tush, when he hathe ones made an ende,there shal come no more trouble.) For lyke as the thornes that sticke togither,and as the drye strawe,so that the dronckardes be consumed together, euen when they be full. There come out of ỹ such as Imagyn myschief,& gyue vngracious coū cell agaynste the Lorde.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: Let thē be as wel prepared,yea and as many as they can,yet shal they be hewen downe,and passe awaye. And as for the, I wyll vexe the, but not vtterly destroye the. And nowe wyll I breake his rod,from thy back,and burste thy bondes in sōder. But the Lord hath geuen a cōmaūdemēt concernyng the,that there shal come no more sede of thy name. The carued and caste Images wyl I rote out of ỹ house of thy God. Thy graue shall I prepare for ỹ and thou shalte be confounded.

¶ He descrybeth the vyctory of the Caldees against the Ninuytes.

CAPL. II.

BEholde,vpon the mountaynes come ỹ fete of him,that bryngeth good tydin-ges,& preacheth peace. O Juda,kepe thy holy holy dayes,perfourme thy promyses: for Be lial shall come no more in the, he is vtterly rooted out.

The scatterer shall come vp agaynste the, & laye siege to the castel. Loke thou wel to the stretes,make thy loynes strong, arme thy selfe with all thy myght: for the Lorde shall re-store agayne the glory of Jacob,lyke as the glory of Israel. The destroyers haue broken them vpon,and marred the wine braunches The hylde of his giauntes glysteretb, his men of warre are clothed in purple. His cha-rettes are as fyre,when he maketh him rea-warde,his archers are well deckte and trim-med. The charettes rolle vpon the stretes, & welter in the high wayes. They are to loke vpon lyke creslettes of fyre,and go swyftly, as the lyghtenyng. When he doth but warn his giauntes, they fall in their araye, and swyftly they clyme vp the walles: yea the en gyne of warre are prepared alredye. The wa ter portes shall be opened,and the kinges pa lace shall fal. The quene her selfe shal be led awaye captyue, and her gentylwomen shall mourne as the doues,and grone within their hertes. Ninive is lyke a pole full of water, but then shall they be fayne to flee. Stande, stande,(shall they crye) and there shall not one turne back. Awaye with the syluer,away with the gold: for there is no ende of trea-sure. There shalbe a multytude of all maner costly ornamentes. Thus must she be spoyled emptied and cleane stryped out: that their her-tes may be melted away,their knees tremble all their loynes be weake,& their faces blacke as a pot,

Where is now the dwellyng of the lyons and the pasture of the lyons whelpes? where the lyon and the lyonylle wēt with the whel pes,and no man frayed them away? But the lyon spoyled ynough for his ponge ones,and deuoured for his lyonesse: he fylled his den-nes with his praye,and his dwellinge place with that he had raueshed. Beholde, I wyll vpon the,sayth the Lorde of hostes,and wil set fyre vpon thy charettes,ỹ they shal smoke with all,and the swearde shall deuoure the ponge lyons. I will make an end of thy spoy lynge frome oute of the earth,and the voyce of thy messengers shall no more be hrde.

¶ The fall of Ninive.

CAPL. III.

WOe the bloud thurstly cytye, whiche is all full of lyes and robbery, and wyll not leaue of frome raueshing. There a man maye heare scourgynge, rustlynge, the noyse of welles,the cryinge of the horses,and the rollyng of the charettes. There the horse-men get vp with naked swerdes,and glyste-nynge speares: There lyeth a multytude slayne,and a greate heape of deade bodyes: There is no ende of deade corpses, yea men fall vpon their bodyes; And that for the greate and manyfolde horedom,of the fayre and beutyfull harlot: whiche is a mastresse of witchecraft,yea and selleth the people thor-row her horedome,and the nacyons thorow her witchecraft.

Beholde, I wyll vpon the(sayth the Lord of hostes)and wyl pull thy clothes ouer thy heade: that I maye shewe thy nakednesse a-monge the heithen,and thy shame amonge ỹ kingdomes. I wyll caste durte vpon the, & make ỹ be abhorred,& a gasyng stocke: Yea al they that loke vpon the,shall starte backe, & say: Ninive is destroyed.

Who wyl haue pitie vpon the: where shal I seke one to conforte the? Art thou better thē the greate cittie of Alexandria? that laye in ỹ waters,and had the waters rounde aboute it: whiche was strongely fenced and walled with the see? Ethiopia and Egypt were her strength,and that exceadynge greate aboue measure. Aphrica and Libia were her helpers yet was she dryuen awaye and brought into captyuytye: her yong children were smytte downe at the heed of euery strete, the lottes were cast for the moste auncyent men in her, and all her myghtye men were bounde in chaynes. Euen so shalt ỹ also be dronke, and hyde thy selfe,and seke some helpe agaynste thyne ennemy. All thy stronge cytyes shal be lyke fygtrees with ripe fygges: which when a man shaketh,they shal fal in to the mouth of the eater.

Behold, thy people within the are but wo-men: the pozres of thy lande shall be opened vnto thyne ennemyes,and the fyre shall de-youre thy barres. Draw water now against thou be beleged,make vp thy stronge holdes go in to the clave,tempre the mozter, make strong bycke: yet the fyre shal consume the, the swerde shall destroye the, yea as the lo-custe doth, so shall it eate the vp. Yee shall fall heuelye vpon the as the locustes,yea tyghte heuely shall it fal vpon the,euen as the gres hoppers. Thy marchauntes haue bene nom-bred with the starres of heuen: but now shal they spred abrode as the locustes,& flee their waye: Thy lordes are as the grashoppers, & thy captaynes as the multytude of grashop-pers: which when they be cold,remayne in ỹ hedges: but when the Sunne is vp, they flee away,and no man can tel where they are be-come. Thy shepherdes are a slepe(O kinge of Assur)thy worthyes are layde downe: thy people is scattered abrode vpon the moun-taynes and no man gathereth them togithes agayne. Thy wound can not be vpd, thy plage is to sore. All thy that heare this of the shall clappe their handes ouer the.

For what is he,to whome ỹ hast not alway bene doynge hurt.

¶ The ende of the prophecye of Nahum.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE ABACVC,

¶ A complaynt agaynst Israel,

CAPI. I.

A Psal.xxii.a Job.xix.a This is the heuye burthen, which the prophete Abacuc dyd se. O Lorde, how longe shal I crye, and thou wilte not heare? How longe shall I complayne vnto the suffrynge wronge & thou wilte not helpe? Why lettest thou me se weerynesse and laboure? Tyranny and vyolence are before me: power ouergoeth right: for the law is torne in peces, and there can no right iudgment go forth. And why? the vngodly is more set by then the ryghtous: this is the cause, y^t wronge iudgement procedeth. Beholde amonge the Act.xiii.d heithen, and loke well: wondre at it, and be abasshed: for I wyl do a thinge in youre time whiche though it be tolde you, ye shall not beleue.

B For lo, I wyll rayse vp the Caldees, that Deut.xxviii.c bytter and swyft people: which shall go as wyde as y^e land is, to take possession of dwellynge places, that be not their owne. A grym and boysteous people is it, these shall lye in Sophon.iii.a iudgement & punysh. Their horses are swyfter then the cattes of the mountayne, & byte sorer then the wolues in the euening. Their horsemen come by greate heapes from farre, they fle hastely to deuoure as the Egle.

C They come all to spoyle: out of them commeth an east wynde, which bloweth and gathereth their captiues, like as the sand. They shall mocke the kinges, and laugh the princes to scorne.

They shall not set by any stronge holde, for they shall laye ordynaunce agaynst it, and take it. Then shall they take a fresh courage
Esay.xlvi.d ii.Pa.xxviii.d vnto them, to go forthe and to doo more euell, and so ascrybe that power vnto their God.

But thou O Lorde my God, my holy one thou arte from the begynnyng, therfore shal we not dye. O Lorde, thou hast ordeyned the for a punyshment, and set theym to reproue the myghtye.

D Thyne eyes are cleane, thou mayste not se euyll: thou canst not beholde the thynge that Jeremy.xii.a is wicked. Wherfore then dost thou loke vpõ Psal.xxxvii.a the vngodlye, and holdest thy tunge when the wicked deuoureth the man that is better then him selfe? Thou makest me as the fish in the see, and lyke as the crepinge beestes, y^t haue no guyde. They take vp all with their angle, they catche it in their nette, and gather it in their yarne: wherof they reioyce and are glad. Therfore offre they vnto their net, and do sacrifice vnto their yarne: because that thorowe it their porcion is become so fat, and their meate so plenteous. Wherfore they cast out their net agayne, & neuer cease to slaye the people.

¶ Of the vysion of the prophete. Agaynste pollyng, couetousnesse, and Idolatry.

CAPI. II.

I Stode vpon my watch, and set me vpon my bulworcke, to loke & se what he wolde say vnto me and what answere I shulde geue him that reproueth me, But the Lorde answered me, and sayde: Wryte the vision playnly, vpõ thy tables, that whoso cometh by, maye rede it: for the vision is yet farre of for a time, but at the last it shal come to passe and not fayle. And though he tary, yet wayte thou for him, for in very dede he wyll come, and not be slacke. Beholde, who so wyll not byleue his soule shall not prospere: the iuste shall lyue by his fayth. Lyke as the wyne diceyueth the dronckarde, euen so the proude shall fayle and not endure. He openeth his desyre wyde vp as the hell, and is as vnsacyable as death. All heythen gathereth he to him, and heapeth vnto him all people. A

But shal not al these take vp a prouerbe agaynst him, and mocke him w^t a by worde, & saye: Wo vnto him that heapeth vp other mens goodes? How longe wyll he lade him selfe with thicke claye? O how sodenly will they stande vp, that shall byte, and awake, y^t shall teare the in peces? yea thou shalte be their praye. Seinge thou hast spoyled manye Heithen, therfore shall the remnaunt of the people spoyle the: because of mens bloude, and for the wronge done in the lande, in the citie and vnto all them that dwell therin. B

Wo vnto him, that couetously gathereth euell gotten goodes into his house: that he maye set his nest an hyghe, to escape frome the power of misfortune. Thou hast deuysed the shame of thyne own house, for thou hast slayne to moche people, and hast wylfullye offended: so that the very stones of the wall shall crye out of it, and the tymbre that lyeth betwixt the ioyntes of the buyldynge shal answere. Wo vnto him, that buyldeth y^e towne with bloude, & mayntayneth the citye with vnrighteousnesse. Shall not the Lorde of hostes bringe this to passe, that the laboures of the people shall be brent with a greate fyre, and that the thynge wherupon the people haue weryed them selues, shall be loste? For the earthe shall be full of knowledge of the Lordes honoure, lyke as the waters that couer the see. C

Wo vnto him that geueth his neyghbour drincke, to geue hym wrothfull displeasure for his dronkenesse: that he maye se his priuytees. Therfore with shame shalte thou be fylled, in steade of honoure. D

Drynke thou also, tyl thou slombre withall: for the cuppe of the Lordes right hande shall compasse the about, and shamfull spewinge in the stede of thy worshippe. For the wronge that thou hast done in Lybanus, shall ouerwhelme the, & the wild beestes shal make the afrayde, bicause of mens bloude, & for the wronge done in the land, in the city, and vnto all suche as dwel therin.

What helpe then wil the ymage do, whom the worke man hath facioned: Or the vayne false ymage, wherin bycause the craftesman putteth his trust, therfore maketh he domme ydolles? Woo vnto him that sayth to a pece of wod: aryse/ and to a domme stone: stande vp. For what instruction may suche one giue? Beholde, it is layde ouer with golde and syluer, and there is no breth in it. But the Lorde in his holy temple is he, whom all the worlde shoulde feare.

¶ A prayer of the Prophete Abacuc for the ignoraunt.

CAPI. III.

A O Lord, when I herd speke of the, I was afrayde. The worke that thou hast taken in hand, shalt thou performe in his tyme, o Lord/ and when the time commeth, y^u shalt declare it. In thy very wrath thou thinkest vpon mercy. God commeth frome Theman, & the holy one from the mount of Pharan. Selah.

His glorye couereth the heauens, and the earth is full of his prayse. His shyne is as the sunne, and beames of lyghte goo oute of his handes, there is his power hyd. Destruction goeth before him, and burnyng cressettes go from his fete. He standeth and measureth the earth. He loketh, and the people consume awaye, the mountaynes of y^e worlde fal downe poulder, and the hylles are fayne to bow thẽselues, for his goinges are euerlastynge and sure.

B I sawe that the pauylyons of the Moryans, and the tentes of the lande of Madian were vexed for weerynesse. Wast thou not angrye, O Lorde, in the waters? Was not thy wrath in the floudes, and thy displeasure in the see? Yes, when thou sattest vpon thyne horse, and when thy charettes had the victorye. Thou shewedst thy bowe openly, lyke as thou haddest promysed with an othe vnto the tribes. Selah.

Thou dyddest deuyde the waters of the earth. When the mountaynes sawe the, they were afrayde, the water streame went awaye: the depe made a noyse at the lyftynge vp of thyne hande. The sunne and moone remayned styll in their habitacion. Thyne arowes Josue.x.c went out glysterynge, and thy speres as the shyne of the lyghtening. Thou tradest downe the lande in thyne anger, and dyddest thresshe the Heathen in thy displeasure. Thou camest forthe to helpe thy people, to helpe thyne anoynted. Thou smotest downe the head, the house of the vngodlye, and discoueredst his foundacions: euen vnto the necke of hym. Selah.

Thou cursest his scepters, the Capytayne C of his men of warre, whiche come as a stormye wynde to scatter me abrode, and are glad when they maye eate vp the poore secretlye. Thou makest awaye for thyne horses in the see, euen in the mudde of great waters. When I heare this, my bodye is vexed, my lyppes tremble at the voyce therof, my bones corrup, I am afrayde where I stande. O that I myghte reste in the daye of trouble, that I myght goo vp vnto our people, which are alredye prepared.

For the fygge tree shall not be grene, and the vynes shall beare no frute. The laboure of the olyue shall be but loste, and the lande shall brynge no corne: the shepe shall be taken out of the folde, and there shall be no catell in the stalles. But as for me, I wyll be gladde in the Lorde, and wyll reioyce in God my sauyour. The Lorde God is my strength, Psal.xviii.b
he shall make my feete, as the feete of hartes: and he which gyueth the victorye, shall bryng me to my hygh places, singing vpon my psalmes.

¶ The ende of the prophecye of Abacuc.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE SOPHONY.

¶ Thzeatenynges agaynst Juda and Jerusalem, bycause of theyr Idolatrye.

CAPI. I.

a THis is the wozde of the Lozde, whiche came vnto Sophony the sonne of Chusi, the sonne of Gedoliah, the sonne of Amariah the sonne of Ezechiah in the time of Josiah the sonne of Amon kynge of Juda.

4.Reg.xxi. xxii. I wyll gather vp all thynges in the lande (sayth the Lozde) I wyll gather vp man and beest. I will gather vp the foules in the ayre, and the fysshe in the see (to the greate decaye of the wycked) and wyll vtterly destroye the men oute of the lande, saythe the Lozde.

I wyll stretche oute myne hande vpon Juda, and vpon all suche as dwell at Jerusalem.

b Thus wyll I roote oute the remnaunte of Baal from this place, and the names of the Remurvns and Preestes: yea, and suche as vpon their house topppes wozshyp and bowe them selues vnto the hoste of heuen, whiche swere by the Lozde, and by theyr Malchom also: whiche starte a backe frome the Lozde, Deute.xvii.b Jeremy.v.b and neyther seke after the Lozde, ne regarde hym.

Be styll at the presence of the Lozde God for the daye of the Lozde is at hande: yea the Lozde hath prepared a slayne offerynge, and called his gestes therto, and thus wyl it happen in the daye of the Lordes slayneoffering:

4.Re.xxv.b Jerem.xxxix.b I wyll vysite the pynces, the kynges chyldre, and all suche as weare straunge clothyng. In the the same day also wyll I vysyte all those that creade ouer the threshold so proudlye, whiche fyll their Lozdes house with robbery and falsehed.

At the same tyme (sayth the Lozde) there shall be herde a great crye from the fishporte, and an howlynge from the other porte, and a great murther from the hilles. Howle ye that dwel in the myll, for all the marchaunt people are gone, and all they that were laden wt syluer, are roted out.

c At the same tyme will I seke thorow Jerusalem with lanternes, and vysyte them that Jeremy.v.c Deut.xxix.c Jerem.xxiii.c continue in theyr dreggys, and saye in theyr hertes: Tushe, the Lozde wyll doo neyther good, nor euyll. Thyr goodes shall be spoyled, and theyr houses layde waste: they shall buylde houses, and not dwell in them: they shall plante vynyardes, but not drynke the wyne therof. For the great daye of the Lozde is at hande, it is harde by, and commeth on a pace. Horrible is the tydinges of the Lordes daye, then shall the graunt crye out: for that daye is a daye of wrathe, a daye of trouble and heynesse, a daye of bitter destruction and myserye, a darke and glomynge daye, a clouye and stormye daye, a daye of the noyse of trompetters and shawmes, against the strong cities and highe towres.

I will bringe the people into suche vexacion, that they shal go about like blynd men d because they haue synned against the Lozd. Their blonde shall be shed as the dust, and their bodyes as the myre. Neither their syluer ne their golde shall be able to delyuer them in the wrothfull daye of the Lozd, but the hole lande shal be consumed thorow the fyre of his gelousye: for he shall soone make cleane ryddaunce of all theym that dwell in the lande.

¶ He moueth to returne to God, prophesying vnto the one destruction, and to the other deliueraunce.

CAPI. II.

COme togyther and gather you, O frowarde people: or the thinge go forth a that is concluded, and or the tyme be passed awaye as the dust: or the fearefull wrath of the Lozde come vpon you, yea or the daye of the Lozdes sooze displeasure, come vpon you. Seke the Lozde all ye meke herted vpon earthe, ye that worke after his iudgemente: seke ryghtousnesse, seke lowlynesse: that ye maye be defended in the wrothful daye of the Lozde. For Gaza shall Jer.xlvii. be destroyed, and Ascalon shal be layd wast. Jerem. They shall cast out Asdod at the noone day, and Accaron shall be pluckte vp by the rotes.

b Wo vnto you that dwell vpon the see cost ye murtherous people: the worde of the Lord shall come vpon you, O Canaan thou lande of the Philistimes, I wyl destroy the, so that there shall no man dwell in the any more: as for the see coost, it shal be herdmens cotages and shepe foldes: yea it shall be a portion for suche as remayne of the house of Juda, to fede ther vpon. In the houses of Ascalon shal they rest toward night: for the Lord their God shall vysyte them, and turne away their captyuyrye. I haue herde the dispyte of Moab, and the blaspheymes of the children of Ammon howe they haue shamefully intreted my people, and magnifyed them selues with the borders of their lande. Therfore as truely as I lyue (sayth the Lozde of hoostes the God of Israel) Moab shal be as Sodome, and Ammon as Gomorra: euen dyre thorne hedges, salte pyttes and a perpetuall wyldernesse.

c The residue of my folke shall spoyle the the remnaunt of my people shall haue them in possession. This shall happen vnto them for their pryde, because they haue dealte so shamefully with the Lord of hoostes people, and magnyfyed them selues aboue them. The Lozde shall be grym vpon them, and destroye all the goodes in the lande. And all the Iles of the heithen shal worship hym euery man in his place.

d Ye Morians also shall perisshe with my sworde: yea he shal stretche out his hand ouer the North, and destroye Assur. As for Ninive, he shal make it desolate, dryye and waste. The flockes and all the beestes of the people shall lye in the myddest of it, pellicanes and storkes shall abyde in the vpper postes of it, foules shall synge in the wyndowes, and rauens shal syt vpon the balkes, for the bozders of Cedre shal be spoyled downe. This is the proude and carelesse cyty, that said in her herte: I am, and there is els none. O how is she made so waste that the beastes lye therin? Who so goeth by mocketh her, and poynteth at her with his fynger.

¶ Against the gouerners of Jerusalem. Of the tallynge of all the Gentyles. A comfort to the reliqy of Israel.

CAPI. III.

a WO to the abhominable, fylthy and cruel cyty: which will not heare, ne be reformed. Her trust is not in the Lozde, neither wyll she holde her to her God. Her rulers within her, are as rorynge lyons: her iudges are as wolues in the euenyng, whiche leaue nothing behind them till the morowe. Her Prophetes are lyghte persons and vnfaythfull men: her preestes vnhalowe the Sanctuarye, and wo wronge vnder the pretence of the lawe. But the iust Lozde that dothe no vnryght, was amonges them, euery mornyng shewyng them his lawe clerely, and ceased not. But the vngodly wil not learne to be ashamed. Therfore wil I rote out this people, and destroye theyr towres: yea and make their stretes so voyde, that no man shall go therin. Their cityes shall be broken downe, so that no body shal be left, ne dwell there any more.

b I sayd vnto them: feare me, and be contente to be reformed, that their dwellinge be not destroyed, and that there happen vnto theym none of these thynges, wherwith I shal visite them. But neuertheles, they stande vp early to folowe the lychtynesse of their owne ymaginacions. Therfore ye shall wayte vpon me sayth the Lozde, tyl the time that I stand vp for I am determined to gather the people, and to bring the kyngdomes togither, that I may poure out myne angre, yea all my wrathfull displeasure vpon them. For all the world shal be consumed with the fire of my gelousy. And then wil I clense the lyppes of the people, that they may euery one call vpon the name of the Lozde, and serue him with one shoulder. Such as I haue subdued, and my chyldren also who I haue scatred abrode, shall bring me presentes beyond the waters of Ethiopia.

In that time shalt thou be no more confoun- c ded bycause of all thy ymaginacions, wherthrow thou haddest offended me: for I will take awaye the proude boldes of thyne honour fro the, so that thou shalt no more triumphe bycause of my holy hyl. In the also wil I leaue a small poore symple people, which shal trust in the name of the Lozde. The remnaunt of Israel shal do no wickednesse, nor speke lies: neither shall any disceytfull tonge be founde in their mouthes. For they shall be fedde, and take theyr reste, and no man shall make them afrayde. Syng thankes, O doughter Syon, be ioyful, O Israel: reioyce and be glad from thy hole hert, O doughter Jerusalem, for the Lozde hath taken awaye thy punyshement, and turned backe thyne ennemyes. The kyng of Israell, euen the Lozde him selfe is with the, so that thou nedest no more to feare anye mysfortune. Jeremy.l.b

In that tyme it shal be sayd to Jerusalem: d feare not, and to Sion: let not thyne eyes be slacke, for the Lozde thy God is with the, he is he that hath power to saue: he hath a speciall pleasure in the, and a maruelous loue towarde the: yea he reioyseth ouer the with gladnesse. Suche as hathe ben in heynesse, wyl I gather togyther, & take out of thy congregacio: yea and the shame and reproue that hath ben layde vpon the, shall be farre from the. And lo, in that tyme wyll I destroye all those that vexe the: I wyll helpe the lame, and gather vp the cast awaye: yea I wyl get them prayse and honoure in all landes, where they haue ben put to shame. At the same tyme will I bring you in, and at the same time wil I gather you. I wyll get you a name and a good reporte amonge all people of the earthe, when I turne backe your captiuitie before youre eyes, saythe the Lozde. (?)

CAPI. I.

i.Esdr.vi.a / Dan.v.c.vi.a / i.E.ii.iii.iiii.b

A In the seconde yeare of kynge Darius, in the sixth moneth, the fyrst daye of the moneth, came the word of the Lorde (by the Prophete Aggeus) vnto Zorobabel the son of Salathiel the prynce of Juda, and to Jesus the sonne of Josedech the hye preest, sayinge: Thus speaketh the Lord of hostes, and sayth: This people dothe saye: The tyme is not yet come to buylde vp the Lordes house. Then spake the Lorde by the Prophete Aggeus, and sayd: Ye your selues can fynd tyme to dwell in syled houses, and shall this house
B lye waste?

Jeremi.xxii.a

Consydre now your owne wayes in youre hertes, sayth the Lord of hostes/ ye sow moch but ye bryng lytle in: ye eate, but ye haue not ynough: ye drynke, but ye are not fylled: ye decke youre selues, but ye are not warme/ and he that earneth any wage, putteth it in a broken purse.

Leuit.xxvi.d / Mich.vi.d / Osee.iiii.b / Malach.iii.b

C Thus sayth the Lorde of Hostes: Consydre youre owne wayes in youre hertes, get you vp to the mountayne, fetche wodde, and buylde vp the house, that it maye be acceptable vnto me, and that I maye shewe myne honour, sayth the Lorde. Ye loked for moch, and lo, it is come to lytle: and thoughe ye brynge it home, yet do I blowe it awaye. And why so sayth the Lorde of Hoostes? Euen bycause that my house lyeth so waste, and ye ren euery man vnto his owne house. Wherfore the heuen is forbydden to gyue you any dewe, and the earthe is forbydden to gyue you encrease. I haue called for a drouthe, bothe vpon the lande, and vpon the mountaynes, vpon corne vpon wyne, and vpon oyle, vpon euery thyng that the grounde bryngeth forthe, vpon men and vpon catell/ yea and vpon all handye laboure.

D Now when Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Jesus the sonne of Josedech the hye preest, with the remnaunt of the people, herde the voyce of the Lorde their God, and the wordes of the Prophete Aggeus (lyke as the Lorde their God had sent him) the people did feare the Lorde. Then Aggeus the Lordes aungell sayd in the Lordes message vnto the people: I am with you sayth the Lorde. So the Lord waked vp the spirite of Zorobabel the prynce of Juda, and the spirite of Jesus the sonne of Josedech the hye preest, & the spirite of the remnaunt of all the people, that they came and laboured in the house of the Lorde of hostes their God.

¶ He sheweth that the goodlynesse of the seconde temple shall excede the fyrste, bycause of the comyng of Chryste.

CAPI. II.

A Vpon the .xxiiii. daye of the syxte moneth in the seconde yere of kyng Darius, the one and twenty day of the seuenth moneth, came the worde of the Lord by the Prophete Aggeus, sayinge: Speake to Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel prince of Juda, & to Jesus the sonne of Josedech the hye preest, and to the resydue of the people, & say: Who is left amonges you, that sawe this house in her first beautye? But what thinke ye now by it? Is it not in your eyes, euen as thoughe it were nothing? Neuerthelesse be of good chere O Zorobabel (sayth the Lord) be of good comfort, O Jesus thou son of Josedech hye preest: take good hertes vnto you also, all ye people of the lande, sayth the Lorde of hostes, and doo accordynge to the worde (for I am with you sayth the Lord of hostes) like as I agreed with you, when ye came oute of the lande of Egypte, and my spirite shall be amonge you, feare ye not.

B For thus saythe the Lorde of Hostes: yet ones more wyll I shake heauen and earthe, the see, and the drye lande: yea, I will moue all Heathen, and the comforte of all Heathen shall come, and so wyl I fyll this house with honoure, saythe the Lorde of Hoostes. The syluer is myne, and the golde is myne, saythe the Lorde of Hoostes. Thus the glorye of the last house shall be greater then the fyrst, saythe the Lorde of Hostes: and in this place wyll I gyue peax, saythe the Lorde of Hostes.

C The .xxiiii. daye of the nyneth moneth, in the seconde yere of kynge Darius, came the worde of the Lorde vnto the Prophete Aggeus, sayinge: Thus saythe the Lorde God of Hoostes: Aske the preestes concernynge the lawe, and saye: yf one beare holye fleshe in his cote lap, and with his lap doo touche the breed, potage, wyne, oyle, or any other meat: shall he be holye also? The preestes aunswered and sayd: No. Then sayd Aggeus: Now yf one beyng defyled wt a deed carcase, touche anye of these, shall it also be vnclene? The preestes gaue answere and sayd/ yea, it shall be vnclene. Then Aggeus answered, and said:
D euen so is this people and this nacion before me, sayth the Lorde, and so are al the workes of their handes/ yea, and all that they offre is vnclene.

And now (I praye you) consydre from this daye forthe, and how it hathe gone with you afore, or euer there was layde one stone vpon an other in the temple of the Lord, that whe ye came to a corne heape of twenty busshels, there were scarce ten/ and that when ye came to the wyne presse for to poure oute fifty pottes of wyne, there were scarce twentye. For I smote you with heat, blastyng and hayle stones in all the labours of youre handes: yet was there none of you that wolde turne vnto me sayth the Lorde.

Consydre

D Consydre then from this daye forth and afore, namely from the foure and twenty daye of the nyneth moneth, vnto the daye that the foundacion of the Lordes temple was layde: marke it wel, is not the seed yet in the barne? haue not the vynes, the figge trees, the pomegranettes, and olyue trees ben yet vnfrutful? but from this daye forth, I shall make them to prospere.

Moreouer the four and twenty day of the moneth, came the worde of the Lorde vnto Aggeus agayne, sayinge: Speake to Zorobabel the prynce of Juda, and say: I wyl shake both heuen and erth, and ouerthrowe the seat of the kyngdomes, yea and destroye the myghtye kyngdome of the Heathen. I wyll ouerthrowe the charettes, and those that sytte vpon them, so that bothe horse and man shal fall downe, euerye man thorowe his neyghboures swerde. And as for the, O Zorobabel, (sayth the Lorde of Hostes) thou sonne of Salathiel my seruaūt: I wil take the (sayth the Lord) at the same time and make the as a seale, for I haue chosen the, saith the Lorde of hostes.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE ZACHARY.

¶ He monesth the people to returne to the Lorde, and to eschewe the wyckednesses of theyr fathers. He prefygureth Chryste and the Apostles.

CAPI. I.

A In the eyght moneth of the secōde yere of kinge Darius, came the worde of the Lord vnto Zachary the son of Barachias, the son of Addo the Prophete saying: the Lord hath bene sore displeased at your fore fathers. And saye thou vnto them: thus sayth the Lorde of hostes. Turne you vnto me (sayth the Lorde of hostes) and I wyll turne me vnto you, sayth the Lord of hostes. Be not ye like your fore fathers vnto whom the Prophetes cryed afore time, saying: thus sayth the Lorde God of hostes. Tourne you from your euil wayes, and from your wicked ymagynacions. But they wolde not heare, ne regarde me, sayth the Lorde.

Mat.xxiii.c / Jere.xxxi.c / Mala.iii.b / Jere.xliiii.c / Psa.lxxvi.a / Osee.xiiii.a / Toby.xiii.b

What is now become of your fore fathers and the Prophetes? are they yet styll alyue? But dyd not my wordes and statutes, which I commaunded by my seruauntes the Prophetes) touche your fore fathers? Upon this they gaue answere, and said: like as the Lord of hostes deuised to do vnto vs, accordyng to our owne wayes and ymaginacions, euen so hath he delt with vs.

Ezech.xxxiii.c / Jere.xliiii.a / xxv.c

B Upon the .xxiiii. day of the .xi. moneth, whiche is the moneth Sebath, in the second yere of Darius, came the worde of the Lorde vnto Zachary the son of Barachias, the son of Addo the Prophet, saying: I sawe by night, and lo, there sate one vpon a red horse, and stode stil among the Myrre trees that were beneth vpon the groūd: and behynd him were there red, speckled, and whyte horses. Then sayd I: O my Lorde, what are these? And the aungel that talked with me, sayde vnto me: I will shewe the what these be. And the man ẏ stode amonges the Myrre trees answered and said These are they whom the Lorde hath sent to goo thorowe the worlde. And they answered the aungel of the Lord that stode among the Myrt trees, and said: We haue gone thorow the worlde, and beholde all the worlde dwelleth at ease, and are carelesse.

C Then the Lordes aungell gaue aunswere, and sayd: O Lorde of hostes, how long wylt thou be vnmercyful to Jerusalem, and to the cities of Juda, with whom thou hast ben displeased nowe these thre score & ten yeres? So the Lorde gaue a louynge and comfortable aunswere vnto the aungell that talked with me. And the aungell that talked with me, sayd vnto me. Crye thou, and speake: Thus saythe the Lorde of hostes: I am excedynge gelous ouer Jerusalem and Syon, and sore displeased at the carelesse heathē: for where as I was but a lytle angrye they dyd their best that I might destroye thē. Therfore thus Zachari.viii.b sayth the Lorde: I will tourne me agayne in mercye towarde Jerusalem, so that my house shall be buylded in it, sayethe the Lorde of hoostes: yea, and the plommet shall be layde abrode in Jerusalem, sayethe the Lorde of Hoostes.

D Crye also, and speake: Thus sayethe the Lorde of hoostes: My cityes shall be in good prosperitie agayne, the Lorde shall yet comforte Sion, and chose Jerusalem. Then lyfte I vp myne eyes and sawe, and beholde, foure hornes. And I sayd vnto the aungel that talked with me: what be these? he aunswered me: These are the hornes whiche haue scatered Juda, Israel, and Jerusalem abrode. And the Lorde shewed me foure carpenters. Then sayd I, what wyll these doo? He aunswered and sayd: those are the hornes, which haue so strowed Juda abrode, that no man durst lyfte vp his heed: but these are come to fray them away, and to cast out the hornes of the Gentyles, which lift vp their horne ouer the lande of Juda, to scatre it abrode.

¶ The renewynge of Jerusalem and Juda.

CAPI. II.

E I Lyfte vp myne eyes agayne and loked/ and Ezec.xliiii.b beholde, a man with a measure lyne in his Apoca.xxi.c hande. Then sayde I: whyther goest thou? And he sayd vnto me, to measure Jerusalem, that I may se how long and how brode it is. And beholde the aungel that talked with me went his way forth. Then went there out another aungel to mete him and sayd vnto him: Run, speke to this yong man, and saye: Jerusalem shal be inhabited without any wal, for the very multitude of people and cattell, that shal be therin. Yea I my self (sayth the Lord) will be vnto her a wall of fyre round about and wyll be honoured in her.

F O get you forth, O fle from the land of the North, sayth the Lord, ye whom I haue scatered in to the four wyndes vnder heuen, sayth the Lord. Saue thy selfe, O Sion: thou that dwellest with the doughter of Babylon, for thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes: with a glorious power hath he sent me out to ꝑ heathē which spoyled you: for who so toucheth you, shal touche the apple of his own eye. Beholde I wil lifte vp myne hand ouer them, so ꝑ they shall be spoyled of those whiche afore serued them, and ye shall knowe that the Lorde of hoostes hath sent me.

G Be glad and reioyce, O doughter of Syon for lo, I am come to dwell in the myddest of the, sayth the Lorde. At the same tyme there shall many heathen cleaue to the Lorde, and shall be my people. Thus wyll I dwell in the myddest of the, and thou shalte knowe that the Lorde of hoostes hath sent me vnto the. The Lorde shall haue Juda in possession for his paete in the holy grounde, and shall chose Jerusalem yet agayne. Lette all fleshe be styll before the Lorde, for he is risen out of his holy place.

¶ Of the lawe and hyghe estate of Chryste, vnder the fygure of Jesus the preest. The prophecy of Christ.

CAPI. III.

A Nd he shewed me Jesus the hygh preest standynge before the aungell of the Lorde, and Satan stode at his ryghte hande to resyst him. And the Lorde sayd vnto Satan: The Lorde reproue the (thou Satan) yea the Lorde that hath chosen Jerusalem reproue the. Is not this a brande taken out of the fyre?

Now Jesus was clothed in vncleane rayment, & stode before the angel: which answered and sayd vnto those that stode before him take awaye the foule clothes from him. And vnto him he sayd: Beholde, I haue taken awaye thy synne from the, and wyll decke the with chaunge of rayment. He sayd moreouer, set a fayre myter vpon his head. So they set a fayre myter vpon his head, and put on clothes vpon him, and the aungell of the Lorde stode there.

Then the aungel of the Lord testifyed vnto Jesus, and spake: thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes: Yf thou wylte walke in my wayes, and kepe my watche: thou shalte rule my house, and kepe my courtes, and I wyll graue the place among these that stande here. Heare O Jesus thou hye preest, thou and thy frendes that dwell before the, for they are wonderous people.

Beholde, I wil bring forth the braunche of my seruaūt: for lo, the stone that I haue layd before Jesus / vpon one stone shall be seuen eyes. Beholde, I wyll hewe him oute (sayth the Lorde of hoostes) and take away the synne of that lande in one daye. Then shall euerye man call for his neyghboure vnder the vyne, and vnder the fygge tre, sayth the Lorde of hoostes.

¶ The vysyon of the golden candelstycke, and the exposicion therof.

CAPI. IIII.

A Nd the aungell that talked with me, came agayne, and waked me vp, as a man that is raysed out of his slepe, and sayd vnto me: What seest thou. And I sayd: I haue loked, and beholde a candelstycke all of golde, and a bolle vpon it ie, and his seuen lampes therin, and vpon euery lampe.vii. nales. And two olyue trees therby, one vpō the ryght syde of the boll, and the other vpon the lefte syde.

So I aunswered and spake to the aungell that talked with me, sayinge: O my lorde, what are these? The aungell that talked with me, aunswered and sayde vnto me: knowest thou not what these be? And I sayd: No my

No my lorde. He aunswered and sayde vnto me: This is the worde of the Lorde vnto Zorobabel, sayinge: Neyther thorowe an hoste of men, nor thorowe strengthe, but thorowe my spirite, sayethe the Lorde of hoostes. What arte thou, thou greate mountayne, before Zorobabel? thou must be made euen. And he shall brynge vp the fyrste stone, so that men shall crye vnto him: good lucke good lucke.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: The handes of Zorobabell haue layde the foundacion of this house, his handes shal also finish it, that ye may knowe how that the Lorde of hoostes hathe sente me vnto you.

For he that hath ben despysed a lytle season, shall reioyce, when he seeth the tynne weyght in Zorobabels hand. The seuen eyes are the Lordes whiche goo thorowe the hole worlde. Then aunswered I, and sayde vnto him: What are these two olyue trees vpon the ryghte and lefte syde of the candelstycke? I spake moreouer, and sayd vnto him: what be these two olyue braunches (which thorow the two golden pypes) empeye them selues in to the golde? He aunswered and sayd: knowest thou not what these be? And I sayd, no my Lorde. Then sayd he: These are the two olyue braunches that stande before the ruler of the hole erth.

¶ The vysyon of the flyeing boke, signifyinge the curse of theues and suche as abuse the name of God By the vysyon of the measure, is signifyed the bringe of Juda to Babylon.

CAPI. V.

A SO I tourned, me lyftynge vp myne eyes and loked, and beholde a flying boke. And he sayd vnto me: what seest thou? I answered: I se a flyenge boke of twenty cubytes longe, and ten cubytes brode. Then sayde he vnto me: this is the curse that goeth forth ouer the hole earthe: for all theues shall be iudged after this boke, and all sweerers shall be iudged accordynge to the same, I wil bring it forthe (sayethe the Lorde of Hoostes) so that it shall come to the house of the theefe, and to the house of him that falsely sweereth by my name: and shall remayne in his house and consume it, with the tymbre and stones therof.

Then the aungel that talked with me, went forth, and sayd vnto me: lyfte vp thyne eyes and se, what this is that goeth forth. And I sayd, what is it? He answered: this is a measure goynge oute. He sayde moreouer: Euen thus are they (that dwel vpon the hole erth) to loke vpon. And beholde, there was lyfte vp a talent of leade: and lo, a woman sat in the myddest of the measure. And he sayde this is vngodlynesse. So he caste her in to the myddest of the measure, and threwe the lompe of leed vp in to an hole.

Then lyfte I vp myne eyes, and loked/ and beholde there came out two women, and the wynde was in their wynges (for they had wynges lyke the winges of a storke) and they lyfte vp the measure betwixte the earth and the heauen.

Then spake I to the aungell that talked with me: whyther wyll these beare the measure? And he sayd vnto me: in to the lande of Synear, to buylde them an house, whiche Gene.x.b when it is prepared, the measure shall be set there in his place.

¶ By the foure charettes, he describeth the prosperyte of the foure kyngdomes.

CAPI. VI.

MOreouer I tourned me, lyfting vp myne eyes and loked: and beholde there came foure charettes out from betwixt two hylles, whiche hylles were of brasse: In the fyrste charet were redde horse, in the seconde charet were blacke horse, in the thyrde charet were whyte horse, in the fourth charet were horses of dyuers colours, and stronge. Then spake I, and sayd vnto the aungell that talked with me: O Lorde, what are these: The aungell aunswered and sayd vnto me: These Jeremy.xliii.d are the foure wyndes of the heauen, whyche be come forthe to stande before the ruler of all the erth.

That with the blacke horse went in to the lande of the North, and the whyte followed them, and the speckled horses went forth toward the South. These horses were verye stronge, and went oute, and sought to go and take their iourney ouer the hole erth. And he sayd: get you hence, and go thorowe the worlde. So they went thorowe oute the worlde. Then cryed he vpon me, and spake vnto me, saying: behold: these that go toward the North, shall fyll my wrath in the North countrey.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Take of the prysoners that are come from Babylon: namely Heldai, Tobiah, and Idaia: and come thou the same daye, and go in to the house of Josiah the son of Sophony. The take gold and siluer, and make crownes therof, and set them vpon the heed of Jesus ꝑ son of Jesedech the hye preest and speke vnto him: thus sayth the Lord of hoostes: Beholde Zachary.iii.b the man whose name is the braunche, and he Plal.cxxv.viii.a that shal spring vp after him, shal buylde vp the temple of the Lorde. Yea euē he shal buylde Apo.iiii.b.v.b the temple of the Lorde. He that beare ꝑ praise he shall syt vpon the Lordes trone, and haue the dominacion.

A preest shal be also vpon his trone, and a peaceable counsell shall be betwixte them both. And the crownes shall be in the temple of the Lorde, for a remembraunce vnto Helem, Tobiah, Idaia, and Hen the sonne of Sophony. And such as be farre of, shall come and buylde the temple of the Lorde, that ye maye knowe how that the Lorde of hoostes hath sent me vnto you. And this shall come to passe, yf ye wyl harken diligently vnto the voyce of the Lorde your God.

¶ The estymation of fastynge without mercye. The delpytynge of charitye, and the obstinacye of the people.

CAPI. VII.

A IT happened also in the fourthe yere of kyng Darius, that the worde of the Lorde came vnto Zachary, in the fourth daye of the nynneth moneth, whiche is called Casleu, what time as Sarasar and Rogomelech and the men that were wt them sent vnto Bethel for to praye before the Lorde: and that they shoulde saye vnto the Preestes whiche were 4.Reg.xxv.b in the house of the Lord of hostes, and to the Prophetes, shoulde I wepe in the fyfth moneth, and abstayne as I haue done nowe certayne yeres?

B Then came the worde of the Lorde of Jeremy.xli.a hostes vnto me sayinge: Speake vnto all the people of the lande, and to the preestes, and saye, when ye fasted and mourned in the fyue and seuen moneth (nowe this thre score and ten yeres) dyd ye fast vnto me? When ye ate also and dronke, dyd ye not eate and drynke for your owne selues? Are not these the wordes whiche the Lorde spake by his Prophetes afore tyme, when Jerusalem was inhabited and welthye, she and the cityes rounde about her: when there dwelte men, bothe towarde the South, and in the playne countrees.

C And the worde of the Lorde came vnto
zachari. viii.c Zacharye, sayinge: Thus sayethe the Lorde
Exod.xxii.c of hostes: Execute true iudgement, shewe mercy and louynge kyndnesse, euerye man to his brother. Do the wydow, the fatherlesse, the straunger, and poore no wronge: and let no man ymagyn euyll agaynst his brother in his herte.

Neuertheles, they wolde not take hede, but tourned theyr backes, and stopped theyr eares, that they shoulde not heare: yea,
4.Petri.i.d they made theyr hertes as an Adamante stone, lest they shoulde heare the lawe and wordes, whiche the Lorde of hostes sent in his holye spiryte by the Prophetes afore tyme.

D Wherfore the Lorde of hostes was verye wrothe at them. And thus is it come to passe that lyke as he spake, and they wolde not Jeremy.xli.b heare: euen so they cryed, and I wolde not heare (sayethe the Lorde of hostes) but scattered them among all Gentyles, whom they knewe not. Thus the lande was made so desolate, that there trauayled no man in it nether to nor fro, for that pleasaunt lande was vtterly layde waste.

¶ Of the returne of the people vnto Jerusalem, and of the mercy of God towarde them. Of good workes. The callynge of the Gentyles.

CAPI. VIII.

SO the worde of the Lorde came vnto me
A sayinge: Thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes: I was in a gelousye ouer Syon, yea I haue ben verye gelous ouer her in a greate displeasure, thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: I wyll tourne me agayne vnto Syon, and wyll dwell in the myddest of Jerusalem: so Ezy.
that Jerusalem shal be called a faythful and true citye, the hyll of the Lorde of hostes, yea an holy hyll.

Thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes: There shall yet olde men and women dwell agayne in the stretes of Jerusalem: yea and suche as goo with staues in theyr handes for very age. The stretes of the citye also shall be full of younge boyes and damosels playinge vpon the stretes.

Thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes: yf the B reslydue of this people thyncke it to be vnpossible in these dayes, shoulde it therfore be vnpossyble in my syghte, sayethe the Lorde Actis.
of Hoostes? Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, I wyl delyuer my people from Jeremy.
the lande of the Easte and Weste, and wyll Zacha.viii.
bringe them agayne, that they maye dwelle at Jerusalem. They shall be my people, and I wyll be theyr God in truthe and righteousnesse.

Thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes: lette
youre handes be stronge, ye that nowe heare these wordes by the mouthe of the Prophetes whiche be in these dayes, that the foun- Aggeus dacyon is layde vpon the Lorde of hoostes house, that the temple maye be buylded. For why? before these dayes, neyther meane catell coulde wynne any thynge, neither myght anye man come in and oute in rest, for trouble: but I let euerye man goo agaynst his neyghbour.

Neuertheles, I wyll now intreate the reSydue of this people no more as afore tyme, sayethe the Lorde of Hostes, but they shall be a sede of peax. The vyneyarde shall gyue her frute, the grounde shall gyue her increase, and the heauens shall gyue theyr dewe: and I shall cause the remnaunte of this people to haue all these in possession. And it shall come to passe, that lyke as ye were a curse amonge the Heathē (O ye house of Juda and ye house of Israel) Euen so wyll I delyuer you, that ye shall be a blessyng: feare not, but let youre handes be stronge.

For thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes: lyke C as I decysed to punysshe you, what tyme as your fathers prouoked me vnto wrath, sayeth the Lorde of hostes, and spared not. Euen so am I determyned now in these dayes, for to do wel vnto the house of Juda and Jerusalē, therfore feare ye not. Nowe the thinges that ye shall do, are these: Speake euery man the Ephesi.
truth vnto his neyghbour, execute iudgement truelye, and peaceablye within youre portes, none of you ymagyn euyll in his herte against his neyghbour, and loue no false othes: for all these are the thynges that I hate, sayethe the Lorde.

And

And the worde of the Lorde of hostes came vnto me, sayinge: thus sayth the Lord of hostes: The fast of the fourth moneth, the faste of the fyfth, the faste of the seuenth, and the fast of the tenth, shall be ioye and gladnesse, and prosperous dyngbe feastes vnto the house of Juda: Onely, loue the truth and peax.

D Thus sayth the the Lord of hostes: There shall yet come people, and the inhabiters of many cytyes: and they that dwell in one citie shall go to an other, sayinge: Up, let vs go, & praye before the Lorde, let vs seke the Lorde of hostes, I wyll go with you: yea moch people and myghty Heithen shall come and seke the Lord of hostes at Jerusalem, and to pray before the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lord of hostes: In that tyme shall ten men (out of all maner of languages of the Gētyles) take one Jewe by the hemme of his garment, & saye: we will go with you, for we haue herd, that God is amonge you.

¶ The conuersyon of the Gentyles. The cōmynge of Christe tyrynge on an Asse.

CAPI. IX.

THE worde of the Lorde shall be receyued at Adrach, and Damascus shall be his offeringe: for the eyes of all men & of the tribes of Israel shall looke vp vnto the Lorde. The borders of Hemath shal be hard therby, Tyrus also and Sidon, for they are very wyse.

Tyrus shall make her selfe stronge, heape vp syluer as the sande, and golde as the claye of the stretes. Beholde the Lorde shall take her in, & haue her in possession: he shal smyte downe her power in to the see, and she shall be consumed with fyre. This shall Ascalon se and be afrayde. Gaza shal be very sory, so shal Accaron also, because her hope is come to confusion. For the kinge of Gaza shall perishe, & at Ascalon shall no man dwell.

B Straungers shall dwel at Asdod, and as for the pryde of the Philistines, I shall rote it out. Their bloude wyl I take away frō their mouth and their abhominacions from amōgs their teeth. Thus they shall be lefte for our God, yea they shal be as a prince i Juda, & Accaron like as Jebusy. And so wyll I compasse my house round about with my men of warre goynge to and fro: that no oppressour come vpon them any more. For that haue I sene nowe with myne eyes.

Reioyce thou greatlye, O doughter Sion
L be glad, O doughter Jerusalem. For lo, thy kinge commeth vnto the, euen the vprightous and Sauyoure: Lowly and symple is he, he rydeth vpon an asse, and vpon the foale of an asse. I wyll rote out the charettes from Ephraim and the horse from Jerusalem, the battelbowes shall be destroyed. He shall gyue the doctrine of peax vnto the heythen, and his dominyon shall be frome the one see to the other, and frome the floudes to the endes of the worlde.

Thou also thorowe the bloude of thy cowe
naunt shalt let thy prysoners out of the pitte wherin is no water. Turne you nowe to the stronge holde, ye that be in pryson, and longe sore to be delyuered: And this daye I bynge the worde, that I wyll rewarde the double agayne. For Juda haue I bent out as a bowe for me, and Ephraim haue I fylled. Thy sonnes (O Sion) wyl I rayse vp agaynste the Grekes, and make the as a gyauntes swerde: the Lorde God shal be sene aboue them, and his dartes shall goo forthe as the lyghtenynge. The Lorde God shal blowe the trompette, and shall come forthe as a storme oute of the southe.

The Lorde of hoostes shal defend them, D
they shal consume and deuoure, and subdue Zacharei.xii.&
them with slynge stones. They shall drincke Eccle.xlvii.&
and rage, as it were thorow wine. They shal be fylled lyke the basens, and as the hornes of all the aulter.

The Lorde their God shall delyuer them in the daye, as the flocke of his people: for they stones of his Saunctuarye shall be set vp in his lande. O howe prosperous and goodly a thinge shall that be? The corne shall make the yonge men chearefull, & the newe wine the maydens.

¶ The people is moued to requyre the doctrine of truthe of the Lorde. The Lorde promyseth to vysite and comfort the house of Israel.

CAPI. X.

A PRaye the Lorde then by tymes to gyue
Jacobi.c you the latter rayne, so shall the Lorde make cloudes, and gyue you rayne ynough for all the encreasse of the felde: for vayne is the answere of Idols.

The sothsayers se lyes, and tell but vayne dreames: the comforte that they gyue, is no thinge worth. Therfore go they astraye like a flocke of shepe, & are troubled, because they haue no shepherde.

My wrothful displeasure is moued at the B shepherdes, and I wyll vysyte the gotes. For Ezech.xxiiii.c
the Lorde of hostes wyll graciously visite his flocke, the house of Juda, and holde them Esay.xxii.d
as a goodly fayre horse in the battayle. Oute Gene.xix.d
of Juda shall come the helmet, the nale, the battelbowe, and all the princes togyther. They shall be as the gyauntes, which in the battayle trede downe the myre vpon the stretes. They shall fyght, for the Lorde shall be with them, so that the horsmen shall be confounded.

I will comforte the house of Juda, and pre- C serue the house of Joseph. I wyll turne the also, for I pytye them: and they shall be like as they were, when I had not cast them of. For I the Lord am their God, and wyl heare them.

Ephraim shall be as a gyaunte, and their herte shall be cherefull as thorowe wyne: yea their children shall se it, and be gladde, & their their hert shall reioyce in the Lorde. I wyll blow for them and gather them togither, for D I wyll redeme them. They shall increase, as they increased afore. I wil sowe them amóg

the people, that they maye thinke vpon me in farre countreyes: they shal lyue with their chyldren, and turne agayne. I wyll bring thē agayne also from the lande of Egypte, and gather them out of Assiria. I wyl carye them into the lande of Galaad and to Lybanus &
they shall want nothynge. He shall go vpon
the see of trouble, and smyte the waues: so that al the depe floudes shal be dryed vp. The proude bostinge of Assur shall be cast downe
Esay.x.a Ezech.xxix. and the scepter of Egypt shal be takē away.
I wyll comforte them in the Lord, that they maye walke in his name, sayth the Lorde.

¶ The destruction of the temple. The care of the faythfull is commytted to Chryste, by the father. A greuous vysyon agaynst Ierusalem and Iuda.

CAPI. XI.

A OPen thy dores, O Libanus, that the fyre maye consume thy Cedre trees.
Howle ye Fyrre trees, for the Cedre is fallen, yea all the proude are wasted awaye.
Howle (O ye oke trees of Baasan (for ye migh tye strong wod is cut downe. Men may heare the shepherdes mourne, for their glory is destroyed. Men may heare the lyons whelpes roare for the pryde of Iordane is wasted awaye.
Thus sayth the Lorde my God: Fede the shepe of the slaughter, which shall be slayne of those that possesse thē, yet they take it for no sinne, but they that sell them saye: The Lorde be thanked, I am rich: yea their owne shepherdes spare them not. Therfore will I no more spare those that dwell in the lande (sayth the Lorde) but lo, I will delyuer the people, euery man in to his neighboures hād and in to the hande of his kinge: that they maye smyte the lande, and out of their han-des will not I delyuer them.
I my selfe fed the slaughter shepe (a poore
B flocke verelye) and toke vnto me two staues:
the one I called louinge meknesse, the other I called wo, and so I kepte the shepe. Thre shepherdes destroyed I in one moneth, for I Math.xxii.e myght not awaye wt thē, neither had they any delyte in me. Then sayde I: I wyll fede you no more, the thinge that dyeth, let it dye: and that wyll perysshe, let it perisshe, and let the remnaunte eate, euery one the flesshe of his neyghbour. I toke also my louing meke staffe and brake it, that I myght disanull the coue-naunt, which I made with al people. And so it was broken in that daye.
C Then the poore symple shepe that hadde a respecte vnto me, knewe therbye, that it was the worde of the Lorde. And I sayd vnto thē yf ye thinke it good, bringe hither my pryce:
yf no, then leaue. So they wayed downe. xxx Mat.xxvii.a syluer pens, the value that I was prysed at.
And the Lord sayd vnto me: cast it yt the pot ter (a goodly pryce for me to be valued at of them) and I toke the. xxx. siluer pens, and cast them to the potter in the house of the Lord.
Then brake I my other staffe also (namelye D wo) that I myght lowse the brotherhede be twyxte Iuda and Israel. And the Lorde said vnto me: Take to the also the staffe of a fo-lysh shepeherde: for lo, I wyl rayse vp a shep
herde in the lande, which shall not seke after the thynges that be loste, ne care for suche as go astray: he shal not heale yt wounded, he shal not norysh the thing that is hole: but he shall eate the flesh of suche as be fat, & teare their clawes in peces.
O Idolles shepherde, that leaueth the Idols shepherde.
flocke. The swerde shall come vpon his arme and vpon his ryghte eye. His arme shall be cleane dryed vp, & his ryght eye shall be sore blynded.

¶ Of the destruction and buyldynge agayne of Ierusalem.

CAPI. XII

THe heuye burthen whiche the Lorde A hath deuysed for Israel. Thus sayth yt Lord, which spred the heuens abrode, layde the foundacion of the earthe, and gyueth man the breath of lyfe: Beholde, I wil make Ierusalem a cuppe of surfet, vnto all the people that are round about her: Yea Iu
da him selfe also shall be in the siege agaynst Ierusalem. At the same tyme wyll I make Ie rusalem an heup stone for all people, so that all suche as lyft it vp, shal be torne and rent, and al yt people of the earth shal be gathered togither agaynste it.
In that daye, sayth the Lord, I wil make B al horses abasshed, and those that ryde vpon them, to be out of their wyttes. I wyll open mine eyes vpon the house of Iuda, and smite
all the horses of the people with blyndnesse.
And the princes of Iuda shal say in their her-tes: The inhabiters of Ierusalem shall giue me consolacion in the Lorde of hostes their God. In that tyme wyll I make the princes of Iuda like an hote burning ouē with wod,
and lyke a cresset of fyre amonge the strawe,
so yt they shal consume al the people rounde about them, both vpon the right hande and the left. Ierusalem also shall be inhabited a-gayne namely, in the same place where Ieru
salem standeth.
The Lorde shall preserue the tentes of Iu C da lyke as afore tyme: so that the glorye of the house of Dauid and the glorye of the citesins of Ierusalem, shall be but lytle regarded, in comparison of the glory of Iuda. In yt daye shall the Lorde defende the citezins of Ierusalem: so that the weakest thē amonges them shal be as Dauid: and the house of Da uid shall be lyke as Gods house, and as the angel of the Lorde before them.
At the same tyme wyll I go about to de-stroye al suche people as come agaynste Ieru salem. Moreouer, vpon the house of Dauid and vpon the citezins of Ierusalem, wyll I poure out the spirite of grace and prayer, so that they shall loke vpon me, whome they haue pearsed: and they shall be wepe him, as men mourne for theyr onely begoten sonne:
yea and be sory for hym, as men are sory for theyr fyrst chylde.
D Then shall there be a greate mournynge
at Ierusalem, lyke as the lamentacion at A-dremnon in the felde of Maggadon. And the lande shal bewayle euery kinred by them sel
ues: The kynred of the house of Dauid them
selues alone, and their wiues by them selues,
The kinred of the house of Nathan them sel
ues alone, and their wiues by them selues:
The kinred of the house of Leui them selues alone and their wyues by them selues: The kynred of the house of Semei them selues alone, and theyr wyues by them selues: In like maner, al yt other generaciōs, euery chone
by them selues alone, & their wyues by them selues.

¶ Of the well of grace and truthe Chryste. Of the cleane ryddaunce of Idolatrye, and of the false prophetes.

CAPI. XIII.

A IN that tyme shall the house of Dauid &
the citezins of Ierusalē haue an open wel to wash of sinne and vnclennes. And then (sayth the Lorde of hostes) I wyll destroye
the names of Idolles oute of the lande: so that they shall no more be put in remembraunce.
As for the false Prophetes also and the vncleane spirite, I shall take them out of the lande: So that yf any of them prophecye any more, his owne father and mother that begat him, shall saye vnto him: Thou shalte dye, for thou speakest lyes vnder the name of yt Lord, yea his owne father and mother yt begat him, shall wounde him, when he prophecieth.
B And thē shall those prophetes be cōfounded euerye one of his vision when he prophecyeth neither shall they were sackclothes any more, to disceyue men withal. But he shal be fayne to saye: I am no prophete: I am an husbande man, for so am I taught by Adam fro my youth vp.
And yf it be sayde vnto him: Howe came these woundes then in thine hādes? He shal answere: Thus am I wounded in the house
C of myne owne frendes.
Aryse, O thou swerd, vpon my shepherde,
and vpon the Prince of my people, sayth the Lorde of hoostes: Smyte the Shepherde, &
the shepe shall be scatered abrode, and so wil
I turne myne hande to the lytle ones. And it shall come to passe (sayth the Lorde) that in all the lande two partes shall be roted out,
D but the thyrde parte shall remayne therin.
And the same thyrde parte wyll I bringe thorow the fyre, and wyll clense them as the siluer is clensed: yea & trye them like as golde is tryed. Then shall they call vpon my name and I wyll heare them: I wyll say: it is my people. And they shall say: Lorde: my God.

¶ The wastynge of the churche vnder the fygure of Ierusalem. Of the kyngdome of the Lorde.

CAPI. XIIII.

BEholde, the daye of the Lorde cometh, A that thou shalte be spoyled and robbed for I gather togither all the heithen, to fyght agaynste Ierusalem: so that the cytye shall be won, the houses spoyled, and the wo men defyled. The halfe of the citye shall go awaye into captyuytye, and the resydue of yt people shall not be caryed out of the cytye. Af ter that shall the Lorde go forthe to fyghte
agaynste those heithen, as men vse to fyghte
in the day of battayle. Then shal his fete stād vpon the mounte Olyuete, that lyeth vpon
the east syde of Ierusalem. And the mount O lyuete shall cleaue in two, estwarde, & westwarde, so that there shall be a greate valley:
and the halfe mounte shall remoue towarde
the north, and the other towarde the south.
And ye shal flee vnto the valley of my hilles
for the valley of the hilles shall reche vnto B Asal. Yea fle shal ye, like as ye fled for yt earth Amos.i.a quake in the dayes of Osias kinge of Iuda.
And the Lorde my God shall come, and all payntes with him. In that daye shall it not be lyght, but colde and froste. This shall be that speciall day, which is knowne vnto the Lorde: neither daye ne nyght, but about the euenyng tyme it shal be lyght. In that tyme shall these waters of lyfe runne oute frome Ierusalem: the halfe parte of them toward the east see, and the other halfe towarde the vttermost see, and shall contynue both somer and winter. And the Lorde him selfe shall be kinge ouer al the earthe.
At that tyme shall there be one Lorde C and his name shall be but one. Men shall go about the hole earth, as vpon a felde: frome Gibea to Remmon, & from the south to Ieru salem, She shall be set vp, and inhabited in her place: frome BenIamins port, vnto the place of the fyrste porte, and vnto the corner porte: and from the tower of Hananeel, vn to the kinges wine presses. There shall men dwel, and there shall be no more cursing, but Ierusalem shall be safely inhabyted. This shall be the plage, wherwith the Lorde will smyte al people, that haue fought agaynste Ierusalem: Namely, their flesh shal consume awaye, thoughe they stande vpon their fete:
their eyes shal be corrupte in their holes, and their tunge shall consume in their mouth.
In that daye shal the Lorde make a great sedicion amonges them, so that one mā shal
take an other by the hande, & laye his handes vpon the handes of his neyghboure. Iudas shall fyght also agaynste Ierusalem, and the goodes of all heithen shall be gathered togy ther rounde about: golde and and siluer and a very greate multytude of clothes. And so shall this plage go ouer horses, mules, camels, asses, and all the beastes that shall be in the holle, lyke as ponder plage was. Euery one that remaynith then of al ỹ people, whiche came agaynste Jerusalem, shall go vp eare ly, to worshyp the kinge (euen the Lorde of hostes) and to kepe the feast of tabernacles. And loke what generacion vpon earth goeth not vp to Jerusalem, for to worshyppe the kinge (euen the Lorde of hostes) vpon the same shall come no rayne. If the kynred of Egypt go not vp, and come not, it shall rayne vpon the neither.
in the

D This shall be the plage wherwith ỹ Lord wyll smyte all heithen, that come not vp to kepe the feast of tabernacles: yea this shal be the synne plage of Egipt and the synne plage of all people, that go not vp to kepe ỹ feaste of tabernacles.

At that tyme shal the rydynge geer of the hosles be holy vnto the Lorde, and the kettels in the Lordes houle shall be lyke ỹ basens before the auiter: yea all the kettels in Jerusalem and Juda, shall be holy vnto the Lord of hoſtes: and all they that slaye offrynges, shall come take of theym, and dighte theym therin. And at that tyme there shal be no mo Cananites in ỹ houle of the Lord.

¶ The ende of the prophecy of zachary.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE MALACHI.

¶ Is complaynt agaynst Jsrael and her prestes.

CAPI. I.

THe heuy burthen, which ỹ Lord sheweth agaynst Jsrael by Malechy. J haue loued you (saith the Lord:) yet ye saye: wherin hast thou loued vs? Was not Esau Jacobs brother, saythe the Lorde? yet haue J loued Jacob and hated Esau: yea J haue made his hilles waste, and his heritage a wildernes for dragons. And though Edom saye: wel, we are destroyed, we wyl go buylde vp agayne the places that be wasted: yet (saith the Lord of hostes) what they buylde that brake J down: so that it was called a cursed lande, and a people, whom the Lorde hath euer bene angrye withall.

Your eyes haue sene it, and ye youre selues must confesse, that the Lorde hath brought the land of Jsrael to greate honoure. Shuld not a sonne honoure his father, & a seruaunt his master? If J be nowe a father, where is myne honoure? If J be the Lord, where am J feared? sayth the Lorde of hostes.

Now to you prestes, that despise my name. And yf ye saye: wherin haue we despysed thy name? In this, ỹ ye offre vncleane vyed vpō myne auiter. And yf ye wyl saye: wherin haue we offred any vncleane thinge vnto the? In this that ye saye: the auiter of the Lorde is not to be regarded. If ye ofre the blynde, is not that euyll? And yf ye offre the lame and sycke, is not that euyll? Yea offre it vnto thy prynce, shall he be content with the, or accepte thy persone, saythe the Lorde of hostes?

And nowe make youre prayer before God that he maye haue mercye vpon vs: for such thinges haue ye done. Shall he regarde youre persones, thinke ye, sayth the Lorde of hostes? Yea what is he amonge you, that wyll do so moche as to shut the doores, or to kindle the fyre vpon myne auter for nought? J haue no pleasure in you, sayth the Lorde of hostes and as for the meateofferinge, J wyll not receyue it at youre hande. For from the vprisinge vp of the sonne vnto the goinge downe of ỹ same, my name is greate amonge the Gentyles: yea in euerye place shall there sacrifyce be done, and a cleane meateoffrynge offred vp vnto my name: for my name is great among the Heithen, sayth the Lorde of hostes. But ye haue vnhalowed it, in that ye saye, the auter of the Lord is not to be regarded, and the thinge that is set thervpon, not worthye to be eaten.

Now say ye: It is but labour and trauayle and and thus haue ye thought scorne at it (saith the Lorde of hostes) offringe robbery, yea the lame and the sycke. Ye haue brought me in a meatoffring. Shulde J accept it of your hand sayth the Lorde? Cursed be the dissembler, whyche hath in his flocke one that is male, & when he maketh a bowe, offereth a spotted one vnto the Lorde. For J am a greate kynge (sayth the Lorde of hostes) & my name is fearfull amonge the heithen.

¶ Threatenynges agaynst the prestes beyng leaders of thy people.

CAPI. II.

AND nowe (O ye prestes) this commaundement toucheth you: yf ye wyll not heare it ne regarde it, to gyue the glory vnto my name, sayth the Lord of hostes, J wyll sende a curse vpon you, & wyll curse youre blessinges: yea curse them wyll J yf ye do not: take hede. Beholde, J shall correcte your sede, and cast donge in youre faces: euē the donge of youre solempne feastes and it shall cleue fast vpon you. And ye shall know that J haue sent this commaundement vnto you: that my couenaunt which J made with Leui, myghte stande sayth the Lorde of hoostes.

B J made a couenaunte of lyfe and peace with him: this J gaue him, that he myght stande in awe of me: and so he did feare me, and had my name in reuerence. The lawe of truthe was in his mouth, and there was no wickednesse founde in his lyppes. He walked with me in peace and equyte, and dyd turne many one waye from their synnes. For the prestes lyppes shulde be sure knowledge, that men maye seke the lawe at his mouth, for he is a messenger of the Lorde of hoostes. But as for you, ye are gone cleane out of the waye, and haue caused the multitude to be offended at the lawe: ye haue broken the couenaunte of Leui, sayth the Lorde of hostes. Therfore wyll J also make you to be despysed, and to be of no reputacion amonge all the people: because ye haue not kept my wayes, but ben partiall in the lawe.

C Haue we not all one father? Hathe not one God made vs? why doth euerye one of vs then despyse his owne brother, & so breake the couenaunt of oure fathers? Nowe hath Juda offended: yea ỹ abhompynacion is done in Jsrael and in Jerusalem, for Juda hath defyled the Sanctuary of the Lord, whyche he loued, & hath kept the doughter of a straūge God. But the Lorde shall destroye the man that doth this (yea doth the master and the scolar) out of the tabernacle of Jacob, with him that offereth vp meatoffrynge vnto the Lorde of hostes.

Now haue ye brought it to this poynte again ỹ the auter of the Lord is couered with teares weppynge and mournynge: so that J wyll no more regarde the meatoffryng, nether wyll J receyue or accepte any thinge at your handes. And yet ye saye: wherfore? Euē because that where as the Lorde made a couenaunt betwyxt the & the wife of thy youth D thou hast despised her: Yet is she thyne owne companyon and maryed wyfe.

So dyd not the one, and yet had he an excellent spirite. What dyd then the one? He sought the sede promysed of God. Therfore loke wel to your spirite, and let no man despyse the wyfe of his youthe. If thou hatest her put her awaye sayth the Lorde God of Jsrael and giue her a clothing for the scorne sayth the Lorde of hostes. Loke well then to your spirite, and despyse her not. Ye greue the Lorde with youre wordes, and yet ye saye: wherwithall haue we greued him? In this that ye saye: All that do euell are good in ỹ syght of God, and suche please him. Or elles where is the God that punysheth?

¶ Of the messenger of the Lorde, Johñ Baptyste. Of the daye of the Lorde, and of Elias.

CAPI. III.

BEholde, J wyl sende my messenger, whi A Matth.xi.b
che shall prepare the waye before me: Marke.i.c
and the Lorde whome ye wolde haue, Luke.vii.c
shall soone come to his temple, yea euen the Gen.xlix.a v.b
messenger of the couenaunte whome ye lōge Esay.xxxv.c
for.

Beholde, he commeth, sayth the Lorde of hoostes. But who maye abyde the daye of his comminge? Who shal be able to endure whē he appeareth? For he is like a goldsmythes fyre, & like washers sope. He shal sit him downe to trye and to clense the syluer, he shall pourge the chyldren of Leui, and purify them lyke as gold and syluer: that they may bringe meatofferinges vnto the Lorde in rightousnesse. Then shall the offeringe of Juda and Jerusalem be acceptable vnto ỹ Lord B lyke as from the beginnyng and in the yeres afore tyme.

J will come and punysh you, and J my self wyl be a swyft witnesse against the witches against the aduouterers, against false swerers: yea and against those, that wrongously kepe backe the dyrelynges dewty which der the widowes and the fatherlesse, & oppresse the straunger, and feare not me, sayth ỹ Lord of hostes. For J am the Lorde that chaunge not, & ye (O chyldren of Jacob) wil not leaue Deut.xxvi.f
of: ye are gone away fro myne ordynaunces iiii.Reg.xvii.c & sens the tyme of your forefathers haue ye not kept them.

C Turne you now vnto me, and J wil turne Zacha.i.a me vnto you, sayth the Lorde of hoostes, ye saye: Wherin shall we turne? Shulde a mā vse falsheed and disceyte with God as ye vse falsheed and disceyt with me?

Yet ye say wherin vse we disceyte with ỹ? Leuit.xxvii.d
In tythes and heaueoffrynges. Therfore are Agge.i.a ye cursed with penury, because ye dissemble with me, all the sorte of you.

Bryng euerye tithe into my barne, that there maye be meate in myne house: & proue me withall (sayth the Lorde of hostes) yf J wyll

wyll not open the wyndowes of heauen vn to you, and poure you oute a blessinge with plenteousnesse. Yea I shall rebuke the consu mer for your sakes, so þ he shal not eate vp þ frute of your grounde, neither shall the vyn yarde be baren in the felde, sayth the Lorde of hostes: In so muche that all people shal say that ye be blessed, for ye shall be a pleasaunt land, sayth the Lorde of hostes.

Ye speake harde wordes agaynst me, sayth
the Lord. And yet ye say: What haue we spoken agaynst the? Ye haue sayd:
D Is it but lost laboure, to serue God? What profyt haue we for kepinge his commaundymentes, and for walking humbly before the Lord of hostes? Therfore maye we say, that the proude are happy, and that they whiche deale with vngodlynesse, are set vp: for they tempte God, and yet escape.

But they that feare God, say thus one to an other: the Lorde considereth and heareth
it. Yea it is before him a memorial boke wri ten for suche as feare the Lorde, and remembre his name. And in þ day that I wyll make (sayth the Lord of hostes) they shal be myne
owne possession: and I wyll fauoure them, lyke as a man fauoureth his owne son, that doth him seruice. Turne you therfore, and cõ syder what difference is betwyxte the ryghteous & vngodly: betwyxt him that serueth Malac.iii.a God and him that serueth him not.

For marcke, the daye commeth that shall burne as an ouen, and al the proude, yea and all suche as do wickednesse, shall be stubble:
and the daye that is for to come, shall burne them vp (sayth the Lorde of hostes) so that it shall leaue them neyther rote ne braunche.

But vnto you that feare my name, shall that Sonne of ryghteousnesse aryse, & health shall be vnder his winges: ye shall go forth & multeply as the fat calues. Ye shal treade downe the vngodlye: for they shall be lyke
the asshes vnder the soles of your fete, in the daye that I shall make, sayth the Lorde of hoostes. Remembre the lawe of Moses my seruaunte whiche I commytted vn to him in Oreb for al Israel, with the statutes
and ordynaunces. Behold I wyll sende you Elyas the Prophete: before the commynge of the day of þ great & fearful Lorde.
He shall turne the hartes of the fathers to their children, and the hertes of the children to their fathers, that I come not & smite the earth with cur
singe

AND Josias helde the feaste of Easter in Jerusalē vnto ꝯ Lorde and slewe the passouer the fourtenth daye of ꝯ fyrst moneth. He set the preestes also in ordre (according to their daylye courses) beinge arayed in long garmentes in the temple of the Lord. And he spake vnto the Leuites the holy ministers of Israel, that they shulde halowe them selues vnto the Lorde, to set the holy arcke of the Lord in the house that king Salomon the sonne of David hadde buylded and sayde: Ye shall no more beare the arcke vpon your shoulders. Now serue your Lorde, and take the charge of his people of Israell, after your bylages and your trybes: according as kynge David the kynge of Israell hath ordeyned, and according as Salomon his son hath honourably prepared: yea loke that ye all doo seruyce in the temple, according to the ordynng and distribucion of the pryncipall men, whiche are appoynted out of the trybes, to wo seruyce for the chyldren of Israel. Kyll the Passeouer, and prepare offrings for your brethren, and do according to ꝯ commaundement of the Lord, which he gaue vnto Moses. And vnto the people that was found, Josias gaue .xxx. thousand shepe, lambes, kyddes and gotes, and thre thousand oxē. These the kynge (of his pryncely liberalitie) gaue vnto the people, according as he had promised: and to the preestes for the Passeouer he gaue two thousande shepe, and an hundred oxen. Moreouer Jechonias and Semeias, and Nathanael brethren, and Hasabias, Jehiel, and Jolabad gaue theym to the Passeouer, fyue thousande shepe, and fyue hundred bullockes.

And when these thinges were broughte to passe, the preestes and the Leuites stode goodly in their ordre, and had the vnleuened breed throughout the tribes. And after the ordryng of the pryncipall men in the trybes, they offred vnto the Lorde in the syght of the people, accordyng as it is wrytten in the boke of Moses, and so they rosted the Easter lambe, as accordynge was. As for the thankeofferinges and the other, they dyght them in kettels and pottes, and set them before the people wt good wyll, and afterwarde before them selues, and the preestes. For the preestes offred the fatte, vntyll the tyme was expyred, but the Leuites prepared for them selues and for their brethren the chyldren of Aaron. The singers also the children of Asaph, stode in their ordre, according as Dauid had deuised. So did Asaph Zachary and Jouthum, whiche were appointed by the king. Moreouer the porters and wre kepers stode by the wres and that diligently, so that none went out of his stādyng and seruice/for their brethē (the Leuites) prepared for them. Thus were all thinges performed, that belonged to the offerynge of the Lorde. In that day they held the Passeouer, and offred thākeofferinges beside the sacrifice of the Lorde, according to the cōmaundement of kyng Josias.

So the children of Israel which were then present, held an honourable Passeouer, and ꝯ feast of swete breed seuē dayes long. Yea such a Passeouer was not kept in Israel from the time of the Prophet Samuel. And al the kynges of Israel held not suche an Easter as this which kyng Josias helde, and the preestes, the Leuites, the Jewes and all Israell, of all the that were at Jerusalem. And in the .xviij. yere of the raigne of Josias was this Passeouer kept. And with a perfect herte dyd kyng Josias ordre all his workes before the Lorde, and the thynges that were wrytten of him in tymes past, concernynge those that synned and were vngodly agaynste the Lorde before all people, and that sought not the worde of the Lorde vpon Israel.

After all these actes of kynge Josias, Pharao the king of Egypt went vp and came toward Carcamis by Euphrates, & Josias went to mete him. Then sent the kyng of Egypt vnto Josias, saying: what haue I to do wt the, O king of Juda? I am not sent of the Lorde to fyght agaynst the, for my warre is vpō Euphrates, go thou thy waye home agayn in al the haste. And Josias wolde not turne agayn vpon his charet, but vndertoke to fyghte agaynst him, and harkened not vnto the wrds of the Prophete, whiche he tolde him oute of the mouth of God, but pyched a battayle agaynst him in the felde of Mageddo. And the princes preased to kyng Josias. Then said the kyng vnto his seruauntes: Carye me awaye out of the battayle, for I am sore wounded. And immediatly his seruauntes toke him away out of the front of the battayle. The sat he vpon the seconde charet, came to Jerusalē, dyed, and was buried in his fathers sepulcre. And in all Jury they mourned for Josias, yea the rulers also with their wiues made lamentacion for him vnto this daye. And this was done euer stil in Israel.

These thynges are wrytten in the boke of the storyes of the kynges of Juda / namelye all the actes and workes of kynge Josias, his power royall and maieste, his vnderstandynge in the lawe of God, and what he dyd / yea thynges whiche are not wrytten in the boke of the kynges of Israell and Juda. And the people toke Jechonias the sonne of Josias, and made him kynge in stede of Josias his father, when he was .xxiij. yere olde.

Aaa Kyng

And he raigned ouer Israel.iij. monethes. And the kyng of Egypt put him downe, ye he shold not raigne in Jerusalem, and raysed vp a taxe of the people: namely an hundred talentes of syluer and, one talent of golde. The kynge of Egypt also made Joachim his brother kynge of Juda and Jerusalem. As for them of ye kinges counsell with the king him selfe and Zaraceles his brother, he toke them & caried them away prisoners in to Egypt. Fiue and twenty yere olde was Joachim, when he was made kyng in the lande of Juda and Jerusalem, & iiij. Re. xxiiij.c he did euil before the Lorde. After this Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon came vp, bound him with bandes of yron, & caried him vnto Babylon. Nabuchodonosor also toke all the vessels that were halowed in the temple of the Lord, and all the iewels, & caryed them vnto Babylon, and broughte them in to his owne temple at Babylon. Of his vnclennesse and vngodlynesse it is written in the boke of the actes of the kynges. And Joachim his son
E raigned in his stede. He was made kyng being xviij yere old, and raigned but thre monethes and.x.dayes at Jerusalem, and dyd euil before the Lorde. So after a yere Nabuchodonosor sent and caused him be brought vnto Babylō with the holy vessels of the Lorde, and made Sedechias his brother kynge of Juda and Jerusalem, when he was.xxj. yere olde, and he raigned.xj. yere.

And he dyd euil also in the sight of ye Lord, and cared not for the wordes that were spokē
Jere. xxxvii.f vnto him by the Prophete Jeremye, at the mouth of the Lorde. And where as he hadde made an othe vnto kyng Nabuchodonosor, he manswore him self, and fel from him, hauing a stiffe necke and hert, and transgressed all the statutes and ordinaunces of the Lord God of Israel. The rulers also and heedes of the people of the Lorde did moche euill, & became vngodly more then the Heathen, being defiled in all maner of abhominacions: yea and defiled the holy temple at Jerusalem. And the God of their fathers sent his messengers vnto thē, to turne them backe and to call them agayne from their synnes, for he wold fayne haue spared them, for his holy tabernacles sake. Ne-
F uerthelesse they had his messengers in derisiō: and loke what God spake vnto them by his Prophetes, they made but a sport of it. This drewe on so longe, til the Lorde was wrothe with his people for their vngodlinesse, and til he caused the kynges of the Caldees to come vp, which slew their yong men with ye swerde: yea euen in the compasse of their holy temple and spared no bodye, neyther yonge man nor olde, neyther mayden nor younge man: but they were al delyuered in to the power of the kynges of the Caldees, and al the holy vessels of the Lorde, and the kynges treasures toke they, and caryed them vnto Babylon. As for the house of the Lorde, they brent it, & brake downe the walles of Jerusalem, set fyre vpō her towres, destroyed all her noble buyldynges, and brought them to nought, and the people that were not slayne with the swerde, they caryed vnto Babylon.

Thus became they prysoners and bondemen of the kynge of Babylon, tyll they were delyuered and raygned for them selues, * when the wordes of the Lorde were fulfylled, whiche he promysed them by the mouth of the Prophete Jeremye, and tyll the land had her reste: namely all the tyme that it lay waste, hadde it reste and quyetnesse. lxxvij. yeres. * Jere.

¶ Cirus geueth lycence to the Jewes to returne to Jerusalem, and restoreth them the vesselles of the temple. After that are there letters sende to Artaxerxes, whiche accuse the Jewes for buyldynge of the cytye: and so is the buyldynge dryuen of, vntyl the seconde yere of Darius.

CAPI. II.

A ii. Paral. i. Esdra.
NOw when kynge Cyrus raigned ouer the Persians, and when the Lorde wolde perfourme the worde that he had promysed by the mouth of the Prophete Jeremye: the Lorde raysed vp the spiryte of Cyrus the kynge of Persians, so that he caused this wrytynge to be proclaymed thorowe out his hole realme, saying: Thus sayth the kyng of Persians: the Lorde of Israell that hye Lorde hathe made me kynge of the lande and commaunded me to buylde him an house at Jerusalem in Jurye. Yf there be anye now of your people, the Lorde be with him, and goo vp with him to Jerusalem. And all they that dwell rounde about the place, shal helpe them, whether it be with golde, with syluer, with gyftes, with horses and necessarye catell, and all other thynges that are broughte with a free wyll to the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem.

Then the pryncypall men oute of the trybes and vyllages of Juda and BenJamin stode vp/so did the preestes also and the Leuites (whom the Lorde had moued) to goo vp and to buylde the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem. And they that were about them, helped them with all maner of golde, and syluer, and catell also, and with many lyberall gyftes, & this dyd many one, whose mynde was stered B vp therto. *Kyng Cyrus also brought forth i. Esdra. i. the vessels and ornamentes that were halowed vnto the Lorde (whiche Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon had caryed awaye from Jerusalem, and consecrated them to his ydoll and ymage) and delyuered them to Mythridatus his treasurer, and by him they were delyuered to Salmanasar the depute in Jurye. And this was the nombre of them: Two thousande and foure hundred syluer boules, thirtye syluer basens, thirtye basens of golde two thousande and foure hundred vesselles of syluer, and a thousande besyde. All the vessels of golde and syluer, were fyue thousande eighte hundred and.lx. These were nombred vnto Salmanasar, and them that were come agayne with him to Jerusalem out of ye captiuitie of Babylon. Now in the tyme of kynge i. Esdr. iiij. Artaxerxes the kynge of Persia, these men: Balemus, and Mithridatus, Sabellius, Rathimus, Balthemus, Semellius the scrybe, and other that dwelte in Samaria and in other places vnder the dominion therof, wrote a letter vnto kynge Artaxerxes, wherein they complayned vnto the kynge of them in Jury and Jerusalem. The letter was made after this maner.

C Syr thy seruauntes, Rathimus the storye wryter, Sabellius the scribe, and other iudges of the courte in Celosyria, and Phenices. Be it knowen and manifest to our Lorde the kyng, that the Jewes whiche are come vp frō you vnto vs in to the rebellyous and wycked citye, begyn to buylde it agayne, and the walles aboute it, and to set vp the temple a new. Nowe yf this cytye and the walles therof be set vp agayne, they shall not onely refuse to geue trybutes and taxes, but also rebel vtterly agaynste the kyng. And for so moch as they take this in hande now about the temple, we thought it reason, to thynke no scorne of it, but to shewe it vnto our Lorde the kyng, and to certifye him therof: to thintent that yf it please the kynge, he maye cause it be soughte in the bokes of olde, and thou shalt fynd suche warning wrytten, and shalt vnderstande that this city hath alway ben rebellious and disobedient, that it hath subdued kynges & cities, and that the Jewes which dwel therin, haue euer ben a rebellyous, obstinate, vnfaythful, and fightyng people, for the which cause this city is wasted. Wherfore now we certify our Lord the kyng, that if this city be buylded & occupied agayne, and the walles therof set vp new, thou canst haue no passage in to Celosiria, and Phenices.

D Then wrote the kynge to Rathimus the storye wryter, to Balthemus, to Sabellius the scrybe, and to the other officers and dwellers in Siria and Phenices, after this maner: I haue red the epystle whiche thou sentest vnto me, and haue commaunded to make diligent searche, and haue founde that the citye hathe euer resysted kynges, that the same people are disobedient, and haue caused moch warre, and that myghtye kynges haue raygned in Jerusalem, whiche also haue raysed vp taxes of Syria and Phenices. Wherfore I haue commaunded those people that they shall not buylde the citye, that they make no more in it, and that they procede no farther with the buyldyng: for so moche as it might be the cause of warre and displeasure vnto kynges.

Nowe when Rathimus and Sabellius the scrybe, and the rulers in the lande hadde redde the wrytynge of kynge Artaxerxes, they gat them togyther, and came in all haste to Jerusalem, with an hoste of horsemen, and with moche people of foote, and forbad them to buylde. And so they lefte from buyldynge of the temple, vnto the seconde yere of kynge Darius.

¶ Darius maketh a feast. The thre sentences of the thre younge men, of whiche the fyrste is declared.

CAPI. III.

KYnge Darius made a greate feast vnto his seruauntes, vnto all his courte, and to all the officers of Medea and Persia, yea to all the deputyes and rulers that were vnder him from India vnto Ethiopia, an hundred and.xxvij. countreys. So when they had eaten and dronken, being satisfied, and were gone home agayne. Darius the kynge went in to his chambre, layde him downe to slepe, and so awaked. A

Then the thre younge men that kepte the kynges person, and watched his bodye commoned amonge them selues, and spake one to an other: let euerye one of vs saye some thynge, and loke whose sentence is wyser and more excellent then the other, vnto him shall kynge Darius geue great gyftes, and clothe him with purple. He shall geue him vessels of golde to drynke in, clothes of golde and couerynges/he shall make him a costly charet, and a brydle of golde, he shal geue him a bonet of whyte sylke, and a cheyne of golde about his necke: yea he shall be the seconde and princypall next vnto kyng Darius, and that bicause of his wisdome, and shal be called the kinges kynsman. B

So euerye one wrote his meanynge, sealed it, and layd it vnder the kynges pyllowe, and sayd: when the kynge aryseth, we wyll geue him oure wrytynges, and loke whose worde the kynge and his chiefe lordes iudge to be the moost wysely spoken, the same shall haue the vyctorye. One wrote: Wyne is a strong thyng. The seconde wrote: The kyng is stronger. The thyrd wrote: Women haue yet more strengthe, but aboue all thynges the truth beareth awaye the victory. Now when the kynge was rysen vp, they toke their wrytynges, and delyuered them vnto him, and so he red them. Then sent he forth to cal all his chiefe Lordes, all the deputyes and rulers of the countreyes of Medea & Persia. And when they were set downe in the counsell, the wrytynges were red before them. And he cōmaunded to cal for the yong men, that they might declare their meaninges thē selues by mouth. So when they were sent for and came in, the king said vnto them: shewe vs and make vs to vnderstande what the thynges are that ye haue wrytten. C

Then began the fyrst (whiche hadde spoken of the strengthe of wyne) and sayd: O ye men, wyne is marueylous strong, and ouercommeth them that drynke it: it disceyueth the mynde, and bryngeth both the poore man and the kynge to dotage and vanitie. Thus dothe it also with the bondman and with the free: with the poore, and ryche: it taketh awaye their vnderstandyng, and maketh them carelesse and merye, so that none of them remembreth anye heuynesse, dette, or dutye: It causeth a man to thynke also that the thynge whiche he dothe is honest and good: and remembreth not that he is a kynge, nor that he is in auctoritie, and that he ought not to do suche thynges. D Prouerb. xx. wyne, Moreouer, when men are drynkynge, they forget all frindshyp, all brotherly faythfulnesse and loue: but as sone as they are dronken, they drawe out the swerde and wil fight: and when they are layd downe frō the wyne, and so risen vp agayne, they can not tel what they dyd: iudge ye now, is not wyne the strōgest? For who wolde els take in hande to do suche thynges? And when he had spoken this he helde his tonge.

¶ The declaracyon of the two last sentences of the yonge men, propounded in the Chapter before: of which ẏ last, that is, that veritye beareth the vyctorye in all thynges, is most commended and alowed. Darius wryteth letters to all the rulers vnder him, that they shoulde ayde Zorobabel to the buyldynge of Jerusalem.

CAPI. IIII.

The kynge. A Then the seconde (whiche had sayde that the kynge was stronger) began to speke saying: O ye men, are not they the strōgest and mooste excellent, that conquere the lande and the see, and all that is in the see, & in the earthe? Now is the kynge lorde of all these thinges, and hath dominion of them al: and loke what he commaundeth, it is doone. Yf he sende his men forth a warrefare, they goo, and breake downe hylles, walles, and towres. They are slayne, and slee (other men) them selues, and ouer passe not the kynges worde. Yf they get the victory, they bryng the kyng all the spoyle. Lykewyse the other that medle not with warres and fyghting, but til the grounde: when they reape they brynge tribute to the kynge. And yf the kynge alone do but commaunde to kyll, they kyll/ yf he commaunde to forgyue, they forgyue/ yf he commaunde to smyte, they smyte / yf he byd driue awaye, they dryue awaye / yf he commaunde to buylde, they buylde / yf he commaunde to breake downe, they breake downe/ yf he commaunde to plante they plante. The common people and the rulers are obedient vnto him.

B And the kyng in the meane season sytteth him downe, eateth and drynketh, and taketh his rest: then kepe they watche rounde about the kynge, and not one of theym dare gette him out of the waye to do his owne businesse, but must be obedient vnto the kynge at a worde. Judge ye nowe, O ye men, how sholde not he goo farre aboue, vnto whom men are thus obedient? And when he had spokē this, he held his tonge.

The thyrde, whose name was Zorobabel, whiche had spoken of women and of truthe, began to saye after this maner: O ye men, it is not the great kyng, it is not the multitude of mē, neither is it wine that excelleth: Who is it then that hath the lordshyp ouer them? women. Haue not women borne the kynge and al the people that rule those thinges? Haue not women borne them, & brought thē vp, that plant the vines wherout the wine commeth? They make garmentes for all mē, they gyue honour vnto all men, & without women can not men lyue. Yf they gather gold and syluer, & al precious thinges, and se a fayre welfauoured woman, they leaue all togyther and turne theyr eyes onely vnto the woman, & gape vpon her and haue more desire vnto her, then vnto ẏ syluer and gold, or any maner of precious thing. A mā leaueth his father that brought him vp he leueth his own natural countrey & cleueth vnto the womā/ yea he ieoperdeth his life wt the woman, and remembreth neither father, nor mother, ne coūtrey. By this thē ye must nedes know that womē haue the dominiō ouer you. C Gene.ii.b Mathew i. Timoth Ephesi.

¶ Dothe it greue you? A man taketh his swerde, and goeth his waye to steale, to kyll, to murther, to sayle vpon the see, and seeth a lyon, and goeth in the darckenesse: and when he hath stollen, disceyued and robbed, he bryngeth it vnto his loue. Agayne, a man loueth his wyfe better then father or mother: yea, manye one there be that renne oute of theyr wyttes, and become bondemen for theyr wyues sakes: many one also haue perisshed, and haue bene slayne, and haue synned bycause of women.

And nowe byleue me, I knowe a kynge, whiche is great in his power, and all landes stande in awe of him, and no man dare laye hand vpon him: yet did I se that Apame (the doughter of the great kynge Bartacus) the kynges concubyne, sat besyde the kynge vpon his ryght hande, and toke of his crowne from his heed, and set it vpon her owne heed, and smote the kynge with her lefte hande. Moreouer the king loked vpon her wt open mouth: D yf she laughed vpon him, he laugheth also: but yf she toke any displeasure with him, the kynge was fayne to flatter her, and to gyue her good wordes, tyll he hadde gotten her fauour agayne.

O ye men, are not women then stronger? Great is the earth, and hye is the heuen that do these thinges. Then the king and the princes loked one vpon an other. So he began to speke of the truth. O ye men, are not women stronger? Great is the erth, hye is the heuen, swyfte is the course of the sunne, he compasseth the heuen rounde about, and fetcheth his Eccle.i.a course agayne to his owne place in one daye. Truthe.
Is he not excellent that doth this? Yea great is the truthe, and stronger then all thynges. All the erth calleth vpon the truth, the heuen prayseth it, all workes shake and tremble at it, and with it is no vnrighteous thing. Wine E is vnryghtous: the kyng is vnrighteous, women are vnryghtous, all the chyldren of men are vnryghtous, yea all theyr workes are vnryghtous, and there is no truthe in them, in theyr vnryghteousnesse also shall they be destroyed and perysshe. As for the truthe, it Esdra. Psal.
endureth, and is alwaye stronge: it lyueth and conquereth, for euermore worlde without ende.

The truthe accepteth no personnes, it putteth no difference betwixte ryche or poore, betwyxte the myghtye or symple, but dothe ryght vnto euery man, whether they be euyll or good, and all men are louingly dealt with all in the workes of it. In the iudgement of it there is no vnryghtous thinge, but strength, kingdom and power, & maiesty for euermore. Blessed be the God of truth.

And with that he held his tonge, and al the people cryed and sayd: Greate is the truthe, and aboue all. Then sayd the kyng vnto him: Aske what thou wylt, more then is appoynted in the wrytynge, and I shall gyue it the, for thou arte founde wyser then thy companyons: thou shalte syt nexte me, and be my kynsman. Then sayd he vnto the kynge: Remembre thy promyse and vowe whiche thou hast vowed and promysed (in the daye when thou camest to the kyngdome) to buylde vp Jerusalem, and to sende agayne all the vessels and iewels that were taken awaye oute of Jerusalem: whiche Cyrus separated whē he offred in Babylon, and wolde haue restored them agayne euen there. And thy mynde was to buylde vp the temple, whiche the Edomytes brent when Jerusalem was destroyed by the Caldees. This onely (O kynge) is the thynge that I requyre, this is the maiestye, whiche I desyre and aske of the: that thou performe the vowe whiche thou with thyne owne mouth hast made vnto the kyng of heuen.

F Then Darius the kyng stode vp, and kissed him, and wrote a lettre vnto all the deputies and shreues, to all the Lordes and nobles, that they sholde conuey him forth, & all them that wolde goo vp with him. He wrote a letter also vnto all the shreues that were in Celosyria and Phenices, & vnto Lybanus, that they shoulde drawe Cedre trees from Lybanus vnto Jerusalem, to buylde the city withall. Moreouer he wrote vnto all the Jewes that were gone out of his realme in to Jury, bicause of the fredome, that no officer no ruler nor shreue, shold come to their dores: and that all theyr lande whiche they had conquered, shold be free and not tributary. And that the Edomites shold gyue ouer the cities and villages of the Jewes which they had taken in: yea and that they sholde yerely gyue .xx. talentes to the buyldyng of the temple, vntill ẏ time that it were finisshed, and to the daylye halowing of the brentofferinges (as it is commaunded) ten talentes yerely also/ and that al they which come from Babylon to buyld the city shold haue fre libertie, they and their children and all the preestes.

He wrote the greatnesse also and commaun-
G ded ẏ the holy garment sholde be gyuen them wherin they ministred, and wrote that commaundementes shold be giuen to the Leuites vntil the day that the house were finisshed, & Jerusalem buylded vp/ and commaunded that al they that watched the city shold haue their porcions and wages.

He gaue ouer also al the vessels that Cyrus had separated from Babylon, and al that Cyrus had gyuen in commaundement, the same charged he also that it shold be done and sent vnto Jerusalem. Now when this yonge man was gone forth, he turned his face toward Jerusalē, and praysed the king of heuē and said: Of the commeth the victory, of the commeth wysdome & clerenesse, and I am thy seruaunt. Blessed art thou whiche hast gyuen me wysdome: the wyl I prayse, O Lorde, thou God of our fathers.

And so he toke the letters, and wente vnto Babylon, and when he came there, he told this vnto all his brethren that were at Babylon, and they praysed the God of theyr fathers, that he hadde gyuen them refresshynge and lybertie to goo vp and to buylde Jerusalem, and the temple (which is there called after the name of the Lorde) and they reioysed with instrumentes and gladnesse seuen dayes longe.

¶ They that returne to Jerusalem are nombred. They begyn to laye the foundacyon of the temple, but are let by the meanes of enemyes, and so is the buyldynge dryuen of by the space of two yeres.

CAPI. V.

After this were the principal men of al the vilages, chosen in the tribes & kynredes, that they shold go vp, with their wyues and chyldren, with theyr seruauntes and maydens, with all theyr catell and substaunce. And Darius the king sent with them a thousande horsemen, to conuey them safely vnto Jerusalem: and theyr brethren were glad, playing vpon instrumētes, and singing. And these are the names of the men whiche went vp out of the villages, accordyng to the trybes. Of the preestes, the sonne of Phinehes, the sonne of Aaron: Jesus the sonne of Josedec, Joachim the sonne of Zorobabell, Math.i.b the sonne of Salathiel (of the kynred of Dauid, out of the kynred of Phares, of the tribe iii. Esdr.iiii.b of Juda) whiche spake wonderfull thynges vnder Darius the kynge of Persia, in the seconde yere of his raygne in the fyrst moneth of Nisan. A

These also are they of Jury which came vp and turned agayne vnto Jerusalem, oute of the captiuitie that Nabucodonosor the kynge of Babylon had brought vnto Babilon. And euery man sought his porcion agayne in Jury his city, they that came with Zorobabel, & with Jesus, Nehemias, Saraias, Raelaias, Elimeus, Emmanius, Mardocheus, Beelsarus, Mechpsa, Rochor, Olioras, Emonias, one of their princes.

And the nombre of them accordyng to their kynredes and rulers were. The chyldren of Phares, two thousand, an hundred thre score and twelue. The chyldren of Ares, thre thou- B

The sonnes of Anaas, three hundred. lxx.

The preestes: The sonnes of Jeddus: The sonnes of Euther: The sonnes of Ol Jasib, three hundred three score and twelue. The sonnes of Emerus, two hundred fifty & two The sonnes of Faluctus, three hundred & lvij. The sonnes of Lacca, two hundred and.xxvj The Leuites: The sonnes of Jesus in Cadubel & Banus, and Serebias, and Sodas, seuentye and foure.

The hole nombre of these from twelue yeres was three thousande foure hundred & lxij. Of the sonnes, doughters and wyues, y hole summe was, a thousande, two hundred and foztye and two. The sonnes of the Preestes that prayed God in the temple: The sonnes of Asaph, of whome there were an hundred and xxviij. But the doore kepers were: The chyldren of Olmenus, the chyldre of Ater, the chyldren of Amon, the chyldren of Acuba, Hopa, the chyldren of Tobi, an hundred thyrtye and vyne in all.

The Preestes that serued in the temple: The sonnes of Hell, the sonnes of Gaspha, the sonnes of Tobloch, the sonnes of Caria, The sonnes of Sud, the sonnes of Helui, the sonnes of Labana, the sonnes of Agrecha, the sonnes of Agrub, the sonnes of Uccha, the sonnes of Cetha, the sonnes of Aggab, the sonnes of Ouay, the sonnes of Anani, the sonnes of Canna, the sonnes of Geddu, the sonnes of Au, the sonnes of Rabin, the sonnes of Delaaon, the sonnes of Nechoba, the sonnes of Caseba, the sonnes of Gaza, the sonnes of Ozul, the sonnes of Sinoua, the sonnes of Acra, the sonnes of Phalim, the sonnes of Asana, the sonnes of Banei, the sonnes of Nasiin, the sonnes of Acuta, the sonnes of Agrua, the sonnes of Agai, the sonnes of Faaon, the sonnes of Phalalon, the sonnes of Hageda, the sonnes of Susa, the sonnes of Carea, the sonnes of Barcus, the sonnes of Sarea, the sonnes of Cocli, the sonnes of Aphi, the sonnes of Agrida, the sonnes of Pedon: Salomon his sonnes, the sonnes of Asophot, the sonnes of Phalida, the sonnes of Celi, the sonnes of Dedon, the sonnes of Gaddahel the sonnes of Zaphetus the sonnes of Aggia, the sonnes of Hacharet, the sonnes of Sabathem, the sonnes of Saroneth, the sonnes of Maisut, the sonnes of Anta, the sonnes of Salus, the sonnes of Abdus, the sonnes of Suba, the sonnes of Enra, the sonnes of Rabotis, the sonnes of Phat phat, the sonnes of Malmon. All these ministred in the Sanctuarye, and were seruauntes of Salomon: cccxiiij foure hundred thre score and ten.

These folowing are they, that went vp from Thelmellat Thelarla (whose pices were Carmelā and Careth) and might not shew forthe their cities and kynredes, how they were of Israel: the sonnes of Dalarus, the sonnes of Tuben, the sonnes of Nechodaicus. Of the preestes that executed the office of the preesthode, and were not found: the sonnes of Obia, the sonnes of Achilos, the sonnes of Addin, whiche maryed one of the doughters of Phargelen, and were named after him. The writinge of the same kynred was sought in the register of their generacion, but it was not founde: and therfore were they forbydden to execute the office of the preesthode. Unto the said Nehemias & Atharas, that they sholde haue no porcion in the Sanctuarye, tyll there rose vp an hye preest, that were well instruct in the playne declarenelle and truth. Of all Israel (beside seruauntes and maydens) there were. xlij. thousande, thre hundred and.xl. Nowe were there of seruauntes and maydens, seuen. M. thre hundred and.xxxvj. Of synginge men and singinge women, there were two. C. and. lxv. Foure hundred and.xxxv. Camels. Seuen. M and.xxxvj. horses. Two hundred thousande & foztye and fyue mules. Fyue thousande and xxxb asses.

They yeedes also, and the rulers of the trybes, when they came to Jerusalem, and wolde buylde and set vp the temple of God agayne in his place, they gaue after their abilitie, vnto the temple, to the treasure, and to the seruyce of the Sanctuarye twelue thousande poundes of golde, fyue thousande of syluer, and an hundred preestes garmentes. And so dwelte the preestes and the Leuites, and the people that wente out to Jerusalem, and the countrey there abouce, the syngers also & the porters euery one of Israell in his owne lande.

So when the seuenth moneth came, and when the chyldren of Israell were euery man at his busynesse, they came all with one consent in to the cyttie, whyche was before the Easte doore. And there stode Jesus the sonne of Josedec, and his brethren the preestes, and Zozobabel the sonne of Salachiel, and his brethren, setting vp an auitee to offre brent sacrifices vpon it, as it is written in the lawe of Moses.

There came people also of other countreys, & the heathen out of all landes to set vp y aultar in his place, and offred sacrifices and brent offringes offeringes vnto the Lozde in the mozninge. And so they helde the feast of tabernacles as it is commaunded in the lawe: And daylye offred they as accozdynge was and made the sacryfyces appoynted, the offeringes also of the Sabbothes and of the newe Moones, & all holy feastes. And all they that vowed offringes vnto the Lozde, beganne at the new Moone of the seuenth moneth to offre vnto God, for the temple of the Lozde was not yet buylded. And they gaue vnto y Masons & carpenters, money, meate, and drynche with chearefulnes. Unto them of Sidon also and Tyre they gaue carres, that they sholde cary Cedze trees frome Libanus to Betasles and beames, and that they shulde make shyppes in the heauen of Joppe, accozdynge as it was appoynted and ozdeyned by Cyzus kinge of the Perslans.

And in the seconde yere they came in to the temple of God at Jerusalem. In the second moneth beganne Zozobabell the sonne of Salathiel, and Jesue the sonne of Josedec & their brethren the preestes and Leuites, and all they that were come vnto Jerusalem out of the captyuyte of Babylon, and layde the foundacion of the temple, in the newe mone of the second moneth in the second yere that they were come in to Jewry and Jerusalem. And they appoynted the Leuites (that were aboue.xx. yere olde) vnto the seruyce of the Lozde: so Jesua and his sonnes and his bzethren all the Leuites stode to gyther, and performed the lawe and ozdynaunce in the house of the Lozde.

And the preestes stode, and had their garmentes and trompettes, and the Leuites, the sonnes of Asaph hadde Cymballes, gyuynge thankes and prayses vnto the Lozde, accozdynge as Dauid the kinge of Israel had ozdeyned. And the songe that they dyd syng vnto the Lozde, was after this maner: O syng vnto the Lozde, for he is gracyous, and his goodnes vpon Israel endureth for euer. And all the people blew out with trōpettes, and songe with loude voyce, praysynge the Lozde togither in the rearynge vp of the house of y Lozde. There came also frome amonge the Preestes and Leuites the rulers and elders, accozdynge to the trybes and kinredes (suche as had sene the house afore) to the buyldynge of this temple with greate crye and greate mournynge, many also with trompettes and great ioye: In so moch, that the trompettes myght not well be heade for the wepynge and mourning. For the commen people blew goodly vpon the trompettes.

Then came the ennemyes of the trybes of Juda and Ben Jamyn, to know what that trompettynge and noyse of shawmes myght be. And they pleyned that it was they which were come agayne out of captyuyte, & wold buylde the temple vp a newe vnto the Lord God of Israel. So they went to Zozobabel and Jesus, and to the rulers of the villages and sayde vnto them: Shal we buylde with you also? For we lyke wyse haue heard your Lozde, and we walke after the same maner, from the dayes of Asbazareth the king of Assicta, which brought vs hyther. Then Zozobabel and Jesus and the rulers of the villages of Israel sayd vnto them: It is not mete that ye shulde buylde the temple of our God with vs: we oure selues alone wyll buylde vnto the Lozde, lyke as Cyrus the kinge of the Perslans hath commaunded vs. i. Esdr. vi.

But the heithen in the lande layde them selues agaynste those that were in Jewry, helde vp the buyldynge from them, layed wayte vpon them pzeuyyse, stopped suche as brought any thing to the, forbad the to build, and hyndered those that made them passage, that the buyldyng shuld not be so punyshed: and this contynued so longe as kinge Cyrus lyued: and so they put of the buyldynge for the space of two yeres, vntyll the raygne of kynge Darius.

Aggeus and Zacharyy pzopheeye. They buyld the temple without let oz hynderaunce, by the cōmaundement of Darius.

CAPI. VI.

NOt withstandinge in the seconde yere of the raygne of Darius, Aggeus and Zacharyy the sonne of Addo pzophecied vpon them in Jewry and Jerusalem, in the name of the God of Israel. Then Zozobabel the sonne of Salathiel and Jesus the sonne of Josedec stode vp, and beganne to buylde y house of the Lozde at Jerusalem, when the Pzophetes of the Lozde helped them. A i. Esdr. v. c. Agge. i. c.

At the same time came Sisennes the vnder Shzeue in Syzia and Phenices, with the lād lozdes and his companyons, and sayde vnto them: Who hath bydden and commaunded you to buylde the house, to make the vofe & all other thynges agayne? And who are the worke men, that buylde them? Neuertheles the elders of the Jewes had suche grace of y Lord that they wold not be let (though they were prouoked therto) but buylded on styll, vntyl y tyme of kyng Darius were certifyed ther of, & an answere receyued from him. The letter that these men sent vnto kynge Darius, was after this maner. B

Sisennes the vnder Shzeue in Syria and Phenices, and the landlozdes with their cōpanyons, which are vnder rulers in Syria & Phenices, sende their Salutation vnto Darius the kynge. We certyfye oure Lozde the kynge, that we came into the lande of Jewry and went to Jerusalem: where we founde them buylduynge the great house of God and the temple, with greate costely free stone and with goodly tymbre for the walles: yea they make greate haste with the worke, and helpe one another, and it goeth forth prosperously in their handes, and with greate diligence & worshyp is it mad.

Then asked we the elders, who had commaunded them to make vp the house and the buyldyng, and this we dyd to the intente that we myght certyfye the pzesent lyre wryte vnto the, the names of those that were the rulers

lers of the worke. So they gaue, vs this answere: we are the seruaũtes of ꝑ Lord, which made heauen and erth: and as for this house it hath bene buylded & set vp afore tyme by ꝑ great and mygtye kinge of Israel. But whe our fathers prouoked God vnto wrath, and synned agaynst the God of Israel, he gaue them ouer in to the powre of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon the kinge of the Chaldees, which brake downe the house, and brent it, and caryed awaye the people prysoners vn to Babylon. Neuertheles, in the fyrst yere that kynge Cyrus raygned at Babylon, Cirus the kynge wrote and commaunded to buylde vp this house agayne: and all the ornamentes that Nabuchodonosor caryed away from Jerusalem vnto Babilon, and appropriated vnto his own tẽple: these brought Cyrus forth agayne, & delyuered the to Zorobabel & to Salmanasar the vnder Shreue commaundynge them that they shulde bring those same ornamentes agayne to Jerusalẽ in to the tẽple, & to begyn frõ ꝑ tyme forth, to build ꝑ temple agayne in his own place. Thẽ Salmanasar layde the foundacion of the Lordes house at Jerusalem, and euer sence haue they buylded, & yet is it not ended. And therfore, O kynge, yf thou thynckest it good, let it be sought in the Kynges archyues and rolles of kinge Cyrus: yrit be founde then, that it is done with ꝑ councell and consent of kinge Cyrus, and yf our Lorde the kyng be so myn ded, let him wryte vnto vs therof.

Then commaunded kyng Darius, to seke in the Kynges archyues: and so at Ecbathanis in a lytle cytye in Medea there was founde such a writynge: In the fyrste yere of the raygne of Cyrus the same kynge Cyrus commaunded that the house of the Lord at Jerusalem shulde be buylded agayne (and oblacions to be made there cõtynually vnto the Lord) whose heygth shall be. x. cubytes, and the breedth xl. cubytes, and .iij. square with thre hewen stones, with a lofte of tymbre of the same cõtrey, yea with a newe lofte, and the expences therof to be gyuen of the house of kinge Cyrus.

And the ornamẽtes of golde and syluer, ꝑ Nabuchodonosor toke out of the house of ꝑ Lorde at Jerusalem, shall be set agayne in ꝑ temple at Jerusalem, where they were afore. Sithennes also the vnder shreue in Siria and Phenyces, the princes and they companyons, and the other that be heade rulers in Siria & Phenices, shall not medle nor haue any thing to do with that place.

Cirus haue cõmaunded also, that they shall buylde the house of the Lorde hole vp, and haue ordeyned them, to helpe those that be come oute of captyuyte: tyll the house of the Lord be fynyshed: and out of the tribute and taxinge that is yearelye raysed vp in Siria and Phenices, dylygently to gyue them a certayne summe to the offeryng of the Lord and the same to be delyuered vnto Zorobabel ꝑ officer: that he therwithal may ordeyne oxen, rammes, lambes, and corne, salte, wyne and oyle, and that contynually euerye yere: after the expences whiche the preestes that be at Jerusalem, shewe to be made dayly: this shall be gyuen vnto them without delaye ꝑ they may offre sacrifices dayly to the hyghest God, for the kynge and for his seruauntes, and to praye for their lyues. Let it be proclayned also on euery syde, that whosoeuer breketh or despyseth this commaundement of ꝑ kynge, shall be hanged vpon a galow (made of his owne good) and all his goodes shalbe seasoned vnto the kinge.

The Lorde therfore (whose name is there called vpon) rote out and destroye all the kinges and people, that vndertake by violence to hinder the same, or to deale vnrighteously with the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem. I Darius the kinge haue ordeyned, that these thynges shall be done with all dylygence.

¶ The temple is fynyshed and dedicate: and the feast of vnleuened breed is holden.

CAPI. VII.

Then Sisennes the vnderthryne in Celosyria, and Phenyces, and the other Landlordes with their companyons, obeyed the thynges that kynge Darius had ordeyned, were dylygent in the holy workes and were felow helpers with the olde rulers of the Jewes. And so the worke of the Sanctuary went forth and prospered, when Aggeus and Zachary prophecyed.

And they performed all thinges throwe the commaundement of the Lorde God of Israel, and after the decree of Cyrus, Darius, and Artaxerxes kinges of persia.

And thus was oure house fynyshed vnto the .xxiij. daye of the moneth Adar in the .vi. yeare of kynge Darius. And the children of Israel the preestes and the Leuites, and the other that were come out of captyuyte, and such as were ioyned vnto them, dyd accordynge as it is wrytten in the boke of Moses. And in the dedycation of the temple they offred an hundred oxen, an hundred rammes. iiij. hundreth lambes, and xij. geotes for the synnes of all the people of Israell, after the nombre of the trybes of Israel. The preestes also & the Leuites stode arayed in the prestly garmentes, after the trybes, ouer al the workes of the Lorde God of Israel accordynge to the boke of Moses, and the porters by all the dores.

And the children of Israel (with those that were come out of captyuyte) helde the passouer the .xiiij. daye of the fyrste moneth, when the preestes and the Leuites were sanctyfyed. They that came out of captyuite, were not all sanctifyed together: but the Leuites were all sanctifyed together. Also all they that came out of captyuite, kylled ꝑ easter lambe, for they brethren, for the preestes and for them selues. And the children of Israel that came out of captiuite, and escaped from all the abhominacyons of ꝑ Heathe, sought the Lord, and kepte the feaste of vnleuened breed .vij. dayes dayes longe, eatyng and drynkyng and were merey before the Lorde: that the Lorde had turned the deuyce of the kinge of Assiria, and comforted their handes to the workes of ꝑ Lorde God of Israel.

¶ Esdras causeth the people to assemble and come togyther, and then readeth them the lawe. They kepe the feast of Tabernacles.

CAPI. VIII.

And after him, when Artaxerxes the kinge of the Perlians raygned, there wente vnto him Esdras the sonne of Saralas, the sonne of Azarias, the son of Helchiab, the sonne of Sallum, the sonne of Sadoc, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amarias, the son of Azarias, the son of Boccus, the sonne of Abisu, the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aarõ the fyrst preest. This Esdras went vp frome Babilon for he had good vnderstandinge in the lawe, of Moses, that was gyuen of the Lord God of Israel, to be taught and done in dede. And the kinge fauoured him, and dyd him great worship and honoure, after all his desyres. There went vp with him also certayne of the chyldren of Israel, of the preestes of ꝑ Leuites, of the syngers, porters and mynisters of the temple at Jerusalem.

In the .vij. yere of the the raygne of kinge Artaxerxes, in the .v. moneth, that is in the vij. yeare of the raygne, they wente frome Babylon in the newe moone of the fyfth moneth, and came the hyghe waye to Jerusalem after his commaundemente, lyke as the Lorde hadde prospered their iourney. For in these Esdras gat greate instruction that he shulde leaue none of the thynges behynde, whiche are in the law and commaundementes of God. And he taughte hole Israell all rightoulnes and iudgement.

Then came the Secretaryes of kynge Artaxerxes, and delyuered the wryttynges (that were come from Artaxerxes the kinge) to Esdras the preste and reder of the lawe of the Lorde: And this is the coppye of the letter.

Kinge Artaxerxes sendeth his greetynge vnto Esdras the preeste and reder of the lawe of the Lorde: Of kynthyp and good will I haue ordeyned and charged, yf there be anye of the Jewes, of the preestes and Leuites in my realme, which desyreth and is contente to go with the vnto Jerusalem, that he may do it. Therfore yf any be minded to beare the company, let them come togyther, & go with the (lyke as I am content and my seuen frẽdes my counselers) to se what they do at Jerusalem and in Jewry, and kepe the thinges accordynge as thou hast in the lawe of the Lorde and to bynge the gyftes vnto God ꝑ Lord of Israel, that I and my frendes haue promysed to Jerusalem, and all the syluer & golde that is in the countrey of Babylon, vnto the Lord to Jerusalem, with the thing that is gyuen for the people in the Lordes temple at Jerusalem: Yea that the same all uer and golde maye be gathered, and oxen, rammes, sheepe and gotes and other that be long to these thinges: and that they maye offre sacrifyces vnto the Lorde, whiche is at Jerusalem,

And what so euer thou and thy brethren wyll doo with syluer and golde, that do after thy mynde, and after the commaundemẽt of the Lorde thy God: & lyke wyse with all the holye vessels, that are gyuen the for ꝑ seruyce of the house of the Lord thy God: and other thinges whatsoeuer is necessary for the to the worke of the temple, that shal be gyuẽ ꝑ of the kynges treasure: and loke what thou with thy brethren wylte doo with the golde and syluer, that doo after the wyll of the Lorde.

And I kynge Artaxerxes haue commaunded the kepers of the treasures in Siria and Phenices, that whatsoeuer Esdras the preste and reder of the lawe of the Lorde doth wryte, it shall be gyuen him: tyll an. C. talentes of syluer, and of golde in lyke maner: Of corne also an hundreth measures. and tyll an hũdreth vessels of wine, and other plenteous thinges without nombre. Let all thinges be done after the law of the hyghest God, that ꝑ wrath of God aryse not in the realme of the kynge and of his sonnes. I commaũd you also, that ye requyre no tax nr tribute of the preestes, Leuytes syngers, and mynisters of the temple, ne of the writers: and that no man haue auctoryte to medle any thynge agaynst the. As for the (O Esdras) set thou iudges and arbytrers in the hole land of Siria and Phenyces, after the wysdome of God: and learne al such as are ignoraunte in the law of God thy Lorde, & let al them that offende agaynst the lawe, be punyshed: whether it be with death with payne, to be condemned in money, or to be banyshed.

Then sayde Esdras the wryter. Blessed be the God of our fathers, that hath gyuen so good a mynde and wyll in to the herte of the kinge to magnifye his house that is at Jerusalem, and hath made me to be accepted in the syght of the kynge, of his counsell, of his frendes and of his nobles.

And so I was stedfast in my mynde, according as the Lord my God helped me, and I chose out men of Israel to go vp with me.

And these are the heades (after their kinredes and houses of their fathers) that went vp with me frome Babylon, out of the kingdome of Artaxerxes: Of the sonnes of Phares, Gerso nius. Of ꝑ sonnes of Sigmarith, Amenus. Of the sonnes of Dauid, Accus, ꝑ sonne of Ceclia.

Of the sonnes of Phares, Zacharye: & with him there turned agayne an hundred and fyfty men. Of the sonnes of the captayne of Moabylon, Zarei, and with him .ij. hundreth and .l. men. Of the sonnes of Zachnes, Jechonias, Zecholy, & with him ij. C. and .l. men. Of the sonnes of Halamaasia &, Gotholie, & lxx. with him. Of ꝑ sonnes of Zaphatia, Zarias Mibelt, & with him. lxx. Of the sonnes of Job, Abdias Jebeli, and with hym ij. C. twelue twelue men. Of the sonnes of Bania, Haltmoth the son of Iosaphia, & with hym an. C. & ix. mē. Of þ sonnes of Beer, Zacharya, Bedei, and with him. lij C. and. viij. men. Of the sonnes of Elad, Johannes Ezechan, & with hym. C. & x. men, Of the sonnes of Adonicam those that were the last, and these are theyr names: Elphalam the sonne of Gebell and Semetas, and with hym. lxx. men. All these called I together by the water Thia, where we pytched oure tentes thre dayes, and there I mustered them.

D As for the sonnes of the prestes and Leuites, I founde none there. Then sent I vnto Eleazar, and Ecceiom, and Malman, and Malobam, and Enaathan, and Samea, and Joribimathan, Eunagan, Zachary, Mosollamum (these were the leders and men of experyence) and I sent them worde, that they shulde come vnto Loddeus, which was by þ place of the treasurye, and cōmaunded them that they shulde speake vnto Loddeus and to his brethren and to those that were in the treasurye, to sende vs suche men, as myght execute the prestes office in the house of the Lorde oure God. And with the myghtye hande of our Lorde God, they brought vnto vs men of good experience, frome amonges the sonnes of Moolius, the sonne of Leui, the sonne of Israel, Sebebelam and the sonnes and his brethren Albin and Anin, of whō there were. xviij. From amōges the chyldren of the sonnes of Cananeus, and their sonnes were. xx. men. And of them that serued in the temple, whom David had ordeyned, and the princeppall men that ministred for the worke vnto the Leuites in the temple two. C. and twentye men, whose names are all tokened vp in wrytynge.

1. Esdr. viij. c Then commaunded I a fastynge vnto the ponge men before the Lorde, that I myght desyre of him a prosperous iourney & a good waye for vs, yea for vs, for our chyldren, and for the catel, because of the layinges awayte, and I durst not require of the kynge men of horse and of fote, to conueye vs safely agaynst oure enemyes, for we had sayd vnto þ kynge, that the power of the Lorde our God shuld be with them, that seke hym with theyr hole herte. And therfore we besought God oure Lorde earnestlye because of these thynges, & he was mercyfull vnto vs, and heard oure prayer. And I separated from amonge the rulers of the people, and frō the prestes of the temple. xij. men, & Sebeia and Asania, and ten men of their brethrē with them. And I weied them the golde & the syluer and al the prestly ornamentes of the house of our God, which the kyng & his counsel, and his princes, & hole Israel had geuen. And whē I had weyed it, I gaue thē an. C. & L talētes in syluer, & C. talentes of syluer vessell, an. C. talētes of golde, & of golde vessell seuē tymes twentye, & vessels of other metall (yea of good mecall). xij. glystrynge as the golde, & sayd vnto them: ye also are holy vnto the lorde, & the vessels are holy, & the golde and the syluer is promysed vnto the lord þ God of our fathers, Be diligent nowe and kepe it, vntyll the tyme that ye delyuer it to the rulers of the people, to the Prestes, to the Leuite, and to the princeppall men of the cytyes of Israell in Jerusalem, and in the chambre of the house of our God.

So the prestes and the Leuytes which receyued of me the golde, the siluer and the vessell, brought it to Jerusalem into the temple of the Lorde. And from Thia we brake vp the. xij. daye of the fyrst moneth, tyll we came to Jerusalem. And when the thyrde day was past, the weyed golde & syluer was deliuered in the house of the Lord the fourth daye, vnto Marimoth the sonne of Jor the preste, and with him was Eleazar the sonne of Phineas, and with them were Josabdus the sonne of Jesnet, Medias and the sonne of Banus, and certayne of the Leuytes to the nombre and to the weyght: and the wayght of them were wrytten vp the same tyme. As for those that were come out of captyupte, they offred sacrifyce vnto the Lorde the God of Israel: euen. xij. oxen for all Israel. lxxxvj. rammes lxxij. shepe. xij. gootes for synne. xij. kyne for a thankoffeyng, al to þ sacrifyce of the Lord. And the kynges commyssyon delyuered they vnto the stewardes and debites of the kyng, and to the vnder tyrcues in Celosyria and Phenices. 1. Esdr. viij. d

Nowe when these thynges were done, the rulers came vnto me, and sayd: The generacyon of Israel, the Prynces, the prestes and Leuites, the straunge people and indwellers of the land, haue not put awaye theyr vnclennesse, from the Cananites, Hethites, Pherestes, from the Moabytes, Egyptyans and Edomytes.

For bothe they and theyr sonnes haue mengled them selues with the doughters of thē, and the holy sede is myxte with the outlandyshe Heathen, and sens the begynnyng of theyr raygne haue the rulers and heades ben partetakers of theyr wyckednesse.

e * As soone as I had hearde these thynges immediatly I rente my holy garmentes, and pulled out the heare of my heade & my beerd, & sat me downe sorowful & heuy. So al they that were moued thorow the word of þ God of Israel, came vnto me: & I sat styll full of heuynesse vntyll the euenyng sacrifice. Then stode I vp frō fastyng, hauyng rente clothes and the holy garmēt, kneled downe vpon my knees, helde out my handes vnto the Lorde, & sayde: O Lorde, I am confounded & ashamed before thy face, for oure synnes are become many vpon our heedes, and our wickednesses are exalted vnto the heuē, for sence the tyme of our fore fathers, we are in great syn vnto this day. And for the synnes of vs & our fathers, we with our brethren and with oure prestes haue ben delinered vnto the kynges of the erth, in to the swerde, and in to captiuitie, and became a spoyle with confusion & shame vnto this daye. And now, O Lord God, how greate is the mercye that we haue gotten of the? in that thou hast left vs a rote & name in the place of thy Sanctuarye, to discouer oure lyght in the house of the Lorde oure God, & gyuen vs meate at al tymes of our mynystracion. And when we were in captyupte, we were not forsaken of the Lorde our God: but he made the kinges of Persia gracious and fauourable vnto vs, so that they gaue vs vitayles and meate, yea and leaue to buylde vp the temple of oure Lorde God agayne, to repayre the wasted places of Sion, & to dwell in Jewry and Jerusalem. And nowe, O Lorde, f 1. Esdr. viij. e what shall we saye, hauinge all these thinges in possession? For we haue broken thy cōmaundementes, whiche thou gauest vnto vs by the hāds of thy seruātes the prophetes, sayinge: The land that ye go vnto, and that is gyuen you for an heritage to haue in possession, is defyled with the vnclennes and fil thynesse of the heithen, and with their abhominacion haue they poluted it all togyther. Therfore shall ye not ioyne your doughters vnto their sonnes ne mary your sonnes vnto your doughteers: Moreouer, ye shal neuer seke to make peax wt tyē, þ ye may increase & eat þ best in the land: & that ye may dyupde the inheritaunce of the lande vnto youre cyldren for euermore. As for the thinge that nowe happeneth vnto vs, it commeth all for our wycked workes & great synnes, yet hast thou geuen vs suche a rote, þ we are come agayne into our owne lande: and we are so wycked that we haue broken thy statutes and commāndementes agayne, & mengled our selues with the vnclennes of the outlandyshe Heathen. O Lorde, arte thou angrye with vs? wylte thou rote vs cleane out? that our rote and name remayn no more? O Lord God of Israell thou arte true, for our rote endureth yet vnto this present daye. And beholde, now are we before the in our synnes, now can we not stande before the in them.

And when Esdras with this prayer had knowledged the synne, weppynge, and lyenge flatte vpon the grounde before the temple, there gathered vnto hym from Jerusalem a great multytude of men and women, of yong men & maydens, for there was a very greate wepyng and mournyng in the congregacyō. Soo when Jechonias the sonne of Jehell one of the chyldren of Israel cryed, he sayd vnto Esdras: we haue synned agaynst the Lorde, because we haue maryed outlandyshe womē of the Heathen. Nowe arte thou ouer all Israel. We wyll sweare an othe therfore vnto the Lorde, that we shall put awaye all oure wyues, whiche we haue taken of the Heathē with theyr chyldren: lyke as it is appoynted the before our fore elders. Stande vp then, open thou it, and declare it playnly vnto vs, accordynge to the lawe of the Lorde: for the matter belongeth vnto the, & we wyll helpe the, quyte thy selfe manly. So Esdras arose, and toke an othe of the rulers of the prestes and of the Leuites, and of Israel, to do after these thynges: and they sware.

¶ After Esdras had read the lawe, the people put awaye theyr straunge wyues: and then returneth euery man merely vnto his owne dwellynge.

CAPI. IX.

A 1. Esdr. x. a THen Esdras stode vp from the court of the temple with out, & went in to the chamber of Jonathas the son of Nasabus, and remayned there, and eat no meate nor dronke dyrnke, for the multytude of the wyckednes of þ people. And there was made a proclamacyon in al Jewyre and at Jerusalem, for all suche as were gathered et Jerusalem out of captyupte, that whosoeuer came not to Jerusalem within two or. iij. dayes according to the iudgement of the olde lordes of councell) his goodes shulde be taken from him, and be excluded from the congregacyon of the captyupte. And in thre dayes were all they of the tryde of Juda and Ben Jamin gathered together at Jerusalem, the. xx. daye of the. ix. moneth. And the hole multytude satte tremblynge in the courte of the temple, for it was winter. So Esdras arose vp, and sayd vnto them: ye haue done vnryghtously, in that ye haue taken outlandyshe wyues to maryage, and so to encrease the synnes of Israel. And now knowledge the same, and giue prayse vnto the Lorde God of our fathers, and perfourme his wyll, departynge frome the Heathen of the lande, and from the outlandyshe wyues. Then cryed the hole multytude with loude voyce, and sayd: lyke as thou haste spoken, so wyll we do: but for somoche as the people are many, and the wynter here, we may not stād without the house: agayne, this worcke is not a thynge, that can be fynyshed in a daye or two, for we be many that haue synned in these thynges: Ordeyne therfore, that the rulers of the multytude & all they that dwell with vs, and as many as haue outelandyshe wyues, the Prestes also and iudges of euerye place may stande in the tyme appoynted, tyl they lose vp the wrath of the Lorde in his busynes. B

Then Jonathas the sonne of Ezell, and Ozias and Thecam receued þ charge of this matter, & Bozozamus, and Lelus. and Sabatheus helped them therto. After this, all they stode vp that were come out of captyuite. And Esdras the preest chose vnto him the princeppall men from amonge the fathers accordynge to theyr names, & in the new mone of the tenth moneth they satte together, to examen this matter. And so the matter was C a determynge (concernyng the men that had outlandyshe wyues) vntyll the newe mone of the first moneth. And of the preestes that had myxt them selues with out landish wyues, there were founde: of the sonnes of Jesu (Esdr. x. d the sonne of Josedech and his brethren, Mazeas, Eleazar, Joribus, and Joadeus, whiche offred them selues to put away their wyues, and to offre a ram for their ignoraūce. And of the sonnes of Semmeri, Walleas, and Elles, and Jeelech, Azarias. Of the sonnes of Joseba, Limolias, Hiimaen, Nathanea, Jullio, Jodus and Tallas. And of the Leuites Jolabdus, Semeis, and Colus, Caletas, Fareas, Colnas, and Elionas. Of the syngers of the Sanctuarye, Eliarib, Zacharus. Of the por-

tars

ters, Hallumus and Tolbanes. And of Israel, of the chyldren of Foro, Osi, and Remias, & Godolias, and Melchias, Mathelus, Elazarus, Jemmebias, and Bannas. And of the children of Jolaman, Chanias, Zachari, Jezrelus, Joddius, Semoth and Elias. And of the sonnes of Jothoni, Eliadas, Liasamus, and Zochias, Lasimoth, Sabdis and Zebedias. And of the sonnes of Zebes, Johannes, Amanias, Zabdias, and Emmeus. And of the sonnes of Bannus, Olammus, Maluchus, Jeddus, Jasub, Asabus & Jerimoth. And of the sonnes of Addin, Naatus, and Moosis. and Laleus, and Baanas, Maasias, Mathatias, Besel, Bannus and Manasses. And of the sonnes of Naue, Nones, Aseas, Melchias, Sameas, Simon, Benjamin, Malchus and Sarras. And of the sonnes of Asom, Lasanus, Mathathias, Bannus, Eliphalach, Manasses, Semei. Of the sonnes of Bannus, Jeremy, Moodias, Abzamas, Jobel, Daneas, Peliaas, Jona, Marimoth. Elasib, Mathenetis, Eliasis, Ozias, Dielus, Semebius, Zambris and Joseph. Of the sonnes of Nobeus, Jdelus, Mathathias, Sabadus, Zetheda, Sedmi, Jesserus, and Dancas. All these had taken ourlandysshe women to marryage, and they put the away with theyr chyldren. The prestes and Leuites, and all they that were of Israel, dwelt at Jerusalem and thorowout all the lande, in the newe moone of the.vij. moneth and & chyldren of Israel were in theyr dwellinges. And & hole multitude came together vpon the floore at the caste syde of the holy porte of the temple. And they spake vnto Eldras the hye prieste and reader, that he wolde bringe the lawe of Moses, whiche was geue of the Lorde God of Israel. So Eldras the hye preeste brought the lawe vnto the hole multitude, to man and woman, and to all prestes, that they myght heare the lawe, in the new mone of the.vij. moneth. And he redd in the floze that is before the holy porte of the temple, from the mornynge early vnto the euenyng, before men and women. And they applyed their mynde all vnto the lawe.

II. Esdr. iii. a
I. Eldr. viii. a

And Eldras the preste and reader of the lawe stode vp vpō a scaffolde of wood, which was made therfore: and vpō his right hand there stode by him Mathathias, Samus, Anamias, Azarias, Urias. Ozechias, and Balsamus: Vpō his left hād stode Faldeus, Mysael, Malachias, Abuscas, Sabus, Nabadias and Zachary. Then toke Eldras the boke before the hole multitude, for he was the principall, and had in mooll honour of them all. And when he had red out the lawe, they stode all strayght vpon theyr fete. So Eldras prayled the Lorde the mosse hygh God, the almyghty God of hostes. And all the people aunswered: Amen: and held vp their handes, fell downe flat vpō & earth, & prayled & Lord. And Jesus, Beneas, Sarebias, Jaddimus, Accubus, Sabbatheus, Calithes, Azarias, Jozadus, Ananias, and Phylias the Leuites lyfte vp theyr handes vpwarde, and bowed theyr faces to the grounde, and prayled the Lord: Those were they which taught & lawe of the Lorde, and red the lawe of the Lorde in the congregacyō: and euery man sett those before that vnderstode the lawe. Then spake Atharates vnto Eldras the hye prieste and reder, and to & Leuites that taught the multytude, sayinge: This daye is holy vnto the Lorde: & all they that heard the lawe, wepte. So Eldras said: Departe your way thē, and eat the best and drynke the swettest, and send gyftes vnto them that haue nothynge: for this daye is holy vnto the Lorde, and be not ye sorye. Then wente they theyr wayes euerychone, ate and droncke, and were merye, and sent rewardes vnto them that had nothyng that they myght also eat with gladnesse: for they were exceedyngly reioyced, therowe the wordes that were red vnto them in & lawe.

And so they were all gathered together at Jerusalem to holde & feast, accordynge to the couenaunt of the Lord God of Israel.

CAPI. I.

THe seconde boke of the Prophet Eldras (& sonne of Saraias, the son of Azarias, the son of Helchia, the sonne of Sallum, the son of Sadoc, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amerias, the sonne of Azarias the sonne of Maraioth, the son of Saahias, the sonne of Ozi, the sonne of Boccus, the sonne Abisu, the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron, of the tryde of Leui: which was prysoner in the land of Medes, in the raygne of Artaxerxes king of Persia.

And the word of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: go thy waye, and shew my people their synfulll dedes, and their childzen their wickednesses, which they haue done against me, that they maye tell their childers chyldren the same: for the sinnes of their fathers are increased in them. And why? they haue forgotten me and haue offred vnto straunge goddes. Am not I euen he, that brought the out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage? But they haue prouoked me vnto wrath, and despised my counsels. Pull thou out then the heer of thy heade, and cast al euell ouer them, for they haue not bene obedient vnto my lawe.

It is a people without lernyng and nourture. How longe shal I forbeare them vnto whom I haue done so moche good? Manye kynges haue I destroyed for their sakes: Pharao with his seruauntes and all his power haue I smytten downe and slayne: All the nacions haue I destroyed and roted oute before them, & in the east haue I brought two landes and people to nought, euen Tyre & Sydon, and haue slayne al their ennemyes. Speake thou therfore vnto them, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lorde: I ledde you thorowe the see, and haue geuen you sure stretes where the begynnynge. I gaue you Moses to be your captayne, and Aaron to be the prest. I gaue you lyght in a pyller of fyre, & greate wonders haue I done amonge you: yet haue ye forgotten me, sayth the Lorde.

Thus sayth the almyghty Lorde: I gaue you quayles to eate, and tentes for your sucoure: Neuertheles ye murmured, and alcribed not the victory of your ennemyes vnto my name: yea this same daye do ye yet murmoure. Where are the benefites, that I haue done for you? When ye were hongry in the wylderne, dyd ye not crye vnto me: Why hast thou brought vs in to this wylderne, to kyll vs? It had bene better for vs, to haue serued the Egipcians, then to die in this wilderneste. Then had I pitie vpon your mournynges, and gaue you Manna to eate. Ye ate angels fode. When ye were thurstly, dyd not I hewe the harde stone, & caused water to flowe therout? For the heate I couered you with the leaues of the trees. A good pleasaunt lande gaue I you: I cast oute the Cananites, the Pherezites and Philistines before you. What shall I doo more for you, sayth the Lorde. Sapi. xvi.c Num. xx.b Esay. v.c

Thus sayth the almyghty Lorde: When ye were in the wylderneste, in the water of the Amorytes, beinge a thyrste and blaspheminge my name: I gaue you not fyre for youre blaspheinyes, but caste a tree in to the water, and made the ryuer swete. What shal I doo vnto the, o Jacob? Thou Juda woldest not obeye me, I wyll tourne me to an other people, and vnto those wyll I gyue my name, that they maye kepe my statutes. c

Seynge ye haue forsaken me, I wyll forsake you also. When ye desyre me to be gracyous vnto you, I wyll haue no mercye vpon you: when ye call vpon me, I wyll not heare you. For ye haue defyled youre handes with blonde, and youre feete are swyfte to commyt manslaughter. Ye haue not forsaken me (in a maner) but your owne selues sayth the Lorde. Esay. i.d

Thus sayethe the almyghtye Lorde: haue I not prayed you, as a father his sonnes, as a mother her doughters, and as a nurse her younge babes, that ye wolde be my people, and I shoulde be youre God: that ye wolde be my chyldren, and I shoulde be your owne father? I gathered you togither, as an henne gathereth her chyckens vnder her wynges. But nowe what shall I doo vnto you? I shall cast you oute fro my face. When ye offer vnto me, I shall turne my face from you: for youre solemne feaste dayes, youre newe moones, and your circumcisions haue I forsaken, I sente vnto you my seruauntes the Prophetes, whom ye haue taken and slayne, and torne their bodies in peces, whose blond I wyll requyre of youre handes, sayethe the Lorde. Mat. xxv.b Esay. i.d xlvi.

Thus sayth the almyghtye Lorde: youre house must be desolate. I wyll caste you oute as the wynd doth the strawe: your childzen shall not be frutefull, for they haue despysed my commaundement, and doone the thynge that is cuyll before me. Youre houses wyll I gyue vnto a people that shall come, and they that neuer herd me, shal bileue in me: & they vnto whome I neuer shewed token, shal doo the thynge that I commaunde them. They haue sene no Prophetes, yet shall they call their synnes to remembraunce, and knowlege them. I reporte me vnto the grace, that I wil do for the people which is to com, whose chyldren reioyse in gladnesse: and thoughe they haue not sene me with bodyly eyes, yet in spirite they bileue the thynge that I saye. d

And now brother, beholde what great worshyp and se the people that cōmeth from the East, vnto whom I wyll gyue the dukedom of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, of Oseas, Amos, and Micheas: of Joel, Abdi, Jonas, Naum, and Abacuc: of Sophony, Aggeus, Zachary, and Malachi, whith is called also an aungell (or messenger) of the Lorde.

¶ The Synagoge kyndeth faulte with her owne chyldren. The Gentyles are called.

CAPI. II.

THus sayth the Lorde, I haue brought this people out of bondage, I geue thē my commaundementes by my seruauntes the Prophetes, whome thou woldest not heare, but despysed my counseils. The mother that bare them, saythe vnto them: Goo your waye you chyldren, for I am a wydow and forsaken: I brought you vp with gladnesse, but with sorowe and heynesse haue I loste you: for ye haue synned before ỳ Lord youre God, and done the thynge that is euil before him. But what shall I nowe doo vnto you? I am a wydowe and forsaken: goo youre waye, o my chyldren and aske mercye of the Lorde. As for me, o father, I cal vpon the for a wytnesse ouer the mother of these chyldren, whiche wolde not kepe my couenaunt: that thou bringe them to confusion, and their mother to a spoyle, that she beare no more. Let their names be scatred abrode amonge the heathen, let them be put oute of the erth, for they haue thought scorne of my couenaunt.

Woo be vnto the Assur, thou that hydest ỳ vnrightous by the. Thou wicked people, remembre what I dyd to Sodome & Gomorre whose lande is turned to pytche and asshes. Euen so also wil I do vnto all them ỳ heare me not, sayth ỳ almighty Lorde. Thus saith the Lorde vnto Esdras: tel my people, that I wil gyue them the kyngdom of Jerusalem which I wold haue gyuen vnto Israel: their glory also will I take vnto me, and giue thē the euerlastynge tabernacles, whiche I had prepared for those.

Gene.xix.e

The tre of lyfe shall be onto them a swete smellynge oynement: they shall neyther labour nor be werye. Goo ye your waye, and ye shall receyue it. Praye for your selues a fewe dayes, that they maye dwelle therin. Nowe is the kyngdome prepared for you, therfore watche, take heuen and erth to witnesse, for I haue broken the euil in prees, and created the good, for I lyue sayth the Lorde. Mother embrace thy chyldren, and bringe them vp with gladnesse: make theyr fete as fast as a pyller, for I haue chosen the, sayth the Lorde.

And those that be deed wyll I rayse vp agayne from their places, and bring them out of the graues, for I haue knowen my name in Israel. Feare not thou mother of the chyldren, for I haue chosen the sayth the Lorde. And for thy helpe, I shal send the my seruautes Esay and Jeremy, after whose counsel I haue sanctified and prepared for the twelue trees with dyues fruites, and as many welles flowynge with mylke and hony, and seuen mountaynes, wherupon there grow roses and lylyes, wherin I wyll fyll my chyldren with ioye.

Execute iustyce for ỳ widow, be iudge for the fatherlesse: giue to the poore, defende the comfortlesse, clothe the naked, heale the wounded & sicke, laugh not a lame man to scorne, defende the creple, and let the blynd come in to the lyghte of my clernesse. Kepe the olde and yonge within thy walles, where so euer thou fyndest the deed, token them, and bury them, and I shall gyue the, the fyrst place in my resurrection. Holde stil, o my people, and take thy rest, for thy quietnesse is come. Fede thy chyldrē, o thou good nurse, stablish their fete. As for the seruaūtes whom I haue gyuē the, there shall not one of them perysshe, for I wyll seke them from thy nombre, were not thy selfe.

Tobith

For when the daye of trouble and heynesse commeth, other shall wepe and be sorowfull, but thou shalte be merye and pleuteous. The heathen shall be gelous, but they shall be hable to doo nothynge agaynste the, sayth the Lorde. My handes shall couer the, so that thy children shal not se the fyre euerlastynge. Be ioyfull, o thou mother with thy chyldren, for I wyll delyuer the, sayth the Lorde. Remembre thy deed chyldren, for I shall bringe them out of the erth, and shewe mercy vnto them, for I am mercyfull sayth the Lorde almyghty.

Embrace thy chyldren vntyl I come, and shew mercy vnto thē, for my welles run ouer and my grace shall not fayle.

Esdras receyued a charge of the Lorde vpon the mount Oreb, that I shulde go vnto Israel. But whē I came vnto Israel they set me at nought, & despised the commaundemēt of the Lorde. And therfore I saye vnto you, o ye heathen, that heare & vnderstand: Loke for your shepherde, he shall gyue you euerlastynge rest: for he is nye at hande that shall come in the ende of the worlde. Be redy for ỳ rewarde of the kyngdom, for the euerlasting lyght shal shyne vpon you for euermore. Flie the shadowe of this worlde, receyue the ioyfulnesse of youre glorye. I testifye my sauioure openly: O receyue the gyft that is gyuen you, and be glad, gyuynge thankes vnto hym, that hathe called you to the heauenly kyngdome.

Aryse vp and stand fast: behold the nōbre of those ỳ be sealed in the feaste of the Lorde which are departed from the shadow of the worlde, and haue receyued glorious garmētes of the Lorde. Take thy nombre, o Sion, and shut vp thy vnrighteous, which haue fulfilled the law of the Lorde. The nombre of thy chyldren whom thou longdest for, is fulfylled: beseche the power of the Lorde that thy people, whiche haue ben called from the begynnyng, may be halowed.

Esdras

Esdras sawe vpon the mounte Syon a greate people, whome I coulde not nombre, and they al praysed the Lord with songes of thankesgyuynge. And in the myddes of them there was a yong man of an hye stature, more excellent then all they, and vpon euery one of their heades he set a crowne, and was euer hygher and hygher, whiche I marueyled at greatly. So I asked the aungell and sayde: Syr what are these? he answered and sayde vnto me: These be they that haue put of the mortall clothynge, and put on the immortal, and haue testified and knowledged the name of God. Nowe are they crowned and receyue the rewarde.

Then sayd I vnto the aungel: what yong person is it that crowneth them, and gyueth them the palmes in their handes? So he answered and sayd vnto me: It is the sonne of God, whome they haue knowleged in the worlde. Then began I greatly to commende them, that stode so stedfastly for the name of the Lorde. And so the aungell sayd vnto me: Go thy waye and tell my people what maner of thinges, and how great wonders of the Lorde thy God thou hast sene.

¶ The wonderous worckes whiche God dyd for the people are reherced. Esdras marueleth that God suffereth the Babylonians to haue rule ouer his people, whiche yet are synners also.

CAPI. III.

IN the thyrtye yere of the fall of the cyty, I was at Babylon, and laye troubled vpon my bedde, and my thoughtes came vp ouer my herte: for I sawe the desolacyon of Syon, and the plenteous wealth of them that dwelte at Babylon, and my spirite was sore moued: so that I began to speake fearefull wordes to the hyghest, & sayd: O Lorde, Lorde, thou spakest at the begynnyng, when thou plantedst the earth (and that thy selfe alone) and gauest commaundement vnto the people, and a bodye vnto Adam, whiche was a creature of thy handes, and hadst breched in hym the breth of lyfe: and so he lyued before the, and thou leddest him in to Paradyse, whiche gardeyn of pleasure thy ryghte hande hadde planted or euer the earthe was made. And vnto hym thou gauest commaundement to loue thy waye, whiche he transgressed, and immediatly thou appoyntedst death in hym, and in his generacions. Of hym came nacyons, trybes people and kynredes out of nombre. And euery people walked after their owne wyll, and dyd nyce thynges before the, but thy commaundementes they dispised. And in processe of tyme, thou broughtest the water floude vpon those that dwelte in the worlde, and destroyedst them. And as the deathe was in Adam, so was the water floude also in these. Neuertheles one of them thou lefteste, euen Noe with his housholde, of whome came all ryghteous men. And it happened, that when they that dwelte vpon the earth began to increase, and hadde gotten many chyldren, and were a greate people, they began to be more vngodly then the fyrst. Nowe when they sawe lyued so wyckedlye before the, thou dyddest chose the a man amonge them, whose name was Abraham. Hym thou louedst, and to him onely thou shewedst thy wyll, and madest an euerlastynge couenaunte with him, promysynge hym thou woldest neuer forsake his seed. And vnto hym thou gauest Isaac, vnto Isaac also thou gauest Jacob and Esau. As for Jacob, thou dyddest chose him, and put backe Esau. And so Jacob became a greate multitude.

Gene.xxi.a

Gene.xxv.c

Genes.xxvii.a

And it happened that when thou leddest his seed out of Egypt, thou broughtest them vp to the mount Syon, bowynge downe the heauens, stirynge fast the earthe, mouynge the grounde, makynge the depthes to shake, and troublynge the worlde: And thy glorye went thorowe foure portes of fyre, and earth quakes, and wyndes, and colde: that thou myghtest gyue the lawe vnto the seed of Jacob, and diligence vnto the generacion of Israel. And yet tokest thou not awaye from the that wycked hert, that thy lawe myght bring forth fruite in them. For the fyrst Adam bare a wycked herte, transgressed, and was ouercome, and so be all they that are borne of him. Thus remayned weykenesse with the lawe in the herte of the people, with the wyckednesse of the roote: so that the good departed awaye, and the euyll abode styll. So the tymes passed awaye, and ỳ yeres were broughte to an ende. Then dyddest thou rayse the vp a seruaunte called Dauid, whome thou commaundedst to buylde a citye vnto thy name, and to offre vp incense and a sacrifyce vnto ỳ therin. This was doone nowe manye yeres. Then the inhabitaūces of the citye forsoke the and in all thinges did, euen as Adam and all his generacions had done: for they also had a wicked herte.

Roma. viii.a

1. Reg. xv.c

1. Reg. v.a.g

And so thou gauest thy citye ouer in to the handes of thyne ennemyes. Are they of Babylon then better and more ryghteous then thy people, that they shall therfore haue the dominion of Syon? For when I came there, and sawe theyr vngodlynesse, and so greate wyckednesse that it couldo not be nombred: yea, when my soule sawe so many cuyll doers in the thirty yere, my herte fayled me: for I sawe how thou sufferedst them in such vngodlynesse, and sparedst the wycked doers: but thyne owne people hast thou rooted out, and preserued thyne ennemies, and this hast thou not shewed me.

I can not perceyue howe this happeneth. Doo they of Babylon then better then they of Syon? Or is there any other people, that knoweth the saynge the people of Israel? Or what generacion hath so bilued thy couenauntes, as Jacob? And yet theyr rewarde appeareth not, and theyr labour hath no frute. For I haue gone here and there thorowe the Heathen, and I se they be ryche and welthye, and thynke not vpon thy commaundementes.

Weye thou therfore our wickednesse now in the ballaunce, and theirs also that dwelle in the worlde, and so shall thy name be no where founde, but in Israell. Or where is there a people vpon earthe, that hathe not synned before the? Or what people hathe so kepte thy commaundementes? Thou shalte fynde that Israell by name hathe kepte thy preceptes, but not the other people and Heathen.

¶ The Aungel reproueth Esdras, bicause he semed to entre in to the profounde iudgement of God.

CAPI. IIII.

A AND the aungell that was sente vnto me (whose name was Uriel) gaue me an aunswere, and sayd: Thy herte hath taken to moche vpon it in this worlde, and thou thynkest to compasse the waye of the hyest. Then sayde I: Yea my Lorde. And he aunswered me and sayde: I am sent to shewe the thre wayes, and to set forth thre symilitudes before the: wherof yf thou canst declare me one, I wyll shewe the also the waye that thou desyrest to se, and I shal shew the whence thy wycked herte commeth. And I sayd: Tell on my Lord. Then sayd he vnto me: Go thy waye, weye me the weyghte of the fyre, or measure me the blast of the wynde, or call me agayne the daye that is past. Then aunswered I and sayd: What man borne is hable to do that? Why requyrest thou suche of me? And he sayd vnto me: Yf I shoulde aske the, how depe dwellinges are on the see? Or how greate water sprynges are vpon the fyrmament? Or how great water sprynges are in the begynnynge of the depe? Or whiche are the out goynges of Paradyse? Peraduenture thou woldest saye vnto me: I neuer wente downe yet in to the depe nor hel, neither dyd I euer clymme vp in to heuen. Neuerthelesse nowe haue I asked the but onely of fyre and wynde, and of the daye thorowe whiche thou hast trauayled, and from whence thou canste not be seuered: and yet canst thou gyue me no answere of them.

He sayd moreouer vnto me: Thyne owne thynges, and such as are growen vp with the can thou not knowe: how shoulde thy vessel then be hable to compasse the way of the hyest, and now outwardly in the corrupte worlde to vnderstande the corrupcion that is euident in my syghte? Then sayde I vnto him: It were better we were not at al, then we shold lyue in wyckednesse, and suffre, and not to know
B wherfore. He answered me and sayd: I went Judith.ix.b in a woo, and the trees toke such a deuice and
i. Para.xx.c sayd: Come let vs go, and fyght agaynst the see, that it maye depart awaye before vs, and that we may make vs yet more woddes. The floudes of the see also in like maner toke this deuyce ad sayd: Come let vs go vp and fyght agaynst the trees of the wodde, that we may make our lande the wyder. The thought and deuyce of the wodde was but vayne, and nothynge worthe, for the fyre came and consumed the wodde: The thought of the floodes of the see came lykewyse to noughte, for the sand stode vp and stopped them. Yf thou were iudge nowe betwene these two, whom woldest thou iustifye, or whom woldest thou condemne? I aunswered and sayd: Uerily it is a folysh thought that they bothe haue deuysed. For the grounde is gyuen vnto the wod, and the see also hath his place to beare his flodes. Then aunswered he me and said: Thou hast gyuen a ryghte iudgement, why iudgest thou not thy selfe also? For lyke as the ground is (Esa.lv.c) gyuen vnto the wodde, and the see to his floodes: (Iohn.iii.) euen so they that dwell vpon erth maye (i.Corin.ii.) vnderstande nothyng but that which is vpon erth: and he that dwelleth aboue the heuens, maye onely vnderstande the thynges that are aboue the heuens.

Then answered I and sayd: I beseche the O Lorde, let me haue vnderstandynge: for it was not my mynde to be curious of thy high thinges, but such as we dayly medle withal/ namely, wherfore that Israell is blasphemed of the Heathē, and for what cause the people (whome thou euer hast loued) is gyuen ouer to be punisshed of vngodly naciōs: and why the law of our fathers is brought to noughte, and the wrytten couenauntes come to none effect, and we passe away out of the worlde as the greshoppers, and our lyfe is a very feare, & we are not worthy to obteyne mercy. What wyl he do then vnto his name, which is called vpon ouer vs? Of these thynges haue I asked question.

Then answered he me and said: The more thou serchest, the more thou shalte maruayle, for the worlde hasteth faste to passe awaye, and can not comprise the thynges, that are promysed for the ryghteous in tyme to come, for this worlde is full of vnryghteousnesse and weykenesse.

But as concernynge the thynges wherof (i.Tho.iiii.) thou askest me, I wyll tell the. The euyll is C sowen, but the destruction therof is not yet come. Yf the euyll nowe that is sowen, be not turned vpsyde downe, and yf the place where the euyll is sowen, passe not awaye, then can not the thynge come that is sowen with good. For the corne of euyll sede hathe ben sowen in the herte of man from the begynnyng, and how moche vngodlynesse hath he brought vp vnto this time? and how moch shall he yet brynge forth vntyll he come in to the barne?

Ponder nowe by thy selfe, when the corne of euyll sede is cut downe, how great a barne shall it fyll? I aunswered an sayd: How and when shal these thinges come to passe? Wherfore are oure yeres fewe and euyll? And he aunswered me, sayinge: Haste not thou to moche vpon the hyest, for thy hastynesse to be aboue him is but vayne, thou makest to moch ado. Dyd not the soules also of the ryghtous aske questyon of these thynges in theyr holynesse, sayinge: * How longe shall I hope of (Apoca.vi.b) this facion? When commeth the frute of my barne, and my rewarde? And vpon this Ieremiel the Archaungel gaue them answere, and sayde: Euen when the nombre of the sedes is fylled in you: for he hath weyed the worlde in the balaūce: in measure and nombre hath he measured the tyme, and moueth it not, vntyll the same measure be fulfylled. Then answered I and sayd: O Lorde Lorde, now are we all full of synne, and for our sakes peraduenture it is not that the barne of the ryghteous shall not be filled, bicause of the synnes of them that dwell vpon the erth.

So he aunswered me and sayde: Goo thy
D waye to a woman with chylde, and aske of her when she hath fulfylled her nyne monethes, yf her chyldbed maye kepe the byrth any longer within her. Then sayd I: No Lord that can she not. And he said vnto me: In hel the secrete places of soules are lyke the pryuy chambre of a woman. For lyke as a woman that trauaileth, maketh haste when the time and necessitie of the byrthe is at hande: Euen so dothe she haste to delyuer it that is cōmitted vnto her. Loke what thou desyrest to se, it shal be shewed the from the begynnyng. Then aunswered I and sayde: Yf I haue founde fauoure in thy syght, and yf it be possible, and yf I be mete therfore, shewe me thē whether there be more to come then is paste, or more paste then is for to come? What is paste I knowe: but what is for to come, I knowe not.

And he sayd vnto me: Stande vp vpon the right syde, and I shall expounde the symilytude vnto the. So I stode, and beholde, an hote burnynge ouen wente ouer before me: and it happened that when the flambe was gone by, the smoke hadde the vpper hande. After this there wente ouer before me a waterry cloude, and sent down moche rayne with a storme: and when the stormye rayne was past, the droppes remayned styll. Then sayde he vnto me: Lyke as the rayne is more then the droppes, and as the fyre exceadeth the smoke: euen so the measure of the thynges that are paste, hathe the vpper hande. Then went the droppes and the smoke aboue: and I prayed and sayde: Maye I lyue (thynckest thou) vntyll that tyme? Or what shall happen in those dayes? He aunswered me, and sayde. As for the tokens wherof thou askest me, I may tell the of them in a parte: but as touching thy lyfe, I may not shewe the, for I am not sent therfore.

¶ Esdras and the Aungel commen togyther.

CAPI. V.

A NEuerthelesse, as concernyng the tokens marke this. Beholde, the dayes shall come, that they which dwell vpon erth shal be taken in a great nombre, and the way of the truth shall be hyd, and the lande shall be barreyn from fayth, but iniquitie shal haue the vpper hande, lyke as thou hast sene now, and as thou hast herde long ago. And the land that thou seest now to haue rule, shalte thou shortly se waste. But yf God graunte the to lyue, thou shalt se after the thyrde trompet, that the sunne shall sodenly shyne agayn in the nyght, and the mone thre tymes in ỹ day, and bloude shall drop out of wod, and ỹ stone shall gyue his voyce, and the people shall be vnquiet: and euen he shall rule, whome they hope not that dwell vpō erth, and the foules shal flye, and the Sodomitish see shall cast out his fish, and make a noyse in the night, which many shal not know, but they shall all heare the voyce therof.

There shal be a confusion also in many places, and the fire shall be ofte sent agayne, and the wylde beastes shall go their way, and menstruous women shal beare monsters, and salt waters shall be found in the swete/ one frend shall fight agaynst an other/ then shal all wit and vnderstandyng be hyd and put asyde in to their secrete places, and shall be sought of many, and yet not be founde: then shall vnrightousnesse, and voluptuousnesse haue the vpper hande vpon earthe. One lande also shall aske an other and saye: Is rightousnes gone thorow the? And it shall say, no. At the same tyme shall men hope, but nothynge obteyne: they shall labour, but their wayes shall not prospere.

To shewe the suche tokens I had leue, and B yf thou wilt pray agayne, and wepe as now, and fast seuē dayes, thou shalt heare yet greater thinges. Then I awaked, and a fearfulnesse went thorow al my body, and my minde was feble and carefull, so that I almost sowned withal. So the aungel that was come to talke with me, helde me, comforted me, & set me vp vpon my fete.

And in the seconde nyght it happened, that Salathiel the Capitayne of the people came vnto me, sayinge: Where haste thou bene? and why is thy countenaunce so heuy? Knowest thou not that Israell is commytted vnto the in the lande of their captiuitie? Up then and eat, and forsake vs not, as the shepherde that leaueth his flocke in the handes of wycked wolues. Then sayd I vnto him: Go thy waye fro me, and come not nye me: and he herd it/ and as I sayd, so went he his waye fro me.

And so I fasted seuen dayes, mournynge and weppynge, lyke as Uriel the aungell commaunded me. And after seuen dayes, it happened that the thoughtes of my herte were verye greuous vnto me agayne, and my soule receyued the spirite of vnderstandynge, and I beganne to talke with the mooste hyghest agayne, and sayd: O Lorde, Lorde, of euery wodde of the earthe, and of all the trees therof, thou haste chosen the one onely vyneyard, and of al landes of the hole world thou hast chosen the one pyt: and of all floures of the ground, thou hast chosen the one lyly: and of all the depthes of the see, thou hast fylled the one ryuer/ and of all buylded cityes thou hast halowed Syon vnto thy selfe: and of all the foules that are created, thou hast named the one doue/ and of al the catel that are made thou hast prouided the one shepe, and among all the multytudes of folkes, thou hast gotten the one people, and vnto this people whō thou louedst thou gauest a lawe that is proued of all.

And nowe, O Lorde, why hast thou gruen this one people ouer vnto manye? and vpon the one roote thou haste prepared other, and why hast thou scattered thy one onely people amonge many? whiche treade theym downe, yea whiche haue euer withstande thy promyses, and neuer byleued thy couenaunttes? And though thou wereste ennemye vnto the people yet shouldest thou punysshe them with thyne owne handes.

E Now when I had spoke these wordes, the aungel that came to me the nyght afore, was sent vnto me and sayde vnto me: Heare me & harken to the thynge that I saye, and I shall tell ẏ more. And I sayd: Speke on my Lorde. Then sayd he vnto me: Thou art sore vexed and troubled for Israels sake. Louest thou ẏ people better than hym that made them? And I sayd: No Lorde, but of verye greffe & compassion haue I spoken. For my reynes payne me euery houre, bycause I wolde haue experience of the waye of the moost hyest, & to seke out part of his iudgement. And he sayde vnto me: that thou mayst not. And I sayd: wherfore Lorde? Whereunto was I borne then? Or why was not my mothers chylobed then my grane? So had I not sene ẏ misery & trouble of Jacob, and the trauayle of my people of Israel.

And he sayd vnto me: nombre me the thinges that are not yet come / gather me togyther ẏ droppes that are scatred abrode: make me the floures grene agayne that are wythered: open me the thynge that is closed: and brynge me forthe the wyndes that are shutte vp: Shewe me the ymage of a voyce, & then shall I declare the, the thynge that thou labourest to know. And I sayd: O Lorde, Lord who maye knowe these thynges, but he that hath not his dwellynge with men? As for me I am vnwyse: howe maye I then speake of these thynges wherof thou askest me. Then sayd he vnto me: lyke as thou canst do none of these thynges that I haue spoken of, euen so canst thou not fynde out my iudgement, or in the ende the loue that I haue promysed vnto my people.

And I sayd: beholde, O Lorde, yet art thou nye vnto them that haue no ende: and what shall they doo that haue bene before me, or we that be nowe, or they that shall come after vs? And he sayde vnto me: I wyll lyken my iudgement vnto a ryngе. Lyke as there is no slacknesse of the last, euen so is there no swiftnesse of the fyrste. So I answered and sayde: Couldest thou not make those (that haue bene made, and that be nowe, and that are for to come) in one, that thou mygheest shewe thy iudgement the sooner? Then answered he me and sayde: The creature maye not haste aboue the maker, neyther maye the worlde holde them at ones, that shall be created.

And I sayde: Howe hastе thou sayde then vnto thy seruaunte, that thou sayest me- D ker, hastе made the creature sayest at ones, and the creature bare it? euen so might it now also beare them that be present at ones. And he sayde vnto me: Aske the childebedde of a woman, and saye vnto her: Yf thou bryngest forthe chyldren, why doest thou it not togyther, but one after an other? Praye her therfore to bryng forth ten chyldren at ones. And I sayd: she can not, but must do it one after an other.

Then sayd he vnto me: Euen so haue I gruen a childebed vnto the earthe, forthose that be sowen vpon it by processe of tyme. For lyke as a yonge chylde maye not bryngе forthe the thynges that belonge to the aged, euen so haue I ordeyned the worlde which I made.

And I asked and sayde: Seinge thou hastе nowe gruen me awaye, I wyll speake before the: for our mother of whom thou hast talde me, is yet younge, and nowe the draweth nye vnto age. He aunswered me and sayd: Aske a woman that beareth chyldren, and she shall tell the. Saye vnto her: wherfore are not they (whome thou hast nowe brought forth) lyke those that were before the, but lesse of stature: and she shal aunswere the: They that be borne in the youthe of strength, are of one facyon: and they that are borne in the tyme of age (when the childebed fayleth) are other wyse. Consydre nowe thy selfe, howe that ye are lesse of stature then those that were before you, and so are they that come after you lesse then ye, as the creatures whiche nowe begyn to be olde, and haue passed ouer the strengthe of youthe. Then sayde I: Lorde I beseche the, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy syghte, shewe thy seruaunte, by whome doest thou vysyt thy creature?

¶ The Aungel instructeth Esdras, and gyueth him answere to his questyons.

CAPI. VI.

AND he sayde vnto me: In the begyn- ¶
nynge when the grounde was made: before the worlde stode, or euer the windes blewe, before it thondered and lyghtened, or euer ẏ foundations of Paradyse were layde, before the fayre floures were sene, or euer ẏ mouable powers were stablysshed, before the innumerable multitude of aungelles were gathered togyther, or euer the hyghnesse of the ayre were lyfted vp, afore the measures of the fyrmament were named, or euer the chymneys in Syon were pyght, and or the present yeres were sought out, and or euer the inuencyons of them that now synne were put aside, before they were sealed that nowe gather fayth for a treasure: then dyd I consydre and ponder all these thinges, and they all were made thorow me, and thorowe none other, by me also they be ended, & by none other.

Then answered I and sayde: whiche shal be the partynge asunder of the tymes? Or when shall be the ende of the fyrste, and the begynnynge of it that foloweth? And he said vnto me: From Abraham vnto Isaac, when Jacob and Esau were borne of him, Jacobs hande helde fyrst the hele of Esau: for Esau is the ende of this worlde, and Jacob is the beginnynge of it that foloweth. The hande of man betwixte the hele and the hande. Other question (Esdras) aske thou not.

I answered then, and sayde: O Lorde Lorde, if I haue founde fauoure in thy syght I beseche the, shewe thy seruaunt the ende of thy tokens, wherof thou shewdest me parte the last nyght. So he answered and sayd vnto me: Stande vp vpon thy fete, and heare the perfecte voyce and sounde. There shall come a greate mocion, but the place where thou standest shall not be moued. And therfore when thou hearest the wordes, be not afrayde: for of the ende shall the worde and foundacio of the earth be vnderstande. And why? the worde therof trembleth and quaketh for it knoweth, that it muste be chaunged at the ende. And it happened, that whe I had herd it, I stode vp vpon my fete, and herkened: and beholde there was a voyce that spake, & the sounde of it was lyke the sound of many waters, and it sayde. Beholde, the dayes come, that I wyll begynne to drawe nyghe, and to vysette them that dwell vpon earth, and wyll begynne to make inquisicio of them, what they be that hurt equyte with vnryghtousnes, and when the lowe estate of Syon shal be fulfylled: and when the world that shall vanyth awaye, shal be ouersealed, then will I do these tokens. B

The bokes shall be opened before the firmament, and they shall se all togither, & the chyldrē of a yere olde shal speake with their voyces: the women with chylde shall bring forth vntymely childzen of thre or foure monethes olde, and they shall lyue, & be rayled vp: & sodenly shal the sowne places appeare as the vnsowne, the ful store houses shall sodenly be found emptye, and the trompet shal gyue a sounde, whiche when euery man heareth, they shall be hastely afrayde. At ẏ time shall frendes fight one against an other like enemyes, and the earth shall stande in feare with them.

The sygnynges of the welles shall stande styll, and in thre houres they shal not renne. Whosoeuer remayneth frō all these thinges that I haue tolde the, shall escape, and se my saluacion, and the ende of youre worlde. And the men that are receyued, shall se it, they that haue not tasted death frome theyr byrth: and the hert of the indwellers shal be chaunged, and turned into another meaning for euyll shall be put out, & disceyte shall be quenched: as for fayth, it shall florysshe, corrupcio shalbe ouer come: and the truth, whiche hath bene so longe without frute, shalbe declared. And it happened when he talked wt me, that I loked demurely vpon him, before whom I stode, and these wordes sayde he vn to me: I am come to shew the, the tyme of ẏ nyght for to come.

Yf thou wilt praye yet more, and fast seuē E
dayes agayne, I shall tell the more thinges, and greater then before: for thy voyce is hearde before the hyghest: for why? the mighty hath sene thy rightous dealynge, he hath sene also thy chastyte, whiche thou hast had euer sence thy youth: and therfore hathe he sent me to shewe the all these thinges, and to saye vnto the: Be of good comfort, & feare not, and haste not with the tymes that are past to thynke vayne thynges, and make not haste of the latter tymes.

And it happened after this, that I wepte agayne, and fasted seuē dayes in lyke maner that I myght fulfyll the thre weekes, whiche he tolde me. In the eyght night was my hert vered within me agayne, and I beganne to speke before the hyghest: for my spirite was greatly set on fyre, and my soule was in distres, and I sayde: O Lorde, thou spakest vnto thy creature fom the beginninge (euen the fyrste daye) and sayedest: Let heauen and Genes.1.a erth be made, and thy worde was a perfecte worke. And then was there the spirite, and the darknesses were yet on euery syde, and silence: there was no mans voyce as yet frō the. Then commaundest thou a fayre lyght to come forth out of thy treasures, that thy worke myght appeare and be sene.

Upon the seconde daye thou madest the spirite of the fyrmament, and commaūdedst it to parte a sundre, and to make a deuision betwixt the waters, that the one part might remayne aboue, and the other beneth. Upon the thyrde day thou broughtest to passe, that the waters were gathered in the seuēth part of the earth: Sixe partes hast thou dryed vp and kept them, to thintent that men myghte sowe and occupye husbandrye therin. As soone as thy worde went forth, the worcke was made. For immediatly there was great innumerable frute, and manye dyuers pleasures and delyces of temptacion, floures of chaungeable colour and smel, and this was done the thyrde daye.

Upon the fourth day thou commaundedst D that the sonne shoulde gyue his shyne, and ẏ Deut.iiii.e
moone her lyght: the starres dydest thou set Genes.i.c
in order, and gauest them a charge to do seruyce euē vnto man: that was for to be made. Upon the fyft day thou saydest vnto the seuenth parte (where the waters were gathered) that they shulde bryngе forthe dyuerse beastes, fowles, & fyshes. And so it came to passe, that the dom water & withoute soule, brought forth lyuynge beastes at the commaundement of God, that all people myghte prayse thy wonderous workes. Thē diddest thou preserue two soules, the one ẏ calledst Enoch and the other Leuiathon, & dyddest separate the one frō the other: for the seuēth parte (namely, where the water was gathered togither) myght not holde them bothe. Unto Enoch thou gauest one parte, whiche was dryed vp the thyrde daye, that he shulde dwell in the same parte, wherin are a thou-

sande

sande hylles. But vnto Leuiathan thou gauest the seuenth parte, namely the moyst, and, hast kepte hym to deuoure what thou wylt and whan. Upon the syxte daye thou gauest commaundement vnto the earth, that before the it shoulde brynge forth beastes, catel, and all that crepe, and (besydes this) Adam also whom thou madest lord of al creatures: Of hym come we all, and y people also, whõ thou hast chosen specyally vnto thy selfe. All this haue I sayd nowe and spoken before the, that I myght shewe, how that the worlde is made for our sakes. As for the other people whiche also come of Adam, thou haste sayde that they are nothyng, but be lyke a spetle, & hast lykened the aboundaunce of them vnto a droppe (that falleth) from the rofe of the house.

And nowe, O Lorde, the Heathen whiche haue euer ben reputed as nothynge, haue begonne to be Lordes ouer vs, and to deuoure
Exod.iiii.f vs: but we thy people (whome thou hast called thy fyrst born, thy only begotten, and thy feruent louer) are gyuen into theyr handes & power. If the worlde now be made for oure sakes, why haue we not the inheritaunce in possessyon with the worlde? How longe shal this endure?

¶ The Aungell sheweth Esdras many thynges to come.

CAPI. VII.

A AND it happened after that I had spokẽ out these wordes, there was sent vnto me an aungell, which hadde ben by me also the nyghtes afore, and he sayd vnto me: Up Esdras, and heare the wordes that I am come to tell the. And I sayd: speake on Lorde my God. Then sayd he vnto me: The see is sette in a wyde place, that it myght be depe and great: but the entraunce is narrow and small lyke a ryuer. For who wolde goo into the see, to loke vpon it, and to rule it? If he went not thorowe the narrowe, howe myght he come into the brode?

Item an other: A cytie is buylded and sette vpon a brode felde, and is full of goodes: the entraunce is narrowe and sodeyn, lyke as yf there were a fyre at the ryght hande, and a depe water at the left, and as it were onlye one strayte pathe betwyxte them bothe, too smal that there coulde but one mã go there.

If this cytie now were gyuen to an heyre, & he neuer went thorowe the perelous waye, howe wolde he receyue his enheritaũce? And I sayde: it is so Lorde. Then sayd he: Euen so is Israel also a porcyõ. And why? for theyr sakes haue I made the worlde: and when Adam transgressed my statutes, then was the thynge iudged that was done. Then were the entraunces of the worlde made narrow, full of sorowe and trauayle: They are but fewe and euell, full of perels and laboure. For the entraunces of the fore worlde were wyde and sure, and brought immortal frute: If they now which entred into this worlde maye not comprehende these strayte and vayne thynges, moche lesse may they comprehende and vnderstande the secrete thynges: Why disquietest thou thy selfe then, seynge thou arte but a corruptible man? And what woldest thou knowe, where as thou arte but mortall? And why hast thou not receyued in to thyne owne herte the thyng that is for to come, but that is present?

Then sayd I: O Lorde Lorde, thou haste B
ordened in thy lawe, that y ryghtous shulde Deut.viij.
inheret these thynges, but that the vnfaythfull and vngodly shulde peryshe. Neuerthelesse the ryghteous shall suffre strayte thynges and hope for wyde: for they that haue lyued vngodly and suffred strayte thynges, shal not se the wyde.

And he sayd vnto me: There is no iudge aboue God, & none that hath vnderstanding aboue the hyest. For there be many that peryshe, because they despyse the lawe of God that is sette before them. For God hath gyuen strayte cõmaundement to such as come, that they know what they do, and how they shulde lyue: and yf they kept this they shuld not be punyshed.

Neuerthelesse they were not obedient vnto hym, but spake agaynst hym: ymagyned vayne thynges, and purposed to synne, & sayd moreouer that there was no God, and that God regarded it not. His wayes haue they not knowen/ his lawe haue they despysed, & denyed his promyses: in his statutes and ordynaunces haue they not ben faythfull and stedfaste, and haue not perfourmed his workes.

And therfore Esdras, vnto the full, plenty, and to the emptye, emptynesse. Beholde, the tyme shall come, that these tokens which I haue tolde the, shall come to passe, and the bryde shall appeare: and the earth that now passeth awaye, shall be shewed: and whosoeuer is delyuered from the foresayd euelles, shall se my wonders. For my sonne Jesus shalbe openlye declared, with those that be with hym: and they that remayne, shall be mery in foure hundred yeares.

After these same yeares shall my sonne C
Christe dye, and all men that haue lyfe, and the worlde shalbe torned into the olde sylence .vij. dayes, lyke as in the fore iudgmẽtes so that no man shall remayne. And after .vij. dayes, the worlde that yet awaketh not, shal be raysed vp, and shall dye corrupte. And the earthe shall restore those that haue slepte in her, and so shall the dust those that dwell in sylence, and the secrete places shall delyuer those that be committed vnto them. And the moste hyest shall be openlye declared vpon y seate of iudgement, and all mysery shall vanysshe awaye, and longe sufferynge shalbe gathered together. But the iudgment shall cõtynue, the trueth shall remayne, and faythe shall waxe stronge, the worke shall folowe and the rewarde shall be shewed, the ryghtuousnesse shall watche, and y vnryghtuousnesses shall beare no rule.

Then sayd I: Abraham prayed fyrst for the Sodomites, and Moses for the fathers that synned in wyldernes, & he that came after him for Israel, in the tyme of Achas and Samuel: and Dauid for the destruccyon, and Salomon for them that came in to the Sanctuary, and Elias for those that receiued raine and for the deed, that he myght lyue: and Ezechias for the people in the tyme of Sennacherib: and diuers other in lyke maner, which haue prayed for many.

Euen nowe seynge the corrupte is growẽ vp, and wyckednes increased, and the ryghtous haue prayed for the vngodly, wherfore shall it not be so nowe also?

He aunswered me, and sayd: This present worlde is not the end: there remayneth moch honoure in it, therfore haue they prayd for y weake. But the daye of dome shalbe the ende of this tyme, and the begynnyng y of immortalite for to come, wherin al corrupcyon, vanissheth, al volupteousnes is lowsed all misbyleue taken away ryghtousnesse growne, & and the verite spronge vp. Then shall no mã be hable to saue hym that is destroyed, nor to oppresse him that hath goten the vyctorye.

I aunswered then, and sayd: This is my fyrst and last saying: that it had ben better, not to haue gyuen the earth vnto Adam: or els whẽ it was gyuen him, to kepe him y he shuld not synne. For what profyte is it for men nowe in this present tyme to lyue in heuynes, and after death to loke for punyshment? O thou Adam, what hast thou done? For though it was thou that synned, thou arte not fallen alone, but we all that come of the. For what profyt were it vnto vs, yf there be promysed vs an immortall tyme, where as we medle with deadly workes? and that there is promysed vs an euerlastynge hope, where as we oure selues are euyll and vayne? & that there are layed vp for vs dwellynges of health and fredome, where as we haue lyued euyll? and that the worshyp of the hyest is kepte to defende them, which haue ledde a pacyent lyfe where as we haue walked in the moste wycked wayes of all? And y there shalbe shewed a paradyse, whose frute endureth for euer, wherin is fredome and medecyne, where as we shall not goo in? for we haue walked in vnpleasaũt places: And that the faces of thẽ whiche haue absteyned, shal shyne aboue the starres, where as our faces shalbe blacke and darcke? For whyle we lyued and dyd vnryghtouslye, we consydered not, that we shoulde suffre therfore after death?

D Then aunswered he me, and sayd: This is the consyderacyon & thought of the batayle, which man hath vpon earth: that yf he be ouercome, he shall suffre as thou haste sayde. But yf he gette the vyctorye, he shall receyue the thynge that I saye. For this is the lyfe, whereof Moses spake vnto the people, whyle he lyued, saying: Chose the lyfe, y thou maist lyue. Neuertheles they belyued him not, nether the Prophetes after him. No nor me which haue spoken vnto them, that heuynes shulde not reach vnto theym to theyr destruccion lyke as ioye is for to come ouer those, that haue suffred them selues to be enfourmed in saluacyon.

I answered then and sayd: I know Lorde, that the hyest is mercyfull, in that he hath mercy vpon them, which are not yet in the worlde, and vpon those also that walcke in his lawe: and that he is pacyent and longe sufferynge, towarde those that haue synned in Roma.ii.a theyr workes: and that he is lyberall to gyue where as it requireth: and that he is of great mercy, for he multiplieth his louynge kyndnesses towarde those that are present, and that are past, & to thẽ whiche are for to come. For yf he multyplye not his mercyes, y world shall not be made lyuynge, with those that dwell therin: He gyueth also, for yf he gaue not of his goodnesse, that they whiche haue done euell, myght be eased, the ten thousand parte of men shulde not be made lyuynge. And yf the iudge forgaue not those that be healed with his word, and yf he wold destroy the multytude that stryueth, there shulde be very fewe left in an innumerable multitude.

¶ Esdras prayeth God rather to loke vpon his owne mercy, than on the synnes of the people.

CAPI. VIII.

AND he aunswered me, sayinge: The A moost hyest made this worlde for many, but the worlde to come for fewe. I wyll tell the a symylitude, Esdras: As whẽ thou askest the earth, it shall saye vnto the, that it gyueth moche moulde, where of earthen vessells are made, but lytle of it that gold commeth of, Euen so is it with y worke of this worlde. There be manye created, Math.xx.b
but fewe shal be preserued. Then aunswered xxii.b
I and sayd: Then swalowe vp the wyt (thou soule) & deuour the vnderstandynge, for thou arte agreed to herken and to gyue eare, and wyllynge to prophecye: for thou hast no longer space gyuen y, but only to lyue. O Lorde wylt thou not gyue thy seruaunt leaue, that we may pray before the, and that thou mayst gyue sede vnto our herte, and buyld our vnderstandyng, that there may come frute of it: and that euerye one whiche is corrupte, and beareth the state and place of a man, maye lyue?

For thou art alone, & we al are one workmanshyp of thy handes, lyke as thou haste sayd, and lyke as the body is fashioned nowe in the chyldesbed, and thou gyuest the membres, and thy creature is preserued in fyre & water: and .ix. monethes dothe thy worcke suffre thy creature, which is fashioned in her but the thyng that preserueth and it that is preserued, shall bothe be kepte together: and when tyme is, the chyldesbed delyuereth the thyng, that is kepte and growne in her.

For thou hast commaunded the breastes to milke vnto the frute, y the thyng which giue is created and fashioned, may be norished for a tyme: and than thou dysposest and ordrest it with thy mercy, bryngest it vp with thy rygh-ryghtousnes, nurtureſt it in thy lawe, and reformeſt it with thy vnderſtandynge, mo-tifyeſt it it as thy creature, and makeſt it lyuynge as thy worke. Seynge then that thou deſtroyeſt hym, which with ſo greate labours is created and faſhyoned thorowe thy commaundement, thou couldeſt lyghtly ordeyn, alſo that the thynge whiche is made, myghte

be preſerued.

And this I ſpeake nowe of all men in generall, as thou knoweſt: but of thy people,
for whose ſake I am ſory: and of thy inheritaunce: for whose cauſe I mourne, and of Iſrael, for whome I am wofull: and for Jacob, for whose ſake I am greued: therfore be-gynne I to praye before the, for my ſelfe and for them, for I ſe the fall of vs, & dwell vpō earth. But I haue herd the ſwyft-nes of the iudge, which is to come: therfore heare my voyce, and vnderſtand my wordes,
and I ſhall ſpeake before the.

This is the begynnynge of the wordes of Eſdras, before he was receyued: O Lorde, thou that dwelleſt in euerlaſtynges, whoſe eyes are lyft vp in the ayre, whoſe ſtole is excedynge hye, whoſe glorye and maieſty may not be comprehended, before whome the hoſtes of heauen ſtand with tremblyng, whoſe
kepyng is turned in wynde and fyre, whoſe
word is true, whoſe talkig is ſtedfaſt, whoſe commaundemente is ſtronge, whoſe ordy-naunce is fearfull, whoſe loke dryeth vp the depthes, whoſe wrath maketh the mountaynes to melt awaye, and whoſe truth beareth
wytnes: O heare the prayer of thy ſeruaunt, and marke with thyne eares the peticyon of thy creature.

For whyle I lyue, I wyll ſpeake, and ſo longe as I haue vnderſtandynge, I wyll an-ſwere. O loke not vpon the ſynnes of thy people, whiche ſerue in the truthe. Haue no reſpecte vnto the wicked ſtudyes of the heithen, but to the deſyre of thoſe that kepe thy teſtimonies with ſorowes. Thynk not vpon thoſe that haue walked faynedly before the,
but vpon them, which wyll haue knowne thy feare.

Let it not be thy wyll to deſtroy the whi
che haue had beaſtly maners, but to loke vpō
them that haue clearly taught thy lawe.
Take thou no indignacion at them, whiche are worſe then beaſtes: but loue them, that alway put their truſte in thy ryghtouſnelle
and glorye: for we and oure fathers haue
all the ſame ſyckenes and diſeaſe but becauſe of oure ſynnes thou ſhalte be called mercyfull.

For if thou hadſt mercy vpon vs, thou ſhalt
be called mercyfull, where as we haue no workes of rightouſnes: for the righteous which haue layde vp many good workes to gither ſhal out of their dedes receiue reward.
For what is man, that thou ſhuldeſt take diſ pleaſure at him? Or what is the corruptyble mortal generacion, that thou ſhuldeſt be ſo rough towarde him?

For of a truth there is no man amōges the
that be borne, but he hath dealte wyckedly:
and amonges the faythful there is none, whi che hath not done amiſſe. For this (O Lord thy ryghtouſnelle and thy goodnes ſhall be prayſed and declared, yf thou be mercyfull vnto them, whiche are not ryche in good wor
kes.

Then anſwered he me and ſayde: Some thinges haſt thou ſpoken a right, and accordinge vnto thy worde it ſhall be. For I wyll not verely conſyder the workes of the, whiche haue ſinned before death, before the iudg
ment, before deſtruction, but I wyll reioyce
ouer the worke & thought of the ryghtous.
I wyl remēbre alſo the pylgremage the holy makynge and the reward. Lyke as I haue ſpoken nowe ſo ſhall it come to paſſe. For as the huſbande man ſoweth moche ſede vpon
the grounde, and planteth manye trees, and yet alwaye the thynge that is ſowne or plāted is not al kept ſafe, neither doth it al take rote: Euen ſo is it of them that are ſowne
in the worlde, they ſhall not all be preſerued.

I anſwered then and ſayd: If I haue foūd grace, then let me ſpeake. Lyke as the huſbande mans ſede perylſheth, if it receyue not rayne in due ſeaſon, or if there come to moch
rayne vpon it: Euen ſo perylſheth man alſo, whiche is created with thy handes, and is like vnto thyne own Image & to thy ſelf, for whoſe ſake thou haſt made all thinges, and lykened him vnto the huſbande mans ſede.
Be not wrath at vs, O Lorde, but ſpare thy people, and haue mercye vpon thyne owne inheritaunce: O be mercyfull vnto thy creature.

Then anſwered he me and ſayde: Thynges preſent are for the preſentes thynges to come for ſuch as be to come. For thou wanteſt yet moche, ſeinge thou mayſte loue my creature
aboue me: I haue oft tymes drawne nygh vn to the, but neuer to the vnrighteous, In this alſo thou art marueylous before the hygheſt in that thou haſt humbled thy ſelfe as it becommeth the, and haſt not regarded thine owne ſelfe, that thou art had in ſuch honour amonges the ryghtous. Therfore ſhal great wretchednes and myſerye come vpon them, that in the latter tyme ſhall dwell in the worlde, for they haue walked in great pryde.

But vnderſtande thou for thy ſelfe, & ſeke out glory for ſuch as be like the: for vnto you is paradyſe opened, the tre of lyfe is plāted,
the tyme to come is prepared, plenteouſnes made redy & cyte is buylded for you, and a reſt is prepared, yea perfecte goodnes and wyſdome. The rote of euell is marched from you, the weaknes and moth is hyd frō you,
and into hell flyeth corruption in forgetfulnes. Sorowes are vanyſhed away, and in the ende is ſhewed the treaſure of immorta-lyte. And therfore aske thou no more queſtions, concernyng the multitude of them that perych. For they haue taken lyberte, deſpiſed the hygheſt, thought ſcorne of his lawe, and forſaken his wayes.

Moreouer, they haue troden downe his ryghtous, and ſayd in their herte, that there is not

ius God, yea and that wyckedly, for they dye. For lyke as the thynge that I haue ſpoken of, is made redy for you: Euen ſo is thirſt and payne prepared for them. For it was not his wyll that man ſhuldc come to nought:
but they whiche be created, haue defyled the name of him that made them, & are vnthāck-full vnto him, which prepared lyfe for them.
And therfore is my iudgement now at hand.
Theſe thynges haue I not ſhewed vnto all men, but vnto fewe: namely vnto the, and ſuche as be lyke the.

Then anſwered I and ſayde: Beholde O Lorde, now haſt thou ſhewed me the multitude of the tokens, whiche thou wylt begyn to do at the laſt: but at what tyme and whā thou haſt not ſhewed me.

Eſdras hath vyſyons ſhewed vnto hym.

CAPI. IX.

HE anſwered me then and ſayde: Meaſure thou the tyme dyligently in it ſelf when thou ſeeſt that one part of the to kens come to paſſe, whiche I haue tolde the before: ſo ſhalte thou vnderſtande, that it is the very ſame tyme wherin the hygheſt wyll begynne to viſyte the worlde, which he made.
And when there ſhall be ſene earthquake and vprore of the people in the worlde, then ſhalt thou well vnderſtande, that the moſt hyeſt ſpake of thoſe thinges, from the dayes
that were before the, euen from ꝑ beginning.
For lyke as all that is made in the worlde, hath a begynnyng and ende, and the ende is manyfeſt: Euē ſo the tymes alſo of ꝑ hygheſt haue playne begynnynges in wondres and lygnes, and the ende in worknynge and in tokens. And euery one that ſhall be ſaued, and ſhall be hable to eſcape by his workes and by faythe, wherin ye haue beleued, ſhall be preſerued from the ſayde parels, and ſhall ſe
my ſaluyour in my lande and within my borders, for I haue halowed me from the world.
Then ſhall they be in carefulneſſe, whiche
now haue abuſed my wayes: and they that haue call them out deſpytefully, ſhall dwell
in paynes.

For ſuche as in theyr lyfe haue receued be-nefytes, and haue not knowne me, and they that haue abhorred my lawe, whyle they had yet fredome, and when they had yet open towme of amendement and conuerſyon, and vnderſtode not: but deſpyſed it: the ſame muſt know it after deathe in payne. And therfore be thou nomore curyous: howe the vngodly
ſhall be punyſhed, & how the ryghtous ſhall be ſaued, and whoſe the worlde is, & for who the worlde, and when it is. Then anſwered I and ſayde: I haue talked before, and nowe I ſpeake, and wyll ſpeake alſo hereafter, that there be many mo of them whiche perylſhe, then ſhall be ſaued, lyke as the flood is greater then the droppes.

And he anſwered me, ſayinge: Lyke as the fielde is: ſo is alſo the ſede: as the floures be ſo are the colours alſo: ſuch as the workma ſuch is alſo the worck: and as the huſband man is him ſelfe, ſo is his huſbandrye alſo, for it was the tyme of the worlde. And when I prepared for them that are now, or euer the worlde was made, wherin they ſhould dwel,
then was there no man that withſtode me.
Now when euery one was, and the maker alſo in the worlde whiche is now prepared, & the moneth that ceaſeth not, and the lawe which is vnſearcheable, theyr maners were corrupte. So I conſidred the worlde, and be-holde, there was peryl, becauſe of the though tes that were come in to it. And I ſaw, and ſpared them greatlye, and haue kepte me a wynebery of the grapes, and a plant from among many generacyons. Let the multitude perych then, whiche are growen vp in vayne, and let my grape and wynebery be kept: euen
my plant: for with great labour haue I made it vp.

Neuerth eleſſe yf thou wylt take vpon the yet ſeuen dayes mo (but thou ſhalte not faſt in them) go thy waye then in to the felde of floures, where no houſe is buylded, and eate
only of the floures of the felde, taſt not fleſh, drynke no wyne, but eate floures only. Pray vnto the hyeſt contynually, ſo wyll I come,
and talke with the.

So I went my waye, and came in to the felde which is called Ardath (lyke as he commaunded me) and there I ſate among ꝑ floures: and ate of the herbes of the felde, and the meate of the ſame ſatisfyed me. After ſeuen dayes, I ſate vpon the graſſe, & my herte was vexed within me lyke as afore, and I opened my mouth, and began to talke before the hyeſt, and ſayed: O Lorde, thou that haweſt thy ſelf vnto vs, thou haſt declared and opened thy ſelf vnto our fathers in ꝑ wylderneſſe, in a place where no man dwelleth, in a baren place, when they came out of Egypt, Exod.xix.d
and thou ſpakeſt, ſayinge: Heare me O Iſra- xxiiii.a.
el, and mark my wordes thou ſede of Jacob. Deut.iiii.b Beholde, I ſawe my lawe in you, and it ſhal bryng frute in you, and ye ſhall be honoured
in it for euer. For our fathers which receyued the lawe, kepte not, and obſerued not thy or-dinaunces and ſtatutes, and the frute of thy lawe was not declared: for it myght not, for why? it was thyne. For they that receyued it Exod.xxxii.f
perylſhed, becauſe they kepte not the thynge
that was ſowen in them.

It is a cuſtome when the ground receyueth ſeed, or the ſee a ſhyp, or a veſſell meate and drynke, that when it perylſheth or is broken, wherin a thyng is ſowen, or wherin any thing
is put: the thynges alſo perylſhe & are broke,
which are ſowen or put therin. But vnto vs it hath not happened ſo: for we that haue re- Ecclay.xl.a ceyued the lawe, perith in ſynne, and our hert 1.Timot.ii.a which alſo receyued the law: notwithſtandynge the lawe perylſheth not, but remayneth
in his laboure.

And when I conſydered theſe thynges in ꝑ herte after this maner, I loked about me with myne eyes, and vpon the ryght ſyde, I ſawe a woman, whiche mourned ſore, made greate lamentacion, and wepte with loude voyce: her clothes were rent in peces, & ſhe had had allthes vpon her heade.

Then let I my thoughtes go, þ I was in, and turned me vnto her, & sayde: wherfore wepest þ? why art thou so sory and discomforted? And she said vnto me: Syr, let me bewayle my selfe and take yet more sorow: for I am sore vexed in my mynde, and broughte very lowe. And I sayde vnto her: what ayleth the? Or who hath done any thing to þ? tell me. She sayde: I haue bene vnfrutfull and baren, and haue had an husbande thyrty yeres. And these thirty yeres I do nothig els daye & nighte and al houres, but make my prayer to the highest, After thyrtye yeares God herde me thy handmayden, loked vpon my mysery, consydred my trouble, and gaue me a sonne, and I was glad of him, so was my husbande also, and all my neighbours and we gaue greate honoure vnto the mighty. And I norysshed him w great trauayle. So when he grew vp, and came to the tyme that he shulde haue a wyfe, I made a feaste.

¶ Esdras and the woman that appeareth vnto him common togither.

CAPI. X.

AND it happened that when my sonne went in to his chambre, he fell downe and dyed, then ouerthrew we all the lyghtes, and all my neyghbours rose vp to comforte me. Then toke I my rest vnto the second day at night: & whe they had al rested that they myghte comforte me, I rested also, and rose vp by nyght, and fled, and am come hither in to this felde, as thou seist: and am purposed not to come in the cytye, but to remayne here, and neither to eate ne drinke but continually to mourne and to fast, vntyll I dye.

Then let I my meditacions and thoughtes fal, that I was in, and spake to her in displeasure: Thou folysshe woman, seist thou not oure heuynesse and mournynge, & what happeneth vnto vs? how Sion oure mother is al wofull and sorye, and how she is cleane brought downe and in mysery? seynge we be all nowe in heuynes, and make oure mone (for we be all sorowfull) As for the heuynes that thou takest, it is but for one sonne. Demaunde the earth, and she shall tell the þ it is she which ought (by reaso) to mourne for the fall of so manye that growe vpon her.

For from the begynnyng al men are borne of her, and other shall come: and beholde, they walke almoste all in to destructiō, and many of them shall be roted out

Who shulde then (by reason) make more mournynge, then she, that hath lost so greate a multytude? and not thou, whiche art sory but for one. But yf thou wouldest saye vnto me: My mournynge is not lyke the mournyng of the earth, for I haue lost the frute of my body, whiche I bere with heuines: but the earth is accordynge to the maner of the earthe, & the present multytude goeth agayne into her, as it is come to passe: Then saye I vnto the: lyke as thou hast borne with trauayle and sorowe, euen so the earth also frō the begynnynge gyueth her frute vnto man, for him þ made her. And therfore withholde thy sorow and heuynes by thy selfe, and take what happeneth vnto the, beare it stronglye. For yf thou iudgest the matche and ende of God to be rygh̄teous and good, and receyuest his councell in tyme, thou shalte be commended therin. Go thy way then into the cyty to thy husbande.

And he sayd vnto me: that wyl not do, I wyl not go into the cyty, but beare wyl I dye. So I cōmoned more with her, and sayd: Do not so, but be counselled, and folowe me: for how many falles hath Sion? Be of good cō forte because of the sorow of Jerusalem. For thou seist that our Sanctuary is layed waste our aulter broken, our temple destroyed, our playnge of instrumentes and syngynge layde downe, the thancheseruynge put to silence, oure myrthe is banysshed awaye the light of oure candelstycke is quenched, þ arck of the couenaunte is taken from vs, all oure holy thynges are defyled, and the name that is called vpon ouer vs, is dishonored: our children are put to shame our prestes are brente, oure Leuites are caryed awaye in to captyuyte, oure virgyns are defyled, and oure wyues rauisshed, our righteous men spoyled, and our childre destroied, our yong mē are brought in bondage, and our stronge worthyes are become weake: and Sion (whiche seale is the greatest of all) is loosed vp from her worship for she is delyuered into the handes of them that hate vs.

And therfore shake of thy greate heuynes, and put awaye the multytude of sorowes: that the myghtye maye be mercyfull vnto þ, and that the byghest maye gyue the rest from thy laboure and trauayle. And it happened, that when I was talkyng with her, her face dyd shyne and glyster, so that I was afrayde of her, and mused what it might be. And immediatly she caste oute a greate voyce, wherof fearfull, so that the earth shoke at the noyse of the woman: and I loked, and behold, the womā appeared vnto me no more: but there was a cytie builded, and a place was shewed from the ground and foundacion.

Then was I afrayd, and cryed with loude voyce, and sayde where is Uryel the aungel, which came to me at the fyrste? For he hathe caused me to come in many considerations & bygh thoughtes, and myne ende is turned to corruption, and my prayer to rebuke. And as I was speakinge these wordes, he came vnto me, and loked vpon me, and I laye as one that had bene dead, and myne vnderstanding was aultered, and he toke me by the ryghte hand & comforted me, & set me vp vpon my fete, and sayde vnto me: what ayleth the? and why is thine vnderstanding troubled? and vnderstādyng of thy herte, and wherfore art thou sorye? And I sayde: Because thou hast forsaken me, and I haue done according vnto thy wordes, I wēt in to the feld, & there haue I sene thinges, that I am not able to expresse. He said vnto me: Stand vp, and be manly, & I shall gyue the exhortacion.

Then sayd I: Speke on to me my Lorde, forsake me not, lest I die in vayn: for I haue sene that I knew not, and herd that I do not know. Or shal my vnderstanding be disceyued, and my mynde? But now I beseche the, that þ wilt shew thy seruaūt of this wondre. he answered me then & said: heare me and I shal enstorme the, and tell the wherfore þ art afrayd; for the hiest hath opened many secret thynges vnto the.

He hath sene that thy way is right, & that thou takest sorow cōtinually for thy people and makest great lamentacion for Sio, and therfore vnderstande the vision which thou sawest a litle whyle agoo after this maner: Thou sawest a woman mourning, and thou hast comforted her. Neuertheles now seist þ the lyknes of the woman no more, but thou thoughtest there was a city buylded: & lyke as he tolde the of the fall of her sonne, so is this the answer: the woman whom þ sawest is Sion, and where as she tolde the that she hath ben. xxx. yeres vnfrutful & baren, those are the. xxx. yeres, wherin there was no offering made in her.

But after thirty yeres Salomon buylded her, and offered, and then bare the bareyn a sonne. And where as she told the that she norysshed him with labour, that was the dwellynge of Jerusalem, but where as the sonne dyed in her chambre, that is the fal of Jerusalem. And thou sawest her lyknesse how she mourned for her sonne: and what els happened vnto her, I haue shewed the. And nowe God seeth that thou art sory in thy mynde, & suffrest from thy hert for her, and so hath he shewed the her clerenesse, and the fayrenesse of her beauty.

And therfore I badde the remayne in the feld, where no house is buylded, for I knew that the byghest wolde shewe this vnto the, therfore I commaunded the to goo in to the felde, where no foundacyon nor buyldynge is. For in the place where the byest wil shew his cirye, there shall be no mans buyldynge. And therfore feare not, and let not thy herte be afrayde, but goo thy waye in, and se the glorious and fayre buyldynge, and howe greate it is, and howe greate thou thynkest it after the measure of thyne eyes, and then shalte thou heare as moche as thyne eares maye comprehende. For thou arte blessed aboue many other, and art called w the byest, as the fewe. But to morowe at nyghte thou shalt remayne here, and so shal the hiest shew the visions of hye thynges, which he wyl do vnto them that dwell vpon earthe in the last dayes, so I slepte the same nyghte lyke as he commaunded me.

¶ In this chapter and in the two next ensuing, he intreateth of certayne visions and of the interpretations therof.

CAPI. XI.

THen saw I a dreme: and beholde, there came vp from the see an Egle, whiche had twelue wynges and thre heedes. And I sawe and beholde, he spred his wynges ouer all the earth, and all the wyndes of the ayre blewe in them, and so they were put togyther agayne. And I beheld, and oute of his fethers there grewe other lytle contrary fethers: the heedes rested, the heed in þ middest was greater then the other, yet rested it with the reste.

Moreouer I saw, that the Egle flew w his wynges, and raigned vpon erth, and ouer all them that dwel vpon the erth: and I sawe þ all thynges vnder heuen were subiecte vnto him, and no mā spake against him no not one creature vpon erth. I saw also that the Egle stode vp vpon his clawes, and gaue a sound with is fethers, & a voyce, sayinge after this maner: watche not all togyther, slepe euery mā in his own place, and watche for a time, but let the heedes be preserued at the last. Nertheles I sawe that þ voyce went not out of his heedes, but from the myddest of his body. And I nombred his contrary fethers, and beholde there were eyght of them. And I loked, and beholde vpon the right syde there arose one fether, and raigned ouer al the erth. And it happened þ when it raigned, the ende of it came, and the place therof appeared no more. So þ next folowing stode and raigned and had a great time: and it happened, that when it raygned, the ende of it came also, lyke as the fyrste, so that it appeared no more.

Then came there a voyce vnto it, and said: Heare thou that hast kepte in the earthe so longe, this I saye vnto the before thou begynnest to appere no more. There shal none after the, attayne vnto thy time. Then arose the thyrde, and raygned as the other afore, and appered no more also. So went it with all the residue one after an other, so that euery one raygned, & then appeared no more. Then I loked, & beholde, in processe of tyme the fethers that folowed, were set vp vpon the ryght syde, that they myghte rule also: & some of them ruled, but within a whyle they appered no more: for some of them were set vp, but ruled not.

After this I loked, and beholde the twelue fethers appered no more, and þ two winges: and there was no more vpon the Egles body, but two heedes that rested, & sire fethers. Then sawe I also that the sire fethers were parted in two, and remayned vnder the heed that was vpon the right side, for the four cōtinued in their place. So I loked, & beholde, they that were vnder the winges thought to set vp them selues, and to haue the rule. The was there one set vp, but shortly it appered no more, and the seconde was sooner awaye then the fyrst. And I beheld, and lo, the two thought also by the selues to raigne: & whe they so thoughte: beholde, there waked one of þ heedes that were at rest, namely, it that was in the middest, for that was the greater of the two heedes. And then I sawe that the two heedes were filled with him, and ẏ heed was tourned with them that were by hym, ⁊ ate vp the two vnder wynges ẏ wolde haue raigned.

But this heed put the hole erth in feare, ⁊ bare rule in it, ouer all those that dwelt vpō erth with moch labour, and he had the gouernaunce of the worlde, ouer all the foules that haue ben. After this I loked, and behold, the heed ẏ was in the middest, sodeynly appered no more, lyke as the wynges: then came the two heedes, which ruled vpon earth, ⁊ ouer those dwelt therin. And I beheld, and lo, the D heed vpon the right syde, deuoured it ẏ was vpon the left syde. And I herd a voyce, whiche sayd vnto me: loke before the, and consydre the thing that thou seist. Then I sawe, ⁊ beholde, as it were a lyon that roreth, rennynge hastely oute of the wodde, and he sent out a mannes voyce vnto the Egle, and said: Heare thou, I wyll talke with the, and the hyest shal say vnto the: Is it not thou ẏ hast the victorye of the foure beastes, whome I I made to raigne vpon erth, ⁊ in my worlde, and that the ende of their tymes might come thorow them?

And the fourth came, and ouerwan al the beestes that were paste, and had power ouer the worlde with great fearfulnesse, and ouer the hole compasse of the erth wt the most wicked labour, and so long tyme dwelt he vpon the erth with disceyte, and the erth hast thou iudged not with truth. For thou haste troubled the meke thou hast hurt the peaceable ⁊ quyet, thou hast loued lyers, and destroyed the dwellynges of them that brought forthe frute, and hast cast down the walles of such as did the no harme. Therfore is thy wrongous dealyng and blasphemye come vp vnto the hyest, and thy pryde vnto ẏ myghty. The hyest also hath loked vpon the proud tymes, and beholde, they are ended, and theyr abhominaciōs are fulfilled. And therfore appere no more thou Egle, and thy horrible winges and thy wycked fethers, and thy vngracyous heades, and thy synfull clawes, and all thy vayne body: that the earthe maye be refreshed, and come agayne to her selfe, when she is delyuered from thy vyolence, and ẏ she maye hope for the iudgement and mercye of hym that made her.

CAPI. XII.

A And it happened when the Lyon spake these wordes vnto the Egle, I sawe, ⁊ behold, the heed that afore had the vpper hande appered no more: neyther dyd the four winges appere any more, that came to hym, ⁊ were set vp to raigne, and their kingdom was smal and ful of vprore. And I saw and beholde, they appered no more, ⁊ the hole body of the Egle was brēt, and the erth was in greate feare. Then awaked I oute of the traunce of my mynde, and from great feare, and sayd vnto my spirite: lo, this haste thou gyuen me, in that thou serchest out ẏ wayes of the hyest: lo yet am I wery in my mynde, and very weyke in my spirite, ⁊ litle strēgth is there in me, for the greate feare that I receyued this nyght. Therfore wyll I now beseche the hyest, that he wyll comfort me vnto the ende: and I sayde, Lorde, Lorde, yf I haue founde grace before thy syghte, and yf I am iustifyed with the, before many other, and yf my prayer be com vp before thy face, comforte me then, and shewe me thy seruaunte the interpretacion and playne difference of this horrible syght, that thou mayst perfectly comforte my soule: for thou haste iudged me worthye, to shewe me the laste of tymes.

And he sayd vnto me: this is the interpretacion of this syght. The Egle whome thou sawest come vp from the see, is the kyngdom whiche was sene in the vision of thy brother Daniel, but it was not expounded vnto him Daniel vii.
B for nowe I declare it vnto the. Beholde, the dayes come, that there shall ryse vp a kyngdome vpon erth, and it shall be feared aboue all the kyngdomes that were before it. In the same kyngdome shall twelue kynges raygne one after an other. For ẏ second shal begyn to raygne, ⁊ shal haue more tyme then the other, and this do the twelue wynges signify which thou sawest. As for the voyce ẏ spake, and that thou sawest go out from the heedes, but not from the body, it betokeneth that after the tyme of that kyngdome, there shall aryse great stryuynges, and it shal stād in peryl of fallyng: neuerthelesse it shal not yet fall, but shall be set in to his begynnyng. And the eyght vnder winges which thou sawest hange vnto the wynges of hym, betokē that in him there shall a ryse eyghte kynges, whose tyme shal be but smal, and their yeres swyfte, ⁊ two of them shall peare. But when the middest time commeth, there shal be four kept in the time, when his tyme beginneth to come, that it maye be ended, but two shal be kepte vnto the ende.

And where as thou sawest thre heedes resting, this is the interpretacion: In his last C
shal the hyest rayse vp thre kyngdomes, and call manye agayne in to them, and they shal haue the dominion of the earth, and of those that dwell therin, with moche labour aboue all those that were before them. Therfore are they called the heedes of the Egle: for it is they that shall brynge forthe his wyckednesse agayne, and that shal performe and fynyshe his laste. And where as thou sawest that the great heed appeared no more, it sygnifyeth that one of them shall dye vpon his bedde, and yet with payne, for the two that remayne shal be slayne with the swerde, for the swerde of the one shall deuour the other, but at the last shall he fall thorow the swerd hym selfe.

And where as thou sawest two vnderwinges vpō the head that is on the ryght syde, it sygnifyeth that it is they, whom the hyghest hathe kepte vnto theyr ende: this is a small kyngdom, ⁊ ful of trouble. The lyon whom thou sawest rysynge vp out of the wod, and rorynge and speakynge vnto the Egle, and rebukynge hym for his vnryghtousnesse, is the wynde, whiche the hyest hathe kepte for them ⁊ for theyr wyckednesse vnto the ende: he shall reproue them, and rente them asunder before them. For he shall sette them lyuynge before the iudgement, and shal rebuke them: for the resydue of my people shall he deliuer with trouble, those that be preserued ouer myne endes: and he shall make thē ioyful, vntyl the commyng of the day of iudgement, wherof I haue spoken vnto the frome the beginning. This is the dreame that thou sawest, and this is the interpretacion. Thou onely hast bene mete to knowe the secrete of the hyest.

Therfore wryte all these thynges that thou haste sene in a boke, and hyde them, and teache them the wyse in ẏ people, whose hertes thou knowest, maye comprehende ⁊ kepe
D these secretes. But wayte thou here thy selfe yet seuen dayes moo, that it maye be shewed the, what so euer it pleaseth the hyghst to declare vnto the, and with that he wente his waye.

And when al the people perceyued, that ẏ seuē dayes were past, and I not come agayn into the city, they gathered them al togither from the leest vnto the most, and came vnto me, ⁊ sayd: what haue we offended the? and what euyll haue we done agaynst the, that ẏ forsakest vs, and sittest here ī this place? for of all people thou only art left vs as a grape of the vine, and as a candle in a darke place, and as an hauē and shyp preserued from the tempest. Haue we not els aduersitie ynough, but thou muste forsake vs? Were it not better for vs, that we had ben brent with Sion. For we are no better then they ẏ dyed there: and they wepte with loud voyce. Then answered I them and sayde: Be of good comforte, O Israell, and be not heuy thou house of Iacob, for the hyest hathe you in remembraunce, and the myghty hath not forgotten you in temptacion. As for me, I haue not forsaken you, neyther am I departed from you: but am come in to this place to pray, bicause of the myserye of Israell, that I myghte seke mercy for the lowe estate of your Sanctuarye. And nowe goo youre waye home euerye man, and after these dayes wyll I come vnto you. So the people went their waye in to the citye, lyke as I commaunded them: but I remayned styl in the feldes seuen dayes, as the aungell badde me: and I ate onely of the floures of the felde, and had my meat of the herbes in those dayes.

CAPI. XIII.

A And it happened after the seuen dayes, that I dremed a dreme by nyghte. And behold, there arose a wynde from the see, that it moued all the floudes therof. And I loked, and beholde, the man was stronge, ⁊ increased with the cloudes of heuen, ⁊ when he turned his countenaunce to consydre, all the thinges trembled ẏ were sene vnder him: and when the voyce went out of his mouthe, all they brent that herd him, lyke as the erth when it feleth the fyre.

After these I sawe, and beholde, there was gathered togither a multitude of men out of nombre from the foure wyndes of the heuen, to fight againit the man that came out from the see. And I loked, and beholde, he graued him selfe a greate mountayne, and flewe vp vpon it. But I wolde haue sene the border or place, whereout the hyll was grauen, and I coulde not.

I sawe after these, that all they whiche came to fyghte agaynste hym, were sore afrayde, and yet durst they fyght. Neuerthelesse, when he sawe the fearcenesse and vyolence of the people, he neyther lyfte vp his hande, ne helde swerde nor any weapen: but onely (as I sawe) he sent oute of his mouthe as it had ben a blast of fyre, ⁊ out of his lyppes the wynde of the flambe: and out of his tonge he caste oute sparkes and stormes, and they were all myxte togyther the blaste of fyre, the winde of the flambes, and the great storme, and fell with a russhe vpon the people whiche was prepared to fight, and brent them vp euerychone: so that of the innumerable multitude there was nothyng sene, but onely duste and smoke. When I sawe this, I was afrayde.

Afterwarde sawe I the same man come downe frome the mountayne, and callynge B
vnto hym an other peaceable people: and there came moche people vnto hym: some verye gladde some verye sorye, some of theym were bounde, so that they were caryed and brought forth.

Then was I sycke thorowe greate feare, and I awaked, and sayd: thou haste shewed thy seruaunt al thy wonders from the beginnynge, and haste counted me worthye, that ẏ myghtest receyue my prayer: shewe me now yet the interpretacyon of this dreame. For thus I consydre in my vnderstandyng: Wo vnto them that shall be lefte in those dayes: and moche more woo vnto them that are not lefte behynde: for they that were not lefte, were in heuynesse.

Nowe vnderstande I the thynges that are layde vp in the latter dayes, which shal happen vnto them, and to those that are not left behinde. Therfore are they come in to great perylles, and many necessities, lyke as these dreames declare. Yet is it easyer, that he whiche suffereth hurte, come in these, then to passe awaye as a cloude oute of the worlde, and now to se the thynges that shall happen in the last.

Then answered he me, and sayd: The interpretacion of the syghte shall I shewe the, and I wil open vnto the, the thing that thou hast required. For thou haste spoken of them that are lefte behynde, and this is the interpretacion. He that taketh awaye the peryll in that tyme hath kepte hym selfe. They that be fallen in to harme, are suche as haue wor-

kes and sayth vnto the most mighty. Knowe this therfore, that they which be left behind are more blessed then they that be deed. This is the meanynge of ỹ vysyon. Where as thou sawest a man commyng vp from the depe of the see, the same is he which God the hyghest hath kept a great season, whom by his owne selfe shal deliuer his creature, & he shal ordre them that be left behynd. And where as thou sawest, that oute of his mouthe there came a blast of wynde, fyre, and stormе, & how that he lyfte vp neyther swerde nor weapon, but that the rushyng in of hym destroyed ỹ hole multitude that came to fyght agaynste hym: it signifieth, that the dayes come, when God wyll delyuer them that are vpon earthe, and in a traunce of mynde shal he come vpon thē that dwell in the earth. And one shall vndertake to fyght agaynste an other, one citye agaynst an other, one place agaynst an other, one people agaynst an other, and one realme against an other. When this cōmeth to passe then shall the tokens come that I shewed the before, and then shall my sonne be declared, whome thou sawest clyme vp as a man. And when all the people heare his voyce, euery man shall in theyr owne lande leaue the batayle that they haue one agaynste an other, & an innumerable multitude shall be gathered togyther, as they ỹ be wyllynge to come & to ouercom hym by fyghtyng. But he shal stād vpon the top of the mount Syon. Neuertheiesse Sion shall come, and shal be shewed, beinge prepared and buylded for all men, lyke as thou sawest the hyl grauen forth without any handes. But my sonne shal rebuke ỹ people that are come for theyr wickednes, with the tempest, and for their cuyll ymagynacyons: and theyr paynes wherwith they shall be punyshed, are lykened vnto ỹ flambe, and without any labour shall he destroye them, euen by the lawe, whiche is compared vnto the fyre.

And where as thou sawest, that he gathered an other peaceable people vnto hym: those are the ten tribes which are caryed away prysoners out of their own land, in the tyme of Oseas the kyng, whom Salmanasar the kyng of Assiria toke prisoner and caried them ouer the water, and so came they in to an other lande.

But they gaue them this counsel, that they shold leaue the multitude of the heathē, and to go forth in to a farther cōtrey, where neuer mankynde dwelt: that they myght there kepe theyr statutes, which they neuer kept in theyr owne land, and so they entred in at the narow passages of the water of Euphrates, and God shewed tokens for them, and held still the flood till they were passed ouer: for thorow that cōtrey there was a great way namely of a yere and a halfe iourney, for the same region is called Asareth.

Then dwelt they there vnto ỹ latter time: and when they come forth agayne, the hyest shall holde styll the sprynges of the stream agayne, that they maye go thorowe, therfore sawest thou the multitude with peace. And they that be lefte behynde of thy people, are those that be found with in my border. Now when he destroyeth the multitude that is gathered togyther, he shall defende his people ỹ remayne, and then shall he shewe them great wonders.

Then sayd I: O Lorde Lorde, shewe me this, wherfore haue I sene the man comming vp from the depe of the see? And he sayd vnto me: like as thou canst neither seke out nor know these thinges that are in the depe of ỹ see, euen so mayst thou not se my son, or those that be with him, but in the tyme of the day. This is the interpretacion of the dreme which thou sawest, therfore thou only art herlightened: for thou hast forsake thyne owne lawe, and applyed thy diligence vnto mine, and sought it. Thy lyfe haste thou ordred in wysdom, and hast called vnderstandyng thy mother, and therfore haue I shewed the, the treasure of the hyest. After thre dayes I wyl shewe the more, and talke with the at more large, yea heuy and wonderous thynges wil I declare vnto the.

Then wente I forthe in to the felde, gyuyng prayse and thankes greatly vnto God bycause of his wonders whiche he dyd in tyme, and bycause he gouerneth the same, and suche as is in tyme, and there I sat thre dayes.

¶ God appeareth vnto Esdras in the bushe, and sheweth hym what he shall do.

CAPI. XIIII.

VPon the thyrd daye I sat vnder an oke A tree, then came there a voyce vnto me out of the bush, and said: Esdras, Esdras? And I said: here am I Lord, and stode vp vpon my fete. Then spake he vnto me: In the bushe dyd I appere vnto Moses, and talked with him, when my people serued in Egypt and I sent him, and led my people out of Egypt, and brought him vpon the mount Syō where I helde hym by me a longe season, and tolde hym my wonderous workes, & shewed him the secretes of the tymes and the ende, & commaūded him, saying: these wordes shalt thou declare, and not hyde them.

And nowe I saye vnto the, that thou laye vp in thyne herte, the dremes that thou haste sene, and the interpretacions whiche I haue shewed the: for thou shalt be receyued of al, thou shalt be tourned, and remayne with my counsell, and with suche as be lyke the, vntil the tymes be ended. For the worlde hath lost his youth, and the tymes begyn to waxe old. For the tyme is deuyded in to twelue partes, and ten partes of it are gone alredye, and halfe of the tenthe parte: yet remayneth there that, which is after the half of the tenth parte.

Therfore prepare and ordre thy house, & B refourme thy people: comfort suche of them as be in trouble, and tell now of the destruction, let go from the mortal thoughtes, cast awaye

awaye the burthens of mā, put of the weyke nature: laye vp in some places the thoughtes that are moost heuy vnto the, and haste ỹ to flyt from these tymes: for suche cuyl and wyckednelle as thou hast nowe sene happen, shall they doo yet moche worse. For the weaker that the worlde and the tyme is, ỹ more shall synne and wyckednesse increase, in them that dwell vpon earthe. For the truthe is fled farre awaye, and lesynge is harde at hande. For now hasteth the vision to come, ỹ thou hast sene.

Then aunswered I and sayde: Beholde Lorde, I wyll go as thou hast commaunded me, and refourme the people which are present. But they that shal be borne afterwarde who wyll exhorte or rebuke theym? Thus the worlde is set in darkenesse, and they that dwell therin are without light: for thy law is kyndled, bycause no man knoweth ỹ thinges that are done in the, or that shal be done. If I haue founde grace before the, sende the holy ghost in to me, and I shal wryte al that hathe bene doone in the worlde sence the begynnynge, whiche was wrytten in thy law, that men maye fynde the pathe-, and that they whiche wyll lyue in the latter dayes, maye lyue.

¶ And he aunswered me, sayinge: Goo thy waye, gather thy people togyther, and saye vnto the that they seke the not for .xl. dayes, but loke thou gather the manye bare trees, and take with the Sarea, Dabria, Selemia, Echanus, and Asiall: these fyue whiche are redy to wryte swyftly, and come hyther, and I shall lyght a candle of vnderstandynge in thyne herte, whiche shall not be put out, tyll the thynges be performed, whiche thou shalt begyn to wryte. And then shalt thou declare some thynges openly vnto the perfecte, and some thynges shalte thou shewe secretly vnto the wyse. To morow this hour shalt thou begyn to wryte.

Then wente I forthe (as he commaunded me) and gathered al the people togither, and sayd: Heare these wordes, O Israell: Oure fathers from the begynnynge were straungers in Egypte, from whence they were delyuered, and receyued, the lawe of lyfe, whiche they kepte not, whiche ye also haue transgressed after them. Then was this land and the lande of Syon parted among you by lot to possesse. But youre fathers and ye youre selues also haue doone vnryghtousnesse, and haue not kepte the wayes whiche the highest commaunded you. And for so moch as he is a rightous iudge, he toke from you in time the thynge that he had gyuen you. And nowe are ye here, & your brethren amonges you. Therfore yf so be that ye wyll subdue your owne vnderstandynge, and refourme youre herte, ye shall be kepte alyue, & after deathe shall ye obteyne mercye. For after deathe shall the iudgemente come, when we shall lyue agayne: and then shal the names of the rightous be manyfest, and the workes of the vngodlye wicked theyr workes, shall be declared. Let no man therfore come nowe vnto me, ne aske anye questyon of me these forty dayes.

So I toke the fyue men (as he commaunded me) and we went in to the felde, and remayned there, the nexte daye a voyce called me, sayinge: Esdras, open thy mouthe, and drynke that I gyue the. Then opened I my mouth, and beholde he reached me a full cup whiche was full of water, but the colour of it was lyke fyre. And I toke it and dranke. And when I had dronken it, my hert hadde vnderstandynge, and wysdome grewe in my breste: for my spirite was kepte in remembraūce, and my mouth was opened, and shut no more. The hyest gaue vnderstandinge vnto the fyue men, that they wrote the hye thinges of the nyght, which they vnderstode not. But in the nyght they ate breed: as for me, I spake in the day, and held my tong by night. In forty dayes they wrote two hundred and four bokes.

And it happened when the forty dayes were fulfylled, that the hyest spake, sayinge: The fyrste that thou hast written, speake openly, that the worthye and vnworthy may rede it. But the thre score and ten laste, that thou mayst shewe it onely to suche as be wise amonges thy people. For in theym is the spryng of vnderstandynge, the fountayne of wysdome, and the streme of knowlege. And I dyd so.

¶ The punyshement tha tempill people shall haue, whiche God commaundeth Esdras to shewe vnto them.

CAPI. XV.

BEholde, speake thou in the eares of my A people the wordes of the prophecy, whiche I will put in thy mouthe, sayth the Lorde, & cause them to be written in a letter, for it is the truth. Feare not the imaginaciōs against the, let not the vnfaithfulnesse of the trouble the, that speke against the. For al the vnfaythful shal dye in theyr vnfaythfulnes. Beholde, sayth the Lorde, I will bryng plages vpon ỹ worlde, the swerde, honger, deth and destruction, for wickednes hath the vpper hand in all the erth, and theyr shamefull workes are fulfulled.

Therfore sayth the Lorde: I wyll holde my tonge no more vnto theyr wyckednesse, whiche they doo so vngodlye: neyther wyll I suffre theym in the thynges that they deale withall so wyckedly.

Beholde, the innocent blonde of the trou- Apoca. vi. b

tous complayne contynually: and therfore (sayth the Lorde) I wyll surely auenge, and receyue vnto me all the innocent blond from amonges them.

Behold, my people is led as a flok of sheye Psalm. xliii. e

with a mighty hand, & a stretched out arme, and smyte it with plages as afore, and wyll destroy all the land of it. Egipt shal mourne and the foundacions of it shall be smitten w the plage and punyshment ꝑ God shal bring vpon it.

B They that tyll the ground shall mourne: for theyr sedes shall be destroyed thorow the blastynge and hayle, and an horryble sterre. Wo worth the worlde, and them that dwell therin, for the swerde and theyr destruction draweth nye, and one people shall stande vp to fyghte agaynste an other, and swerdes in their handes. For men shall be vnstedfast, & some shall do violence vnto other: they shal not regarde their kyng & prynces: the wayes of theyr doynges and handelynges in theyr power. A man shall desyre to go in to the cite, & shall not be hable. For bicause of theyr pryde, the cityes shal be brought in feare, the houses shall shake, and men shal be afrayde. A man shall haue no pitye vpon his neyghboure, but one shall prouoke an other vnto battayle to spoyle theyr goodes, bycause of of the honger of breed, & bicause of the great trouble.

D Beholde, I gather and cal togyther al the kynges of the earth, which are from the vprysynge, from the South, from the East and Libanus, to turne vnto them, and restore the thinges that they haue gyuen them, Lyke as they do yet this daye vnto my chosen, so wil I do also, and recompence them in their bosome. Thus sayth the Lorde God: my right hand shal not spare the synners, & my swerd shall not cease ouer them that shede ꝑ innocent bloud vpon earth. The fyre is gone out from his wrath, and hath consumed the foũcions of the earthe, and the synners lyke the straw that is kyndled. Wo worth them that synne, and kepe not my commaundementes, sayth the Lorde. I will not spare them. Goo your waye you children of violence, defyle not my Sanctuarye, for the Lorde knoweth all them that synne agaynste hym, and therfore delyuereth he them vnto deathe and destruction. For now are the plages come vpõ the worlde, and ye shal remayne in them, for God shall not delyuer you, bycause ye haue synned against him.

E Behold, an horrible vision commeth from the Este, where generacions of Dragons shall come out, and the people of the Arabes, with mayne charettes, and the multitude of them shall be as the wynde vpon earthe, that all they which beare them ragynge in their wrathe, maye feare and be afrayde: and as the wylde beastes oute of the wodde, so shall they goo oute, and with greate power shall they come, and stande fyghtynge with them, and shall waste the possession of the lande of the Assirians.

And then shall the Dragons haue the vpper hande, not remembrynge theyr byrthe, and shall tourne aboute swearynge togither in greate power, to persecute theym. But these shall be afrayde, and kepe sylence at theyr power, and shall flee: and one oute of the lande of the Assirians shall besiege them, and consume one of them, and in their hoste shall be feare and drede, and fryse amonges theyr kynges.

F Beholde cloudes from the East and from the Northe vnto the Southe, and they are verye horryble to loke vpon, full of wrathe and stormes. They shall smyte one vpon an other, and they shal smyte at the great sterre vpon earthe and theyr sterre, and the bloude shall be from the swerde vnto the belye, and the smoke of man vnto the camelles lytter. And there shall be greate fearefulnesse and tremblynge vpon earthe, and they that se the wrath shall be afrayde, and a trembling shal come vpon them.

And then shall there come greate rayues from the Southe, and from the Northe, and parte frome the weste, and from the stormye wynde frome the Este, and shall shut them vp agayne, and the cloude whiche he rayseth vp in wrath, and the sterre to cause feare towarde the East and west wynde, shal be destroyed: and the great cloudes shall be lyfte vp, and the myghty cloudes full of wrath, & the sterre, that they may make all the earth afrayde, and them that dwell therin, and that they maye poure out ouer all places an horrible sterre, fyre and hayle, and fleing swerdes, and many waters: that all feldes maye be full, and all ryuers, and they that breake downe the cityes and walles, mountaynes and hylles, all trees, wod, and the grasse of the medowes, & all their frute. And they shal goo stedfaste vnto Babylon, and make her afrayde, they shall come to her & besiege her, the sterre and all wrath shall they poure out vpon her.

G Then shall the duste and smoke goo vp vn to the heauen, and all they that be aboute her, shall bewayle her: and they that remayne vnder her, shall do seruyce vnto them that haue put her in feare. And thou Asia that comfortest thy selfe also vpon the hope of Babylon, and arte a worshyp of her person. Woo be vnto the thou wretche, bycause thou haste made thy selfe lyke vnto her, and hast decked thy doughters in hoordome, that they myghte triumphe and please thy louers which haue alway desyred to commyt hoordome with the: thou hast folowed the abhomynable cirye, in all her workes and inuencions.

Therfore sayth God: I wyll send plages vpon the, widowhod, pouertie, honger, warres, and pestylence, to waste thy houses with destruction and deth, and the glory of thy power shall be dryed vp as a floure, when the heat ariseth that is sent ouer the. Thou shalt be syeke as a poore wyfe that is plaged and beaten of women: so that the myghty and louer shall not be hable to receyue the. Wolde I so hate the, sayth the Lord. If thou haddest not alwaye slayne my chosen, cralynge the stroke of thy hãdes, and laid ouer their deth, when thou wast dronken: set forth the beautie of thy countenunce.

The rewarde of thy hoordome shal be recompensed in thy bosom, therfore shalt thou be reacquited.

Lyke

Lyke as thou haste done vnto my chosen (sayth the Lorde) euen so shall God do vnto the, and shall delyuer the into the plage. Thy children shall dye of honger, and thou shalt fall thorow the swerde. Thy cities shal be broken downe: and al thyne shall peryshe with the swerde in the felde. They that be in the mountaynes shall dye of honger, and eat their own flesh, and drynke their owne bloud for very honger of bred and thyrste of water. Thou vnhappye shalte come thorow the see and receyue plages agayne.

In the passage they shall caste downe the flayne cytye, and shall rote out one parte of thy land, and consume the porcion of thy glory. They shal treade the downe lyke stubble, and they shall be the fyre and shall consume the: thy cytyes and thy lande, thy wod and thy frutfull trees shal they burne vp with ꝑ fyre. Thy children shall they cary awaye captyue, & loke what thou hast, they shal spoyle it, and marre the beawtye of thy face.

The heithen shall be punished.

CAPI. XVI.

I Wo be vnto the Babilon and Asia, woe be vnto the Egypte and Siria: gyrde your selues with clothes of sacke and heer, and mourne for your children, be sory for your destruccion is at hande. A swerde is sent vpon you, and who wyl turne it backe? A fyre is kyndled amonge you, and who wil quench it? Plages are sent vnto you, & what is he that wil dryue them awaye? May any mã dryue away an hongry lion in the wod? Or may any man quenche the fyre in the stubble, when it hath begonne to burne? Maye one turne agaynste the arowe, that is shot of a stronge archer: The mightie Lorde seeth the plages, and what is he that will dryue them away? The fyre is kyndled and gone forth in his wrathe, and what is he that wil quench it? He shall cast lyghtenynges, and who shall not feare? He shall thundre, and who shall not be afrayde? The Lorde shall threaten, and who shall not utterlye be beaten to poudre at his presence?

The earth quaketh, and the foundacions therof: the see arysyth vp with wawes from the depe, and the floudes of it are drouned and the fyshes therat also before the Lorde, and before the glory of his power. For strog is his righte hande that bendeth the bowe his arowes that be shuteth are sharpe, and shall not mysse, when they begin to be shot vnto the endes of the worlde.

B Beholde, the plages are sent, and shall, not turne agayne, tyl they come vpon earth. The fyre is kyndled, and shal not be put out til it consume the foundacions of the earth. Like as an arowe which is shot of a myghty archer, returneth not backwarde: euen so ꝑ plages that shall be sent vpon earthe, shall not turne agayne. Woo is me, woo is me, who wyll delyuer me in those dayes? The begynnynge of sorowes and great mournynge: the begynnynge of derth and great death: the begynnynge of warres, and the powers shall stande in feare of the begynnynge of cuyls, & they shall tremble euery one. What shall I do in these thynges, when the plages come? Beholde, hongre, and plage, trouble and anguyth are sent, as scourges for amendement. But for all these thynges they shal not turne from theyr wickednesse, ne be alway myndfull of the scourges.

Beholde, bytayles shall be so good cheape vpon the erth, that they shall thynke them selues to be in good case: and euen then shall mischefe grow vpon earth, warres, derth and great dysquyetnesse. For many of them that dwell vpon erath shall peryth of hungre, and the other that escape the hungre, shal ꝑ swerd destroye: & the deed shall be cast out as dong, and there shal be no mã to comfort them. For the earth shall be wasted, and the cyties shall be caste downe: there shall be no man lefte to tyll the earthe and to sowe it. The trees shall gyue frute, and who so shal pluck them of & gather them? The grapes shall be rype, and who shall tred them? For all places shal be desolate of men, so that one man shal desyre to se an other, or to heare his voyce. For of one hole cytie there shal not be.x. lefte, and two in the felde, whiche shal hyde them selues in the thyck bushes, & in the clyffes of stones: lyke as when there remayne thre or four olyues vpon the olyue tre, or as when a vyneyarde is gathered: there are lefte some grapes, of them that dyligently sought thorowe the vyneyarde.

D Euen so in those dayes there shall be thre or four left, for them that search their houses with the swerde. And the earthe shall be left wast and the feldes therof shall war olde: & her wayes and all her pathes shal grow full of thornes, bicause no man shall trauayle there thorow. The doughters shall mourne, haupng no bydegromes: ꝑ womẽ shall make lamentation, haupnge no husbandes, theyr doughters shall mourne, haupnge no helpe of theyr bydegrome. In the warres shal they be destroyed, and theyr husbandes shall peryth of hungre. O ye seruauntes of the Lord, here these thynges, and marke them. Behold the worde of the Lorde, O receyue it: behold, the plages draw nigh and are not slacke in ta ryinge, lyke as a trauelynge woman, whiche after the. ix. moneth bryngeth forth a sonne, when the houre of ꝑ byrth is come, an houre two or three afore: that the paynes come vpon her body, and when ꝑ chylde commeth to the byrth, they tary not the twynklyng of an eye: Euen so shall not the plages be slack to come vpon the earth, and the world shall mourne, and sorowes shall come vpon it on euerye syde.

E O my people, heare my worde, make you redy to the battel: and in all euell be euen as pylgrymes vpon erth. He that selleth shal dim be as he that flyeth his waye: and he ꝑ byeth, as one that wyll lese. Who so occupyeth marchandyse, as he that wynneth not:

and he that buyldeth, as he that shall not dwell therin: he that soweth, as one that shall not reape: he that trysteth the vine-yarde, as he that shal not gather the grapes:
they that marry, as they that shal get no chil dren: they that mary not, as the widowes:
and therfore they that laboure, laboure in vayne. For straungers shall reape their fru-tes, and spoile their goodes, ouerthrow their houses, and take their children captyue, for in captyuytie and honger shall they get chil dren. And they ꝑ occupy their marchaundyse with robbery, howe longe decke they their cyties, their houses, their possessions, and per sonnes? the more wyll I punysshe theym for their synnes sayth the Lorde. Lyke as an hore enuyeth an honest woman, so shall vnryghteousnes hate iniquitie, whē she decketh
her selfe and shall accuse her to her face, whē
he cōmeth that defendeth, which shal make inquisition for all synne vpon earth. And ther fore be not ye lyke therunto, ne to the wor-kes therof: for or euer it be lōg, iniquitie shal be taken awaye out of the earth, and ryght-ousnesse shall raygne amonges you.

Let not the synner saye, that he hath not synned: for coles of fyre shall burne vpō his heade, which sayth before the Lorde God ꝑ his glory: I haue not synned. Beholde, the Lord knoweth all the workes of men, their ymaginations, their thoughtes & their bec-
tes. For he spake but the worde: let the earth be made, and it was made, let the heuen be made and it was made. In this worde were the starres made, and he knoweth the nombre of them. He searcheth the grounde of the depe, and the treasures therof: he hath measured the see, & what it containeth. He hath shut the see in the myddest of the waters, & with his worde hath he hanged the erth vpō
the waters. He spreadeth out the heauen lyke a bawte, vpon the waters hath he founded
it. In the deserte and dyre wyldernes hathe
he made springes of water, and poles vpon
the toppe of the mountaynes, that the floudes myght poure downe from the stony roc-kes to water the earth. He made man, & put his herte in the myddest of the body, & gaue hym breath, lyfe and vnderstandynge, yea &
the spirite of the almyghtye God, whiche
made al thinges, and hath serched the groūd
of all the secretes of the earth.

He knoweth your ymaginacyons and intentions, and what ye thynke when ye syn, and wold hyde your synnes. Therfore hath ꝑ Lorde searched and sought out all your wor-kes, and he shall bewraye you all. And when youre synnes are broughte kerthe, ye shal be ashamed before men, and your owne synnes shall be youre accusers in that daye. What wyll ye do? Or how wyll ye hyde youre syn-nes before God and his Aungels? Beholde, God him selfe is the iudge, feare him, leaue
of from your synnes, and forget your vnryg
tousnesse, and medle no more with theym:
so shal God leade you forth, and delyuer you from all trouble. For beholde, the heate of a great multitude is kyndled ouer you, & they shall take awaye certayne of you, and fede
the ydle with Idols: and they that cōsent vn to them, shall be had in derisyon, laughed to scorne, and troden vnder fote.

For vnto the places there shall be a place, b and in the nexte cyties a greate insurrection vpon those that feare the Lord. They shal be lyke mad men, they shall spare no man: they shall spoyle & waste such as feare the Lorde;
theyr goodes shall they take from them, and shut them out of theyr houses. Then shall it be knowen who are my chosen, & they shal be eryed as the gold in the fyre. Heare O ye my beloued, sayth the Lorde: beholde, the dayes of trouble are at hande, but I wyll delyuer
you from the same. Be not ye afrayed: dyspayre not, for God is youre capitayne.

Who so kepeth my cōmaundementes and preceptes (sayeth the Lord God) let not your synnes weye you downe, and let not youre vnryghteousnesses be lyfte vp. Wo be vnto them that are subdued vnto theyr synnes,
and tangled in theyr wyckednesses, lyke as a felde is hedged in with bushes, and the path therof
couered with thornes,
that no man maye
trauayle tho-
rowe:
and so is he taken, and cast in the fyre, and brēt.

¶ The ende of the fourth boke
of Esdras.

THE BOOKE OF TOBIAS.

¶ Tobias beynge taken pryſoner, forſaketh not the lawe of truth. The mercy and charytye of To bias, and the maners of him in his youth. He taketh Hannah to wyfe, by whome he hath a ſonne named Tobias. He ſuccoureth Gabell for money. He and his are fayne to flye, but after the death of Sennacherib they retourne agayne.

CAPI. I.

TObias beynge of the tryde and cittie of Neph tali, whiche lyeth in the high countreyes of Ga lile aboue Naason the
waye eawarde the weſt
haueyng the cytye of Se
phet vpō the left ſyde.
Though he was ta-
kē pryſoner in ꝑ dayes of Salmanaſar king of the Aſſirians, neuertheleſſe beinge in captyuitie, he forſoke not the waye of truth: In ſo moche that whatſoeuer he myght get, he parted it dayly with his felow pryſoners & brethē, that were of his kynred. And though he were yonger thē al in the tryde of Neph-tali, yet dyd not he behaue him ſelfe chil dyſhly in his workes. And when al the other went to the golden calues, which Jeroboam
the kynge of Iſrael had made, he him ſelfe alone fled all their companyes, and gat hym
to Jeruſalem vnto the temple of the Lorde and there worſhypped the Lorde God of Iſ rael, faythfully offeryng of all his fyrſte frue tes and tythes, ſo that in the thyrde yere he miniſtred all the tythes vnto the ſtraungers and conuertes. Theſe and ſuch lyke thynges dyd he accordynge to the lawe of God, whē
he was yet but yonge.

But when he was a man, he toke oute of his owne tryde a wyfe called Anna, and of her he begat a ſonne whome he called after his owne name, and taught him frome his youth vp, to feare God, and to refraine from all ſynne.

Howe when he with his wyfe, his ſonne
and with all his kinred was come in capty-uitie vnto Niniue, what time as they al ate of the meates of the heithen, he kepte his ſoule, and was neuer defiled in their meates.
And for ſo moche as he was myndfull of the Lorde in all his hert, God gaue him fauoure
in the preſence of Salmanaſar the king whi
che gaue him power to go where he wolde,
and ſo dyd he lybertye to dos what hym
lyſt.

So went Tobias vnto al them that were in pryſon, and comforted them, and gaue thē holſome exhortacions. And when he came to Rages a cytye of the Medes, haueyng ten talentes of ſyluer (of the thynges wherwith the kynge had honoured him) & ſawe amōge
a greate companye of people of his kynred,
one Gabelus (which was of his own tribe)
beynge in neceſſite, he gaue him the ſayde
weyght of ſyluer vnder an hand wryteynge.

After a longe ſeaſon when Salmanaſar
the kynge was deed, and Sennacherib his ſonne ragned in his ſteade, whiche hated the children of Iſrael. Tobias went dayly thō-row out all his kynred, and comforted them,
and gaue of his goodes to euery one of them
as moch as he myght: he fed the hungrye, clathed the naked, and buryed ꝑ deed and ſlayn. iiii. Reg. xix. g and that diligently. D

And when Sennacherib the kynge came agayne and fled out of Jewry (what tyme as God punyſched him for his blaſphemy) and in his wrath, ſlewe many of the children of iiii. Eſdr. i. c Iſrael. Tobias buryed theyr bodyes. But when it was tolde the kyng, he cōmaunded to ſlaye him, and toke awaye all his goodes.
Neuertheleſſe Tobias with his ſonne & with his wyfe, fled his waye, and was byd naked, for there were many that loued hym. But after .xlv. dayes, the kynge was ſlayne of his owne ſonnes. Then came Tobias agayne to his houſe, and all his goodes reſtored vnto hym.

¶ Tobias byddeth ſuche of his frendes as feare God, to a baūket or feaſt. He is reproued of his frendes. He feareth God more then the kynge. He becommeth blynde, by the permyſſyon and ſuffe-raunce of God. His kynſfolkes mocke hym.

CAPI. II.

AFter theſe thynges vpon a ſolemne A daye of the Lorde, Tobias made a good feaſt in his houſe, and ſayd vnto
his ſonne: Go thy waye and bryng hyther ſome of our tryde, ſuche as feare God, that they maye make mery with vs. And when he was gone, he came agayne, and tolde his father, that one of the chyldren of Iſrael laye ſlayne vpon the ſtrete. And immediatly he lepte from his table, lefte the feaſt, came ſa-ſtynge to the deed coorſe, toke hym and bare hym pryuelye in to his houſe, that when the Sunne was downe, he myghte ſafely burye hym. And when he had hydde the coorſe, he ate his meate with mournynge and feare, re-membryng the wordes that the Lorde ſayth
by the prophete Amos: your hye feaſtes ſhall Amos. viii. b be turned to ſorowe and heuyneſſe. a. i. Mac. i. d

But when the ſonne was downe, he went B his way and buryed hym. Then al his neygh-bours reproued hym, ſaying: It is not longe, ſence it was cōmaunded to ſlaye the bycauſe Tobi. i. d
of this matter, and haſte ſcarce eſcaped the daunger of death, and buryeſt thou the deed agayne? Neuertheleſſe Tobias feareng God more then the kynge, toke the bodyes of the ſlayne, hyd them in his houſe, and buryed the
at mydnyght.

It happened vpon a daye, that he had bu- C
ryed the deade, and was wery, came home,
and layed him downe by the wall and ſlept.

And

And whyle he was a slepe, there fell downe vpon his eyes warme donge out of the swalowes nest, so that he was blynd. This temptacion dyd God suffre to happen vnto hym, that they which came after, myght haue an example of his pacience, lyke as of holy Job. For in so moche as he euer feared God from his youth vp, and kepte his commaundementes, he was not heuye agaynst God, that ye plage of blyndnes chaunsed vnto hym but remayned stedfast in ye feare of God, and thanked God all the dayes of his lyfe.

Deuter.viii.a and.xiii.a John.ix.a and.xi.a

D For like as blessed Job was had in derisiō of kynges, euen so was he laughed to scorne of his elders and kynsfolkes, which sayde vnto him: where is thy hope, for the which thou hast done almes and buryed the deade? But Tobias rebuked them, and spake: Say not so, for we are the chyldren of holy men, and loke for the lyfe, which God shal gyue vnto them that neuer turn their beleue from him. Anna his wyfe went dayly to the weuyng worke, and loke what lyuyng she coulde get with the laboure of her handes, she brought it. And it hapened that she toke a kyd and brought it home.

Job.iiii.a Tobi.viii.a Ephesi.iiii.a

And when her husband herd it crye, he said: loke that it be not stollen, restore it agayne to the owners: for it is not lawfull for vs to eat or to touche any thynge of theft. Thē was his wyfe angrye, and sayd: Now is thy hope become vayne openlye, and thy almes dedes are manyfest. With these and such like wordes dyd she cast hym in the teeth.

Deute.xxii.a Job.ii.b

¶ The prayer of Tobias. Sara the doughter of Raguel, is sclaundred of her fathers seruaunt. The prayer and fastinge of Sara: And also the innocencye and chastitie of her. The prayers of Tobias & of Sara are herde.

CAPI. III.

A Then Tobias toke it heuelye, and with teares began to make his prayer sayinge: O Lorde thou arte ryghteous, & all thy iudgementes are true, yea al thy wayes are mercy, faythfulnes and iudgemēt. And now, O Lorde, be myndfull of me, and take no vengeaunce of my synnes, neither remembre my mysdedes, neither the mysdedes of my elders. For we haue not bene obedyent vnto thy commaundementes, therfore are we spoyled, brought in to captyuytie, into death, in to derision and shame vnto all nacions, amonges whom thou hast scatered vs. And nowe O Lord thy iudgementes are great, for we haue not done accordynge to thy comaundementes neither haue we walked innocently before the. And nowe O Lorde, deale with me accordynge to thy wyll, and commaunde my spirite to be receyued in peax, for more expedyente were it for me to dye, then to lyue.

Psal.cxviii.b

B At the same tyme it happened, that Sara the doughter of Raguel at Rages a cytye of the Medes was sclaundred of one of her fathers handmaydes, that she shoulde haue hadde seuen husbandes, whiche as soone as they were gone in vnto her, were slayne of the deuyl called Asmodeus. Therfore when she reproued the mayden for her faute, she answered her, sayinge: God let vs neuer se son nor doughter of the more vpon earth, thou kyller of thy husbandes. Wylt thou slaye me also, as thou hast slayne seuen men? At this voyce wente, Sara in to an hyghe chambre of her house, and thre dayes and thre nyghtes she neyther ate ne dranke, but continued in prayer, and besoughte God with teares, that he wolde delyuer her from this rebuke.

C Upon the thyrde daye it chaunced, that when she had made an ende of her prayer, she praysed the Lorde sayinge: Blessed be thy name O God of our fathers, whiche when thou art wroth, shewest mercy, and in ye tyme of trouble thou forgyuest the synnes of thē, that call vpon the. Unto the O Lorde turne I my face, vnto the lyfte I vp myne eyes. I beseche the O Lorde, loose me out of the bondes of this rebuke, or els take me vtterly awaye from of the earth. Thou knowest Lord, that I neuer had desyre vnto man, and that I haue kepte my soule cleane from all vnclenly lust. I haue not kepte company with those that passe theyr tyme in sporte, neyther haue I made my self partaker with thē ye walke in lyght behauour. Neuertheles, an husbande haue I cōsented to take, not for my pleasure, but in thy feare.

D Now peraduenture eyther I haue bene vnworthy of them, or els were they vnmete for me, for thou happly hast kepte me to an other husbande. For why? thy counsell is not in ye power of man. But who so euer loueth the, and serueth the a ryghte, is sure, that yf his lyfe be tempted and proued, it standeth in the kepenge: and yf he endure in pacience, he shall haue a rewarde and be hylye crowned, and yf he be in trouble, that God (no doubte) shall delyuer him: and yf his lyfe be in chastening, that he shall haue leaue to come vnto thy mercy.

For thou hast no pleasure in our damnacyon: and why? after a storme thou makest ye wether fayre and styll: after wepynge and heuynesse, thou geuest great ioye. Thy name O God of Israell, be praysed for euer. At the same tyme were both theyr prayers heard in the syght of the magesty of the hyghest God. And Raphael the holy Aungell of the Lorde was sent to helpe them bothe, whose prayers came togyther before God.

CAPI. IIII.

A So when Tobias thought his prayer to be herde, that he myght dye, he called vnto hym his sonne Tobias: and sayd vnto hym: My sonne, heare the wordes of my mouthe, and laye them in thyne herte as a foundacyon. When God taketh awaye my soule, burye thou my body, and holde thy mother in honour all the dayes of her lyfe. For thou oughtest to remembre, what and howe greate perels she suffred for the in her wōbe. And when she also hath fulfylled the tyme of her lyfe, bury her besyde me. Haue God in thy thought all the dayes of thy lyfe, and be ware, lest at any tyme thou consent vnto sin, and lest thou let slyp the commaundementes of the Lorde our God.

B Gyue almes of thy goodes, and turne neuer thy face from the poore: and so shall it come to passe, that the face of the Lorde shal not be turned awaye from the. Be mercyfull after thy power. If thou hast moch, gyue plēteously: yf thou hast lytle, do thy dylygence, gladlye to gyue of that lytle. For so gatherest thou thy selfe a good rewarde in the day of necessitye. For almes delyuereth frō deth, suffreth not the soule to come in darkenes. A greate comforte is almes before the hyghe God, vnto all them that do it.

C My sonne, kepe the well frome all horedome, and (besyde thy wyfe) se that no faulte be knowen of the. Let neuer pryde haue rule in thy mynde nor in thy worde, for in pryde began all destruction.

Whosoeuer worketh anye thynge for the, immediatlye gyue hym his hyre, & loke that thy hyred seruauntes wages remayne not by the ouer nyght. Loke that thou neuer do vnto an other man, the thynge that thou woldest not an other mā shuld do vnto the. Eate thy bred with the hungry and poore, and couer the naked with thy clothes. Set thy bred and wyne vpon the buryal of the ryghteous, and doo not thou eate and drynke therof with the synners. Aske euer counsayle at ye wyse.

Be alwaye thankfull vnto God, and beseche him, that he wyll ordre thy wayes, and that whatsoeuer thou deuisest or takest ī hād it may remayne in him. I certyfy the also my sonne, that (when thou wast yet but a babe) I delyuered ten talentes of syluer vnto Gabelus, at Rages a cytye of the Medes, and his handwrytynge haue I by me. And therfore seke some meanes, how thou maist come by hym, and receyue of him the sayd weyght of syluer, and gyue him his handwrytynge agayne.

My sonne, be not afrayde: truth it is, we leade here a poore lyfe: but greate good shal we haue, yf we feare God, and departe from all synne and do well.

¶ The obedience of yonge Tobias to his father, which is sent in to Rages. An angell accompanyeth with him in his iourney.

CAPI. V.

A Then answered Tobias his father, and sayde: father all that thou hast commaunded me, wyll I do, & that dylygently. But how I shal require this mony I cā not tel. Neither doth he know me, ne I him. What token shall I gyue him? And as for ye waye thyther, I neuer knew it. Then his father answered him, and sayd: I haue his handwrytynge by me, whiche when thou shewest him, immediatlye he shall paye the. But go thy waye nowe, and get the some faythfull man to go with the for an hyre, that thou mayste receyue the money, whyle I am yet lyuynge.

Then went Tobias out, and vpon the strete, he found a fayre young man standyng, gyrded vp, and as it were one readye to take his iourney. And he knewe not that it was an Aungell of God, but saluted hym, and sayd: From whence art thou, thou good yong man? He answered: Of the chyldren of Israel.

B And Tobias sayd vnto hym: knowest thou the waye that leadeth vnto the countreye of the Medes? He answered: I know it well, and all those stretes haue I gone oft tymes, and haue lodged with our brother Gabelus that dwelleth in Rages, a cytie of the Medes, whiche lyeth vpon the mounte Egabthanis. Tobias sayd vnto hym: I praye the tary for me, tyll I haue tolde my father these thynges. Then went Tobias in, and tolde his father all. At the whiche his father marueled, and prayed that he wold come in vnto hym.

C Now when the Aungell came in, he saluted hym and sayd: Ioye be with the for euermore. And olde Tobias sayd: what ioye can I haue that syt here in darcknes, and se not the lyght of heauen? The younge man sayde vnto hym: Be of good cheare, God shal help the shortly. And Tobias sayd vnto him: Cāst thou brynge my sonne to Gabelus, vnto the cytye of Rages in Medea? And when thou commest agayne, I shall paye the thy hyre. And the Aungel sayd vnto hym: I shal leade thy sonne, and brynge hym to the agayne. Then Tobias answered hym: tell me I pray ye, of what house, or of what trybe art thou? The Aungell Raphael sayd vnto hym: Askest thou after the kynred of an hyrelyng, or sekest thou a guyde for thy sonne to go with hym? But that I make the not carefull, I am Azarias the sonne of greate Hananias. And Tobias answered: thou arte come of a greate kynred: but I pray the be not dyspleased that I desyred to know thy kynred. The Aungel sayd vnto hym: thy sonne shal I lede forthe safelye, and brynge hym hole to the agayne.

D Then answered Tobias, and sayd: well goo on youre waye, and God be in youre iourney, and his Aungell beare you cōpanye. So when they had prepared all thynges, ye they wolde take with them in theyr iourney: Tobias bad his father and his mother fare well, and they went on theyr waye bothe togyther. Now when they were gone, his mother began to wepe, and sayd: The staffe of our age hast thou taken awaye, and sent him from vs.

Wolde God that money had neuer bene,

for the

for the whyche thou hall sent hym awaye. If we had bene contente with oure powertye, this had bene great ryches vnto vs, that we sawe our sonne here. Then sayd Tobias vnto her: wepe not, oure sonne shall come to vs agayne safe and sounde, and thyne eyes shall se him. For I trust, that the good Aungell of God shall beare hym company, and order well all the thynges that he doeth: so that he shall come to vs agayne with ioye. At these wordes his mother lefte of from weppynge, and held her tongue.

¶ Younge Tobias is delyuered from the fysche, by the Aungell. The Aungell exhorteth Tobias to take Sara to his wyfe.

CAPI. VI.

§ SO Tobias went on his waye, and a dog folowed hym, and the fyrst nyght they abode by the water of Tygris. Then wēt he out to washe his fete, and beholde, there came forth an horryble fysh to deuoure him. Of whom Tobias was afrayed, and cryed with a loude voyce, sayinge: Lorde, he commeth vpon me. And the Aungell sayde vnto hym: Take him by the cheke blade, and drawe hym to the. And he dyd so, and drewe hym vpon the lande. And the fysh began to leape at his fete.

Then sayd the Aungell vnto hym: Take out the bowels of this fysshe, and as for the herte, the gal, and the liuer, kepe them by the. For these thynges are necessary and good for medicyne. Tobias dyd so, and rosted the fish, & they toke hym with them in their iourney, the residue they salted, as moche as was sufficyent for them, tyll they came to Rages. Then Tobias asked the Aungell, & sayde vnto hym: I pray the brother Azariah, tell me wherto are these thynges good of the fysshe, that thou hast bydden me kepe?

The angell answered hym and sayde: If thou layest a pece of the herte vpon the coles the smoke therof dryueth awaye all manner of euyll spirites, whether it be frome man or from womā, so þ frō thence forth þ same shal come no more vnto them. The gal is good to anoynt or to stricke þ eyes withal, where as there is any blemysh in them, so shal they be hole.

§ And Tobias sayde vnto him: where wylt thou that we remayne? The angel answered and sayde here is a nygh kynsman of thyne, one Raguel by name, which hath a doughter called Sara, & hath neither sonne ne doughter but her. All his good belongeth vnto þ, and thou must mary his doughter: and therfore desyre her of her father, and he shall gyue her the to wyfe. Then answered Tobias & sayde: As I vnderstād, she hath bene maryed vnto seuē husbandes, and they al are dead: and I haue herde saye, that the deuyll slewe them. I am afrayde therfore, lest such thinges happē vnto me also: which if it came to passe (seynge I am the onely sonne of my father & my mother) I shoulde dyenge them in their age, with sorow to their graues.

Then sayd the Aungell Raphael vnto him: Heare me, and I will tell the what they be, of whom the deuyll hathe power. Namelye, they that receyue maryage of such a fashyon, that they shut God out from them and from their hert, & gyue them selues to their owne lust, euen as it were an horse and mule, which haue no vnderstandyng, vpon suche hath the deuyll power. But when thou takest her, and art come in to the chambre, withholde thy self from her thre dayes, and gyue thy diligence vnto nothynge but vnto prayer with her.

And in the fyrst nyght, cast the liuer of the fysshe, and the deuyll shall be dryuen awaye. The seconde nyght, shalte thou be receyued in to the companye of the holye patriarches. The thyrde nyght, shalte thou obtayne the blessynge of God, so that hole chyldren shal be borne of you. After the thyrde nyght take the mayden in the feare of God, and more for the desyre of chyldren, then for any fleshly lust, that in the sede of Abraham thou mayest obtayne the blessynge in chyldren.

¶ Younge Tobias and the Aungell come to the house of Raguel. He requyreth Raguels doughter to wyfe, and obtayneth her.

CAPI. VII.

§ THen wente they in to Raguell, whyche receyued them ioyfully. And when Raguel loked vpon Tobias, he sayde vnto Anna his wyfe: how lyke is this yonge man vnto my systers sonne. And when he had spoken this, he sayd: whence be ye good brethren? They sayd: Of the trybe of Nephthaly out the captyuytye of Ninyue. Then sayde Raguel vnto them: know ye my brother Tobias? They sayd: yea, we know hym well. And when he had spoken moch good of him, the Aungell sayde vnto Raguel: Tobies of whom thou askest, is this yong mans father. Then Raguell bowed him selfe downe, and wepte, toke him about the necke and kyssed hym, and sayd: Gods blessyng haue thou my sonne, for thou arte the sonne of a good vertuous mā. And Anna his wyfe and Sara his doughter wepte also.

Now when they had talked together, Raguel had kyll a wether, and to make a feast. And when he prayed them to sit downe to dynner, Tobias sayd: I will neither eate ne drynke here this daye, excepte thou fyrste graunte me my peticion, and promyse me to gyue me thy doughter Sara. When Raguel hearde this, he was astonyed, for he knewe what had happened vnto the other seuē men that went in vnto her: and he began to feare that it should chaunce vnto him also in lyke maner.

And whyle he stode so in doubte, and gaue the young man no answere, the Aungel sayd vnto him: Feare not to gyue him thy doughter, for vnto this man that feareth God, belōgeth thy doughter to wyfe, therfore mighte none other haue her.

Then sayd Raguel: I doubt not, but God hathe accepted my prayers and teares in his syght: and I trust he caused you to come vn to me for the same intent, that this doughter of myne myght be maryed in her owne kynred, according to the lawe of Moses. And nowe doubte thou not, but I will gyue her vnto the: So he toke the ryghte hande of his doughter, and gaue her in to the ryght hande of Tobias, and sayd: The God of Abrahā, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, be with you: ioyne you togyther, and fulfyll his blessynge in you. And they toke a letter and made a wrytynge of the maryage. And then made they merry, and praysed God. And Raguel cālled Anna his wyfe vnto hym, and bad her prepare an other chambre, and thyther he broughte Sara his doughter, and he wepte. Then sayde he vnto her: Be of good cheere my doughter, the Lorde of heuen gyue the ioye, for the heynesse that thou hast suffered.

¶ The Aungell byndeth the deuyl. Tobias exhorteth his wyfe to prayer, and they praye thre dayes before they lye togyther.

CAPI. VIII.

§ NOw after that they hadde supped, they broughte the yong man in to her. Then thoughte Tobias vpon the wordes of the aungell, and toke out of his bagge a pece of the liuer of the fysh, and layd it vpon the hote coles. So the the aungell Raphael toke holde of the deuyl, and sent him awaye, and bownd him in the wildernes of þ hyer Egypt. Then spake Tobias vnto the virgin, & said: Up Sara, let vs make our prayer vnto God to day, to morow, and ouermorow: for these thre nyghtes will we reconcile our selues vnto God: and when the thyrd holy night is past we shall ioyne togyther in the duty of maryage. For we are the children of holy mē, and we may not come togyther as the heathen þ know not God.

Then rose they vp both togyther, and besought God ernestly that he wolde preserue them. And Tobias sayde: O Lorde God of oure fathers, prayse be thou of heauen and erth, of the see, welles, and floudes, and of al the creatures that be therin. Thou madest Adam of the mould of the erth, and gauest him Eua for an helper. And now Lord thou knowest, that it is not bicause of voluptuousnes that I take this syster of myne to wyfe, but onely for the loue of chyldren, in whome thy name be blessed for euer. And Sara said: haue mercy vpon vs, o Lorde, haue mercy vpō vs and let vs bothe come hole and sounde to a good age.

And about the cocke crowe, it happened þ § Raguel called his seruātes, and they wente with him to make a graue. For he sayd: it is chaunced vnto him peraduēture, as it did vn to the other seuen men, that went in vnto her. Now whē they had made the graue, Raguel came agayne to his wyfe, and sayd vnto her: send one of thy maydes to loke yf he be dead, that I may bury hym afore it be lyght daye. So she sent a mayden to se, whiche when she came in to the chambre, she founde them hole and sound slepyng togyther. And so she came agayne, and broughte good tydynges. Then Raguel and Anna his wife, prayed þ Lorde and sayd: Praysed be thou, o Lorde God of Israel, for it is not happened vnto vs as we thought. For thou hast delt mercifully with vs, and put awaye from vs, the ennemy that persecuted vs, and hast shewed mercye vnto vonder two beloued. O Lorde cause them to magnify the more perfectly, and to offre the the sacrifice of thy praise and of their helthe: that al people may know, that thou only art God in all the earth.

And immediatly Raguel commaunded his seruauntes to fill the graue þ they had made with erth afore it was lyght: and bade his wyfe prepare a feast, & to make redy al thynges that were necessary for meat, to suche as wēt by the waye. He caused two fat kyne also, and foure wethers to be slayne, & meates to be prepared for all his neyghbours & frendes, and Raguel charged Tobias to remayn with him two wekes. As for all the good that he had, he gaue Tobias the one halfe of it, & made this writing, that the halfe which remayned, shoulde fall vnto Tobias after their death.

¶ The Aungell goeth to Gabelus, at the desyre of Tobias, which deliuereth the lettre, and receyueth the money.

CAPI. IX.

§ THen Tobias called vnto him the aungell, whome he thought to haue bene a man, and sayd vnto hym. Brother Azarias, I pray the harken vnto my wordes: If I holde gyue my selfe to be thy seruaunte, I shall not deserue thy prouidence. Neuertheles I beseche the, that thou wylte take the beastes and the seruauntes, and go vnto Gabelus in Rages the citye of Medes, and deliuer hym his hande wrytynge, and receyue the money of hym, and praye hym to come to my maryage. For thou knowest thy selfe, that my father telleth the dayes: and yf I tary one day to longe, he will be sorye in his myndе. Nowe seist thou how earnestly Raguel hath requyred me, so that I can not say hym naye.

Then toke Raphael four of Raguels seruauntes & two camels, & went vnto Rages þ citye of the Medes: and when he had founde Gabelus, he gaue him his hand wrytyng and receyued all the money. He told hym also of Tobias the son of Tobi, how all thynges had happened, and caused hym to come with him to the mariage. Now whē he came in to the house of Raguel, he fond Tobias sitting at the table: and he lepte vp, and they kyssed one an other, and Gabelus wepte, and prayed God and said: the blessing of the God of Israel haue thou, for thou art the sonne of a right vertuous and iust man, and of one that feareth God, and gyueth greate almes. And blessyng haue thy wife, and your elders that ye maye se your children and your children children, vnto the thyrde and fourthe generacion, and that your iede maye be blessed of the God of Israell, whiche reygneth worlde without ende. And when they had sayde: Amen, they wente to the feaste, but with the feare of the Lorde, helde they the feast of the mariage.

¶ Tobias and his wyfe are sad for the tarryance of theyr sonne. Raguel sendeth agayne Tobias with his wyfe.

CAPI. X.

NOwe whyle yonge Tobias made long taryinge by reason of the maryage his father was full of care and heuynesse, and thought what shoulde be the cause, that my sonne taryeth so longe? Or why shoulde he be kepte so long there? Peraduenture Gabelus is dede, and no man wyll gyue hym the money. Thus began he to be very sorowfull he Anna his wyfe with him, & began to wepe bothe togyther, bicause their sonne was not come agayne vnto them at the daye appoynted. As for his mother, she wept with dilcomfortable teares, and said: Wo is me, my son Oh what ayled vs to sende the awaye in to a straunge countrey, thou lyght of our eyes, & staffe of our age, & comfort of our lyfe, thou hope of our generacion? Seing all the thinges that we haue are onely of the, we sholde not haue sent the away from vs.

Then Tobias comforted her, & said: hold thy tonge, and be not discomforted, our son is hole and sound: the man that we sent him withall is faythfull ynoughe. Neuertheleste she might in no wyse be comforted: but daily went out, loked about, and went about all the stretes, wherby she thought he sholde com agayne, that (if it were possible) she myght se him commyng a farre of.

But Raguel sayd vnto his son in law: O tary here, & I shall send a messenger vnto thy father Tobias, to tel hym that & art in good helth. Tobias said vnto him: I am sure that my father and my mother count euery daye, and that their hertes are sory.

So when Raguel prayed Tobias with manye wordes, and wolde in no wyse heare hym, he delyuered Sara vnto hym, and the halfe parte of all his good: in seruauntes, & handmaydens, in sheep in camels, & in kyne, and moche money, and so sente hym awaye from him with pear and ioye, and sayd: the holye aungell of the Lorde be with you in youre iourney, and bryng you forth safe and founde, that ye maye fynde all thynges in good case with youre elders, and that myne eyes maye se youre children afore I dye. So the elders embraced their doughter, kyssed her, and let her go, exhortynge her to honour her father & mother in lawe, to loue her husband, to rule well her housholde, to kepe her house in good order, and to shewe her selfe faultlesse.

¶ Younge Tobias leuyng his wyfe and housholde in the myd waye, commeth before with the Aungel. The dreame of his mother, lokyng after her sonne. He is ioyfully receyued of his father and mother. Sara commeth leuen dayes after.

CAPI. XI.

AS they nowe were goynge homeward agayne, vpon the .xi. daye they came to Charra, whiche lyeth in the halfe waye towarde Niniue. And the aungel said: Brother Tobias thou knowest howe thou hast left thy father: therfore yf it please the we two wyll go before, and let the houshold with thy wyfe and the catell come softe and fayrly after vs. And when Tobias was content that they shold go before, Raphael sayd vnto hym: Take of the gall of the fish with the, for it shal be necessary. So Tobias toke of the gall, and they wente their waye. But Anna the mother of Tobias sat dayly by the waye syde vpon the top of an hylle, frome whence she myghte se farre aboute her. And whyle she was waytynge there for his commyng, she loked afarre of, and anone she perceyued her sonne comming, and ran and told her husband, sayying: Beholde, thy son commeth. And Raphael sayde vnto Tobias: As soone as thou commest in to the house, immediatly worshyp the Lord thy God, and gyue thankes vnto hym: then goo to thy father & kysse hym, and stryke his eyes ouer with the gal of the fyth, that thou hast broughte with the. For be sure that his eyes shal strayt way be opened, and thy father shall se the lyghte of heuen, and shal reioyse at the syght of the. Then the dogge that had bene with them in theyr iourneye, ranne before, and came as a messenger, and wagged with his tayle for gladnesse.

So the blynd father arose, & began to ren and bombled with his fete, & gaue a seruaunt his hande, ran to mete his son, receyued hym and kyssed hym and his wyfe, and began to wepe for ioye.

Now when they had worshiped & thanked God, they sat downe. Then toke Tobias of the fisches gall, & anoynted his fathers eyes: and taryed half an houre, and then began the blemysh to go out of his eyes, like as it had ben the whyte skyn of an egge, which Tobias toke and drew frome his eyes, and immediatly he receyued his syght.

Then they praysed god, he and his wife, & al they that knew him. And Tobias said: O Lorde God of Israel, I gyue the prayse and thankes, for thou hast chastened me, & made me hole. And lo, nowe do I se my son Tobias. After seuen dayes came Sara his sonnes wyfe also hole and sound, with all the houshold and catell, with camels & moche money of his

of his wynes, and with the money that he had receyued of Gabelus: and he told his father and mother al the benefytes, which God had doone for him, by the man that ledde hym. Achior also and Nabath Tobias lyuers cõnes came, and were glad, and reioyced with hym, by reason of al the good, that God had shewed vnto hym. And so for the space of seuẽ dayes they made merye, and were ryght ioyfull euerychone.

¶ Younge Tobias reckeneth vp vnto his father the pleasures that the Aungell dyd vnto hym. He offereth vnto the Aungell halfe the goodes that he brought with hym.

CAPI. XII.

THen Tobias called his son vnto him, & sayd: what may we gyue this holy mã that wẽt with the? Tobias answered his father, and sayd: father what rewarde shal we gyue him? or what thyng can deserue his benefytes? He hathe bene my guyde, and brought me safe agayne: he receyued the money frõ Gabelꝰ, he cauled me to get my wife he droue the euil spirit from her, he hath ben occasyon of gladnesse to her father & mother, he delyuered me, that I was not deuoured of the fyth, he hath made the to se the syght of heuẽ, yea we all haue receyued great good of hym. How shold we worthily deserue these thinges vnto him? But I pray the my father that thou wylt desyre him, yf happely he wil voutsafe to take with hym the halfe of all the we haue brought.

So the father and the sonne called hym, toke him aside, and began to pray him, that he wolde be content to take in good worthe the halfe parte of all that he hadde brought. Then sayd he secretely vnto them: Prayse the God of heuen, and gyue thankes vnto hym, before al men lyuyng, for he hath shewed his mercy vnto vs. It is good for vs to hyde the kynges secrete, but to shew and to prayse the workes of God, it is an honourable thynge. Prayer is good with fastynge, and to gyue almes, is better then to hoord vp treasures of golde; for almes delyuereth from deathe, clenseth synne, and causeth to fynde euerlastyng lyfe. But they that do synne & vnrighteousnesse, are the enemyes of their owne soules.

Wherfore I tell you the truth, & wyl hyde nothing from you. Whẽ thou prayedst with teares, and buryedst the deed, and lefteste thy dyner, and hyddest the deed in thy house vpõ the daye tyme, that thou myghtest bury them in the nyght, I offred thy prayer before the Lorde. And bycause thou wast accepted and beloued of God, it was necessary that tẽptacion shoide trye the. And now hath the Lord sent me to heale the, & to deliuer Sara thy sõnes wyfe from the cuyl spirite. For I am Raphael an aungel, one of the seuen that stand before God.

Whẽ they herd this, they were sore afraid and trembled, and fel downe vpon their faces vnto the ground. Then sayd the aungel: Peace be with you, feare not. Whe as I haue ben with you, it is the wyl of God, giue prayse and thankes vnto him.

You thought that I did eate and drynke with you, but I vse meat that is inuisible, & drynke that can not be sene of men. Genes.xviii.& xix. Iudith.xiii.c

Now therfore is the tyme that I muste turne agayne vnto him that sent me: but be ye thankfull vnto God, and tel out all his wõderous workes.

And when he hadde spoken these wordes, he was taken awaye out of their syghte, so that they sawe him no more. Then fell they downe flatte vpon their faces by the space of thre houres, and praysed God: and when they rose vp, they tolde all his wonderous workes.

CAPI. XIII.

THen olde Tabias opened his mouthe & praysed the Lorde, and said: great art thou, o Lorde, for euermore, and thy kyngdome, worlde without ende: for thou scourgest and healest, thou leadest vnto hell, and bryngest out agayne, and there is none that may escape thyne hande. O gyue thankes vnto the Lorde, ye children of Israell, & prayse hym in the syght of the Heathen. For among the Heathen whiche knowe hym not hath he scatred you, to thintent that ye sholde shewe forth his maruelous workes: and cause them for to knowe, that there is none other God almyghtye but he. He hathe chastened vs for oure mysdedes, and for his owne mercy sake shall he saue vs. Deute.xxviii.& i.Reg.ii.b Sapie.xvi.c

Consider then how he hath delt with you, and praise him with feare and drede, and magnifye the euerlastynge kynge in your workes. I wyl praye hym, euen in the land of my captiuitie, for he hath shewed his maiesty vnto a synfull people. Turne you therfore, O ye sinners, and do rightousnesse before God, and be ye sure that he wyll shewe his mercye vpon you. As for me and my soule, we wyll reioyce in God. O prayse the Lorde al ye his chosen, holde the dayes of gladnesse, and be thankfull vnto hym. O Jerusalem thou citye of God, the Lorde hath punished the for the workes of thyne owne handes. O prayse the Lord in thy good thinges, and gyue thankes to the euerlastynge God, that he may buylde vs his tabernacle agayne in the, that he may call agayne vnto the, all suche as be in captiuitie, and that thou mayste haue ioye for euermore. With a fayre light shalt thou shine and all the endes of the worlde shall honour the. The people shall come vnto the frõ far, they shall bryng gyftes, & worshyp the Lord in the, and thy land shal they haue for a Sanctuary, for the shall call vpon the great name in the. ii.Para.vi.a Luke.ii.c Esay.lx.a Matth.viii.a Esay.ii.a

Cursed shall they be that desyre the, and all that blaspheme the, shall be condemned:

but blessed shal they be that buyld the vp. Es for the, thou shalte reioyce in thy chyldren, for they all shall be blessed and gathered together vnto the Lord. Blessed are they all ꝑ loue the, ⁊ be glad of thy pear. Prayse thou the Lord, o my soule, for the Lorde our God hath delyuered his city Jerusalem frome all her troubles. I wyll counte my selfe happye yf my sede remayne to se the clerenesse of Jerusalem.

Apoca.xxi.c The gates of Jerusalem shall be buylded with Saphyre, ⁊ Smaragde, and al the compasse of her walles with precious stones. All her stretes shal be paued with whyte marble stone, and in all her stretes shall Alleluya be song. Prayse be the Lord, which hath exalted her, that his kyngdome may be vpon her for euermore. Amen. And so Tobias made an ende of his talkynge.

¶ Tobias prophecyeth the destruction of Niniue. His sonne returneth to Raguel, after the decesse of his father and mother.

CAPI. XIIII.

Job.xlii.c Plal.xxxvii.a A Nd after that Tobias had gotten his syght agayne, he lyued. xlij. yeres, and sawe his nephewes chyldren. Nowe when he was an hundred and two yere olde, he dyed: and was buryed honourably in Niniue. For when he was sixe and fyftye yeres of age, he lost his syght of his eyes, and when he was thre score yere olde, he gat his syght agayne. The residue of his life led he in ioy, and increased well in the feare of God, and departed in pear.

B But in the houre of his death he called vnto hym his sonne Tobias, and seuen younge spryngoldes his sonnes chyldren, and sayde vnto them: The destruction of Niniue is at hand, for ꝑ worde of the Lord can not fayle, and our brethren that are scatred oute of the lande of Israell, shall come thyther agayne.

Nah.i.ii.iii. Sophoni.ii.c

And the hole lande of it that hath ben waste, shal be filled, and the house of God that was brent in it, shal be buylded agayne, ⁊ al suche as feare God, shal returne thither: the heathen also shall forsake their ydols, ⁊ come to Jerusalem, ⁊ dwell there, and all the kinges of the erth shall be glad of her, and worshyp the Lorde God of Israel. i.Esdr.ii. iii.Esdr.ii.

And therfore my chyldren, heare your father: Serue the Lorde in faythfulnesse, seke after his will, and do the thing that pleaseth hym. Commaund your children that they do right, gyue almes, be myndfull of God, and euer to be thankfull vnto hym in truthe and with all their power. Heare me therfore my chyldren, ⁊ abyde not here: but in what day so euer ye haue buryed youre mother beside me, gette you frome hence. For I se, that the wickednesse of it shal bring it to destruction and ende. C Deute.vi. i.Regum Iohannis

After the deth of his mother, Tobias departed awaye from Niniue, with his wyfe ⁊ chyldren, and with his chylders chyldre, and came agayn to his father and mother in law and found them hole and in a good age, and toke the care of the. And he closed their eyes and was heyre vnto all Raguels goodes, ⁊ sawe the fyfth generacion and chylders chyldren. And when he was. xcix. yere of age, he dyed in the feare of the Lorde, and his kynsfolkes buryed hym: And all his posteritie continued in a good life, and holy conuersacion: so that they were loued and accepted bothe of God and men, and of al the people of the lande. (?)

¶ The ende of the boke of Tobias.

THE BOKE OF IVDITH.

¶ The buyldynge of Egbathanis. The victory of Nabuchodonosor agaynst Arpharat. The messengers of Nabuchodonosor are delyuered.

CAPI. I.

A Rpharat the kinge of ꝑ Medes, submoued many people vnto his dominion, and builded a noble stronge citye, which he called Egbathanis. The walles of it made he of fre stone, four squared, fruetye cubytes hye, ⁊ thirty cubites brode. He made towres theryon of an hundred cubites hye. But vpō the. iiii. corners, euery side was. xx. fote brode. He made the portes in the heygthe like as the towres. This king trusted in his mighty host, and in his glorious charettes.

So in the twelfth yere of his raygne, it happened that Nabuchodonosor the kynge of the Assyrians (which raygned in the great citye of Niniue) fought agaynste Arpharat, and ouercame him in the greate felde called Ragau beside Euphrates and Tigris, and Jadason, in the felde of Erioth the kynge of the Elimes.

Then was the kyngdome of Nabuchodonosor exalted, and his herte was lyfte vp: and he sent vnto all them that dwelte in Cilicia, in Damascus, in Libanus, and vnto the heathen that dwelte in Carmel, and Cedar, and to suche as dwelte in Galile in the greate felde of Esdrelon, to all theym that were in Samaria, and beyonde the water of Jordane vnto Jerusalem, and the hole lande of Jesse, vnto the mountaynes of Ethiopia.

Vnto all these dyd Nabuchodonosor the kynge of the Assyrians sende messengers. But they all with one consente wolde not agree vnto hym, and sente the messengers agayne emptye, and put them awaye without honoure. Then Nabuchodonosor the kynge toke indignacyon at all those landes, and sware by his trone, and by his kyngdome, that he wolde be auenged of all those countreyes.

¶ Holofernes is sent of Nabuchodonosor, to subdue all the worlde. The preparation and pursute of Holofernes.

CAPI. II.

IN the thyrtenth yere of kynge Nabuchodonosor, vpon the. xvij. daye of the fyrste moneth, it was deuised in the court of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of the Assyrians, that he wolde defend him selfe. So he called vnto hym all the elders, all his capitaynes, ⁊ men of warre, and shewed them his secrete counsell, and tolde them that his purpose was to bringe the hole earthe vnder his dominion.

Nowe when they were all content with his saying: Nabuchodonosor the kynge called Holofernes the chyef capitayne of his warres, and sayd vnto him: goo thy waye forth agaynst all the kyngdomes of the weste, and specially agaynste those that haue denyed my commaundement. Thou shalte spare no realme, all stronge cities shalte thou bring in subiection vnto me. Ezechi.xxix

Then Holofernes called together all the capitaynes and rulers of all the power in Assyria, and mustred the souldyers vnto the hoste (lyke as the kynge commaunded hym) namely an hundred and twentye thousande fyghtynge men vpon fote, and twelue thousande archers vpon horsebacke. All his ordinaunce sente he before with an innumerable multitude of camelles, so that the hoste was wel prouyded for with oxen and shepe eatel, and that without nombre. He caused corn to be prepared oute of all Citis for his hoste. Moche golde and syluer also toke he oute of the kynges house. So he toke his iourney, he and al his host, with charettes, horsemen, and archers: of whom there were so many, that they couered the ground of the land, lyke the grashoppers.

And when he was gone past the borders of the Assyryans, he came towarde the greate mountaynes of Ange, whiche lye vpon the left syde of Cilicia: and so he went in to all theyr castels, and wanne euerye stronge hold. As for the welthy city of Melothus, he brake it downe, and spoyled all the children of Tharsis and the Ismaelites, whiche laye towarde the wyldernesse, and vpon the south side of the land of Chelon. He went ouer Euphrates also, and came in to Mesopotamia, and brake downe al the hye citeys that were there, from the brooke of Mambre, til a man come to the see: ⁊ he toke the borders in frō Cilicia, vnto the coostes of Japhet towarde the southe. He carryed awaye all the Madianites, and spoyled all theyr goodes: ⁊ who so euer withstode him, he slew them with the swerde. After this he wente downe in to the felde of Damascus in the tyme of haruestе and brente vp all the corne and all the trees, and caused the vynes to be cut downe. And the feare of hym fel vpon al them that dwelt in the earth.

¶ Kynges become wyllyngly subiect to Holofernes. The tyrannye and cruelty of hym.

CAPI. III.

SO the kynges and prynces of all cityes, ⁊ landes sent their embassadours, namely they of Syria and Mesopotamia, Syria Sobal, and Lybia, and Cilicia, whiche came to Holofernes, and sayde: Lette thy wrathe cease toward vs: It is better for vs to serue the greate kynge Nabuchodonosor with oure lyues, and to be subiecte vnto the,

then that we sholde dye, and be slayne, & receyue greater hurte. All our cityes and possessyons, all mountaynes and hylles, all feldes great, and smal catel, shepe, gotes, horses and camels, all our goodes and houssholdes, be in thy power, vnder thy subiectiō be it all togyther. We oure selues also and our children wyll be thyne owne, come vnto vs a peaceable Lorde, and vse our seruyce at thy pleasure.

¶ Then came Holofernes downe frome the mountaynes with horsemen and greate power, and conquered all stronge fenced cytyes, and all that dwelt in the land. And out of all cytyes he toke stronge men, and suche as were mete for the warre, to helpe hym.

Judi.v.a There came such a fear also vpon those cōtreys, that the indwellers of all the cytyes, the Prynces and rulers, and the people togyther wente forthe to mete hym as he came, and receyued him honourably with garlandes and torches, with daunces, tabrettes, & pypes.

Neuertheleſſe thoughe they dyd this, yet might they not swage his rigorous stomack but he destroyed their cityes, & hewed down their woddes. For Nabuchodonosor ỳ kinge had commaunded hym, that he shoulde roote oute all the goddes of the lande: to the intent that he onely might be called and taken for God of the nacions, whiche Holofernes with his power brought vnder him. So wet he thorowe Syria Sabal, and thorowe all Appamia, and all Mesopotamia, came to the Idumeans, in the lande of Gabaa, and Septopoly, and toke theyr cytyes, & remayned there thyrtye dayes, wherin he caused al the hole multytude of his hoste to be gathered togyther.

¶ Israel requyreth helpe of God, agaynste Holofernes. They fast and praye.

CAPI. IIII.

A When the chyldren of Israel that dwelt in Jurye herde this, they were sore afrayd of him. There came suche trēblynge also and feare vpon them, that they forowed he sholde do vnto the citye of Jerusalem and the temple of the Lorde, as he had done to other cityes and their temples. So they sent in to all Samaria round about vnto Jericho, toke in and occupied all the toppes of the mountaynes, made fast ỳ townes with walles, and prepared corne for them a gaynst the battayle.

Eliachim also the Preest wrote vnto all them that dwelte towarde Esdrelon (whiche lyeth ouer agaynst the great felde by Dothaim) and vnto all those by whome men myghte haue passage vnto theym, that they should take in the wayes of the mountaynes wherby there myghte be any waye and passage to Jerusalem, and that they sholde hold B diligent watche where any straȳte way was betwyxte the mountaynes. And the chyldren of Israel dyd, as Eliachim the preest of the Lorde had commaunded theym. And all the people cried ernestly, and humbled their soules with fastynges and prayers, they & theyr wyues. The Preestes put on heerye clothes, and layde the younge babes before the temple of the Lorde, and couered the aulter of ỳ Lorde with an heerye clothe. And with one accorde they cryed vnto the Lord God of Israel, that their chyldren sholde not be gyuen in to a pray, & their wiues in to a spoyle, that theyr cityes shoulde not be layde waste, and that their Sanctuary sholde not be vnhalowed, and so they to be a shame and rebuke vn to the heathen.

Then Eliachim the hye preest of ỳ Lorde C wente rounde aboute all Israell, and spake vnto them, sayinge: Be ye sure, ỳ the Lorde wyll heare youre peticyons, yf ye contynue stedfast in fastinges and prayers in ỳ syghte of the Lorde. Remembre Moses the seruaūt of the Lorde, whiche ouerthrew the Amalechites (that trusted in theyr myghte and power, in theyr hoste, in theyr shyldes, in theyr charettes and horsemen) not with weapons, but with holy prayers. Euen so shall all the ennemyes of Israel be, yf ye contynue in this worke that ye haue begon. So vpon this exhortacyon, they continued in prayer before the Lorde. In so moche that they whiche offered burente sacrifyces vnto the Lorde, offered the offerynges vnto the Lorde, beinge arayed in heery clothes, and had ashes vpon theyr heades. And they all besoughte God from theyr hole herte, that he wolde vysyte his people of Israel.

¶ Holofernes is discontent with the Jewes Achior sheweth vnto Holofernes the maruels of God, done vnto the Jewes, for whiche thynge, the rulers vnder Holofernes were very angry with him.

CAPI. V.

And word came to Holofernes ỳ prince of the warres of the Assyrians, that A the chyldren of Israell prepared themselues to make resystaunce, and howe they had stopped the wayes betwyxte the mountaynes. Then was he exceedyng wrothe, and called all the princes of Moab, and the capitaynes of Ammon, and said vnto them: tell me, what people is this ỳ kepeth in the mountaynes? or whet maner of cityes are they? what is theyr power? or what maner of host haue they, who is their capitayne? And why do they despyse vs (more then all those that dwell in the Easte) and come not forthe to mete vs, that they myght receyue vs in peace? Judi.vi.b Then Achior the capitayne of al the Ammonites, answered and sayde: Syr, yf it please the to heare me, I wyll tell the truthe before the concernyng this people that dwel in the mountaynes, and there shall no lye goo oute of my mouth.

This people is of the generacion of the B Caldees, they dwelte fyrst in Mesopotamia, for they wold not folow the goddes of their fathers that were in the lande of the Chaldees, & so forsoke they the customes of theyr fore fathers (whiche had many goddes) and worshypped one God, that made heauen and earth: which also commaunded them ỳ they should go from thence, and dwell at Haran. Now when there came a derth in to the hole lande, they went downe to Egypt, and there they dwelt foure hundreth yeres, in the whiche they multiplyed so greatlye, that theyr host might not be nombred. And when ỳ king of Egypt oppressed them, and subdued them in buylopng of his cytyes, with makynge of clape and brycke, they cryed vnto God theyr Lorde, which punyshed the hole lande of Egypt, with dyuers plages.

C Now when the kynge of Egypt let them go theyr way, and the plage ceassed, and then folowed after them, to take them, & to bryng theym agayne in to his seruyce, whyle they were fleynge awaye, the God of heauen opened the see, so that the water stode fast, vpon bothe the sydes as a wall, and these weure thorow the bottom of the see: drye shod. In the which place, when an innumerable people of ỳ Egyptians folowed vpon them, they were so ouerwhelmed with the waters, that there remayned not one, to tell them that came after, how it happened. So when this people was passed thorowe the red see, they came vnto the wyldernes of the mount Synai, wher neuer man myght dwell afore, and where the sonne of man had neuer rested.

D There were the bytter waters made swete for them, that they myght drynke, and forty yeres had they meate from heauen. Where so euer they went (without bowe and arow, without bukler or swerde) their God fought for them, and caused them to haue the victory. Yea no man was hable to hurte this people, except it were so, that they departed vnfaythfullye frome the worshyppynge of the Lorde theyr God. But as oft as they worshypped any other beside theyr God, he gaue them ouer to be spoyled, to be slayne, and to be put to confusyon. Neuertheleſſe as oft as they were sory for departyng from the worshyp of theyr God, the same God of heauen gaue them power and strength to withstand theyr enemyes.

Moreouer they slewe the kyng of the Cananites, Jebusites, Pherezites, Hethites, Euites, and Amorites, and all the myghtye in Hesebon, and toke theyr landes and cytyes in possessyon: and so long as they synned not in the syght of theyr God, it wente well with them, for theyr God hateth vnrighteousnesse. For in the tymes past when they wente out of ỳ waye, which God had gyuen them, that they shoulde walke in it, they were destroyed in dyuerse battayles of manye nacyons: and many of them were caryed awaye presoners vnto a straūge countrey. But now lately they haue turned them selues agayne vnto the Lorde theyr God, and are come togyther agayne out of the countreys where they were scatred abrode: and thus haue they conquered these mountaynes, and dwell ther in: and as for Jerusalem where their Sanctuary is, they haue it agayn in possession.

And therfore my Lord, make bylygent inquysyon, yf this people haue done wyckednesse in the syght of theyr God, then let vs go vp agaynste them, for doubtlesse theyr God shall delyuer them into thy handes, and subdue them vnto thy power. But yf this people haue not displeased theyr God, we shall not be hable to withstande them, for their God shall defend them, and so shall we be a shame to all the worlde. Judith.vi.a

Now when Achior had spoken out these wordes, all the prynces of Holofernes were wroth and thoughte to slay him, and sayde one to an other: what is he this, which dare say that the chyldren of Israel are hable to withstande Nabuchodonosor the kynge and his host? where as they are an vnweaponed people, without strength or vnderstandynge of the feates of warre? That Achior therfore may knowe that he hath dyscyued vs, we wyll go vp in to the mountaynes: and whē the myghtye men of them are taken, he also shall be stycke with the swerde, that all people may know, that Nabuchodonosor is the God of the earth, and that there is none other without him.

¶ Achior is committed into the handes of the Jewes by Holofernes. He is tied to a tree, but is loosed of the Jewes. The prayer of the people. Achior is comforted of the Jewes.

CAPI. VI.

So when they had lefte of speakyng, Holofernes toke sore indignacion, and sayd vnto Achior. For so moch as thou haste prophecyed vnto vs, sayinge: that the people of Israell shall be defended of theyr God, I wyll shewe the, that there is no God but Judith.v.f Nabuchodonosor. Yea when we slee them al as one man, thou also shalte perysh with the thorow the swerde of the Assyryans, and all Israel shall be destroyed with the, and then shalt thou fele, that Nabuchodonosor is the Lord of the hole earth. Then shal the swerd of my knyght go thorow thy sydes, and thou shalte fall downe stycke amonge the wounded of Israel, and shalte not come to thy selfe agayne, but be vtterly destroyed vn them.

But yf thou thynkest thy prophecy to be B true, why dost thou then chaūge thy colour? why art thou afrayed? Thynkest thou that my wordes are not hable to be performed? But that thou mayst know, that thou shalte fele these thynges with them, beholde, from this houre forthe wyll I sende the vnto yonder people, that when the punishment of my swerde (whiche they haue worthelye deserued) falleth vpon them, thou mayste be punished with them.

So Holofernes cōmaunded his seruauntes to take Achior, and to cary hym vnto Bethulia, thulia, and to delyuer hym into the handes of the chyldren of Israel. Then Holofernes seruauntes toke him, and wente thorowe the playne felde. But when they drew nye vnto the mountaynes, the flynge castors came out agaynst them. Neuertheleſſe they gat them away by the syde of the mountayne, & beſide Achior hande and fote to a tree, and ſo lefte hym bound with withyes, and turned agayn vnto their Lorde.

Notwithſtandynge the chyldren of Israel went downe from Bethulia, came vnto him, looſed hym, brought him in to Bethulia, ſet hym in the myddeſt of the people, & aſked hym what the matter was, that the Aſſyrians had left hym bounde.

Oſias the ſonne of Micha, of the tribe of Symeon, and Chatmin (which is alſo called Gothoniel) were the principall rulers at the ſame tyme. Nowe when Achior ſtode in the myddeſt of the Senatoures, and before them al he tolde them, what anſwere he gaue Holofernes, to the thyng that he aſked hym, and how Holofernes people wolde haue ſlayne hym for ſo ſaying: and how Holofernes hym ſelfe was wrath, and commaunded hym for the ſame cauſe to be delyuered vnto the Israelites: that when he ouercame the chyldren of Israel, he myght commaunde Achior alſo to be put to death with dyuers tormentes, becauſe he ſayd: the God of heauen is their defender. And when Achior had playnly tolde out al theſe thynges, al the people fel downe vpon their faces, praiſyng the Lorde, and poured out their prayers togyther vnto ☩ Lord, with a generall complaynt and weppyng, and ſayde: O Lorde of heauen and of earthe, beholde their pryde, and loke vpon our lowlyneſſe, and conſydre how it ſtandeth with thy ſayntes, and make it to be knowen that thou forſakeſt not thoſe, which holde them faſt by the, and how that thou bryngeſt them lowe, that preſume of them ſelues, and make their boaſt in their owne ſtrength.

So when the weppynge and prayer of the people (whiche they had made the hole daye longe) was ended, they comforted Achior, ſayinge: The God of our fathers, whoſe power and ſtrength thou haſt prayſed, ſhall ſo rewarde the, that thou ſhalte rather ſe their deſtruction. When the Lorde our God then ſhall gyue his ſeruauntes this lyberte, God be alſo with the amonges vs: ſo that yf it pleaſe the, thou with thyne mayeſt dwell with vs.

Now when Oſias had ended the counſell, he toke him into his houſe, and made a great ſupper, called the elders to it, and ſo they refreſched them ſelues after the faſtynge. And afterwarde was all the people called togyther, which made their prayers all the nyght longe in the congregacyon, and beſought ☩ God of Israel for helpe.

¶ Bethulias is beſieged of Holofernes. The people requireth helpe of God. They of Bethulia wolde gyue ouer the cytye for want of water. The prayer of the people with teares and lamentation.

CAPI. VII.

THe nexte day, Holofernes commaunded his hoſte, to go vp agaynſt Bethulia. There were an. C. and .xx. thouſande fyghtynge men on fote, and two and twentye thouſande horſmen, beſyde the preparing of them that were wonne: and came to the on euery ſide out of the countreyes and cityes whiche he had taken. All theſe prepared them ſelues vnto the battayle agaynſt the Israelytes, and came on by the hyll ſyde, vnto the toppe that loketh ouer agaynſte Dothaim, from the place whiche is called Belma, vnto Chelmon that lyeth towarde Eſdrelon.

Now when the chyldren of Israel ſawe ſo great a multytude of the Aſſyrians, they fel downe flat vpon the ground, ſtrawed aſhes vpon their heades, and prayed with one accorde, that the God of Israel wolde ſhewe his mercy vpon his people. And ſo they toke their weapons, and ſat betwyxte the mountaynes in the narowe place, & kept the ware daye and nyght.

But whyle Holofernes was goynge aboute, he founde the water ſpryngе, whiche from the South ſyde was conueyed in to ☩ cytye by a condyte: this commaunded he to be directe an other way, and to cut their condyte in ſundre. There were welles alſo not farre from the walles, whiche they vſed ſecretlye, more for pleaſure then for neceſſytye.

Then went the Ammonites and ☩ Moabytes vnto Holofernes, and ſayde: The chyldren of Israell truſte neyther in ſpeare nor arowe, but haue taken in, and kepe the mountaynes and hylles. That thou mayſte ouercome them, therfore without the ſtrikyng of any battayle, let me to kepe the welles, that they drawe no water out of them: ſo ſhalte thou deſtroy them without ſwerde, or at the leaſte they ſhall be ſo feble, that they muſte be fayne to gyue ouer the cytye, whiche they thynke not able to be wonne, for ſo moche as it lyeth in the mountaynes.

Theſe wordes pleaſed Holofernes wel, & all his men of warre, and he let and. C. men at euery well rounde about. And when this watch had endured twentye dayes, the Ceſternes and all that had water, fayled them that dwelte in the cytye of Bethulia, ſo that in the hole cyty they had not dyrnke ynough for one daye, for the people had water gyuen them dayly in a meaſure.

Then came the men and women, younge perſonnes and chyldren all vnto Oſias, and ſayde all with one voyce: God be iudge betwyxte vs and the, for thou haſte dealt cruyl with vs: thou wolteſt not ſpeake peaceably with the kyng of the Aſſirians, therfore hath God ſolde vs in their handes, and there is no man to helpe vs, where as we are brought downe before their eyes in thyrſt & greate deſtruction.

Therefore gather now togyther al the people that be in the cytye, that we may al yelde ours

ourſelues wylyngly vnto the people of Holofernes: for better it is that we be captiue and prayſe the Lorde with oure lyues, then to be ſlayne and periſhe, and to be laughed to ſcorne and ſhamed of euery man, when we ſe oure wyues and chyldren dye before oure eyes. We take heauen and earth this daye to recorde, and the God of our fathers (whiche punyſheth vs accordynge to the deſeruynge of oure ſynnes) and gyue you warnynge, that ye gyue vp the cytye nowe in to the power of Holofernes hooſte, that oure ende maye be ſhorte with the ſwerde, whiche els ſhall endure longe, for wante of water and for thyrſte.

When they had ſpoken out theſe wordes, there was a great weppynge and howlyng in the hole congregacyon, and that of euerye man, and they cryed an hole houre long vnto God with one voyce, ſaying: we haue ſynned with oure fathers, we haue done amyſſe, we haue dealte wyckedly. Thou that art gracyous, haue mercy vpon vs, punyſhe oure vnryghtouſneſſe with thyne owne ſcourge, and gyue not thoſe other that knowledge the, vnto a people which knoweth the not, leſt they ſaye amonges the Heythen: where is their God.

And when they were ſo weype with this cryinge and weppynge, that they held their tunges: Oſyas ſtode vp with watrye eyes, and ſayde: O take good hertes vnto you, (deare brethren) and be of good cheare, and let vs wayte yet theſe fyue dayes for mercy of the Lorde: peraduenture he ſhall cut awaye his indignacyon, and gyue glory vnto his name. But yf he helpe vs not when theſe fyue dayes are paſte, we ſhall do as ye haue ſayde.

¶ Of the vertuous woman Judith, which reproueth ☩ auncyente & beraulet they tempted the Lorde. She alſo moueth them to entozage and herten the people, and ſheweth her counſell agaynſt the enemyes of the Iewes.

CAPI VIII.

AND it happened when theſe wordes came to the eares of Judith, a wyddowe, whiche was the doughter of Merary, the ſonne of Idox, the ſonne of Joſeph, the ſonne of Oziah, the ſonne of Elai, the ſonne of Jammor, the ſonne of Jedeon, the ſonne of Raphoim, the ſonne of Achitob, the ſon of Melchia, ☩ ſonne Enam, the ſon of Nathania, the ſonne of Salathiel, the ſon of Simeon, the ſonne of Ruben. And her huſbande was called Manaſſes, whiche dyed in the dayes of the barly hereſt.

For whyle he was byndynge the ſheues togyther in the felde, the heate came vpō his hed, and he dyed at Bethula his cyty, and there was he buried beſyde his fathers. Now was Judith his deſolate wyddowe. iij. yeres and ſyx monethes. And in the hyer partes of her houſe, ſhe made her ſelfe a pryuy chambre, where ſhe dwelte, beynge cloſed in with her maydens. She ware a ſmock of heer, and faſted al the dayes of her lyfe, except the Sabbothes, and newe moones and the ſolemne dayes that the people of Israell kepte. She was a very fayre and beutyfull perſon. Her huſbande alſo hadde lefte her great ryches, a plenteous houſholde, greate vnmouable poſſions and many catell. This Judith was a woman of a verye good report with euery one, for ſhe feared the Lorde greatlye, and there was no body that ſpake an euyl word of her.

When this Judith herde, how Oſias had promyſed the people, that after the fifth daye he wolde gyue vp the cytye vnto the Aſſirians ſhe ſet for the elders Chambri and Charmin and when they came to her ſhe ſayde: what thynge is this, wherin Oſias hath conſented that yt God helpe not within fyue dayes, he wyll gyue ouer the cytye to the Aſſirians? What are ye, that ye tempt the Lorde? This deuice optaineth no mercy of God, but prouoketh him vnto wrath & diſpleaſure. Wyll ye ſet the mercye of the Lorde a tyme and appoynte him a daye after your wyll?

Neuertheleſſe for ſo moch as the Lorde is patyent, let vs rather amende oure ſelues, pouryng oute teares, and beſechyng hym of grace. For God threatneth not as a man, neither wyll he be prouoked vnto wrath as the chyldren of men. And therfore let vs herteily fal downe before him, and ſerue him with a meke ſpyryte, and with weppynge eyes ſaye vnto the Lorde, that he deale with vs accordynge to his owne wyl and mercye: that like as our herte is now vexed, and brought low thorow the pryde of them, it may ſo be comforted thorow his grace: in ſo moch as we ſo low not the ſynnes of oure fathers, whiche forſoke their God, and worſhypped other goddes: for the which ſynne they were periſhed with the ſwerde: were ſpoyled and brought to ſhame of all their ennemyes. As for vs, we knowe none other God but onelye hym, for whoſe comforte let vs tarye with meekenes. He ſhall requyre and make inquyſicion for our bloude, from the vexations of our ennemyes: he ſhall bynge downe all the Heythe that ryſe vp agaynſte vs, and put them to dyſhonour, euen the Lorde our God.

Therfore deare brethren, ſeynge ye are ☩ honourable and elders in the people of God, vnto whom all the people haue reſpect, and vpon whome the life of the people ſtandeth, lyfte vp their hertes with your exhortacion that they may cal to remembraūce, how our fathers alſo in tymes paſt were temted, that they myght be proued, yf they worſhypped their God a right. They ought to remembre, howe our father Abraham beynge temted, and tryed thorowe many trybulacions, was founde a louer and frende of God. So was Iſaac, ſo was Jacob, ſo was Moſes, and all they that pleaſed God beynge tryed thorow many troubles, were fonde ſtedfaſt in faith. Agayne they that receyued not their temptacions with the feare of God, but put them ſelues forth with impacience & murmuringe

¶ The prayer of Judith for the vyctory.

CAPI. IX.

A NOw when they were gone theyr waye, Judith went in to her oratory, put on heayre smocke,strowed asshes vpon her hed,fell downe before the Lorde, and cryed vnto him,sayng:O Lorde God of my father Symeon, whiche gauest him a swerde for a defence agaynst that enemyes, that vsed vyolence and wylfulnesse, and that rauysshed the vyrgyn,and put her to dishonestye. Thou that gauest theyr wyues in to a praye, and theyr doughters in to captyuitye, & all theyr pray for a spoyle vnto thy seruauntes, which bare a zeale vnto the, helpe me wyddowe,O Lorde my God, I beseche the. For thou hast done all thynges from the begynnynge, and and loke what thou hast taken in hand & deuysed,it came euer to passe. For al thy wayes are prepared, and thy iudgementes are done in thy euerlastynge foreknowledge. O loke now vpon the armyes of the Assyryans, lyke as it was thy pleasure somtyme to loke vpō the hooste of the Egyptians, when they beynge weapened, persecuted thy seruauntes, and put theyr trust in theyr charettes horsemen, and in the multitude of theyr men of warre. But thou lokedst vpon theyr hooste castynge a thycke darknes before them: and when they came in to the depe, the waters

B ouerwhelmed them.

Euen so Lorde let it go with these, that trust in ȳ power and multitude of theyr men of warre,in their charettes,arowes and speares,and knowe not,that thou onely art our God,whiche destroyest warres from the begynnynge,and that thou arte the Lorde. O lyfte vp thyne arme now lyke as euer from the beginning,and in thy power bryng their power to nought,cause theyr myght to fall in thy wrath. Psalm.xlvi.b

They make their boost,that they wyll vnhalow and defyle thy Sanctuary,& to waste the tabernacle of thy name and to cast down the horne of thyne aulter with their swerde. Bryng to passe(O Lord)ȳ ȳ pride of ȳ enemy may be cut down with his own swerd,that he maye be taken with the snare of his eyes in me and that thou mayst smite him with ȳ lippes of my loue.O giue me a stedfast minde that I maye despyse hym and his strength, and that I maye destroy hym.

C This shal brynge thy name an euerlasting remembraunce,yf the hande of a woman ouerthrow him for.For thy power(O Lorde) standeth not in the power of men, neither hast thou any pleasure in the strength of horses. There was neuer proude personne ȳ pleased the,but in the prayer of the humble and meke hath thy pleasure bene euermore

Judith.xiii.d / and.xvi.d / ii.Par.xiiii.c / xvi.b.c.a / Judi.viii.a / Psal.cxlvii.b

O thou God of the heauens,thou maker of the waters,and Lorde of all creatures, heare me poore woman,callyng vpon the,& puttynge my trust in thy mercye.Remembre thy couenaunt,O Lorde,and mynyster wordes in my mouth, and stablysshe this deuyse in my hert,that thy house may contynue styl in holynes,and that all the Heithen maye knowe and vnderstande,that thou art God and that there is none other but thou.

¶ Judith decketh her self to go to Holofernes.The blessynge that the Elders gaue Judith. Holofernes is in loue with Judith.

CAPI. X.

A AND when she had left of cryinge vnto the Lorde, she rose vp from the place, where she had lyen flat before ȳ Lord and called her mayde,went downe in to her house,layde the heery cloth from her,put of the garmentes of her widdowhode,wasshed her body,anointed her self wt precious thīges of swete sauour, broyded & platted her heer, set an hoode vpon her heade,and put on such apparel as belongeth vnto gladnes,slippers vpon her fete,armelettes,spanges,earynges fynger rynges,and deckt her self with al her best araye. Judi.xvi

The Lorde gaue her also a specyall beautye and fayrenesse(for all this deckynge of her selfe was not done for any voluptuousnesse, and pleasure of the flesh,but of a right discrecion & vertue,therfore dyd the Lorde increase her beauty)so that she was exceding amiable and wel fauoured in al mens eyes.

She gaue her mayde also a bottel of wine a pot with oyle, potage, cake bred and chese, and went her waye.

B Nowe when she came to the porte of the cytye, she founde Osias and the elders of the cytie waytyng there. Which when they sawe her,they were astonyed,and merueled greatly at her bewty, neuerthelesse they asked no questyon at her, but let her go,sayinge: The God of oure fathers gyue the his grace, and with his power perfourme all the deuyce of thy herte: that Jerusalem maye reioce ouer the, and that thy name maye be in the nombre of the holye and ryghtous. And all they that were there,sayd with one voyce:so be it, so be it. Judith made her prayer vnto the Lorde,and went out at the porte,she and her mayde.

And as she was goinge downe the mountayne, it happened that about the sprynge of the daye, the spyes of the Assirians met with her,and toke her, sayenge: whence commest thou?Or whither goest thou?She answered: I am a doughter of the Hebrues,and am fled from them, for I knowe, that they shall be gyuen vnto you to be spoyled: bycause they thought scorne to yelde thē selues vnto you, that they myght fynde mercy in youre syght. Therfore haue I deuysed by my selfe after this maner: I wyll go before the prynce Holofernes, and tell hym all theyr secretes, and wyll shew him,how he maye come by them, and wynne them,so that not one man of his host shall perysh.

C And when these men had herde her wordes, and consydred her fayre face, they were astonyed (for they wondred at her excellent bewtye)and sayd vnto her: Thou hast saued thy lyfe by fyndynge oute this deuyce, that thou woldest come downe to our Lorde: and be thou sure, that when thou commest vnto hym,he shall intreate the well, & thou shalte please him at the hert. So they brought her into Holofernes pauylion, and tolde him of her. Now when she came in before hym, immedyatlye he was ouercome and taken with her bewtye. Then sayd his seruauntes: who wolde despyse the people of the Jewes, that haue so fayre women?Should we not by reason fyght agaynst them for these? So when Judith saw Holofernes syttyng in a canapy, that was wrought of purple,sylke,gold,smaragde and precyous stones, she loked fast vpō hym. and fell downe vpon the earthe. And Holofernes seruauntes toke her vp agayne, at theyr Lordes commaundement.

¶ Holofernes requyreth of Judith the cause of her commynge,whiche gyueth hym a subtyl answere.

CAPI. XI.

A THen sayd Holofernes vnto her: Be of good chere,and feare not in thyne hert, for I neuer hurte man,that wold serue Nabuchodonosor the kynge. As for thy people,yf they had not despysed me,I shulde not haue lyft vp a spere agaynst them. But tell me now what is the cause that thou art departed frome them, and wherfore arte thou come vnto vs.

And Judith sayde vnto hym: Syr, vnderstande the wordes of thy handmayden: for yf thou wylt do after the wordes of thy hādmayden, the Lorde shall bringe thy matter to a prosperous effecte.As truely as Nabuchodonosor a Lorde of the land lyueth,& as truly as his power lyueth, whiche is in the to the punysshment of all men that go wrōg all men shal not onely be subdued vnto him thorow the,but al the beestes also of ȳ felde. For all people speake of thy prudent actyuytie,and it hath euer bene reported, howe thou onely art good and myghtye in all his kyngdome,and thy discrecion is commended in all landes.

E The thynge is manyfest also,that Achior spake,and it is wel knowen what thou commaūdedst to do vnto him.For this is playne and of a suertye,that oure God is so wroth with vs(by the reason of oure synnes) that he hathe shewed by his prophetes vnto the people,how that for theyr synnes he wyl delyuer them ouer vnto the ennemye. And for so moch as the children of Israel know that they haue so displeased theyr God, they are sore afrayde of the. Judith.v.d

They suffre greate honger also, and for want of water,they are deed nowe in a maner. Moreouer they are appoynted to slaye all their catell,that they maye drynke the bloude of them:and are purposed to spende al the holy ornamentes of their God(which he hath forbydden them to touch)of corne. wyne and oyle. Seynge nowe that they do these thynges,it is a playne case, that they C must nedes be destroyed. Which when I thy handmayden perceyued,I fled frome them, and the Lord hath sēt me vnto the,to shewe the these thynges. For I thy handmayden worshyp God, euen here nowe besyde the, and thy handmayden shall go forthe ,and I wyll make my prayer vnto God,and he shal tell me,when he wyll rewarde theym theyr synne: then shall I come and shewe the and brynge the thorowe the myddest of Jerusalē so that thou shalt haue al ȳ people of Israel as the shepe without a shepeherde,there shal not so moch as as one dog barck agaynst the for these thynges are shewed me by thy prouydence of God: and for so moche as God is dyspleased with them,he hath sente me to tell the the the same.

D These wordes pleased Holofernes and al his seruauntes,which marueyled at the wisdome of her,and sayd one to an other: there is not suche a woman vpon earthe,in beauty and discrecion of wordes. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: God hath done well, that he hath sēt the hither before thy people,that thou mayste gyue them,into our handes. And for so moche as thy promyse is good,yf thy God perfourme it,vnto me,he shalbe my God also,and thou shalte be excellent and greate in the courte of Nabuchodonosor, & thy name shall be spoken of in all the lande.

¶ Holofernes

¶ Holofernes commaundeth that Judith be well intreated. She desyreth licence to go out in the nyght season to praye, and obtayneth it. Vagao is sent vnto her, to moue her to come in to Holofernes to a banket, and she commeth. Holofernes is dronken.

CAPI. XII.

A Then cõmaunded he her to go in, where his treasure laye, and charged that she shoulde haue her dwellynge there, and appoynted what shoulde be gyuen her from his table. Judith answered hym, and sayde: As for the meate that thou hast commaũded to gyue me, I maye not eat of it as now (lest I displease my God) but wyll eate of suche as I haue brought with me. Then sayd Holofernes vnto her: If these thynges ꝑ thou hast brought with the sayle, what wal we do vnto the? And Judith sayd: As truly as thou lyuest my Lorde, thy handemayde shall not spende all this, tyll God hathe brought to passe in my yande, the thynges that I haue deuysed.

B So his seruauntes brought her in to the tent, where as he had appoynted. And as she was goynge in, she desyred that she myghte haue leaue to go forthe by nyght and before daye, to her prayer and to make intercessyon vnto the Lorde. Then commaũded Holofernes his chamberlaynes, that she shoulde go out and in at her pleasure to praye vnto God chose thre dayes.

And so in the night season she went forth in to the valley of Bethulia, and washed her selfe in the well water. Then went she vp, & besought the Lorde God of Israel, that he wolde prosperr her waye, for ꝑ delyueraunce of his people. And so she went in, and remained clene in her tent, tyll she toke her meate in the euenynge.

C Vpon the fourth daye it happened, that Holofernes made a coltye supper vnto his seruauntes, and sayd vnto Vagao his chamberlayne: Go thy waye, and entyse this Hebruelle, that she maye be wyllynge to consent to kepe cõpany with me. For it were a shame vnto all the Assyrians, that a woman should so laugh a man to scorne, that she were come from him vnlayne with.

Then went Vagao vnto Judith, and sayd Let not ꝑ good doughter be afrayed, to come into my Lorde, that she maye be honoured before hym, that she maye eate and dyncke wyne, and be merye with him. Vnto whom Judith answered: Who am I, that I shuld saye my lorde naye? what so euer is good before his eyes, I shall do it: and loke what is his pleasure, that shall I thyncke well done, as longe as I lyue.

D So she stode vp, and decked her selfe with her apparell, and went in, and stode before hym. And Holofernes herte was thorowlye stycken, so ꝑ he brent in desyre towarde her. And Holofernes sayde to her: dryncke nowe and syt downe, and be merye, for thou haste founde fauoure before me. Then sayde Judith: Syr, I wyll dryncke, for my mynde is meryer to daye, then euer it was in all my lyfe. And she toke and ate and dranke before him ethe thynges that her mayden had prepared for her. And Holofernes was merye in her, and dranck more wyne, then euer he dyd afore in his lyfe.

¶ Holofernes slepeth for very dronckennes, and Judith cutteth of his heed, & goeth therwith to her owne people: of whom she is receiued with ioye. They gyue thankes vnto God, for their deliueraunce. Judith speaketh vnto Achior, whiche maruayleth at her feate done to Holofernes.

CAPI XIII.

A NOwe when it was late in the nyghte his seruauntes made haste euery mã to his lodgynge. And Vagao shut the chãbre dores, and went his waye, for they were all ouerladen with wyne. So was Judith alone in the chambre. As for Holofernes he lay vpon the bed all droncken, & of drey dõnennes fell a slepe.

Then commaũded Judith her mayde, to stand with without before the dore and to wayt. And Judith stode before the bed, makyng her prayer with teares, and moued her lyppes secretlye, and sayde: Strengthen me O Lorde God of Israel, and haue respect vnto the workes of my handes in this houre, that thou mayste set vp thy cytye of Jerusalẽ lyke as thou hast promysed: O graunt that by the I may perfourme the thynge, whiche I haue deuised thorow ꝑ beleue that I haue in the.

B And when she had spoken this, she wente to the bedsteade, and loosed the swerde that hanged vpon it, and drewe it out. Then toke she holde of the heery lockes of his heade, & sayde: Strengthen me O Lord God in this houre: & with that, she gaue hym two strokes vpon the necke, and smote of his heade. Then toke she the canapy awaye, and rolled the deade bodye aside. Immedyatly she gat her forth, and delyuered the heade of Holofernes vnto her mayden, and bad her put it in her wallet.

And so these two went forth togyther after theyr custome, as thoughe they wolde praye, and so passed by the hoost, and came thorowe the valley vnto the porte of the cytye. And Judith cryed a farre of vnto ꝑ watchmen vpon the walles: Open the gates (sayd she) for God is with vs, which hath shewed his power in Israel. And when they hearde her voyce, they called the elders of the cytye togyther. And they came al to mete her litle and greate, ponge and olde, for they thought not that she shulde haue come so soone. So they lyghted candels, and gathered about her euerychone: but she went vp into an hye place and caused sylence to be proclaymed.

When euery man nowe helde his tonge, C Judith sayde: O prayse the Lord our God, for he hath not despyred, nor forsaken them, that put their trust in hym, & in me his handmaiden he hath performed his mercy, which he promised vnto the house of Israel: yea in my hande this same night hathe he slayne the ennemy of his people.

And with that she toke forthe the heed of Holofernes out of the wallet, and shewed it them, saying: Beholde the heed of Holofernes the capiteyn of the Assirians, and this is the canapy wherin he lay in his dronkennes: where the Lord our God hath slayne him by the hand of a woman.

But as truly as the Lord liueth his aũgel hath kept me, going thyther, remainig there, and comming hither agayn from thẽce. And the Lord hath not suffred me his handmaide to be defiled, but without any filthynesse of syn hath he brought me agayn vnto you, and that with gret victory, so that I am escaped and ye deliuered. O gyue thankes vnto hym euerychone, for he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for euer.

D So they prayed the Lorde all togyther, & gaue thankes vnto him. And to her they said: The Lord hath blessed the in his power, for thorow the he hath brought oure enemyes to nought. And Ozias the chiefe ruler of ꝑ people of Israel, sayd vnto her: Blessed art ꝑ of the Lorde the hyghe God, aboue all women vpon earth.

Blessed be the Lorde, the maker of heuen & erth, which hath guyded the aright, to wold and to smyte of the heed of the capitayne of our enemyes. For this day he hath made thy name so honourable, that thy prayse shal neuer come out of the mouth of mẽ, which shal alway remembre the power of the Lord, seing thou hast not spared thine owne selfe, but put the in ieopardy, considringe the anguysh and trouble of thy people, and so hast holped their fal before God our Lorde. And all the people said: Amen, Amen.

E Achior also was called, and he came. The sayd Judith vnto him: The God of Israell vnto whom thou gauest witnesse, ꝑ he wolde be auenged of his enemyes, euen he hath this night thorow my hand smitten of the heed of all the vnfaythfull. And that ꝑ mayst se that it so is, behold this is the heed of Holofernes which in his presumptuous pryde, despised ꝑ God of the people of Israel, & threatned the with dest ruction, saying: whẽ the people of Israel is takẽ, I shal cause ꝑ also to be stricke with the swerd. When Achior saw Holofernes heed he fell downe vpon his face to the ground for very anguish and feare, so that he swowned withall. But after ꝑ he was come agayn to him selfe, he fel downe before her, & prayed her saying: Blessed art thou of thy God in all the tabernacles of Jacob, for all the people that hear of thy name, shal prayse the God of Israel because of the.

¶ The counsell of Judith. Achior beyng an heathen man, turneth to God. The Assyrians are afrayed of the Jewes.

CAPI. XIIII.

Judith sayd vnto al the people: Brethren hear me. Stick vp this heed vpon our walles, and when the sunne ariseth, take euery man his weapon, and sal out violently: not as though ye wold go beside them, but to renne vpon them with violence. When the spies in the tentes se this, they shall of necessitie be cõpelled to flie backward, and to raise vp their capiteyn to the batayle. So when their capitaynes come in to Holofernes paulion, and fynde the deed bodye wrapped in the bloude, fearfulnes shal fall vpon them, and when ye perceyue that they flie, folowe them without all care, for God shal deliuer them vnto you to be destroyed.

Then Achior seinge the power of God, whiche he had shewed vnto the people of Israel, fell of from his Heathenish byleke, and put his trust in God, and let him selfe be circumcised: and so was he nombred among ꝑ people of Israel, he and all his posteritie vnto this daye.

Now as soone as it was daye, they stickte vp Holofernes heed vpon the walles, and euery man toke his weapon, and so they went oute with an horrible crye. When the spyes sawe that, they ranne vnto Holofernes tent. And they that were within the tente, came before his chambre, and made a greate rushing to wake him vp, bicause they thoughte with the noyse to haue rayled hym. For there durst not one of the Assirians knocke, go in, or open.

But when the Capytaynes and Prynces and all the chyefe in the kynge of the Assyrians hoste came togyther, they sayde vnto the chamberlaynes: Goo your waye in, and wake hym vp, for the myce are crepte out of theyr holes, and dare prouoke vs vnto batayle. 1.Reg.xiiii.b

Then wente Vagao in to his chamber, L stode before the bedde, and clapped with his hondes, for he thought he had ben slepyng w Judith.

But when he had hardened perfectly with his eares and could per ceyue no stering, he went nere to the bed, and lyft it vp, and then sawe he the deed bodye of Holofernes lyeng there without a heed, weltred in his bloude, vpon the earthe. Then cryed he with loude voyce, and with weepynge rente his clothes, and went in to Judiths tent, and founde her not: And so he lepte out vnto the people and sayd one woman of the Jewes hath brought all Nabuchodonosors people to shame. For lo, Holofernes lieth vpon the ground, & hath no heed.

When the chief of the Assirians hoste herd that, they rent their clothes, and there fel an intollerable feare and tremblyng vpon the, so that theyr myndes were sore afrayd. And there was an exceding great crye in the hole hoste.

¶ The flyght of the Assyrians. The pursute of Israel after them. Israel becommeth ryche, by the spoyles of the Assyrians. Judith is praysed of Joacim and of the people.

Ere Capi

CAPI. XV.

NOw when all the hoste herde that Holofernes was heeded, they? mynde and counsell fell from theym: and suche a feare came vpon them, that they vndertoke to defende them selues by fleing away: one spake not to an other, but hāged downe their heades, left all behinde them, and made haste to escape frome the Hebzues: foz they herde that they were haftynge to come after with they? weapōs, and so they fled by the wayes of the feldes, and thozow all the fotepathes of the dales.

And when the childzen of Israel sawe that they fled, they folowed vpon them, and wēt downe with trompettes, blowyng and makyng a great crye after them: As foz the Assirians they had no ozdze, and kept not them selues togyther, but fled their waye. Neuertheselle the childzen of Israel fell vpon them with one company and ozdze, and discomfeted as many as they myghte get. And Ozias sent messengers vnto all the cityes and couns treys of Israel.

B So all the regions and euery city sent out their best men after them in harnelle, & smote them with the swerd, tyl they came to the vttermost part of their bozders. And ? other ? were in Bethulia came in to the tentes of the Assirians, and toke all that they which were fled had left behynd them, and so they found great good. And they that came agayn to Bethulia from the battayle, toke with thē such thinges as had ben theirs: there was no nōbze of the catell, and of all costlye iewels, so that from the lowest to the hyest, they were all made ryche of the spoyles of them. And Joachim the hye preest at Jerusalem came to Bethulia with al the elders, that they might se Judith.

Nowe when she came out vnto them, they began all to prayse her with one voyce, sayinge: thou wozshyp of the city of Jerusalem thou ioye of Israel, thou honour of our people, thou haste doone manly, and thy herte is comfozted, bycause thou haste loued clenlynesse and chastitie, and hast knowen no man but thyne owne husband: therfoze hath the hand of the Lozde comfozted the, and blessed shalt thou be foz euer. And al people sayd: so be it, so be it.

In thy? dayes coulde the people of Israel scarce gather vp the spoyles of the Assirians. But all that belonged vnto Holofernes, and had ben his specyally (whether it were of gold, of syluer, of precious stones clothyng and all oznamētes) they gaue it vnto Judith. And all the people reioysed, bothe women, maydens, and yong people, with pipes and harpes.

¶ The songe of Judith for the victory. After the victorye obtayned, the people commeth to Jerusalem, to wozshyp and prayse God.

CAPI. XVI.

THen songe Judith this songe vnto the Lozde: Begin vnto the Lozde vpon ? tabzettes, lyng vnto the Lozde vpō the cymbales. O ling vnto him a newe songe of thankesgyuing, be ioyfull and call vpon his name. It is the Lozde ? destroyeth warres, cuen the Lozde is his name. Which hath pitched his tentes in the middest of his people, ? he myght deliuer vs frome the hand of al our ennemyes. Assur came out of the mountayns in the multitude of his strengthe. His people stopped the water bzookes, and their hozses couered ? valeys. He purposed to haue bzent vp my lande, and to slee my yonge men with the swerde.

He wolde haue caryed awaye my childzen and virgyns in to captyuitie, but the almyghty Lozde hurt hym, and delyuered him in to the hādes of a woman, whiche bzought hym to confusyon. Foz they? myghtye was not destroyed of the yonge men. It was not the sonnes of Titan that slewe him, neyther haue the greate gyauntes set them selues agaynst hym: but Judith the doughter of Merari with her fayze beauty haue discomfeted hym, and bzoughte hym to noughte. Foz she layd awaye her wydowes garment, and put on the apparell of gladnesse in the reioysing of the childzen of Israell. She annoynted her face, and bounde vp her heere in an houe, to begyle hi. Her slyppers rauished his eyes, her beautye captyuated his mynde, with the swerde smote she of his necke. The Persiās were astonyed at her stedfastnesse, & the Medes at her boldnesse. Then howled ? armies of the Assirians, when my lymple appeared, dzye of thurst.

The sonnes of the doughters haue persed them thozowe, and slayne them as fugityue childzen: they perysched in the battayle, foz the very feare of the Lozde my God. Let vs synge a songe of thankesgyuynge vnto the Lozde, a newe songe of prayse wyll we syng vnto our God. Lozd Lozd, thou art a great God, myghty in power, whom no man maye ouercome. All thy creatures shoulde serue the: foz thou spakest but the wozde, and they were made, thou sentest thy spirite, and they were created, and no man can withstand thy voyce. The mountayues shal moue from the foundacyons with the waters, the stony rockes shal melt before the like waxe. But they that feare the, shall be greate with the in all thynges. Woo vnto the people that ryse vp agaynste my generacion, foz the almyghtye Lozde wyll auenge hym selfe of them, and in the daye of iudgement wyl he visyt them. Foz he shal gyue fyze and wozmes in to their flesshe, that they may burne and fele it foz euermoze.

After this it happened that after the victorye, all the people came to Jerusalem to giue prayse & thankes vnto the Lozde. And when they were purified, they offred al their bzent sacrifices, and their pzomysed offrings. And Judith offred all Holofernes weapons, and all the iewels that the people had gyuen her, and the canapye that she toke frome his bed, and and hanged them vp vnto the Lozde. The people was ioyful as the vse is: and this ioy by reason of the victozye with Judith, endured thze monethes.

So after these dayes, euerye man wente home agayne, and Judith was in great reputacion at Bethulia, and ryght honourablye taken in al the land of Israel. Unto her vertue also was chastitie ioyned, so that after her husbande Manasses died, she neuer knew man all the dayes of her lyfe. Upon the hye solemne dayes she went out with great wozshyp. She dwelte in her husbandes house an hundzed and fyue yere, and lefte her handemayden free and dyed, and was buryed beyde her husbande in Bethulia. And all the people mourned foz her seuen dayes. So longe as she lyued, there was none that troubled Israell, and manye yeres also after her deathe.

The daye wherin this victozye was gotten, was solemnely holden and reckened of the Iewes, in the nombze of the holye dayes, and it is yet greatly holden of the iewes euer sence, vnto this daye.

¶ The ende of the boke of Judith.

¶ THE RESTE OF THE CHAPTERS OF THE BOKE OF ESTHER, whiche are neyther found in the Hebrue, nor i the Chalde.

¶ The dreame of Mardocheus.

CAPI. XI. After the lxx tyme.

MArdocheus the son of Jair, the sonne of Semei, the sonne of Cisei of the trybe of Benjamin, a Jewe, whiche hadde his dwellynge in Sulis, a man of greate reputacion, and excellent amonge all them that were in the kynges courte. (Neuertheselle, he was one of the pryseners whō Nabuchodonosoz the kyng of Babylon had caryed awaye from Jerusalem vnto Babylon with Jechonias ? kyng of Juda.) In the seconde yere of the raygne of greate Artarexes, in the fyzst daye of the moneth Nisan, hadde this Mardocheus suche a dzeame: he thoughte he herde a greate tempest, hozrible thonderclappes, erthquakes, and greate vproze in the land: and that he saw two great dzagons redy to fyght one against an other. Theyr crye was greate: At the whiche roryng and crye, all heathen were vp to fight agaynste the ryghtous people. And the same daye was full of darcheneile, and verye vnclere, ful of trouble and anguyth, yea a great fearefulnelle was there in all the land. The ryghtous were amased, foz they feared the plage and euyll that was deuysed ouer them and were at a poynte with thē selues to dye. So they cryed vnto God, & whyle they were cryeng, the lytle wel grewe in to a great ryuer, and in to many waters, and with that it was daye, and the sunne rose vp agayne, And the lowly were exalted, and deuoured ? gloryous and proude.

Now whē Mardoches had sene this dzeme he awoke, and mused stedfastly in his herte, what God wold do: & so he desired to know all the matter, and his mynde was therupon vntyll the nyght.

¶ Mardocheus vttreth the treasō deuysed against the kynge, and is therfoze rewarded of him.

CAPI. XII.

AT the same tyme dwelt Mardocheus with Bagatha and Tares the kynges chamberlayns and pozters of the palace. But when he herde their deuyce, and had diligently conlydzed they? ymaginacyons, he perceyued that they wente about to laye they? cruel handes vpon the kynge Artaxerxes, and so he certified the king thzof. Then caused the kynge to examyn thz two gelded with tormentes. And when they had graunted it, they were put to deth.

This the kyng caused to be put in the Cronicles for an euerlastynge remembraunce, & Mardocheus wrote vp the same matter. So
B the kyng commaunded y Mardocheus shold do seruyce in y court, & for this faythfulnes of his, he gaue him a reward. But Aman the sonne of Amadathu the Agagite, which was holdē in great honour & reputacion in y kinges court vndertoke to hurt Mardocheus & his people, bycause of y two chamberlaynes that were put to deth.

¶ The copye of the leters of Artaxerxes, agaynst the Jewes. The prayer of Mardocheus.

CAPI. XIII.

Hest.i.a / ii.Hest.vii.a — A
The great kyng Artaxerxes which raygneth from India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundred and .xxvii. landes, sendeth his frendly salutacion vnto all the princes and deputyes of the countreys, which be subiect vnto his dominiō. Whē I was made lorde ouer many people, and had subdued the hole erth vnto my domnion, my mynde was not with crueltye and wronge to exalte my self by the reason of my power: but purposed with equitie alwaye and gentlenesse, to gouerne those that be vnder my iurisdiction and holly to set them in a peaceable life, and therby to brynge my kyngdome vnto tranquillitie, that men myght safely go thorowe on euery syde, and to renue peax agayne, whiche all men desyre.

B Now when I asked my counsellers howe these thynges myghte be broughte to a good ende, there was one by vs excellent in wysdome, whose good wyll, truthe, and faythfulnesse hathe ofte bene shewed and proued, (whiche was also the principall and next vnto the kynge) Aman by name: whiche certyfyed vs, howe that in all landes there was crepte in a rebellyous folke that make statutes and lawes against al other people, and haue alwayes despysed the proclaymed commaundementes of kynges, and how that for this cause it were not to be suffred that such rule shoulde contynue by you, and not to be put downe.

C Seynge now we perceyue the same, y this people alone are contrarye vnto euery man, vsyng straunge and other maner of lawes, & withstand our statutes and doynges, and go about to stablish shrewde matters, that our kyngdome sholde neuer come to good estate and stedfastnesse: Therfore haue we commaunded, that al they that are appoynted in wrytyng, & shewed vnto you by Aman (which is ordeyned and set ouer all oure busynesse, and the moost principall next vnto the king, and in maner as a father) shall with their wyues and chyldren be destroyed and roted out with the swerde of theyr ennemyes and aduersaryes: and that there shal be no mercy shewed, and no man spared. And this shal be done in y fourtenth day of the month called Adar, of this yere that they which of old (and nowe also) haue euer bene rebellyous, maye in one daye with vyolence, be thruste downe in to the hell, to the intent that after this maner our empyre maye haue peax and tranquillitie.

D But Mardocheus thoughte vpon all the workes and noble actes of the Lord, & made his prayer vnto hym, saying: O Lord Lord thou valyaunt and almyghty kynge, for all thynges are in thy power, and yf thou wylte helpe and delyuer Israel, there is no mā that can withstāde ne let the: for thou hast made heuen and erth, and what wonderous thyng so euer is vnder the heuen: thou arte Lorde of all thynges, and there is no man that can resyst the, o Lorde. Thou knowest all thynges, thou wotest Lorde, that it was neyther of malice, ne presumpcion, nor for any desire of glorye, that I wolde not bowe downe my selfe, nor worshyp yonder proude presumptuous Aman (for I wolde haue bene contente, and that with good wyll, yf it myghte haue done Israel any good, to haue kyste euen his fotesteppes) but y I dyd it bycause I wolde not set the honoure of a man in the stede of the glorye of God, and bycause I wolde worshyp none but onely the my Lorde. And this haue I done in no pride ne presumpcion.

E And therfore, O Lorde, thou God and kynge, haue mercy vpon thy people, for they ymagin how they may bringe vs to nought, yea, theyr mynde and desyre is to destroye, and to ouerthrowe the people that hathe euer ben thyne inheritaūce of olde. O despyse not thy porcion whiche thou hast deliuered and brought out of Egypte for thyne owne self. Heare my prayer, and be mercyful vnto thy people, whom thou hast chosē for an heritage vnto thy selfe. Turne our complaynt and sorowe in to ioye, that we maye lyue, O Lorde, and prayse thy name. O Lord, suffre not the mouthes of them that prayse the, to be destroyed.

All the people of Israel in like maner cryed as ernestly as they could vnto the Lorde, for theyr death and destruction stode before theyr eyes.

¶ The prayer of Esther, for the delyueraunce of her and her people.

CAPI. XIIII.

A Queene Esther also being in the batell of deth, resorted vnto the Lord, layd awaye her gorgyous apparell, & put on the garmentes that serued for syghyng and mournyng. In the stede of precious oyntment, she scatred asshes and dong vpon her heed: and as for her body, she humbled it and brought it very low. All y places where she was wont to haue ioye afore, those filled she with the tearyng of her heer. She prayed also vnto the Lorde God of Israel, with these wordes.

O my Lorde, thou only art our kyng, help me desolate woman, whiche haue no helper but the, for my mysery & destruction is hard at my hād. Fro my youth vp I haue herd out of the kynred of my father, that thou tokest Israel from amonges al people, and so haue our fathers of their fore elders, y they shold be thy perpetuall inheritaunce, & loke what thou dyddest promyse them, thou haste made it good vnto them.

B Nowe, well Lorde, we haue synned before the, therfore hast thou gyuen vs in to the handes of oure ennemyes, bycause we worshypped theyr goddes. Lorde thou art ryghtous. Neuerthelesse it satisfyeth them not, that we are in bytter and heuye captiuitie, and oppressed amonges theym, but thou haste layde theyr handes vpon the handes of theyr goddes: so that they begyn to take awaye the thynge that thou with thy mouth hast ordeyned and appoynted: to destroye thyne enheritaunce, to shut and to stop the mouthes of them that prayse the, to quenche the glorye & worshyp of thy house and thyne aulter, and to open the mouthes of the Heathē, that they maye prayse the power and vertue of y goddes, and to magnifye the fleshely kynge for euer.

C O Lord, gyue not thy scepter vnto them y be nothynge, leest they laugh vs to scorne in our mysery and fall: but turne their deuice vpon them selues, and punysh hym that hath begon the same ouer vs, and set hym to an example. Thynke vpon vs, o Lorde, and shew thy selfe in the tyme of oure distresse, and of oure trouble. Strengthe me, o thou kynge of goddes, thou Lorde of al power, gyue me an eloquent and pleasaunt speche in my mouthe before the lyon. Tourne his herte in to the hate of our ennemye, to destroye hym, and al suche as consent vnto hym. But delyuer vs with thy hand, and helpe me desolate womā whiche haue no defence nor helper but onely the. Lorde thou knowest all thynges, thou wotest that I loue not the glory and worship of the vnrightous, and that I hate & abhorre the bedde of the vncircumcysed, and of all Heathen.

D Thou knowest and wotest my necessitie, that I hate the token of my preemynence, and worshyp, whiche I beare vpon my heed, what tyme as I muste shewe my selfe and be sene, and that I abhorre it as an vncleane clothe, and that I weare it not when I am quyet and alone by my selfe. Thou knowest also that I thy handemayden haue not eaten at Amans table, and that I haue had no pleasure nor delyte in the kynges feaste, that I haue not dronke the drynkofferynges, and that I thy handemayden haue hadde no ioye sence the daye that I was broughte hyther, vnto this daye, but onely in the o Lorde. O thou God of Abraham, O thou myghtye God aboue al: heare the voyce of them that haue none other hope, and delyuer vs oute of the hande of the wycked, and deliuer me out of my feare.

¶ Mardocheus moueth Hester to go in to the kynge, and make intercessyon for her people, and she performeth his request.

CAPI. XV.

A — i.Hest.v.a
And vpon the thyrde daye it happened that Hester layd awaye the mourning garmentes, and put on her gloryous apparell, and deckte her selfe goodly (after that she had called vpon God, whiche is the beholder and sauyoure of all thynges) toke two maydes with her: vpon the one she leaned her selfe, as one that was tender: the other folowed her, and bare the trayne of her vesture. The shyne of her beautye made her face rose coloured. The symilitude of her face was cherefull and amiable, but her hert was sorowfull for greate feare. She wente in thorowe all the doores, and stode before the kynge. The kynge sate vpon the trone of his kingdome, & was clothed in his goodly araye all of golde, and set with precyous stones, and he was very terrible. He lyfte vp his face that shone in the clerenesse, and loked grymly vpon her. Then fell the quene downe, was pale and faynt, leaned her selfe vpon the heed of the mayde that went with her.

B — Prouer.xii.b
Neuerthelesse God tourned the kynges mynde, that he was gentle, that he lepte out of his seat for fear, and gat her in his armes and helde her vp, tyll she came to her selfe agayne. He haue her louyng wordes also, and sayd vnto her: Hester, what is the mater? I am thy brother, be of good chere, thou shalte not dye: for our commaundement toucheth the commons, not the. Come nye. And with y he held vp his golden wand, and layd it vpō her necke, and embraced her frendly, & sayd: talke with me. Then sayd she: I sawe the, o Lorde, as an aungell of God, & my hert was troubled for feare of thy maiesty and clerenesse. For excellent and wonderful art thou, o Lord, and thy face is ful of amitie. But as she was thus speakynge vnto hym, she fell downe agayne for fayntnes: for the whiche cause the kynge was afrayde, and all his seruauntes comforted her.

¶ The copye of the letters of Artaxerxes, wherby he reuoketh those which he fyrste sent forth.

CAPI. XVI.

The great king Artaxerxes, which raygneth from India vnto Ethiopia ouer an hundred and .xxvii. landes sendeth vnto the princes & rulers of the same landes suche as loue hym, his frendly salutacyon. There be many y for the sondry frendshyppes and benefytes, whiche are dyuersly done vnto theym for theyr worshyp, be euer the more proude and hye minded, and vndertake not onely to hurte oure subiectes, for plenteous benefytes maye they not suffre, and begyn to ymagyn some thynge agaynste those that do them good, and take not only all vnthankfulnes away from men, but in pryde & presumpcion (as they that be vnmindful and vnthankful for ꝑ good dedes) they go about to escape the iudgement of God that seith al thinges, which (iudgement) hateth and punisheth all wickednesse. It happeneth oft also, that they whiche be set in office by ꝑ hyer power, and vnto whom the busines and causes of the subiectes are committed to be handled ware proude, & defile them selues with shedding of innocent bloude, which bringeth the to intollerable hurte. Which also with false and disceptfull wordes, and with lynge tales, disceyue and betraye the innocent goodnesse of princes.

B Now is it profitable & good, that we take hede, make serch therafter, and considre not onely what hathe happened vnto vs of olde, but the shamefull, vnhonest, & noysom thinges that the deputies haue now taken in hand be fore our eyes, and therby to beware in tyme to come, ꝑ we may make the kyngdom quyet and peaceable for al men, and that we might somtyme draw it to a chaūge: and as for the thing that now is present before our eyes, to withstande it, and to put it downe, after the most frendly maner.

Esther.iii.a What tyme nowe as Aman the sonne of Amadathu the Macedonian (a straunger verely of the Perlians bloude and farre from oure goodnesse) was come in amonge vs as an alyaunte, and hadde obteyned the frendshyp that we beare towarde all people, so that he was called our father, and hadde in hye honoure of everye man, as the nexte and principall vnto the kyng, he coulde not forbeare him selfe from his pryde, hath vndertaken not onely to rob vs of the kyngdome, but of our lyfe.

With manyfolde disceyte also hath he desyred to destroy Mardoche⁹ our helper and C preserver, whiche hathe done vs good in all thynges: and innocent Hester the lyke partaker of our kyngdome with all our people. For his mynde was (when ye had take them out of the way, & robbed vs of them) by this meanes to translate the kyngdom of the Persians vnto the of Macedonia. But we fynde that the Jewes (whiche were accused of the wicked, ꝑ they might be destroied) are no evil doers, but vse reasonable and right lawes, & that they be the children of ꝑ most hye living God, by whom the kyngdome of vs, and our progenitours hath ben wel ordred hytherto. Wherfore as for the letters and commaundementes that were put forth by Aman ꝑ son of Amadathu, ye shal do wel yt ye hold them of none effect: for he ꝑ set them vp and inuēted them, hangeth at Sulis before the porte, with all his kynred, and God (which hath al thinges in his power) hath rewarded him after his deseruyng.

And vpon this ye shal publish and set vp ꝑ copy of this letter in all places, ꝑ the Jewes maye frely and withoute hindraunce holde them selues after theyr owne statutes, & that they maye be helped, and that vpon the .xiii. day of the .xii. moneth Adar, they may be auēged of them, which in ꝑ time of their anguish and trouble, wolde haue oppressed them. For the God that gouerneth all thinges hath turned to ioye the day wherin the cholen people shold haue perished. D

Whersoeuer among the hye solemne dayes ꝑ ye haue, ye shall hold this daye also with all gladnesse: that now, and in time to com this day may be a remembraunce to good, for all suche as loue the prosperitie of the Persiās: but a remembraunce of destruction to those ꝑ be sedicious vnto vs.

All cities and landes that do not this, shal horribly perysshe and be destroyed with the swerde and fyre, and shall not onely be no more inhabyted of men, but be abhorred also of the wylde beastes and foules.

¶ The ende of the rest of the boke of Esther.

THE BOOKE OF VVYSDOME.

¶ How we oughte to searche and enquyre after God, and who be those that fynde him. Of the holy ghost We ought to flye from backbityng and murmuryng. &c.

CAPI. I.

A Set youre affection vpon wysdome, ye that be iudges of the erath. Haue a good opynyon of the Lord and seke him in the singlenesse of herte. For he wyll be fownd of them that tempt him not, and appereth vnto such as put theyr trust in him. But the frowarde thoughtes they seperate from God, and vertue (if it be alowed) refourmeth the vnwyse. And why? wysdome shall not entre in to a frowarde soule, ne dwell in the body that is subued vnto synne. For the holye ghost abhorreth fayned nurtoure, and withdraweth hym self from the thoughtes that are wythout vnderstandynge: and where wickednesse hath the vpperhande, he fleeth from thence. For the spirite of wysdom is louyng, gentle and gracious, and wyll haue no pleasure in him that speaketh euyll with his lyppes. For God is a wytnesse of his reynes, a true sercher oute of his herte, and an hearer of his tonge. For the spirite of the Lorde fylleth the rounde compasse of the worlde, and the same that vpholdeth al thinges, hath knowledge also of the voyce.

B Therfore he that speaketh vnrighteous thynges, can not be hyd, neyther maye he escape the iudgement of reproffe. And why? inquision shall be made for the thoughtes of the vngodly, and the reporte of his wordes shall come vnto God, so that his wickednes shalbe punyshed. For the care of gelousy heareth all thynges, and the noyse of the grudginges, shall not be hyd. Therfore beware of murmuryng, whiche is nothynge worth and refrayne youre tonge frome sclaundre. For here is no worde so darcke and secrete, that it shal go for nought: & the mouth that speaketh lyes, slayth the soule.

C Seke not your owne death in the errour of your lyfe, destroye not your selues throwe the workes of your owne handes. For God hath not made death, neither hath he pleasure in the destruction of the lyuynge. For he created all thinges, that they myght haue their beynge: yea all the people of the earth hath he made that they should haue health, that there should be no destruction in them, and ꝑ the kyngdome of hell shoulde not be vpon earth (for ryghtousnesse is euerlastynge and immortall, but vnrighteousnesse bryngeth death.) Neuertheless, the vngodly call her vnto them, bothe with wordes and workes, and whyle they thynche to haue a frende of her, they come to nought: for ꝑ vngodly that are confederate with her and take her parte: are worthy of death.

¶ The ymaginacyons and desyres of the wycked, and theyr counsell agaynst the faythfull.

CAPI. II.

For the vngodly talke and ymagin, thus among them selues (but not ryght) The tyme of our life is but shorte and tedyous, and when a man is onse gone, he hath no more iope ne pleasure, neither know we any man that turneth agayne frome death for we are borne of nought and we shall be hereafter as though we had neuer bene. For our breth is a smoke in our nostrels, and the wordes as a sparcke to moue oure herte. As for oure body, it shall be very ashes that are quenched, and oure soule shall vanyth as the soft ayre. Oure lyfe shall passe awaye as the trace of a cloude, and come to nought as the mysle that is dryuen awaye with the beames of the sunne, and put downe with the heate therof. Our name also shall be forgotten by lytle & lytle and no man shal haue our workes in rem embraunce. A Job.viii.a Math.xxii.b 1.Corint.xv.b

B For oure tyme is a very shadow that passeth awaye, and after our ende, there is no returnynge, for it is fast sealed, so that no man commeth agayne. Come on therfore, let vs enioye the pleasures that be presente, and let vs soone vse ꝑ creature lyke as in youth. We wyll fyll oure selues with good wyne and oyntment, there shall no floure of the tyme go by vs. We wyll crowne oure selues with roses afore they be wythered. There shall be no fayre medow, but our lust shal go thorow it. Let euery one of you be partaker of oure voluptousnesse. Let vs leaue some token of oure pleasure in euery place, for that is oure porcyon, els get we nothyng. Let vs oppresse the poore righteous, let vs not spare the wydowe ne old man, let vs not regarde ꝑ heedes that are gray for age. ii.Para.xxx.c Esay.xxii.b and.xvi.c Sapie.v.b

Let the lawe of vnrighteousnesse be oure auctorytye, for the thynge that is feble is nothynge worth. Therfore let vs defraude the ryghteous, and why? he is not for our profyt, yea he is cleane contrary to our doynges. He C checketh vs for offendynge agaynste the law, and shlaundreth vs as trasgressoures of all nurture. He maketh his boaste to haue the knowledge of God, yea he calleth hym selfe Gods sonne. He is ꝑ bewrayer of our thoughtes: It greueth vs also to loke vpon him, for his lyfe is not lyke other mens, his wayes are of an other fashyon. He counteth vs but vayne persōs, he withdraweth him self from oure wayes as from fylthynesse: he commendeth greatly the latter ende of the iust, and maketh his boaste that God is his father. Let vs se then yf his wordes be treme, let vs proue what shall come vpon him: so shall we knowe what ende he shall haue. Jeh.vii.a Esay.lvii.a

For yf he be the true sonne of God, he D wyll

wyll receyue hym and delyuer hym from the handes of his enemyes. Let vs examen hym [Psalm.xxi.a Mat.xxvii.e Jerem.xi.d] with despytefull rebuke and tormentynge, yͤ we may know his dignite, and proue his pacience. Let vs condemne hym with the moste shamefull death: for lyke as he hath spoken, so shall he be rewarded.

Suche thynges do the vngodly ymagyn, and go astraye, for theyr owne wyckednesse hath blynded them. As for the mysteryes of God, they vnderstand them not: they neither hope for the rewarde of ryghtousnesse, ne regarde the worship that holy soules shal haue. [Gene.i.a Gen.iii.a Johñ.viii.d] For God created man to be vndestroyed, yea after the ymage of his owne lykenesse made he hym. Neuerthelesse, thorow enuye of the deuyll, came death vnto yͤ world, and they that holde of his syde, do as he doth.

¶ The conseruacyon and assuraunce of yͤ ryghtous. The rewarde of the faythfull.

CAPI. III.

A [Deute.xxxii.a Sapien.v.a Hebr.xi.f] But the soules of the ryghteous are in yͤ hande of God, and the payne of death shall not touche them. In the syght of the vnwyse they appeare to dye, and theyr ende is taken for very destruction. The waye of the ryghtous is iudged to be vtter destruction, but they are in rest. And though they suffer payne before men, yet is theyr hope ful of immortalytye. [Roma.viii.c i.Corin.v.a i.Petri.i.c] They are punysshed but in fewe thinges, neuerthelesse, in many thinges shall they be well rewarded. For God proueth them, and fyndeth them mete for hym selfe: yea as the golde in the fornace doeth he trye them, and receyueth them as a brente offrynge, and when the tyme commeth: they shall be loked vpon.

The ryghtous shall shyne as the sparkes B that ren thorow the red busshe. They shall [Math.xiii.c Corinth.xv.e Math.xix.c i.Corin.vi.a] iudge the nacyons, and haue dominion ouer the people, and theyr Lorde shall raygne for euer. They that put theyr trust in him, shall vnderstand the truthe, and suche as be faythfull, wyl agree vnto him in loue: for his chosen shall haue gyftes and peace. [Math.xxv.d] But the vngodly shall be punysshed accordynge to theyr owne ymaginacyons, for they haue despysed the ryghtous, and forsaken the Lorde.

Who so despyseth wysdome and nurtoure, he is vnhappye, and as for the hope of suche, it is but vayne, their laboures vnfruteful, and theyr workes vnprofitable. Theyr wyues are vndescrete, and theyr chyldren moost vngodly. Theyr creature is cursed. Blessed is rather the baren and vndefyled, whiche hathe not knowen the synfull bedde: she shall haue frute in the rewarde of the holy soules. And [Esay.lvi.b] blessed is the gelded, whiche with his handes hath wrought no vnryghtousnesse, ne ymagined wycked thynges agaynst God. For vnto hym shall be gyuen the specyall gyfte of fayth, and the most acceptable porcyon in yͤ temple of God. For gloryous is the frute of C good laboure, and the rote of wysdome shall neuer fade awaye.

As for the chyldren of aduouterers, they shal come to an ende, & the sede of an vnryghtous bed shall be roted out. And though they lyue longe, yet shall they be nothynge regarded and theyr last age shall be without honoure. Yf they dye hastely, they haue no hope, neyther shal they be spokẽ to in the day of knowledge. For horryble is the death and ende of the vnryghtous.

¶ Of the chaste generacion of the faythfull, and of their felycitye. Of the death of the ryghtous and of the condempnacion of the vnfaythfull.

CAPI. IIII.

O howe fayre is a chaste generacyon wᵗ vertue? The memoryall therof is immortall, A for it is knowen with good men. When it is present, men take example therat: and yf it go away, yet they desyre it. It is alway crowned and holden in honour and wynneth the rewarde of the vndefyled battayle. But yͤ multytude of vngodly chyldren is vnprofytable, and the thynges that are planted with horedome, shal take no depe rote, ne laye any fast foundacion. Thoughe they be grene in the braunches for a tyme, yet [Jerem.xvii.b Malach.i.a Math.vii.c] shal they be shaken with the wynde for they stand not fast, and thorow the vehemence of the wynde they shall be roted out. For the vnperfect braunches shall be broken, their frute shal be vnprofytable and sowre to eat, yea mete for nothynge. And why? all the chyldren that are borne of the wicked, must beare recorde of the wyckednesse agaynste their fathers and mothers, whẽ they be asked. But though the ryghtous be ouertaken wᵗ death yet shall he be in rest.

Age is an honourable thynge Neuerthe- B [Age.] les it standeth not only in the length of time ne the multytude of yeares: but a mans wisdome is the graye heer, and an vndefiled life is the olde age. He pleased God, and was beloued of him: so that where as he lyued amonges synners, he translated him. Yea sodenly was he taken away, [Hebr.xi.b] to the intent that wickednesse shulde not alter his vnderstandynge, and that ypocresye shulde not begyle his soule. For the craftye bewytchyng of lyes make good thinges darcke, the vnstedfastnesse also and wickednesse of voloptuous desyre turne asyde the vnderstandynge of the symple. Though he was soone dead, yet fulfylled he moch tyme. For his soule pleased God therfore hasted he to take hym awaye frõ amonges the wycked. This the people se and vnderstande it not: they lay not vp such thinges in theyr hertes, how that the louing fauoure and mercye of God is vpon his saintes, and that he hath respecte vnto his chosen.

Thus the ryghtous that is deed, condemneth C the vngodly whiche are lyuynge: and the youth that is soone brought to an ende, the longe lyfe of the vnryghteous. For they se the ende of the wyse, but they vnderstand not what God hath deuised for him, & wherfore the Lorde hath taken hym awaye. And why? they se hym and despyse hym, therfore [Psalm.ii.] shall God also laugh them to scorne: So yͤ they them selues shall dye hereafter (but without honoure) yea in shame amonge the deed for euermore. For withoute any voyce, shall he burst those that be put vp, & remoue them from the foundacyons, so that thy shal be layed waste vnto the hyest. They shall mourne, and theyr memoryall shall perysshe. So they beyng afrayed shall remembre theyr synnes, and theyr owne wyckednesse shall bewraye them.

¶ The constauntnesse of the ryghtous before their persecuters. The hope of the vnfaythfull is vndurable and vayne. The blessednesse and fortunatenesse of the sayncts and godly.

CAPI. V.

A [illegible] Then shall yͤ ryghtuous stande in greate stedfastnesse, agaynste suche as haue dealt extremely with them, and taken awaye theyr laboures. When they se it, they shall be vexed with horryble feare, and shall wonder at the hastynesse of the sodayn helth: gronyng for very destresse of mynde, and shal saye within them selues, hauynge inwarde sorow, and mournyng for very anguysshe of mynde.

These are they, whom we somtyme had in derisyon, & iested vpon. We fooles thought [illegible] theyr lyfe very madnesse, and their ende to be without honoure. But lo, how they are coũted among yͤ chyldren of God, and their porcyon is amonge the sayncts. Therfore we haue erred from the way of truth, the lyghte of ryghtousnesse hathe not shyned vnto vs, and the sunne of vnderstandyng, rose not vp vpon vs. We haue weryed our selues in the waye of wyckednesse and destruction. Tedious wayes haue we gone: but the way of the Lorde we haue not knowen.

B What good hath our pryde done vnto vs? Or what profyte hath the pompe of rychesse brought vs? All those thynges are passed awaye [illegible] lyke a shadow, and as a messenger rennynge before: as a shyp that passeth ouer the waues of water, whiche when it is gone by, the trace therof can not be founde, neither the path of it in the floudes. Or as a byrde that flyeth thorow the ayre, and no man can se eny token where she is flowen, but only heareth the noyce of her wynges, beatynge the lyght wynde, partynge the ayre thorowe the vehemence of her flyghte, and flyeth on shakynge her wynges, where as afterwarde no token of her waye can be founde. Or lyke as when an arrowe is shot at a marcke, it parteth the ayre, whiche immediatly commeth togyther agayne, so that a man can not knowe where it went thorow. Euen so we in lyke maner as soone as we were borne, began immediatlye to drawe to our ende, and haue shewed no token of vertue, but are consumed in our owne wyckednesse.

Such wordes shall they that haue synned C speake in the hell: [Job.viii.a Psal.i.b Prouer.x.d and.xi.a Jacob.i.b] for the hope of the vngodly is lyke a drye thistell floure (or dust) yͤ is blowen awaye with the wynde: lyke as thyn scom that is scatered abrode with the storme, lyke as the smoke whiche is dispersed here and there with the wynde, & as the remembraunce of a straunger that taryeth for a daye, & then departeth. But the ryghtous [Psal.xxxix.a] shall lyue for euermore: their reward also is with the Lorde: and their remembraunce wᵗ the hyghest. Therfore shal they receyue a gloryous kyngdome and a beautyfull crowne of the Lordes hande: for with his right hãd shall he couer thẽ, and with his owne arme shall he defende them. His gelousy also shall take harnesse, and shall arme the creature to be auenged of the enemyes. [Ephe.vi.b] He shall put on ryghtousnesse for a brest plate, and take sure iudgemẽt in stede of an helmet. The inuincible shylde of equitie shall he take, his cruelly wrath shall he sharpen for a speare, and the hole compasse of the world shall fyght with hym agaynst the vnwyse.

Then shall the thonder boltes go oute of the lyghtenynges, and come out of the raynbowe D of the cloudes to the place appoynted out of the harde stony indignacion there shal fall thycke hayles, and the water of the see shal be wroth agaynst them, and the floudes shall renne roughly togyther. Yea a myghtye wynde shall stande vp agaynst them, and a storme shall scatre them abrode. Thus the vnryghtous dealynge of them shall brynge all the lande to a wyldernes, and and wyckednesse shall ouerthrow the dwellynges of the mightye.

¶ The callinge of Kynges, Princes, and Judges: whiche are also exhorted to search wysdome.

CAPI. VI.

A [wysdome.] Wysdome is better then strength, and a man of vnderstandynge is more worth then one that is stronge. [Eccle.ix.d Psalm.ii.b Kynges. Roma.xiii.a] Heare therfore (O ye kynges) and vnderstand: O lerne ye that be iudges of the endes of the earthe. Gyue eare ye that rule the multytudes, and delyte in moche people. For the power is geuen you of the Lord, & the strength from the hyghest: whiche shall trye youre workes & serche out youre ymagynacions. How that ye beynge offycers of his kyngdom, haue not executed true iudgement, haue not kepte the lawe of ryghtousnes, nor walked after his wyll. Horrybly and that ryght soone shal he B appeare vnto you: for an harde iudgemente shall they haue that beare rule. Mercye is graunted vnto the symple, but they that be [Eccle.x.e] in auctorytye shal be sore punysshed. For God whiche is Lorde ouer all, shall excepte no mans person, neither shal he stande in awe of any mans greatnesse: for he hathe made the small and greate, and careth for all alike. But the myghtye shal haue the sorer punisshment.

Unto you therfore (O ye kynges) do I speake

speake, that we may lerne wysdome and not go amysse: for they that kepe ryghteousnesse, shall be ryghteously iudged: and they that are lerned in ryghteous thynges, shall fynde to make answere. Wherfore set youre lust vpon my wordes, and loue them, so shall ye come by nurtoure. Wysdome is a noble thyng, and neuer fadeth awaye: yea she is easely sene of them y loue her, and found of such as seke her.
C She preuenteth them that desyre her, that she may fyrst shewe her selfe vnto them. Who so awaketh vnto her bytymes, shall haue no great trauayle, for he shall fynde her syttyng redye at his dores. To thynke vpon her, is parfect vnderstanding, and who so watcheth for her, shall be safe, and that soone. For she goeth aboute, sekynge suche as are mete for her, sheweth her selfe cherefullye vnto them in theyr goynges, and meteth them with all diligence. For the vnfayned desyre of refourmacyon is her begynnynge: to care for nur-toure is loue, and loue is the kepynge of her lawes. Now the kepyng of lawes is perfectifare of the worlde, and a wyse kynge is the

CAPI. VII.

A I My selfe also am a mortall man, lyke as all other, and am come of the earthy generacyon of hym that was fyrst made, and in my mothers wombe was I fashyoned to be fleshe: In the tyme of ten monethes, was I brought togyther in blood, thorow the sede
of man, and y commodious appetite of slepe.
When I was borne, I receyued lyke ayre as other men, and fell vpon the earth (whiche is my nature) cryinge and weppynge at the first,
as all other do. I was wrapped in swadlyng clothes, and broughte vp with greate cares.
For ther is no kyng that hath had any other begynnyng of byrth. All men then haue one entraunce vnto lyfe, and one goynge out in Job.i.c lyke maner.
i.Tim.vi.b Wherfore I desyred, and vnderstandynge
B was gyuen me: I called, & the spirite of wysdome came into me. I set more by her then by kyngdomes and royall seates, and counted ryches nothynge in comparyson of her.
As for precyous stone I compared it not vn- Job.xxviii to her: for all golde is grauell vnto her, and syluer shall be counted but claye before her syght. I loued her aboue welfare and beauty and purposed to take her for my lyghte, for her shyne can not be quenched. All good thin iii.Reg.iii ges came to me with her, and innumerable Math.vi ryches thorowe her handes. I was glad in them all, for this wysdome went before me, and I knewe not that she is my mother of al
good thynges. Nowe as I my selfe learned vnfaynedly, so do I make other men parta-kers of her, and hyde her ryches from no mã
for she is an infynyte treasure vnto men, whi che who so vse, becom partakers of the loue
and frendshyp of God, and are excepted vn-
to hym for the gyftes of wysdome.
God hath graunted me to talke wysely, & C conueniently to handle the thynges that he hath gracyously lent me. For it is he y ledeth vnto wysdome, and teacheth to vse wysdom
a ryght. In his hande are we and oure wor- Sapien.iii.a des, yea all oure wysdome, oure vnderstan-dynge and knowledge of al our workes. For he hath gyuen me the true scyence of these thynges: so that I knowe how the worlde was made, and the powers of the elementes
the begynnynge, endyng and myddest of the tymes: howe the tymes alter, how one goeth after an other, and how they are fulfilled
the course of the yeare: the ordynaunces of the starres: the natures and kyndnesse of beastes: the furyousnes of beastes: the power of the wyndes by the ymagynacyons of men: the dyuersityes of yonge plantes, the vertues of rotes, and all such thynges as are secret and not loked for, haue I learned. for the workmaster of all thynges hath taught me wysdome. D
In her is the spirite of vnderstãdyng, which is holy, manyfolde, one onely, subtyll curteous, discrete, quyck, vndefyled, plaine, swete, louinge, the thynge that is good, sharpe,
which forbyddeth not to doo well, gentle,
kynde, stedfast, sure, free: hauyng al vertues, circumspecte in all thynges, receyuynge all spirites of vnderstandynge beynge cleane & sharpe. For wysdom is nymbler then al nim ble thynges: she goeth thorowe and attayneth to all thynges, because of her clennes.
For she is the breth of the power of God, &
a pure cleane expressyng of the clearenesse of Hebr.i.a almyghty God. Therfore can no vndefyled thynge come vnto her: for she is the bryghtnesse of the euerlastynge lyght, the vndefy-led myrroure of the maiesty of God, and the E
ymage of his goodnesse.
And for so moch as she is one, she may do al
thinges: and beynge stedfast her selfe she reneweth all, and amonge the people conueyeth
she her selfe in to the holy soules. She ma-keth Gods frendes and prophetes: for God
loueth no man, but hym in whome wysdom dwelleth. For she is more beautyfull then the Sunne, and gyueth more lyght then the star

res, and the daye is not to be compared vnto her: for vpon the daye commeth nyght. But wyckednesse can not ouercome wysdome, and foolyshnesse maye not be with her.

¶ The effectes of wysdome.

CAPI VIII.

A Wysdome reacheth from one ende to an other myghtyly, and louyngly doth she ordre all thynges. I haue loued her and laboured for her euen fro my youth vp: I did my diligence to mary my selfe with her, suche loue had I vnto her beautie. Who so hath the company of God, commendeth her nobilite, yea the Lorde of all thynges him selfe, loue
her. For she is the scholemastresse of the nur-toure of God, and the choser out of his wor-
kes. Yf a man wold desyre ryches in this life:
what is rycher then wysdome, that worketh
all thynges? Thou wylt saye: vnderstanding worketh. What is it among all thinges, that worketh more then wysdome? If a man loue vertue and ryghteousnesse, let hym labour for wysdome, for she hathe greate vertues. And why? she teacheth sobrenesse and prudence, ryghteousnesse and strength, whiche are suche thinges as men can haue nothinge more profytable in theyr lyfe.
B If a man desyre moche knowledge, she can tell the thynges that are past, and dyscerne thynges for to come: she knoweth the subtyl-tyes of wordes, and can expounde darke sentences. She can tell of tokens & wonderous thynges, or euer they come to passe, and the endes of al tymes & ages. So I purposed after this maner: I wyll take her vnto my com pany, and cõmen louingly with her: no doubt,
she shall gyue me good counsell, and speake comfortably vnto me in my carefulnesse and grefe. For her sake shall I be wel and honestly taken, amonge the cõmens and lordes of the counsell. Though I be young, yet shall I haue sharpe vnderstandynge, so that I shall be merueIous in the syght of greate men, and the faces of Prynces shall wonder at me.
When I holde my tonge, they shall byde my leasure: when I speake, they shall loke vpon me: and yf I talke moch, they shal laye theyr
handes vpon theyr mouth.
Moreouer by the meanes of her, I shall obtayne immortalytye, and leaue behynde me an euerlastyng memoriall, amonge them that come after me. I shall set the people in ordre, and the nacyons shall be subdued vnto
me. Horryble tyrauntes shal be afrayed, whẽ they do but heare of me: amonge the multitude I shall be counted good, and myghtye in battayl. When I come home, I shal finde rest with her: for her companye hath no bytternes, & her felowshyp hath no tedyousnesse,
but myrth and ioye.
Now when I consydered these thynges
C by my selfe, and pondered them in my herte,
how that to be ioyned vnto wysdome is immortalytye, & greate pleasure to haue her frẽd-shyp: how that in the workes of her handes are infynyte ryches: how that, who so kepeth cõpany with her shall be wyse: and that he whiche talketh with her, shall come to ho-noure: I went about sekynge, to get her vn to me. For I was a chylde of a rype wit, and had a good vnderstandynge.
But when I grew to more vnderstanding
I came to an vndefyled body. Neuerthelesse:
when I perceyued that I could not kepe my selfe chaste, except God gaue it me (and that Jacob.i.b
was a poynt of wisdom also to know whose Chastitye.
gyfte it was) I stepte vnto the Lorde, and besought hym, and with my hole hert I said
after this maner.

CAPI. X.

Gene.i.d and.ii.d — Gene.iiii.b — Ge.vi.vii.viii — Gene.xix

A Wysdome preserued the fyrst man, whom God made a father of the worlde, whẽ he was created alone, brought him out of his offence, toke hym out of the moulde of the earth, & gaue hym power to rule all thinges. When the vnryghtous wente awaye in his wrath from this wysdome, the brotherhed perysshed thorow the wrath of murther. Agayne, when the water destroyed the hole world, wysdome preserued the ryghtous thorowe a poore tree, wherof she was gouerner her selfe. Moreouer when wyckednesse had gotten the vpper hande, so that the nacyons were puft vp with pryde, she knewe the ryghtous, preserued him fautlesse vnto God, and layed vp sure mercy for his children. She preserued the ryghtous, when he fled frome the
B vngodly that perysshed, what tyme as ẏ fyre fel downe vpon the fyue cyties: Lyke as yet this daye ẏ vnfrutefull, waste, and smokyng land gyueth testimony of theyr wyckednesse: yea the vnrype and vntymely frutes ẏ grow vpon the trees.

And for a token of a remembraunce of the vnfaythfull soule, there standeth a pyllar of salt. For all such as regarded not wysdom gat not only this hurte, that they knew not the thynges whiche were good, but also lefte behynd them vnto men, a memoriall of theyr foolyshnesse: so that in the thynges wherin they synned, they coulde not be hyd. But as for such as take hede vnto wysdome, she shal
C delyuer them from sorow.

Gen.xxviii.d — When the ryghtous fled bycause of his brothers wrath, wysdome led him the ryght waye, shewed hym the kyngdome of God, gaue him knowledge of holy thynges, made hym ryche in his labours, and broughte to passe the thynges that he wente aboute. In the disceytfulnesse of such as defrauded hym, she stode by hym and made hym ryche. She saued hym from the enemyes, and defended him frõ the disceyuers. She made him strong in battayll, and gaue hym the vyctorye, that he myght know, how that wysdome is stronger thẽ al thynges. Gene.xxxvii.e Act.vii.b When the ryghtous was solde, she forsoke hym not, but delyuered him from synners. She went downe with him in to ẏ dongeon, and fayled hym not in the bandes: tyll she had brought him the sceptre of ẏ realme, and power agaynst those that oppressed hym. Gene.xli.f And those that had accused hym, she declared them to be lyers, and brought hym to perpetuall worship.

She delyuered the ryghtous people and fautles sede, frome the nacion that oppressed them. D Exod.iii. & iiii.v.vi.ix. She entred into the soule of the seruaunt of God, and stode by him in wonders and tokens agaynste the horryble kinge. She gaue the rightous the rewarde of their laboures, and led thẽ forthe a merueylous waye: on the daye tyme she was a shadowe vnto them, & a lyght of starres in the nyght season. Exodi.xiiii.f She brought them thorow the redde see and caried them thorow the great water. She drowned their ennemyes in the see, and brought them out of the depe. So the ryghtous toke the spoyles of the vngodly, & praysed thy holy name, O Lorde, and magnyfyed thy vyctoryous hande with one accorde. Exodi.xv.a Psalm.viii.a Math.xi.b For wysdom openeth the mouth of the dom, and maketh the tonges of babes to speake.

¶ The myracles done for Israel. The vengeaunce of synners. The great power and mercy of God.

CAPI. XI.

E Exodi.xvii.a She ordred their workes in the handes of the holy prophete: so that they went thorowe the wyldernesse that was not inhabyted, & pitched their tẽtes in the waste deserte. They stode agaynste their ennemyes and were auẽged of their aduersaryes. Exodi.xvii. Whẽ they were thirstye, they called vpon the, and water was gyuen them out of the rock, and their thyrst slakened out of the harde stone. For by the thynges, where thorowe their ennemyes were punysshed, were they helped in their nede. For vnto the ennemyes thou gauest mans bloude in stede of lyuynge water. And where as they had scarcenes in ẏ rebuke when the chyldren were slayne, thou gauest vnto thyne owne a plẽteous water vnloked for: declarynge by the thyrste that was at ẏ tyme, how thou woldest brynge thyne owne vnto honoure, and slaye their aduersaryes.

B Deute.viii. For when they were tryed and nourtured with fatherly mercy, they knowledged how the vngodly were iudged, and punisshed thorow ẏ wrath of God. These hast ẏ exhorted as a father, & proued them: but vnto the other thou hast bene a boysterous kynge, layd harde to their charge, and condemned them. Whether they were absent or present, theyr punysshment was alyke. For their grefe was double: namely, mournynge, and the remembraunce of thynges past. But when they perceyued that their punysshmentes dyd them good, they thought vpon the Lorde, & wondered at the ende. For at the last they helde moch of hym, of whome in the oute castyng they thoughte scorne, as of an ablecte.

Neuertheles the rightous dyd not so whe they were thirsty: but euẽ like as the thought of the folish were, so was also their wyckednes. Sapien.xii. Roma.i. Where as certayne men (thorow errour) dyd worshyp domme serpentes & C vayne beastes, thou sendedst a multytude of domme beastes vpon them for a vengeaunce that they myght know that wherwith a mã synneth, by ẏ same also shall he be punisshed. For vnto the almyghty hand, that made the worlde of nought, it was not vnpossible to send among them an heape of beeres, or wod lyons, or cruell beestes of a straunge kynde, suche as are vnknowen, or spout fyre, or cast out a smokyng breth, or shote horrible sparkes out of their eyes, which myght not only destroy them with hurtyng, but also kyll thẽ with their horrible syght. Yea without these beastes myght they haue ben slayne with one wynde, beyng persecuted of their owne workes, and scatred abrode thorow the breth of thy power.

Neuertheles thou hast ordred al thinges in D measure nombre and weight: for ẏ hast euer had gret strẽgth and might, and who may wt stand ẏ power of thine arme? And why? like as the smal thing that the balaũce weyeth, so is the world before the: yea as a drop of the mornyng dewe, that falleth downe vpon the erth. Thou hast mercy vpon al, for thou hast power of al thinges, & makest the, as though thou sawest not the synnes of men, bycause they sholde amende. For thou louest al ẏ thinges that are, and hatest none of them whome thou hast made: neither diddest thou ordeyn or make any thyng of euyl wyll.

How might any thinges endure, yf it were not thy wyll? Or how coulde any thynge be preserued, except it were called of the? But thou sparest al, for al are thine, o Lord, thou louer of soules

¶ The mercye of God towarde synners, the workes of God are vnreprouable. God gyueth leysure to repent vs.

CAPI. XII.

A O Lorde, how gracious and swete is thy spirite in all thynges? Therfore chastenest thou them measurably that go wrong, & warnest them concerning the thinges wherin they offende: thou speakest vnto them, o Lord, & exhortest them to leaue theyr wickednes, and put their trust in the. As for those old inhabiters of thy holy land, ẏ mightest not away with them, for they cõmytted abhominable workes agaynst the: as witchcraft, sorcery and ydolatry: they slew their own childzen wtout mercy, they ate vp mens bowels, and deuoured the bloud: yea bicause of such abhominacions, misbileues & offringes, thou slewest the fathers of ẏ desolat soules by the hãdes of our fore fathers, that the land which thou louest aboue al other might be a dwelling for the children of God.

B Neuerthelesse thou sparedst them also, as men, & sendedst the forerunners of thine host euen hornettes to destroye them out by lytle and litle. Not that thou wast vnhable to subdue the vngodly vnto the rightous in batell, or with cruell beastes, or with one roughe worde to destroye them togyther: But thy mynd was to dryue them out by litle & litle, gyuing them time and place to amend, knowing wel that it was an vnrightous naciõ, and wycked of nature, & that theyr thoughte myght neuer be altered: for it was a cursed sede from the begynnyng, and feared no mã: yet hast thou pardoned their sines. For who wil saye vnto the: why hast thou done that? Or who wil stande agaynst thy iudgement? Or who wil come before thy face, an auẽger of vnrightous men? Or who wil blame ẏ, yf C the people perysshe whome thou hast made? For there is none other God but thou, that carest for all thinges: that ẏ mayste declare i.Petri.v.b how ẏ thy iudgement is not vnryght: there dare neither kyng ne tyraunt in thy syght requyre accomptes of them whom thou hast destroyed.

For so moch then as thou art rightous thy selfe, thou ordrest all thynges ryghtously, & Job.ix.b punysshest euen hym that haue not deserued to be punisshed, and takest hym for a straunger and an alyaũt in the land of thy power. For thy power is the begynnyng of rightousnesse: and bicause thou art Lorde of al thinges, therfore art ẏ gracious vnto all. When men thynke the not to be of a full strengthe, thou declarest thy power, and boldly deliuerest thou them ouer that knowe the not. But thou Lord of power iudgest quyetly, and ordrest vs with great worshyp, for thou maist do as thou wylt.

D By such workes now hast thou taught thy people, that a man also sholde be iust and louynge, and hast made thy chyldren to be of a good hope: for euen when thou iudgest, thou gyuest rowme to amend from synnes. For in so moche as thou hast punisshed, and wt such diligence delivered ẏ enemies of thy seruauntes which were worthy to dye (wherthorow thou gauest them tyme and place of amendment, that they might turne frõ their wickednesse) with how great diligence then punysshest thou thyne owne chyldren vnto whose fathers thou hast sworne and made couenauntes of good promyses? so where as thou doest but chasten vs, thou punisshest our ennemyes dyuers wayes, to the intent ẏ when we punish, we shold remembre thy goodnesse: & when we our selues are punisshed, to put our trust in thy mercy.

E Wherfore where as men haue lyued ignorauntly and vnrightously thou hast punisshed them sore, euẽ thorow the same thynges that Sapien.xi.c Roma.i.c they worshipped: for they went astray very long in the way of errour, and held the beastes (which euen their ennemies despised) for goddes, lyuyng as chyldren of no vnderstãdyng. Therfore hast thou sent a scornful punishment among them, as among the childrẽ of ignoraunce. As for suche as wolde not be refourmed by those scornes & rebukes, they felt the worthy punishment of God. For the thinges that they suffred, they bare them vnpaciently, being not content in them, but vnwillyng. And whẽ they perished by the same thiges that they toke for goddes, they knowleged then that there was but one true God, whome afore they wolde not knowe: therfore came the ende of their damnacion vpon them.

¶ All thynges be vayne, except the knowledge of God. Idolaters and Idols are mocked.

CAPI. XIII.

A Vayne are all men, whiche haue not the knowlege of God: as were they that out of the good thiges, which are sene knewe not hym, that of hym selfe is euerlastynge. Neyther toke they so moche regarde of the workes y are made, as to knowe who was the craftesman of them: but some toke the fire, some the wind or ayre, some y course of the sterres, some the water, some toke sun and moone, or the lyghtes of heauen, whiche rule the earth for goddes. But thoughe they had suche pleasure in their beauty, that they thought them to haue ben goddes, yet sholde they haue knowen howe moche more fayrer he is that made them: for the maker of beauty hath ordeyned al these thinges. Or if they marueled, at the power and workes of them they shoulde haue perceyued therbye that he whiche made these thinges is myghtyer then they.

Roma.i.c
Vayne philosophers.

B For by the greatnes and beauty of the creature, y maker therof may plainly be knowē. Notwithstanding they are the lesse to be blamed that sought God, and wold haue found him, and yet missed, and why? for in as moch as they went about in his workes, & soughte after them, it is a token that they regarded & held moche of his workes that are sene, how be it, they are not holly to be excused. For yf their vnderstandinge and knowlege was so great, that they coulde discerne the world & the creatures, why dyd they not rather fynd out the Lorde therof.

Roma.i.c

But vnhappy are they, and among y deed is their hope that call them goddes, whiche are but the workes of mens handes: golde, syluer, and the thing that is found out by cūning, the similitude of beestes, or any vayne stone that hath ben made by hand of old. Or as when a carpenter cutteth downe a tre out of the wod, and pareth of the barke of it cunnyngly, and so with the one parte maketh a vessel to be vsed, and dresseth meate with the residue. C As for y other part that is left, whiche is profitable for nothing (for it is a croked pece of wod and full of knobbes) he carueth it diligently thorow his vanitie, and according to the knowlege of his cunninge, he giueth it some proporcion, facioneth it after y similitude of a man, or maketh it like some beest, streketh it ouer with red, and paynteth it, and loke what foule spot is i it, he casteth some colour vpon it.

He mocketh the ydolaters.

Then maketh he a conuenient tabernacle for it, setteth it i the wal, and maketh it fast with yron, prouiding so for it, lest it happen to fall, for it is well knowen that it can not helpe it selfe. And why? it is but an ymage, & must of necessitie be helped.

D Then goeth he and offreth of his goodes vnto it, for his children, and for his wife, he seketh helpe at it, he asketh counsel at it, he is not ashamed to speke vnto it that hath no soule, for helth: he maketh his peticion vnto him that is syk, for life: he prayeth vnto him that is deed: he calleth vpon him for helpe, that is not hable to helpe hym selfe, & to send hym a good iourney, he prayeth hym y maye not go. And in all the thynges that he taketh in hande (whether it be to obteyn any thyng or to work) he prayeth vnto him that can do no maner of good.

¶ The detestacion and abhominacion of ymages. A curse of them and of him that maketh them. The euyls that come of Idolatrye.

CAPI. XIIII.

A Agayne, an other man purposynge to sayle, and begynnyng to take his iourney thorow the ragyng see, calleth for helpe vnto a stocke that is farre weyker thē the tree that beareth him. For as for it couetousnesse of money hath founde it oute, & the crafftesman made it with his connynge. But thy prouydence, o father, gouerneth all thinges from the begynning: for thou hast made a waye in the see, and a sure pathe in the middest of the waues: declarynge therby, that thou hast power to helpe in all thynges, yea thoughe a man went to the see without shyp. Neuerthelesse that the workes of thy wysedome shoulde not be vayne, thou haste caused an arke to be made, and therfore do men commyt theyr lyues to a small pece of wod, passynge ouer the see in a shyppe, and are saued.

B For in the olde tyme also when the prounde gyaūtes perisshed, he (in whom the hope was left to encrease the world) went in to y shyp which was gouerned thorow thy hand, and so lefte sede behynd him vnto the world. For happy is the tre where thorow ryghtousnes commeth: but cursed is the ymage of wod, y is made with handes, yea both it and he that made it. He bycause he made it: and it, bycause it was called God, where as it is but a frayle thynge, For the vngodly and his vngodlynesse are bothe like abhominable vnto God. Euen so the worke and he that made it also shall be punysshed togyther. Therfore shall there a plage come vpon the ymages of the Heathen, for oute of the creature of God they are become an abhominacion, a temptacion vnto the soules of men, and a snare for the fete of the vnwyse. And why? the sekyng out of ymages is the begynnyng of hoordom and the bryngynge vp of them is the destruction of lyfe. For they were not from the beginning, neither shal they continue for euer. The welthy ydlenesse of men hath found thē out vpon erth, therfore shall they come shortly to an ende.

C When a father mourned for his son y was taken away frō hym, he made him an ymage (in al the hast) of his deed son, and so began to worshyp him as a God, whiche was but a deed man, & ordeyned his seruauntes to offre vnto hym. Thus by processe of tyme, & thorow longe custome, this errour was kept as a lawe, and tyrauntes compelled men by violence to honour ymages. As for those y were so farre of, that men myght not worship thē presently, their pycture was brought frome farre (lyke the ymage of a kynge whom they wolde honour) to the intent that with great diligence they myghte worshyp him, whiche was farre of, as thoughe he had ben present. Agayn, the synguler cunnyng of y craftesmā gaue the ignoraunt also a greate occasion to worshyp ymages. For the workemā wylling to doo him a pleasure that set hym a worke, laboured with all his cunnynge to make the D ymage of the best facion. And so, thorow the beauty of the work, the common people was disceyued, in so moche y they toke him nowe for a God, whiche a lytle afore was but honoured as a man. And this was the erroure of mans lyfe, when men (eyther for to serue theyr owne affection or to do some pleasure vnto kynges) ascribed vnto stones and stockes the name of God, which ought to be gyuen vnto no man.

Morouer this was not ynough for them that they erred in the knowlege of God: but where as they lyued in the greate warres of ignoraunce, those manye and greate plages called they peax. For eyther they slewe their owne children, and offred them and did sacrifyce in the nyght season, or els helde vnreasonable watches: so that they kepte neyther lyfe ne maryage clene: but eyther one slewe an other to death maliciously, or els greued his neyghbour wt aduoutrye. And thus were E all thynges myxte togyther: bloude, manslaughter, thefte, dissimulacion, corrupcion, vnfaythfulnesse, sedicion, periurye, disquietynge of good men, vnthankfulnes, defiling of soules, chaungyng of byrth, vnstedfastnes of mariage, misordre, of aduoutry and vnclēnesse. And why? the honouryng of abhominable ymages is the cause, the begynnynge and end of all euil. For they that worship ydols, either they are mad when they are merye, or prophecy lyes, or liue vngodly, or els lightly forswere thē selues: for in so moche as their trust is in the ydols, which haue neither soul ne vnderstanding, though they swere falsly, yet they thinke it shall not hurte them.

Therfore cōmeth a great plage vpon thē, and that worthely: for they haue an euil opiniō of God, giuing hede vnto ydols, swering vniustly to disceyue, and despisyng rightousnesse: for theyr swerynge is no vertue, but a plage of them that synne, & goeth euer with the offence of the vngodly.

¶ The voyce of the faythfull praysyng the mercye of God, for whose graces sake they serue not Idols.

CAPI. XV.

A But thou, o our God, art swete, long suffering and true, and in mercye ordrest thou all thynges. Thoughe we syn, yet are we thyne, for we know thy strengthe. Yf we synne not, then are we sure that thou regardest vs. For to know the, is perfect ryghtousnesse: Yea to knowe thy ryghtousnesse and power, is the roote of immortalitie. As for the thynge that men haue founde out thorowe theyr euyll scyence, it hathe not disceyued vs: as the payntynge of the pycture (an vnprofytable laboure) and carued ymage with dyuers colours, whose syght entyseth the ignoraunte: so that he honoureth and loueth the pycture of a deed ymage that hath no soule.

Neuerthelesse they that loue such euil thinges are worthy of deth: they y trust in them B they that make them, they that loue them, & they that honour them. The potter also taketh and tempereth softe earthe, laboureth it, and gyueth it the facion of a vessell, what so euer serueth for our vse: and so of one pece of claye he maketh some clene vessell for seruyce, and some cōtrary. But where to euery vessell serueth, that knoweth the potter hym selfe. So with his vayne labour he maketh a God of the same clay: this doth euen he whiche a lytle afore was made of erth hym selfe and within a lytle whyle after (when he dyeth) turneth to the erth agayne.

C Notwithstandynge he careth not the more bycause he shall labour, ne bycause his life is short but stryueth to excell goldsmythes, the syluersmythes & coppersmythes, and taketh it for an honour to make vayne thynges. For his hert is asshes, his hope is but vayne erth, and his lyfe is more vyle then claye: for so moche as he knoweth not his owne maker, y gaue hym his soule to worke, and brethed in hym the brethe of lyfe. They count our lyfe but a pastyme, and oure conuersacion to be but a market, and that men shoulde euer be gettynge, and that by euyll meanes. Nowe he that of earth maketh frayle vessels and ymages, and knoweth hym selfe to offende aboue all other.

Images.

D All the ennemyes of thy people and that holde them in subiection, are vnwyse, vnhappye, and excedynge proude vnto their owne soules: for they iudge all the ydols of y Heathen to be goddes, which neyther haue syght to se, nor noses to smel, ne eares to heare, nor fyngers of handes for to grope: and as for theyr fete, they are to slowe to goo: for man made them, & he y hath but a borowed spirite facioned them. But no man can make a God like vnto him: for seing he is but mortal him selfe, it is but mortall that he maketh with vnryghtous handes. He him selfe is better then they whom he worshippeth, for he lyued though he was mortal, but so did neuer they. Yea, they worshyp beastes also, whiche are moost miserable: for compare thynges that can not fele vnto them, an they are worse thē those. Yet is there not one of these beastes y with his sight can beholde any good thyng, neyther haue they gyuen prayse ne thankes vnto God.

¶ The punyshment of Idolaters, and the benefytes done vnto the faythfull.

CAPI. XVI.

A FOr these and suche other thynges haue they suffred worthy punyshment, & thorow the multitude of beestes are they rooted oute. In stede of the whiche punyshmentes, thou haste graciously ordred thyne owne people, & gyuen them their delyre þ they longed for: a newe and straunge taste, prepa-
Nume.xxi.a rynge them quayles to be their meate, to the intent that by the thynges whiche were shewed and sente vnto them, they that were so gredye, might be withdrawen euen from the desire that was necessarye. But these within shorte tyme were brought vnto pouertie, and tasted a new meat. For it was requisyte that (withoute anye excuse) destruction shoulde come vpon those whiche vsed tyrannye, and to shewe onely vnto the other, how their enemyes were destroyed. For when the cupill wodnesse of the beestes came vpō them, they perysshed thorowe the stynges of cruell serpentes.

B Notwithstandynge thy wrath endured not perpetually, but they were put in feare for a lytle season, that they might be reformed, hauing a token of saluacion, to remēbre the cōmaundement of thy lawe. For he that cōverted, was not healed by the thing that he saw but by the, o sauyoure of all. So in this thou shewedst thyne ennemys, that it is thou whiche delyuerest frome all cupill. As for then Exodi.xii.d when they were bytten with grashoppers & flyes, they dyed, for they were worthy to perysshe by such: But neyther the tethe of dragons ne of venimous wormes ouercame thy chyldren, for thy mercye was euer by theym and helped them. Therfore were they punysshed to remēbre thy wordes, but hastely were they healed agayne: lest they shold fall in to so depe forgetfulnesse, that they myghte not vse thy helpe.

C Deut.xxxii.f
3.Regum.ii.d It was neyther herbe ne playster that restored them to helth, but thy worde, o Lord, which healeth al thinges. It is thou, o Lord, that hast the power of lyfe and deth: thou leadest vnto dethes dore, & bringest vp agayne.
Sapi.xi.c But man thorow wickednesse sleeth his owne soule, & whē his spirit goeth forth, it turneth not agayne, neither maye he call agayne the soule that is taken away: It is not possyble to escape thy hand. For the vngodly þ wold not know the, were punished by the strēgth of thyne arme: with straūge waters, haples and raynes were they persecuted, & thorowe fyre were they consumed. For it was a wonderous thyng that fyre myghte do more then water, which quencheth all thinges, but the world is the aucnger of the righteous. Somtyme was the fyre so tame, that the beastes which were sent to punysh the vngodly, brēt not: and that bicause they sholde se & knowe that they were persecuted with the punyshment of God. And somtyme brent the fire in the water on euery side, that it might destroy the vnrighteous nacion of the earth. Agayne
D Exodi.xvi.a thou hast fed thyne own people with aūgels fode, and sent them breed redye from heuen, without theyr labour, being very pleasaunt and well gusted. And to shew thy ryches and swetenesse vnto thy chyldren, thou gauest euery one their delyre, so that euery mā might take what lyked him best. But the snow and yse abode the violēce of the fyre, and melted not: that they might know that the fyre burning in the hayle and rayn, destroyed þ frute of þ enemies, the fire also forgat his strēgth agayn, that the righteous might be norysshed. For the creature that serueth the (which arte the maker) is fearce in punishing the vnrighteous, but is easy and gentle to do good, vnto suche as put their trust in the. Therfore dyd

Dorothia Methodius that had nede therof, þ thy children, o Lord, whom thou louest, might know that it is not nature and þ growing of frutes that fedeth men, but that it is thy worde whiche preserueth thē þ put their trust i the: for loke what might not be destroyed with the fire, as sone as it was warmed with a lytle sunne beame, it melted: that all myght knowe that thankes oughte to be gyuen vnto the before the sunne ryse, and that thou oughtest to be worshypped before the day spryngе: for the hope of the vnthankfull shall melte awaye as the wynter yse, and peryth as water that is not necessarye.

¶ The iudgementes of God vpon the Egyptians.

CAPI. XVII.

GReat are thy iudgemētes, o Lorde, and
A Romanis thy counsels can not be expressed, therfore men do erre, that wil not be reformed with thy wisdom. For when the vnrighExodi.v teous thought to haue thy holy people in subiection, they were bound with the bandes of darknesse and longe nyghte, shut vnder the roofe, thinking to escape the euerlastyng wisdom. And whyle they thought to be hyd in þ darknesse of their synnes, they were scatred abrode in the very myddest of the darke couering of forgetfulnes, put to horrible fear and wonderously vered for the corner wher they myghte not kepe them from feare: bycause the sound came down & vered thē: yea manye terryble and straunge visions made them afryde.

B No power of þ fyre myght gyue the light, neither myght the clere flambes of þ sterres lyghten that horrible night: for there appered vnto them a sodeyn fire very dredful. At Exodi.xiiii the which (whē they saw nothing) they were so afraid, that they thought the thing which they saw to be the more fearfull. As for þ forcery and enchauntment þ they vsed, it came to derisiō, & the proud wysdom was brought to shame: for they that promised to dryue away the fearfulnes and dzede from þ weyke soules, were sycke for feare them selues, and that with scorne. And thoughe none of the wonders feared them, yet were they afrayde at the

at the beestes which came vpon them, and at the hyssyng of the serpentes. In so moch that with tremblynge they swowned, and sayde they sawe not the ayre, whiche no man yet may escape.

C For it is an heuy thyng, whē a mans owne conscience bereth recorde of his vnkyndnesse & condēneth him. And why? a vered & wounded conscience, taketh euer cruel thynges in hand. Fearfulnes is nothing els, but a declaring that a man seketh helpe and defence, to answere for him selfe. And loke how moche lesse the hope is within, the more is the vncertaintie of the mater for the which he is punished. But they that came in the mighty night slept the slepe that fell vpon them frō vnder and from aboue: somtyme were they afraid thorow the feare of the wonders, & somtime they were so weyke þ they swowned withal: for an hasty & sodeyn fearefulnes came vpon them. Afterwarde, yf any of them had fallen he was kept & shut in prysō, but wout cheynes. But if any dwelt in a village, yf it had ben an herd or husbandman he suffred intolerable necessitie: for they were al bound vñ one cheyne of darknesse.

D Whether it were a blasynge wynde, or a swete song of the byrdes amonge the thycke braūches of the trees, or the vehemence of hasty running water, or great noyse of the falyng downe of stones, or the playing and rūnyng of beestes whom they sawe not, or the mighty noyse of rorying beestes, or the sound that answereth agayn in the hye mountaynes, it made them swowne for very feare. For al the erth shyned with clere lyght, and no man was hyndered in his labour. Onely vpon them there fell an heuye nyghte, an ymage of darknesse that was to come vpon them. Yea they were vnto thē selues the most heuye and horrible darknesse.

CAPI. XVIII.

A NEuertheless thy holy had a very great lyght (& the ennemyes herd their voyce but they sawe not the figure of them.) And bicause they suffred not þ same thinges, they magnified the, and they that were vered afore (bycause they were not hurte nowe) thanked the, and besoughte the, o God, that there might be a difference. Therfore hadde
Sapi.a they a burning pyller of fyre to lede them in the vnknowen waye, and thou gauest them þ sunne for a free gyft, without any hurt. Reason it was that they sholde want lyght, and be put in the prysō of darknesse, which kept thy chyldren in captiuitie, by whom the vncorrupt lyght of the lawe of the world was for to be gyuen.
Sapi.a B When they thought to slee the babes of the ryghtous (one being layd out, and preserued to be leader vnto the other) thou broughtest Exodi.xii.
oute the hole multitude of the chyldren, and destroyedst these in the mightye water. Of þ night were our fathers certifyed afore, that they knowyng vnto what othes they had gyuen credence, might be of good chere. Thus thy people receiued the helth of the righteous but the vngodly were destroyed. For like as thou hast hurt our enemies, so hast thou promoted vs whom thou calledst afore. For the righteous chyldren of the good men offred secretly, and ordred the law of rigtoulnesse vñ to vnite, that the iust shold receiue good and euil in lyke maner, synging prayses vnto the father of all men. Agayne, there was herd a dissacordyng voyce of the enemies, and a piteous cry for chyldren that were bewayled.
The master and the seruant were punysshed in lyke maner. For they al togyther, had innumerable that dyed one deth.

Neyther were the liuing sufficient to bury Exodi.xii.e the deed, for in the twinckling of an eye, the noblest nacio of them was destroyed. As oft as God helped them afore, yet wolde it not make them byleue, but in the destruction of þ eyght borne, they knowleged that it was the people of God. For whyle all thynges were styll, and when the night was in the middest of her course, thy almighty worde, o Lorde, lept down from heue out of thy royal trone as a rougne man of warre, in the myddest of the land that was destroyed: and the sharpe sword performed their strayte commaundemēt, standing and filling al thinges vñ deth: yea it stode vpon the erth, and reached vnto the heuen. Then the sight of the euil dzemes vered them sodeynly, and fearfulnesse came vpon them vnawares.

D Then laye there one here, an other there, halfe deed, halfe quycke, and shewed the cause of his deth. For the visions that vexed them, shewed theym these thynges afore: so that they were not ignorant wherfore they perysshed.

The temptacion of deth touched the righteous also, and amonges the multitude in the wyldernesse there was insurrection, but thy wrathe endured not longe. For ths faultelesse man wente in all the haste, and toke the Nume.xvi.g battayle vpon him, broughte forth the weapon of his ministracyon: euen prayer, and the censours of reconcelynge: set hym selfe agaynste the wrath, and so broughte the mysserye to an ende: declarynge therby, that he was thy seruaunte. For he ouercame not the multitude with bodyly power, ne with weapons of myght: but with the worde he subdued him that vered hym, puttyng the in remembraunce of the othe and couenaūt made vnto the fathers. For when the deed were fallen downe by heapes one vpon an other, he stode in the myddest, pacifyed the wrathe, and parted the waye vnto the lyuynge. And Exodi.xxviii.e why? in his longe garment was all the beautie, and in the foure rowes of the stones, was the glory of the fathers grauen, and thy maiestie was writtē in the crowne of his heed,

CAPI. XIX.

A AS for the vngodly, þ wrath came vpō thē without mercy vnto the ende. For he knew what shold happen vnto thē,
how that (when they had consented to let thē go, & had sent them oute with great diligēce) they wold repent and folow vpon them. For Exodi.xiiii.a when they were yet mournyng and makyng lamentacion by the graues of the deed, they deuysed an other folyshnesse, so that they per secuted them in their fleing, whom they had cast out afore with prayer. Worthy necessitie also brought them vnto this end, for they had clene forgotten the thynges that happened vnto thē afore. But the thynge that was wantyng of theyr punishment, was requisite
so to be fulfylled vpon them with tormētes:
that thy people might haue a maruelous passage thorowe, and that these myghte fynde a straunge death.
B Then was euery creature facioned again
of new, according to the wil of their maker, obeying thy commaundemētes that thy children myght be kepte without hurte. For the cloude ouershadowed their tentes, & the drye erth appered, where afore was water: so þ
in the red see, there was a waye without impediment, and the great depe became a grene felde, where thorow al the people went that were defended with thy hand, seing thy won derous and marueylous workes. For as the horses, so were they fed, and lepte lyke lam-bes praysyng the, o Lord, which hadst deliue
red them. And why? they were yet myndfull of the thinges þ happened whyle they dwelt
in the land: how the ground brought forthe flyes in stede of catell, & how the riuer scrau led with the multitude of frogges in stede of fysshes.
But at the last they saw a new creacion of C of byrdes, what tyme as they were discey- Exodi.xvi.c
ued with luste, and desyred delycate meates. Nume.xi.g
For when they were speakyng of their appe-tyte, the quayles came vp to them frome the see, and punishmentes came vpō the sinners, not without the tokens which came to passe afore by the vehemence of the stremes: for they suffred worthely accordig to their wickednesses, they delt so abhominably & chur-lishlye with straungers. Some receyued no vnknowen gestes, some brought the straun-gers in to bōdage that did thē good. Besyde all these thinges there were some, þ not only receyued no straungers with their wylles,
but persecuted those also, and did thē moche iii.John.b

they punisshed with blyndnesse, lyke as they that were couered with sodeyn darknesse at Gene.xix.c
the dores of the ryghtous, so that euerye one iiii.Re.vi.d sought the entraunce of his dore.
Thus the elementes turned in to them sel-ues, like as when one time is chaunged vpon
an instrument of musike, and yet all the rest D due kepe their melody, whiche may easely be perceyued by the syghte of the thynges þ are come to passe. The drye land was turned in to a watery, and þ thynges that afore swam in the water, went now vpon the dry groūd.

of the noysome beestes hurte not the flesh of them that wente with them, neyther melted
they the yse, whiche els melteth lyghtly.
In all thynges hast thou promoted thy

¶ The ende of the boke of wysdome.

THE BOKE OF *IESVS THE SONNE OF SIRACH, VVHICHE IS CALLED IN LATYNE ECCLESIASTICVS.

*Jesus

¶ The prologe of Jesus the sonne of Sirach, vnto his boke.

MAny and greate men haue declared wysdome vnto vs, oute of the lawe, out of the Prophetes, and oute of other that folowed them. In the which thynges Israel ought to be commended, by the reason of doctryne, & wysdom: Therfore they that haue it, and rede it, shulde not onely them selues be wyse there thorow, but serue other also with teachynge and wrytynge.

After that my graundfather Jesus had gyuen diligent laboure to reade the lawe, the Prophetes, & other bokes that were left vs of oure fathers, and had well exercysed hym selfe therin: he purposed also, to wryte some thyng of wysdome, and good maners, to the intēt that they which were willyng to lerne and to be wyse myght haue the more vnderstādyng, and be the more apt to leade a good conuersacyon.

Wherfore I exhort you to receyue it louingly, to reade it with dylygence, and to take it in good worth, though oure wordes be not so eloquent as the famos Oratours. For the thynge that is wrytten in the Hebrue tonge, soundeth not so well, when it is translated into an other speache. Not onely this boke of myne, but also the lawe, the Prophetes, & other bokes, sound farre otherwise, thē they do, when they are spoken in theyr owne language.

Nowe in the.xxxviij. yere when I came in to Egipt, in the tyme of Ptolomy Euerges, and contynued there all my lyfe, I gat libertye to reade and wryte many good thinges. Wherfore I thought it good and necessary, to bestowe my diligence and trauayle to interprete this boke. And consydrynge that I had tyme, I laboured and dyd my best to perfourme this boke, & to brynge it vnto lyght: that the straungers also whiche are disposed to lerne, myght applye theym selues vnto good maners, and lyue accordynge to the lawe of the Lorde.

¶ Wysdome procedeth and commeth of God. A prayse of the feare of God. Ryghtousnesse is a degree to come by wysdome.

CAPI. I.

ALl wysdome com- A
meth of God the Lord, iii.Reg.iii.b and hathe bene euer wt and.iiii.c
hym, and is before all Job.xxviii.c tyme. Who hath nom- Jacob.i.a bred the sand of the see,
the droppes of the rayn
& the daies of the time?
Who hath measured þ
heygthe of heauen, the bredth of the earth, &
the depenesse of the see? Who hath soughte out the grounde of Gods wysdome, whiche hath bene before all thynges? Wysdom hath bene before all thynges, and the vnderstandyng of prudence from euerlastynge. (Gods
worde in the heygth, is the well of wysdom, and the euerlastynge commaundementes are the entraunce of her.) Unto whom hath the rote of wysdom bene declared? Or who hath knowen her wyt? Unto whom hath the doctryne of wysdom bene discouered & shewed?
and who hathe vnderstande the manyfolde entraunce of her?
There is one: euen the hyghest, the maker B of all thynges, the almyghtye, the kynge of power (of whom men ought to stande greatly in awe) which sytteth vpō his trone, being a God of domyniō: He hath created her tho-rowe the holye ghost: he hath sene her, nom-bred her, and measured her: He hath poured her oute vpon all his workes, and vpon all fleshe, accordynge to his gyft: he gyueth her rychely vnto them that loue hym. The feare of the Lorde is worship and triumphe, glad-nesse and a ioyfull crowne. The feare of the Lorde maketh a mery herte, gyueth gladnes, ioye and longe lyfe. Who so feareth the Lorde, it shall go well with hym at the last,
and in the daye of his death he shall be blessed.
The loue of God is honorable wysdome: C
loke vnto whom it appeareth, they loue it,
for they se what wonderous thinges it doth.
The feare of the Lorde is the begynnyng of Psal.cx.b
wysdome, and was made with the faythfull Prouer.ix.b in the mothers wombe: it shall go with the chosen women, and shall be knowen of the ryghtous and faythfull. The feare of þ Lord is the ryghte Gods seruyce, that preserueth Feare of the and iustifyeth the herte, and gyueth myrth & Lorde.
gladnesse. Who so feareth the Lorde, shal be happye: and when he hath nede of comfort,
he shal be blessed. To feare God is the wysdome that maketh ryche, and bryngeth all good with her. She fylleth the hole house wt her gyftes: and þ garners with her treasure.
The feare of the Lorde, is the crowne of wysdome,

wysdome, and gyueth plenteous peace and health. He hath sene her and noumbred her: knowledge and vnderstandyng of wysdome hath he poured out as rayne: and them that holde her fast, hath he brought vnto honour.

D The feare of the Lorde is the rote of wysdome, and her braunches are longe lyfe. In the treasures of wysdome, is vnderstandynge and deuotion of knowledge, but wysdome is abhorred of synners. The feare of the Lorde dryueth out synne, for he that is withoute feare, can not be made ryghteous, and his wylfull boldnesse is his owne destruction. A pacyent man wyll suffer vnto the tyme, and then shall he haue the rewarde of ioye. A good vnderstanding wyl hyde his wordes for a tyme, and manye mens lyppes shall speake of his wysdome.

In the treasures of wysdome is the declaracyon of doctryne, but the synner abhorreth the worship of God. My sonne, yf thou desyre wysdom, kepe the commaundement, and God shall gyue her vnto the: for the feare of the Lorde is wysdome and nurtoure, he hath pleasure in fayth and louyng mekenesse, and he shal fil ye treasures therof. Be not obstinate and vnfaythfull to the feare of the Lorde, & come not vnto hym with a double herte. Be not an ypocryte in the syght of men, and take good hede what thou speakest. Marke well these thynges, lest thou happen to fall, and brynge thy soule to dishonour, and so God discouer thy secretes, and cast the downe in the myddest of the congregacyon: bycause thou woldest not receyue the feare of God, and bycause thy herte is full of faynednesse and disceyte.

¶ He exhorteth the seruauntes of God to ryghtousnesse, loue, vnderstandyng, and patience, and exhorteth hym that feareth God, to beleue, to hope, and to loue: bycause God neuer confoundeth ne forsaketh them that trust in hym. A curse vpon the subtyll, fearce, and impacient of herte.

CAPI. II.

A Math.iiii.a ii.Timo.iii.b ii.Petri.iiii.b

My sonne, yf thou wylte come into the seruyce of God, stand fast in ryghtousnesse and feare, and arme thy soule to temptacion: settle thyne herte, and be pacyent: bowe downe thyne eare, receyue the wordes of vnderstandynge, and shrynke not awaye, when thou arte entysed. Holde the fast vpon God, ioyne thy selfe vnto hym and suffre, that thy lyfe maye encreace at the last. Whatsoeuer happeneth vnto the, receyue it: suffre in heuynesse, and be pacyent in thy trouble. For lyke as golde and syluer are tryed in the fyre, euen so are acceptable men in the fornace of aduersytye.

Sapien.iiii.a Hebre.xii.a Beleue in God, and he shall helpe the: ordre thy way aright, & put thy trust in him. Holde fast his feare, & growe therin. O ye that feare the Lorde, take sure holde of his mercy: shrynk not away fro him, that ye fall not. O ye that feare the Lorde, beleue hym, and youre reward shall not be emptie. O ye that feare the Lorde put your trust in him, and mercy shal come vnto you for pleasure: O ye that feare the Lorde set your loue vpon hym, and your hertes shall be lyghtened

B Psalm.xxv.a Esaye.xxviii. Consydre the olde generacions of men (O ye chyldren) and marck them wel: was there euer any one confounded, that put his truste in the Lord? Who euer cōtinued in his feare and was forsaken? Or whome dyd he euer despyse, that called faythfully vpon hym? For God is gracious and mercyfull, he forgeueth synnes in the time of trouble, and is a defender for all them that seke him in the truth. Wo be vnto him that hath a double hert wycked lyppes and euyll occupied handes, & to the synner that goeth two maner of wayes. Wo be vnto theym that are loose of herte, which put not their truste in God, & therfore shall they not be defended of hym. Wo be vnto them that haue lost patience, forsaken the ryghte wayes, and are turned back, in to frowarde wayes. What wyll they do, whē the Lorde shall begyn to vyset them?

C John.xiiii. They that feare the Lorde, wyl not mystrust his word: and they that loue hym, wil kepe his commaundement. They that feare the Lord will seke out the thynges, that are pleasaunt vnto hym: and they that loue him shall fulfyll his lawe. They that feare the Lorde wyl prepare their hertes, and humble theyr soules in his sight. They that feare the Lorde kepe his commaundementes, and wil be pacyent tyll they se hym selfe, sayinge: better it is for vs to fall into the handes of the Lorde, then in to the handes of men: for his mercye is as greate as hym selfe.

¶ To our father and mother oughte we to gyue double honoure. Of the blessynge and curse of the father and mother. No men oughte ouer curyously to search out the secretes of God.

CAPI. III.

A Fathers. Exodi.xx.b Deute.v.b Ephe.vi.a

The chyldren of wysdome are a congregacyon of the ryghtous, and theyr exercyse is obedyence and loue. Heare me your father (O my deare chyldren) and doo therafter, that ye maye be safe. For the Lord wyll haue the father honoured of the chyldren, and loke what a mother commaundeth her chyldren to do, he wil haue it kept. Who so honoureth his father, his synnes shall be forgyuen him: and he that honoureth his mother is lyke one that gathereth tresure together. Who so honoureth his father, shall haue ioye of his owne chyldren: and whē he maketh his prayer he shall be herde. He that honoureth his father, shall haue a longe lyfe: and he that is obedient for the Lordes sake, his mother shal haue ioy of him.

B He that feareth the Lorde, honoureth his father and mother, and doth them seruyce, & honour as it were vnto the Lord hym selfe. Honour thy father in dede, in worde, and in all pacyence, that thou mayste haue his blessynge: for the blessynge of the father buyldeth vp the houses of the chyldre, but the mothers curse roteth oute the foundacyons. Reioyce not when thy father is reproued, for it is no honour vnto the, but a shame. For the worshyp of a mans father, is his owne worshyp, and where the father is without honour, it is the dishonestye of the sonne. My sonne, make moch of thy father in his age, and greue him not as longe as he lyueth. And yf his vnderstandyng fayle, haue pacyence with him, and despyse him not in thy strength. For the good dede that thou shewest vnto thy father, shal not be forgotten: and when thou thy self wantest, it shall be rewarded the (and for thy mothers offence, thou shalt not be recompensed with good, yea it shall be founded for the in ryghtousnesse) and in the day of trouble thou shalte be remembred: thy synnes also shall melt away, lyke as the yse in the fayre warm wether.

C He that forsaketh his father, shall come to shame: and he that defyeth his mother, is cursed of God. My sonne, performe thy workes with louing mekenesse, so shalt thou be loued aboue other men. The greater thou art, the more humble thy self (in all thinges) and thou shalt fynde fauoure in the syght of God. For great power belongeth only vnto God, and he is honoured of the lowly.

Seke not out the thynges that are aboue thy capacytie, and searche not the grounde of suche thynges as are to myghtye for the: but loke what God hath cōmaunded the, thynk vpon that alway, and be not curyous in many of his workes. For it is nedefull for the to se with thyne eyes, the thynges that are secrete. Make not thou to moche searche in superfluous thinges, and be not curyous in many of his workes: for many thynges are shewed vnto the alredy, which be aboue the capacitye of men. The medlyng with such hath begiled many a man, and tāgled their wittes in vanytye. Now he that loueth peryll, shall perysshe therein.

D An harde herte shall fare euyll at the last, (an hert that goeth two wayes, shal not prosper: and he that is frowarde of hert, wyl euer be the worse and worse.) A wycked hert shall be laden with sorowes, and the vngodly synner wyll heape one syn vpon an other. The counsell of the proude hath no health, for the plant of syn shall be roted out in them. The herte of him that hath vnderstandynge shall perceue hygh thynges, and a good eare wyll gladly herken vnto wysdome. An herte that is wyse and hath vnderstandynge, wyll abstayne from synnes, and increase in the workes of ryghtousnesse. Water quencheth burning fyre, and mercy reconcyleth synnes. God hath respecte vnto hym that is thankfull: he thynketh vpon hym agaynst the tyme to come: so that when he falleth, he shal fynde a strōg holde.

¶ Almes must be done with all mekenesse. The studye of wysdome and her fruite. A iudge ought to be mercyfull. An exhortacyon to eschewe euyl and to do good.

CAPI. IIII.

A Deut.xv.a Math.xxiii.c

My sonne, defraude not the poore of his almes and turne not awaye thine eyes from him that hath nede. Despyse not an hungry soule, and defye not the poore in his necessitye: greue not the herte of hym that is helplesse, and withdrawe not the gyft fro the nedefull. Refuse not the prayer of one that is in trouble, and turne not awaye thy face from the nedy. Cast not thyne eyes asyde fro the poore, that thou gyue him not occasyon to speake euyll of the. For yf he complayne of the in the bytternesse of his soule, his prayer shal be herde: euen he that made him, shal heare him. Be curteous vnto the companye of the poore humble thy soule vnto the elder, and bowe downe thy heade to a man of worship. Let it not greue the to bow downe thine eare vnto the poore, but paye thy dette, and gyue him a frendly answere, and that with mekenesse.

B Gene.xiiii.c Exodi.ii.b Delyuer hym that suffreth wronge from the hand of the oppressour, and be not faynt herted when thou syttest in iudgement. Be mercyfull vnto the fatherles as a father, & be in stede of an husband vnto theyr mother so shalte thou be as an obedient sonne of the hyghest and he shall loue the more then thy mother doth.

Wisdome breatheth lyfe into her children, receyueth them that seke her, and wyll go before them in the way of ryghtousnes. He that loueth her loueth life: and they that seke her dylygently, shal haue great ioye. They that kepe her, shall haue the herytage of lyfe: for where she entreth in, there is the blessing of God. They that honoure her, shall be the seruauntes of the holy one: and they that loue her, are beloued of God. Who so gyueth eare vnto her, shall iudge the Heathen: and he that hath respecte vnto her, shall dwell safe lye.

C He that beleueth her, shall haue her in possession, and his generacyon shall endure: for when he falleth, she shal go with hym before al. Feare, drede and temptacion shal she bring vpon hym, and trye hym in her doctryne: tyll she haue so proued hym in his thoughtes, that he commytte his soule vnto her. Then shall she stablysh hym, brynge the ryght way vnto hym, make hym a glad man, shewe hym her secretes, and heape vpon hym the treasures of knowledge, vnderstandyng and ryghtousnes. But yf he goo wronge, she shall forsake him, and gyue hym ouer in to the handes of his enemy.

D Ephesi.v.b Math.x.e My sonne make moch of the tyme, eschue the thing that is euyl, and for thy lyfe, shame not to saye the truth. For there is a shame that bryngeth synne, and there is a shame that bryngeth worshyp and fauoure. Accepte no personne after thyne owne wyll, that thou be not confounded to thyne owne decaye. Leuiti.xix.d Be not ashamed of thy neyghboure in his aduersyte, and kepe not back thy counsell when it maye do good, neither hyde the wysdome in her beauty. For in the tonge is wisdome dome knowen, so is vnderstandynge, knowledge and lernyng in the talking of the wyse and stedfastnesse in the workes of ryghtousnesse.

In no wyse speake agaynst the worde of truth, but be ashamed of ŷ lyes of thyne own ignoraunce. Shame not to confesse thyne errour, submyt not thy self vnto euerye mã bi cause of syn. Withstand not ŷ face of ŷ myghtye, and stryue not agaynst the streame. But for the truthe stryue thou vnto deathe, and God shall fyght for the agaynst thyne ennemyes. Be not hastye in thy tong, neither slak and negligent in thy workes. Be not as a lyon in thyne owne house, destroynge thy housholde folkes, and oppressyng them that are vnder the. Let thyne hande be stretched Acto.xx.d out to receyue, and shut when thou shouldest gyue.

¶ In rychesse maye we not put anye confidence. The vengeaunce of God ought to be feared, and to repentaunce maye we not be slowe.

CAPI. V.

A Trust not vnto thy ryches, and say not: Luke.xii.b Eccle.xi.c tush, I haue ynough for my lyfe. (For it shall not helpe in the tyme of vengeaunce and temptacyon.) Folow not the lust of thyne owne herte in thy strength, and saye not: tush, how haue I had strength, or who wyll brynge me vnder because of my workes? for doubtlesse God shall auenge it. And saye not: I haue commytted mo synnes, but what euyll hath happened me? For the almyghtye is a pacient rewarder. Bycause thy syn is for- Roma.ii.a Eccl.xxi.a gyuen the, be not therfore without feare, nether heape one syn vpon an other. And saye not: tush, the mercy of the Lorde is greate, he shall forgyue me my synnes, be they neuer so Eccle.xvi.b manye. For lyke as he is mercyfull, so goeth wrath from hym also, and his indignacyon commeth downe vpon synners.

Make no taryinge to turne vnto the Lord, B and put not of from day to day: for sodeynly shall his wrath come, and in the tyme of vengeaunce he shall destroye the. Prouer.x.a and.xi.a Ezec.vii.b Sopho.i.c Trust not in wycked ryches, for they shal not helpe in the daye of punyshment and wrath. Be not caryed about to euery wynde, and go not in to euery waye: for so doth the synner that hath a double tonge. Stande fast in the waye of the Lorde, be stedfast in thy vnderstandyng, abyde by the worde, and folowe the worde of peace & ryghteousnesse. Be gentle to heare the worde of God, that thou mayest vnderstand it, and make a true answere with wys- Jacob.i.b dome. Be swyft to heare, but slow and pacient in gyuynge answere. If thou hast vnderstandynge, shape thy neyghboure an answere: If no, laye thyne hande vpon thy mouth: lest thou be trapped in an vndiscrete worde, and so confounded. Honour and worshyp is in a mans wyse talkyng, but the tong of the vndiscrete, is his owne destruction. Be Leuiti.xix.d not a pryuye accuser as longe as thou lyuest, and vse no sklaundre with thy tong. For shame and sorow goeth ouer the thefe, and an euyll name ouer hym that is double tonged: but he that is a pryuy accuser of other men, shal be hated enuyed and confounded. Se that thou iustyfye the small and great alyke.

¶ It is ŷ propertye of a synner to be euyll tonged. The doctryne and good counsell of the wyse is to be embraced wysdome shulde be searched for. The profyte therof.

CAPI. VI.

Be not thy neyghbours enemye for thy A frendes sake: for who so is euell shall be the heyre of rebuke and dyshonoure and who so euer beareth enuy and a double tonge offendeth. Be not proude in the deuice Roma.xii. Philip.ii. of thyne owne vnderstandinge, lest thy leues wither, and thy frute be destroyed, & so thou be lefte as a drye tree. For a wycked soule destroyeth hym that hath it, maketh hym to be laughed to scorne of his enemyes (& bryngeth Eccl.xx.b hym to the porcyon of the vngodly) A swete worde multyplyeth fryndes and pacyfyeth them that be at varyaunce, and a thanckfull tonge wyll be plenteous in a good man. Holde frendshyppe with many, neuerthelesse haue but one counseler of a thousande.

B If thou gettest a frende, proue him fyrste, Frendes. Deut.xiii. and.xviii. Mich.vii.a Math.x.c and be not hasty to gyue him credence. For some man is a frende, but for a tyme, & wyll not abyde in the daye of trouble. And there is some frynde that turneth to enimytie, and taketh part agaynst the: and if he knowe any hurt by the, he telleth it out. Againe, some Eccl.xxxvii.a frende is but a companyon at the table, and in the daye of nede he contynueth not. But a sure frende wyll be vnto the euen as thyne owne selfe, and deale faythfullye with thy housholde folke. If thou suffre trouble and aduersytye, he is with the, and hydeth not hym selfe frome the. Departe frome thyne enemyes, yea and beware of thy frindes.

C A faythfull frynd is a strong defence: who so fyndeth such one, findeth a noble treasure. A faythfull frende hath no peare, the weight of gold and syluer is not to be compared to ŷ goodnesse of his fayth. A faythfull frend is a medicyne of lyfe, & they that feare the Lord shall fynde hym. Who so feareth the Lorde, shall prospere with frendes: and as he is hym selfe so shall his frende be also. My sonne receyue doctryne from thy youth vp, so shalte thou finde wysdom tyll thou be olde. Go to her as one that ploweth, & soweth, & wayte Eccl.li.b pacyently for her good frutes. For thou shalt haue but lytle labour in her worke, but thou shalt eate of her frutes right soone. O howe exceedynge sharpe is wisdom to vnlerned men an vnstedfast body wyll not remaine in her. Unto suche she is as it were a touchstone, & he casteth her frome hym in all the haste. for wysdome is with him but in name, there be put few that haue knowledge of her. But she abydeth euen with them that knowe her, D Matth.xi. vnto the apperynge of God.

Gyue eare (my sonne) receyue my doctrine, and refuse not my counsayle. Put thy fete in to her lynckes, and take her yocke vpon thy neck: bow down thy shoulder vnder her, beare her pacyently, and be not wery of her bãdes. Come vnto her with thy hole herte, and kepe her wayes with all thy power. Seke after her, and she shall be shewed the: and when thou hast her, forsake her not. For at the last thou shalt fynde rest in her, and that shall be turned to thy great ioye. Then shall her fetters be a stronge defence for the, and her yock a glorious rayment. For the bewtie of lyfe is in her, and her bandes are the couplynge togyther of saluacyon. Yea a glorious rayment is it, thou shalt put it on, & the same crowne of ioye shalt thou weare.

C My sonne, yf thou wylt take hede, thou shalt haue vnderstandynge: and yf thou wylt applie thy mynd, thou shalt be wyse. If thou wylt bowe downe thyne eare, thou shalt receyue doctryne: and yf thou delyte in hearing, thou shalt be wyse. Stande with the multitude of suche elders as haue vnderstandynge, and consent vnto their wysdome with thyne herte: that thou mayest heare all godlye sermons, and that the worthy sentences eskape the not. And yf thou seist a man of dyscrete vnderstandynge, get the soone vnto hym, and let thy fote tred vpõ the steppes of his dores. Let thy minde be vpon the commaundementes of God, and be earnestly occupyed in his lawes: so shall he stablyshe thy herte, and gyue the wysdome at thyne owne desyre.

¶ We must forsake euyll, and yet not iustifye our selues. The behauiour of the wyse, towarde his wyfe, his frende, his chyldren, his seruauntes, his father and mother, the prestes, &c.

CAPI. VII.

A Do no euyl, so shal there no harme happen vnto the. Departe away from the thynge that is wycked, and no mysfortune shall medle with the. My sonne, sowe no euyll thynges in the forowes of vnryghtousnesse, so shalt thou reape them seuenfolde. Labour not vnto man for any lordshyp, nether vnto the kynge for the seate of honoure. Justify not thy selfe before God (for he knoweth the herte) and desyre not to be reputed wyse in the presence of the kynge. Make no laboure to be made a iudge, except it so were, that thou couldest myghtelye put downe wyckednesse: for yf thou shouldest stande in awe of the presence of the myghtye, thou shouldest fayle in gyuynge sentence. Offende not in the multitude of the cytye, and put not thy selfe amonge the people. Bynde not two synners togyther, for in one syn shalte thou not be vnpunysshed. Say not: tush, God wyl loke vpon the multytude of my oblacyons, and when I offre to the hyest God, he wyll accept it.

B Be not faynte herted when thou makest thy prayer, neither slack in gyuyng of almes. Laughe no man to scorne in the heuynesse of his soule, for God (which seeth all thynges) is he that can brynge downe, and sette vp agayne. Accept no lesinge agaynst thy brother i.Reg.ii.b neither do the same agaynste thy frende. Use not to make any maner of lye, for ŷ custome therof is not good. Make not many wordes Math.vi.a Rom.xii.b when thou arte amonge the elders: & when thou prayest, make not moche bablynge. Let no laboryous work be tedyous vnto the, neither the husbandrye whiche the almyghtye hath created. Make not thy boste in the multytude of thy wickednes, but humble thy self euen frome thyne herte: and remembre that the wrath shall not be longe in taryinge, and that the vengeaunce of the flesshe of the vngodly is a very fyre and worme. Gyue not ouer thy frynde for any good, ne thy faythfull brother for the best golde.

Depart not frome a discrete and good woman, C that is fallen vnto the for thy porcyon in the feare of the Lorde, for the gyfte of her honesty is aboue golde. Where as thy seruaunt Leuiti.xix.e worketh trulye, intreat him not euyl, ne the hyrelynge that is faythfull vnto the. Loue a discrete seruaunt as thyne own soule defraud him not of his lyberty, neither leaue hym a poore man. If thou haue catell, loke Deu.xxv.a well to them: and they be for thy profit kepe them. If thou haue sonnes, brynge them vp in nourtoure and learnynge, and bolde them Eccle.xxx.a in awe frome theyr youthe vp. If thou haste doughters, kepe theyr body, and shew not thy face cherefull toward them. Mary thy doughter, & so thou shalt perfourme a weyghty matter: but gyue her to a man of vnderstanding. If thou haue a wyfe after thyne own minde forsake her not (but commit not thy selfe to the hateful).

Honoure thy father from thy hole herte, Eccle.iii.a and forget not the sorowfull trauayle that Tobi.iiii.a thy mother had with the: remembre that thou wast borne thorow them, and how cãst thou recompence them the thinges that they haue done for the? Feare the Lorde with all thy soule, and honoure his mynysters. Loue thy D maker with all thy strength, and forsake not De.xii.a his seruauntes. Feare the Lord with al thy soule, and honour his prestes. Gyue theym Nu.xviii.b their porcyon of the fyrst frutes and increase of the earth, lyke as it is commaunded the gyue them the shulders, and their appoynted offrynges and fyrstlynges. Reach thyne hãd vnto the poore, that God maye blesse the w plenteousnesse. Be lyberall vnto all men ly- Galat.vi.b uynge. yet let not but do good euen to them Tobi.i.d that are deade.

Let not them that wepe be without com- Roma.xii.b fort, but mourne with suche as mourne. Let Math.xxv.e it not greue the to vyset the sycke, for that shal make the to be beloued. What so euer ŷ takest in hande, remembre the ende, and thou shalt neuer do amysse.

¶ Agaynst thy better is no stryuynge. Of the death of thyne enemye mayst thou not reioyce, ne despise thy neyghbourrs, ne the wordes of the wyse.

CAPI. VIII.

Stryue

A STrye not with a myghty man, lest thou chaunce to fall in to his handes. Make no bargaunce with a ryche man, leest he happen to bynge vp an harde quarel agaynst the. For golde and syluer hath vndone many a man, yea euen the hertes of kynges hath it made to fall. Stryue not with a man that is full of wordes, and laye no stykes vpon his fyre: Kepe no companye with the vnlerned, lest he gyue thy kynred an cupll reporte. Dysprse not a man that turneth hym self awaye from syn, and call him not in the teeth with all: but remembre that we are frayle euerychone. Thynke scorne of no man in his olde age, for we wax olde also. Be not glad of the deathe of thyne enemye, but remembre that we must dye al the sort of vs: and fatne vnto we come in to tope.) Dispyse not the sermons of suche elders as haue vnderstandynge, but acquaynte thy self with the wyse sentences of them: for of them thou shalte lerne wysdome and the doctryne of vnderstandynge, and how to serue greate men without complaynte.

B Go not from the doctrine of the elders, for they haue lerned it of theyr fathers. For of them thou shalt lerne vnderstandyng, so that thou mayest make answere in ỹ tyme of nede. Kyndle not the coales of synners, lest thou be dient in the fyre flames of theyr synnes. Resyst not the face of the blasphemer, that he laye not wayte for thy mouth. Lende not vnto hym that is myghtyer then thy self: If thou lendest hym, count it but lost. Be not suretye about thy power: yf thou be, then thynke surelye to paye it. Go not to lawe with the iudge, for he wyll iudge accordyng to his owne honoure. Trauayle not by the waye with him that is braynelesse, lest he do the euyll: for he foloweth his owne wylfulnesse, and so shalt thou perysh thorow his foly.

C Stryue not with hym that is angrye and cruell, and go not with hym in to the wyldernes: for bloude is nothynge in this syght, and where there is no helpe, he shall murther the. Take no counseill at fooles, for they loue no thynge but the thynges that please them selues. Make no counsell before a straunger, for thou canst not tell what wyll come of it. Open not thyne herte vnto euery man, lest he be vnthanckfull to the, and put the to reproffe.

¶ The iooperdyes of chastnesse are to be eschewed. An olde frende is to be preferred before a newe. The glory and rychesse of synners. Ryghtous men should bestowe to gett. Labour is the chefe thing in a workmen, and wysdome in a prynce.

CAPI. IX.

B Enot gelous ouer the wyfe of thy bosome, that she shewe not some wycked poynte of wyckednes vnto the. Geue not the power of thy syde vnto a woman, lest she come in thy stregth, and so thou be confounded. Loke not vpon a woman that is desyrous of many men, lest thou fall in to her snares.

Vse not the company of a woman that is a player and daunser, & heare her not, lest thou perysh thorow her entysynge. Beholde not a mayden, that thou be not hurt in her beautye. Cast not thy mynde vpon harlottes in any maner of thynge, lest thou destroye bothe thy selfe and thyne heritage. Go not aboute galynge in cuerye lane of the cytye, neyther wandre thou abrode in the stretes therof. Turne awaye thy face from a beauty full woman, and loke not vpon the fayrenes of other.

Many a man hath perysshed thorowe the beautye of women, for thorowe it the desyre is kyndled as it were a fyre. (An aduoutrous woman shall be troden vnder fote as myre, of euery one that goeth by the waye. Many a man wonderyng at the beauty of a straūge woman, hath bene cast oute, for her wordes kindle as a fyre.) Syt not by an other mans wyfe by any meanes, lye not with her vpon the bed, make no wordes with her at ỹ wyne lest thyne hert consent vnto her, and so thou with thy bloude fall in to destruction. Forsake not an olde frende, for the newe shal not be lyke hym.

A newe frende is newe, wyne: let hym be olde and thou shalt drynke hym with pleasure. Dysyre not the honoure and ryches of a synner, for thou knowest not what destruccio is for to come vpon hym. Delyte not thou in the thynge that the vngodly haue pleasure in, beynge sure that the vngodly shall not be accepted vntyll theyr graue.

Kepe the from the man that hathe powar to slaye, so nedest thou not to be afrayde of death. And yf thou commest vnto hym, make no faute, lest he happe to take away thy life. Remembre that thou goest in the myddest of snares, and vpon the bulwerkes of the cytye. Beware of thy neyghboure as myghe as thou canste, and medle with such as be wyse and haue vnderstandyng. Let iust men be thy gestes, let thy myrth be in the feare of God, let the remembraunce of God be in thy minde and let all thy talkynge be in the commaundementes of the byghest. In the handes of craftesmen shall the workes be commended so shall the princes of the people in the wysdome of their talkynge. A man ful of wordes is perylous in his cytye: and he that is temerarious and past shame in his talkynge, is to be abhorred.

¶ Of kynges and iudges. Pryde, and couetousnes are to be abhorred. Labour is praysed.

CAPI. X.

A Wyse iudge wil ordre his people with discrecion, and where a man of vnderstandynge beareth rule, there goeth it well. As the iudge of the people is hym selfe euen so are his officers: and loke what maner of man the ruler of the cytie is, such are they that dwell therin also. An vnwyse kynge destroyeth his people, but where they ỹ be in authoryte auctoritie are men of vnderstanding, there the city prosspereth.

The power of the earth is in the hande of God, and when his time is, he shal set a profitable ruler vpō it, in the hand of God, is the power of man, and vpon the scrybes shal he lay his honour. Remembre no wrong of thy neyghbour, and medle thou with no vnrygh tous workes. Pryde is hatefull before God and man, and all wickednesse of the heathen is to be abhorred. Because of vnrighteous dealyng, wronge, blasphemyes, and dyuers disceyte, a realme shall be translated from one people to an other.

B There is nothyng worse then a couetous man. Why art thou proude, o thou erth and asshes? There is not a more wycked thynge then to loue money. And why? such one hath his soule to sell: yet is he but fylthye vonge whyle he lyueth.

And though the phisicion shewe his helpe neuer so longe, yet in conclusion it goeth after this maner, to day a king, to morow ded. For when a man dyeth, he is the heyre of serpentes, beestes and wormes. The beginning of mans pryde, is to fal away from God: & why? his herte is gone frome his maker, for pryde is the originall of all syn. Who so taketh hold therof, shal be fylled with curlynges, & at ỹ last it shal ouerthrow him. Therfore hath the Lorde brought ỹ congregacios of the wicked to dishonoure, and destroyed them vnto the ende.

God hath destroyed the seates of proude princes, and set vp the meke in theyr stede. God hath wythered the rotes of the proude heathen, and planted the lowlye amonge them. God hathe ouerthrowen the landes of the heathen, and destroyed them oute of the grounde. He hathe caused them to wyther awaye, he hath brought them to noughte, and made the memorial of them to cease frō oute of the earthe (God hath destroyed the name of the proude, and left the name of the humble of mynde.) Pryde was not made for man, neither wrothfulnes for mens chyldren: the sede of man that feareth God shal be brought to honour: but the sede which transgresseth the commaundementes of the Lorde, shal be shamed. He that is ỹ ruler amonges brethren is holden in honour among them, and he regardeth suche as feare the Lord. The glory of the ryche, of the honourable, & of the poore is the feare of God.

D Dispyse not thou the iust poore man, and magnify not the rych vngodly. Great is the iudge, & mighty in honour, yet is there none greater then he that feareth God. Vnto the seruaunt that is discrete, shall the fre do service. He that is wise and wel nourtured, wil not grudge when he is reproued, and an ignorannt body shall not come to honoure. Be not proud to do thy worke, and dispayre not in the tyme of aduersitie. Better is he that laboureth, and hathe plentyousnesse of all thynges, then he that is gorgeous and wanteth breed.

E My sonne, kepe thy soule in meknes, and gyue her her due honour. Who shall iustifie him that synneth agaynst him self? who wil honour him that dishonoureth his own life? The poore is honoured for his faithfulnes & truth, but the ryche is had in reputacion, by cause of his goodes. He that ordreth him self honestly in pouertie, how moch more shal he behaue him self honestly in riches? And who so ordreth him self vnhonestly in ryches, how moche more shall he behaue hym selfe vnhonestly in pouertie.

¶ The prayse of humilytye. After the outwarde appearaūce ought we not to iudge. Of hedy and rash iudgement. The ryche is not without offence. All thinges come of God. Al men are not to be brought in to thy house.

CAPI. XI.

THe wysdome of hym that is broughte low, shal lyft vp his heed, & shall make hym to syt among great men. Cōmend not a mā in his beautie, neither dispise a mā in his vtter apperaunce. The Bee is but a smal breest among the foules, yet is her frute excedynge swete. Be not proude of thy rayment, and exalt not thy self in the day of thy honoure: for the workes of the hyest onely are wonderful: yea glorious secrete and vnknowen are his workes. Many tyrauntes haue ben fayne to syt downe vpon the earth, and the vnlykely hathe worne the crowne. Many myghty men haue ben brought lowe, and the honourable haue ben delyuered in to other mens handes. *Condemne no man before thou haue tryed out the matter, & when thou hast made inquisicion, thē rebuke righ tously. ϕGyue no sentence before thou hast herde the cause, but fyrste let men tell oute their tales.

Stryue not for a mater that toucheth not thy selfe, and stande not in the iudgement of synners. My son, medle not with many maters: & yf thou wylt be ryche, thou shalt not get it: and though ỹ renneth thy waye afore, yet shalt thou not escape. There is some mā that laboureth, and the more he werieth him selfe, the lesse he hathe. Agayne some man is slouthful, hath nede of help, wanteth strēgth and hath greate pouertie, & Gods eye loketh vpon hym to good, setteth hym vp from his lowe estate, and lyfteth vp his heed, so ỹ many men maruell at hym, and gyue honour vnto God.

Prosperitie and aduersitie, life & deth, pouertie and riches come of the Lorde. (Wysdome, nurtour and knowlege of the law are with God: loue, and the wayes of good are with hym. Errour and darknesse are made for synners: and they that exalte thē selues in euyl, ware olde in euyl.) The gift of God remayneth for the ryghtous, and his good wyll shall haue prosperitie for euer. Some man is ryche by lyuyng nygardly, and that is the porciō of his rewarde, in that he sayth nowe haue I gotten reste, and nowe wyll I eate and drynke of my goodes my self alone.

And yet he consydreth not, that the tyme draweth nye, that he must leaue al these thinges vnto other men, and dye hym selfe. Stande thou fast in thy couenaunt, and exercyse thy selfe therin, and remayne in the worke vnto thy age. Continue not in the workes of synners, but put thy truste in God, and byde in thyne estate: for it is but an easye thynge in the syght of God, to make a poore mā riche, and that sodeynly. D The blessyng of God hasteth to the rewarde of the ryghtous, and maketh his frutes sone to floryshe and prospere. Say not: what helpeth it me? & what shall I haue the whyle? Agayne, saye not: I haue ynoughe, how can I want? When thou arte in welfare, forget not aduersitie: and when it goeth not wel with the, haue a good hope þ it shall be better. For it is but a small thynge vnto God in the daye of death to rewarde euery man accordynge to his wayes. The aduersite of an hour maketh one to forget all pleasure: and when a man dyeth, his workes are discouered. Prayse no bodye before his deathe, for a man shal be knowen in his chyldren. (Eccle.xviii.c)

E Brynge not euery man in to thyne house, for the disceytful layeth awayte dyuerslye. Lyke as a partryche in a maunde, so is the hert of the proud: and lyke as a spye that loketh vpō the fal of his neighbour. For he turneth good vnto euil, & sclaundreth the chosē. Of one sparke is made a greate fyre, and an vngodly mā laieth wayt for bloud. Beware of the disceytfull, for he ymagyneth wicked thynges to brynge the in to a ppetual shame. Yf thou takest an aleaunt vnto the, he shall destroy the in vnquietnesse, & dryue the from thyne owne wayes.

¶ Unto whom we oughte to do good. Ennemyes ought to be eschewed.

CAPI. XII.

A When thou wylt do good, know to whō thou doest it, & so shalt thou be greatly thanked for thy benefytes. Doo good vnto the rightous, and thou shalt fynd great rewarde: though not of hym, yet (no doubt) the Lorde hym selfe shall rewarde the. (Galath.vi.b; Timoth.v.a) He standeth not in a good case that is alway occupyed in euyll, & gyueth no almes: for the hyest hateth þ synners, and hath mercy vpon them that shewe the workes of repentaunce. Gyue thou vnto suche as feare God, and receyue not a synner. As for the vngodlye and synners, he shall recompence vengeaunce vnto them, and kepe them to the day of wrath. Gyue thou vnto the good, and receyue not the synner: do wel vnto hym, that is lowly, but gyue not vnto the vngodlye. Let not the breed be gyuen hym, that he be not myghtyer then thy selfe therin. For so shalt thou receiue twyse as moche euyll, in all the good þ thou doest vnto hym: And why? the hyest hateth synners, and shall rewarde vengeaunce to the vngodly.

B In prosperitie a frende shall not be knowen, and in aduersitie an enemy shall not be hyd. For when a man is in welth, it greueth his ennemyes: but in heuynesse and trouble a man shall knowe his frende. Truste neuer thyne ennemye, for lyke as an yron rusteth, so doth his wyckednes. And though he make moche crouchyng and knelyng, yet kepe wel thy mynde, and beware of hym. Set him not by the, neither let him syt at thy right hand, leest he tourne hym, get in to thy place, take thy rowme and seke thy seate, and so thou at the last remembre my wordes, & be prycked at my sayinges.

Bynde not two sinnes togither, for there shal not be one vnpunisshed. Who wyl haue pity of the charmer that is stinged of the serpent, or of all suche as come nye the beestes? (Eccl.xii.; and.xxii) Euen so is it with him that kepeth company with a wycked man, and lappeth hym self in his synnes. For a season wyll he byde with the, but yf thou stomble, he taryeth not. C An enemy is swete i his lyppes, he can make many wordes, and speke many good thynges: (Jeremy.xii) Yea he can wepe w his eyes, but in his herte he ymagineth how to throw the in to the pit, and yf he may fynde oportunitie, he wil not be satisfied with bloude. Yf aduersitie come vpon the, thou shalt fynde hym there fyrst, & though he pretende to do the help, yet shal he vndermyne the. He shal shake his heed & clap his handes ouer the for very gladnesse, and whyle he maketh many wordes, he shall disguyse his countenaunce.

¶ The companyes of the proude and of the ryche are to be eschewed. The loue of God. Lyke do company with theyr lyke.

CAPI. XIII.

A Who so toucheth pytche, shall be fyled withall: and he that is famylier with the proude, shall clothe hym selfe with pryde. (Deute.xii) He taketh a burthen vpon hym, that accompanyeth a more honourable man then hym selfe. Therfore kepe no familiaritie w one þ is rycher then thy selfe. How agre the kettle and the pot togither? for yf the one be smitten agaynst the other, it shall be broken. The ryche deleth vnryghtously, and threteneth withall: but the poore being oppressed and wrongously delt withal, suffreth scarcenesse, and gyueth fayre wordes. Yf thou be for his profyt, he vseth the: but yf thou haue nothyng, he shal forsake the. As long as thou hast any thynge of thyne owne, he shall be a good felowe with the: yea he shall make the a bare man, & not be sorye for the. If he haue nede of the, he shall defraude the: and (with a priuy mocke) shall he put þ in an hope, and gyue the all good wordes, and saye: what wantest thou? Thus shall he shame the in his meate, vntyll he haue supte the clene vp twyse or thryse, and at the last shal he laugh the to scorne. Afterwarde when he seith that thou hast nothynge, he shall forsake the, and shake his heed at the.

B Beware thou be not disceyued & broughte downe in thy symplenesse. Be not to humble in thy wysdome, lest when thou art brought low, thou be disceyued thorow foolishnesse. Yf thou be called a mightye man, absent thy selfe, so shall he cal the to hym the more oft. Prease not vnto hym, that thou be not shot out: and go not farre of, leest he forget the. Withdrawe not thy selfe from his speache, but byleue not his manye wordes. For with moche communicacion shall he tempte the, & (with a priuye mocke) shall he questyon the of thy secretes. The vnmercyfull mynde of his shal marke thy wordes, he shal not spare to doo the hurte, and to put the in pryson. Beware, and take good hede to thy selfe, for thou walkest in peryll of thy ouerthrowynge.

C Now whē thou hearest his wordes, make as though thou werest in a dreme, and wake vp. Loue God all thy lyfe long, & call vpon him in thy nede. Euery beest loueth his like, euen so let euery man loue his neyghbour. Al flesh wil resorte to their lyke. And euery mā will kepe companye with suche as he is him self. But as the wolfe agreeth w the lambe, so doth the vngodly with þ rightous. What felowshyp sholde an holye man haue with a dog? How can the ryche and the poore agre togyther? The wyld asse is the lyons praye in the wyldernesse, euen so are poore men the meat of the ryche. Like as þ proude may not away with lowlynesse, euen so doth the rych abhorre the poore. Yf a ryche man fall, his frendes set hym vp agayn, but when þ poore falleth, his frendes forsake hym. Yf a ryche man fall in to an errour, he hathe many helpers, he speketh proude wordes, and yet men iustifye him.

D But yf a poore man go wrong, he is punisshed: yea though he speke wysely, yet can it haue no place. When the ryche man speketh euery body holdeth his tong, and loke what he sayth, they praise it vnto the cloudes. But yf the poore man speake, they saye: What felowe is this? And yf he doo amysse, they shal destroy him. Ryches are good vnto him that hath no synne in his conscience, and pouertie is a wycked thynge in the mouthe of the vngodly. The hert of mā chaungeth his countenaunce, whether it be in good or euyl. A cherefull countenaūce is a token of a good herte, for els it is an harde thynge to knowe the thoughte.

¶ The offence of the tonge. Man is but a vayne ymage. Happy is he that continueth in wysdome.

CAPI. XIIII.

A Blessed is the man, that hathe not fallen with the word of his mouth, and is not prycked with the conscience of synne. Happye is he that hathe no heuynesse in his mynde, and is not fallen frome his hope. It becommeth not a couetous man & a nygarde to be ryche: and what sholde a nygarde doo with golde? He that with all his carefulnes heapeth togyther vnryghtouslye gathereth for other folkes, and an other mā shall make good chere with his goodes. He þ is wycked vnto hym selfe, howe sholde he be good vnto other men? How can such one haue any pleasure of his goodes? There is nothyng worse then when one disfauoureth hym selfe, and this is a reward of his wickednesse. Yf he do any good, he doth it not knowynge therof, & agaynst his wyl, and at the last he declareth his vngraciousnes. A nigard hath a wycked eye, he turneth away his face, and despyseth his owne soule. A couetous mans eye hath neuer ynoughe in the porcion of wyckednesse, vntyll he wyther awaye, and haue loste his owne soule. (Prou.xxvii.c; Eccle.i.a)

B A wicked eye spareth breed, & ther is scarcenesse vpon his table. My son, do good to thy self of that thou hast, and gyue the Lorde his due offrynges. Remembre that deth taryeth not, and that the couenaunt of the graue is shewed vnto the: for the couenaunte of this worlde shal dye the deth. Do good vnto thy frend before thou dye, and accordyng to thy habilitie, reche out thy hande and gyue vnto the poore. Be not disapoynted of þ good day, and let not the porcion of the good day ouer passe the. Shalt thou not leaue thy trauayles and labours vnto other mē? In the deuiding of the heritage gyue and take, and sanctifye thy soule. Worke thou ryghtousnesse before thy deth, for in þ hel there is no meat to find. Al flesh shal fade away lyke grasse, and lyke a florishing lefe in a grene tre. Some grow some are cast downe: euē so is the generaciō of flesh and bloud, one commeth to an ende, an other is borne. (Eccl.xiii.a; Tobi.iiii.b; Luke.xvi.b; Esay.xl.a; i. Petri .i.b; Jaco.i.b)

C All transitorye thynges shall fayle at the last, and the worker therof shall go withall. Euerye chosen worke shall be iustified, and he that medleth withall, shall haue honoure therin. Blessed is the mā that kepeth hym in wysdome, and exercyseth hym selfe in vnderstandyng, and with discrecion shal he thinke vpon the foreknowlege of God. Which considereth the wayes of wysdome in his herte, hath vnderstandig in her secretes, goeth after her (as one that seketh her out) and contenueth in her wayes. He loketh in at her windowes, and harkeneth at her doores: He taketh his rest besyde her house, and fasteneth his stake in her walles: He shall pytche his tent nye vnto her hand, and in his tent shall good thinges rest for euermore: He shall set his chyldren vnder her couerynge, and shall dwel vnder her braunches. Under her couering shal he be defended frō the heate, and in her glory shal he rest.

¶ The goodnesse which foloweth him that feareth God. God reiecteth and casteth of the sinner. God is not the auctour of euyll.

CAPI. XV.

A HE that feareth God, wyl do good: and who so kepeth the lawe, shall obtayne wysdome. As an honourable mother shal she mete him, and as a virgyn shal she receyue hym. With the breed of life and vnderstanding shal she fede hym, and gyue him the water of holsome wysdom to drynke. [Math.iiii.b] Yf he be constant in her, he shal not be moued: [John.iiii.b] and if he holde him fast by her, he shall not come to confusion. She shal bryng him to honour among his neyghbours, and i the myddest of the congregacion shall she open his mouthe. With the spirite of wysdom and vnderstandyng shal she fyl him, and clothe hym with ẏ garmēt of glory. She shal heape the treasure of myrth and ioy vpon him, and gyue him an euerlastyng name to heritage. Folish mē wil not take hold vpon her, but suche as haue vnderstandyng, will mete her, for she is far frō pryde and discepte. Men that go about with lyes, wyl not remembre her: but mē of truth shal be found in her: euē vnto the beholding of God. Prayse is not semely in the mouthe of the vngodly, for he is not sent of ẏ Lord. For of God commeth wisdom, and ẏ prayse shal stand by the wisdom of God, and shalbe plenteous in a faythful mouth, and the Lord shal gyue her vnto him.

B Say not thou: It is the Lordes fault that I am gone by, for thou shalt not do the thing that God hateth. Say not thou: he hath caused me to goo wronge, for he hath no nede of the vngodly, God hateth al abhominaciō of errour, & they that feare God wil loue none suche. God made man at the beginnyng, and left hym in the hand of his counsell. [Gene.i.d] He gaue him his commaundementes and preceptes, if thou wylte obserue the commaundementes, and kepe acceptable faythfulnesse for euer, they shal preserue the. He hath set water and fyre before the, reache out thyne hande vnto which thou wylt. Before man is lyfe & deth, [Jeremy.xxi.b] good and euyll: loke what him lyketh, shall be giuen him: for ẏ wisdom of God is great and mighty in power, and beholdeth al men continually. The eyes of the Lord are vpon them that feare hym, and he knoweth all the [Psal.xxxiii.b] workes of man. He hath commaunded no mā to do vngodly, neither hath he gyuē any man leue to synne.

¶ Of vnhappy and wycked chyldren. No man can hyde hym selfe from God. An exhortation to the receyuynge of instruction.

CAPI. XVI.

A DElyte not thou in the multitude of vngodly chyldren, and haue no pleasure in them, yf they feare not God. Trust not thou to their lyfe, and regarde not theyr labours: for one sonne that feareth God, is better then a thousande vngodly. And better it is better for a man to dye wout chyldren, then to leaue behynde hym suche chyldren as are vngodly. For by one that hath vnderstā ding, may a hole city be vpholdē, but though the vngodly be manye, yet shall it be wasted thorow them. Many such thinges hath mine eye sene, and greater thinges then these haue I herde with myne eares. In the congregacion of the vngodlye shall a fyre burne, and [Eccle.xxi] amonges vnfaythfull people shal the wrath be kyndled.

The olde gyauntes obteyned no grace for their synnes which were destroyed, trusting B to their owne strengthe. [Gen.vi.b] Neyther spared he them amonges whom Loth was straunger, [Gen.xix.e] but smote them and abhorred theym bycause of the pryde of theyr wordes. He had no pity vpon them, but destroyed all the people that were so stoute in synne. And for so moche as [Nume.xiiii and xxvi] he ouersawe not the sixe hundred thousande that gathered them selues togither in ẏ hardnesse of their hert, it were maruell yf one being hardnecked shold be fre. For mercy and wrath is with him: he is both mighty to forgyue, [Eccle.v.a] and to poure out displeasure. Lyke as his mercy is great, euen so is his punishmēt also, he iudgeth a mā accordig to his workes The vngodly shall not escape in his spoyle, and the long pacience of him ẏ sheweth mercy, shal not byde behynd. Al mercy shal make place vnto euery mā accordyng to the deseruyng of his workes, and after the vnderstandyng of his pylgrymage.

Saye not thou: I wyl hyde my selfe from God, for who wyl thynke vpon me from aboue? C I shall not be knowen in so greate a heape of people, for what is my soule among so many creatures? Beholde, the heuen, yea the heuen of heuens, the depe, the earthe, and all ẏ therin is shall be moued at his presēce: the mountaynes, the hylles, and the foundacions of the earth shal shake for feare, when God visiteth them.

These thynges dothe no hert vnderstand, but he vnderstandeth euerye herte, and who vnderstandeth his wayes? No man seith his storme, and the most part of his workes are secrete. Who wyl declare the workes of his ryghtousnesse? Or who shall be hable to abyde them? For the couenaunt is farre from some, and the tryinge oute of men is in the fulfyllyng. He that is humble of hert, thynketh vpon suche thinges: but an vnwise and erroneous man casteth his mynde vnto foolysh thinges.

My sonne harken thou vnto me, and lerne vnderstandyng, and marke my wordes with D thyne hert: I wyll gyue the a sure doctryne, and playnly shall I instruct the. God hathe set his workes in good ordre frome the begynnynge, and parte of them hathe he sundered frome the other. He hathe garnysshed his workes from euerlastyng, and theyr begynnynges, accordynge to theyr generacyons. None of them hyndered an other, neyther was anye of them disobedient vnto his worde. After this, God loked vpon the erth, and fylled it with his goodes. With al maner of lyuing beastes hath he couered the grounde, and they all shall be tourned vnto erth agayne.

¶ The creation of man, and the goodnesse that God hathe doone vnto hym. Of almes and repentaunce.

CAPI. XVII.

A GOd shope man of the earth, and tourned hym vnto earthe agayne. He gaue hym the nombre of dayes and certayn tyme, yea and gaue hym power of the thynges that are vpon earthe. He clothed hym wt strength, and made hym after his owne lykenesse. He made all fleshe to stande in awe of hym, so that he had the dominion of all beastes and foules. He made out of hym an helper lyke vnto hym selfe, and gaue them discrecion and tonge, eyes and eares, and a hert to vnderstande, & fylled them with instruction and vnderstandyng. He created for them also the knowlege of the spirite, fylled their hertes with vnderstandyng, and shewed thē good and euyl, He set his eye vpon theyr hertes, declaring vnto them his great and noble workes, that they shold praise his holy name togyther, reioyse of his wonders, and be telling of his noble actes. Besyde this he gaue them instruction and the lawe of lyfe for an heritage.

He made him an euerlastyng couenaunt wt them, and shewed them his rightousnesse and iudgemētes. They saw his glory with their eyes, and theyr eares herde the maiesty of his voyce. And he sayd vnto them: beware of al vnryghtous thynges. He gaue euery man also a commaundement concerning his neighboure.

B Theyr wayes are euer before hym, and are not hydde frome his eyes. He hathe set a ruler vpon euerye people, but Israell is the Lordes porcion. Al theyr workes are as the sunne in the syghte of God, and his eyes are alwaye lokynge vpon theyr wayes. Al theyr vnryghtouinesses are manyfest vnto hym, and all theyr wyckednesses are open in his syghte. The mercye that a man sheweth, is as it were a purse with hym, and a mannes good dede preserueth hym as the apple of an eye. At the laste shall he awake, and rewarde euerye man vpon his heed as he hathe deserued, and shal tourne them togyther in to the nethermoost partes of the earthe. But vnto theym that wyll repent, he hathe gyuen the way of ryghtousnes. As for such as be weike he comforteth them, suffereth them, and sendeth them the porcyon of the veritie.

O tourne then vnto the Lorde, forsake thy synnes, make thy prayer before the Lorde, doo the lesse offence, tourne agayne vnto the Lord, forsake thyne vnryghtousnes, be an vtter ennemy to abhominacion, lerne to know the ryghtousnesse and iudgementes of God, stand in the porcion that is set forth for the, and in the prayer of the mooste hyghe God. Goo in to the porcion of the holye worlde, with suche as be lyuynge, and gyue thankes vnto God.

Who wyll prayse the Lorde in the helle? Abyde not thou in the errour of the vngodlye, but gyue hym thankes before deathe. C [Psal.vi.a] As for the deed, thankefulnesse peryssheth [Esa.xxxviii.d] frome hym as nothynge. Gyue thou thankes in thy lyfe, yea whyle thou arte lyuynge and hole, shalt thou giue thankes, and prayse God, and reioyse in his mercye. O howe great is the louynge kyndnesse of the Lorde and his mercyfull goodnesse vnto suche as tourne vnto hym? For all thynges may not be in man: And why? the sonne of man is not immortall, and he hathe pleasure in the vanitie of wyckednesse. What is more clere then the sunne? yet shall it fayle. Or what is more wycked then the thynge that fleshe and bloude hathe ymagyned? and that same shall be reproued. The Lord seith the power of the hye heuen, and all are but earthe and asshes.

¶ The meruelous workes of God, the mysery and wretchednesse of man. Agaynst God ought we not to complayne. Praye must we continually.

CAPI. XVIII.

HE that lyueth for euermore, made all A thynges togyther. God onely is ryghtous, [Gene.i.a] & remayneth a victoryous kyng for euer. Who shall be hable to expresse the workes of hym? Who hath soughte oute the grounde of his noble actes? Who shall declare the power of his greatnesse? Or who wyl take vpon hym to tel out his mercy? As for the wonderous workes of ẏ Lord, there maye nothyng be taken from them, nothyng maye be put vnto theym, neyther maye the grounde of them be founde out. But when a man hath doone his beste, he muste begyn agayne: and when he thynketh to be come to an ende, he muste goo agayne to his labour. What is man? Wherto is he worth? What [Psal.lxxxix.a] good or euyll can he do? Yf the nombre of a mans dayes be almost an hundreth yeres, it is moche.

Like as the droppes of rayne are vnto the see, and as a grauell stone is in comparyson B of the sande: so are these fewe yeres to the dayes euerlastynge. Therfore is the Lorde [ii.Petri.iii.b] pacient with them, and poureth out his mercye vpon theym. He sawe and perceyued the thoughtes and ymaginacions of their hert, that they were euyll: therfore heaped he vp his mercyfull goodnesse vpon them, and shewed them the waye of ryghtousnesse. The mercy that a man hath, reacheth to his neighbour, but the mercy of God is vpon al flesh. He chasteneth, he teacheth and nourtoureth: yea euen as a shepherde tourneth agayne his flocke, so dothe he all them that receyue chastenynge, nourtoure and doctryne. [Esay.lxvi.a] Mercyfull is he vnto them that stand in awe of his iudgementes.

My son, when thou doest good, make no C grudging at it: and what so euer thou geuest speake no discomfortable wordes. Shal not the dewe coule the heat? Euen so is a worde better then a gyfte. Is not a frendly worde a good

good honest gyfte? but a gracyous man gyueth them bothe. A foole shall cast a man in the teeth, and that roughly, and a gyft of the nygard: putteth out the eyes. Get the rightousnesse before ẏ come to iudgement: lerne before thou speake, and goo to physycke or euer thou be sycke: examyn and iudge thy selfe before the iudgement come, and so shalt thou fynde grace in the syght of God. Humble thy self before thou be sycke, and in tyme of thy disease shewe thy conuersacion. Lette not to praye alwaye, and stande not in feare to be refourmed vnto death, for the rewarde of God endureth for euer. Before thou prayest prepare thy soule, and be not as one that tempteth God. Thynke vpon the wrathfull indignacion that shall be at the ende, and the houre of vengeaunce, when he shall turne awaye his face. When thou hast ynoughe, remembre the tyme of honger, and when thou arte ryche, thynke vpon the time of pouertie and scarcenesse.

A wise mā feareth God in al thinges, & in the dayes of trāsgression, he kepeth hym self from syn. A discrete man hath pleasure in wysdome, and he that fyndeth her, maketh moch of her. They that haue had vnderstanding, haue delt wisely in wordes, haue vnderstand the truth and rightousnesse, and haue sought out wyse sentences & iudgementes. Folow not thy lustes but turne the from thyne owne wyl. For if ẏ giuest thy soul her desires, it shal make thine enemyes to laugh ẏ to scorne. Take not thy pleasure in great voluptuousnes, and medle not to moche wall. CAPI. XIX.

A A Labourynge man that is gyuen vnto dronkennesse, shall not be ryche: and he that maketh not moch of smal thinges, shal fall by lytle and lytle. Wyne & women, make wyse men rennagates, & put men of vnderstanding to reproke, and he that accompanieth aduoutrers, shal become a wicked mā. Mothes and wormes shal haue hym to heritage, yea he shal be set vp to a greater example, and his soule shall be rooted out of the nombre. He that is hasty to giue credence is lyght mynded, and doth against him selfe. Who so reioyseth in wickednesse shal be punished: he ẏ hateth to be refourmed, his lyfe shal be shortned: and he that abhorreth bablyng of wordes, quencheth wyckednes. He that offendeth agaynst his own soule, shal repent it: and he that reioyseth in wickednes shall be punysshed.

Wyne: women.

Reherse not a wycked and churlish word twise, and thou shalt not be hindered. Shew thy secretes, neyther to frende ne foo, and yf thou hast offended, tel it not out. For he shal harken vnto the and marke the, and when he findeth oportunitie, he shal hate the. Yf thou hast herde a worde agaynst thy neyghbour, let it be deed within the: and be sure ẏ shalt haue no harme therby. A foole trauayleth wt a worde, lyke as a woman ẏ is payned with bearyng of chylde. Lyke as an arow shot in a dogges thigh, so is a worde in a foles hert. Tell thy frend his fault, lest he be ignorāt, & saye: I haue not done it, or yf he haue done it, that he do it no more. Reproue thy neyghbour, that he kepe his tong, & yf he haue spoken, that he say it no more. B

Leuit.xix. Math.xviii.

Tell thy neyghbour his fault, for ofte tymes an offence is made, and gyue not credēce to euery word. A man falleth somtyme with his tonge, but not with his wyll. For what is he that hathe not offended in his tonge? Gyue thy neyghboure warnyng before thou threaten hym, and gyue place vnto the lawe of the Lorde. The feare of God is all wysdome, and he that is a ryghtous man kepeth the lawe. As for the doctryne of wickednesse it is no wysdome, and the prudence of synners is no good vnderstandynge: it is but wyckednesse and abhominacion, and a blasphemyng of wysdom. A symple man of smal vnderstandynge that feareth God, is better then one that hath moch wysdom, and transgresseth the lawe of the hyest. A craftye subtyll man can be wyse, but he is vnryghtous, and with gyftes he wresteth the open & manifest lawe. A wycked man can behaue hym selfe humblye, and can douke with his heed, and yet is he but a disceyuer within. He hydeth his face, and disguyseth it: and bicause he shoulde not be knowen, he preuenteth the. C D

And thoughe he be so weyke that he can doo the no harme, yet when he maye fynde oportunitie, he shall doo some euyll. A man maye be knowen by his face, and one that hath vnderstandynge maye be perceyued by the loke of his countenaunce. A mans garment, laughter, and goynge, declare what he is.

¶ Of correction and repentaunce. Of the gyfte of the wyse man and of the foole. Of lyinge.

CAPI. XX.

Some man reproueth his neyghbour ofte tymes, but not in due season. Agayne, some man holdeth his tonge, and he is wyse and dyscrete. It is moche better to gyue warnyng, and to reproue, then to beare euyll wyll: for he that knowledgeth hym selfe openlye, shall be preserued frome hurte and destruction. Lyke as when a gelded mā thorowe desyre and lust defyleth a mayden, A euen so is it with him that vseth vyolēce, and vnryghtousnesse in the lawe: O how good a thynge is it, a man that is reproued, to shewe openly his repentaunce, for so shalte thou escape wylful syn.

Some man kepeth silence, and is founde wyse: but he that is not ashamed what he sayth: is hatefull. Some man holdeth his tonge, bicause he hath not the vnderstandyng of the language: and some man kepeth sylence, waytynge a conuenient tyme. A wyse man wyll holde his tonge tyll he se oportunitye, but a wanton and vndiscrete body shal regarde no tyme. He that vseth manye wordes, shall hurte his owne soule: and he that taketh auctoritie vpō hym vnryghtously shal be hated. Some man hath oft tymes prosperitie in wycked thynges: Agayne, some man getteth moche, and hathe harme and losse. There is some gyfte that is nothyng worth: Agayne, there is some gyfte, whose rewarde is double. Some man getteth a fall, for beynge to proude, and some commeth to worshyp from the lowe estate. Some man byeth moch for a lytle pryce, and must paye for it seuenfolde.

B A wyse man with his wordes maketh him selfe to be loued, but the fauours of fooles shall be poured out. The gyfte of the vnwyse shall do the no good, for his eyes are seuenfolde: He shall gyue lytle, and saye he gaue moch: he openeth his mouth and cryeth out, as it were one that cryeth out wyne. To daye he lendeth, to morowe he asketh it agayne, and suche a man is to be hated. The foole sayeth: I haue no frende, I haue no thanke for all my good dedes: yea euen they that eate my breed, speake no good of me. O how oft, and of how many shall he be laughed to scorne? He taketh a more perilous fal by such wordes, then yf he fell vpon the grounde: euen so shall the falles of wycked men come hastelye. In the mouth of him ẏ is vntaught, are many vnconuenient and vnmete wordes. A wyse sentence shall not be alowed, at the mouth of the foole, for he speaketh it not in due season.

C Some man synneth not, bicause he hath not wherwithall, and in his rest he shall be stynged. Some man there is that destroyeth his owne soule with shame, and for an vnwyse bodyes sake, destroyeth he it, and with acceptyng of persons, shall he vndo him self. Some man promyseth his frende a gyfte for verye shame, and getteth an enemye of hym for nought. A lye is a wycked shame in a mā, yet shall it be euer in the mouth of ẏ vnwyse. A theefe is better then a man that is accustomed to lye, but they bothe shall haue destruction to heretage. The condicyons of lyers are vnhonest, and theyr shame is euer with them.

D A wyse man shall brynge him selfe to honour with his wordes, and he that hath vnderstandynge shall be set by amonge greate men. He that tylleth his lande, shall encrease his heape of corne: he that worketh ryghtousnesse, shall be exalted, and he that pleaseth greate mē, shal escape moch euyll. Rewardes and gyftes blynde the eyes of the wyse, and make him dom, that he can not tell men their fautes. Wysdome that is hyd, and treasure ẏ is hoorded vp, what profyte is in thē both? Better is he that kepeth his ignoraunce secrete, then a man that hydeth his wysdome.

CAPI. XXI.

My sonne yf thou hast synned, do it no more: but praye for thy foresynnes, that they maye be forgyuen the. Flee frome synne, euen as frome a serpent: for yf thou commest to nyghe her, she wil byte the. The teeth therof are as the teeth of a lyon, to slee the soules of men. The wyckednes of man is as a sharpe two edged swerde, which maketh suche woundes that they can not be healed.

A Synne. Ecc.v.a.vii.a xii.c

Stryfe and wrongous dealyng shal waste awaye a mans goodes: and thorowe pryde a ryche house shall be brought to nought: so the ryches of the proude shall be roted oute. The prayer of the poore goeth oute of the mouth, and commeth vnto the eares, and his vengeaunce (or defence) shall come, and that hastelye. Who so hateth to be refourmed it is a token of an vngodly person: but he that feareth God, wyll remembre hym selfe. A mightye man is knowne a far of by his tong but he that hath vnderstandynge perceyueth that he shall haue a fall.

Who so buyldeth his house with other mens cost, is lyke one that gathereth stones in winter. The congregacion of the vngodly is lyke stubble gathered togyther, their ende is a flame of fyre. The waye of the vngodly is set with stones, but in their ende is hell, darcknes & paynes. He that kepeth the lawe wyll holde faste the vnderstandynge, therof: and the ende of the feare of God is wisdom. He that is not wyse, wyll not be taughte in good: but the vnwyse mā aboundeth in wickednesse: and where bitternes is there is no vnderstandynge. The knowledge of the wise shall flowe lyke water that runneth ouer, and his counsell is lyke a fountayne of lyfe. B

The hert of a foole is lyke a broken vessel, he can kepe no wysdome. When a man of vnderstandyng heareth a wyse worde, he shal commende it, and make moche of it. But yf a voluptuous man heare it, he shall haue no pleasure therin, but cast it behynde his backe. The talkinge of a foole is lyke an heuy burthen by the waye: but to heare a wyse man speake it is a pleasure. Where a doubte is in the congregacyon, it is asked at the mouthe of the wyse, and they shall pondre his wordes in their hertes. Like as a house that is destroyed, euen so is wisdome vnto a foole: As for the knowledge of the vnwyse, it is but darcke wordes. Doctryne is vnto him that C hath

hathe no vnderstandynge, euen as fetters a-bounte his fete, and lyke mannacles vpon his ryght hande. A foole lyfteth vp his voyce vñ laughter, but a wyse man shall scarse laughe secretely.

Ecclę.xix.d Lernynge is vnto a wyse man a iewell of golde, and lyke an armlet vpon his ryghte arme. A foolysshe mans fote is soone in his neyghbours house, but one that hath experience, shall be ashamed at the persone of the myghtye. A foole wyll pepe in at the wyndowe in to the house, but he that is wel nurtured, wyll stande without. A foolysshe man standeth herkening at the doze, but he that is wyse, wyll be ashamed.

The lyppes of the vnwyse wyll be tellyng foolysh thynges, but the wordes of suche as haue vnderstandynge, shall be weyed in the balaũce. The hert of fooles is in theyr mouth, but the mouth of the wyse is in theyr hert. When the vngodly curseth the blasphemer, he curseth his owne soule. A pynye accuser of other men shal dekyle his owne soule, and be hated of euerye man: (but he that kepeth his tonge and is discrete, shall come to honoure.)

¶ The purgation of the slouthfull. Of the foolysh sonne and doughter, we must haue discretion, how and to whom we ought to preache, of sozowynge vpon the deed. ¶ foole is not to be mocke talked withall. Iniuryes and wronges do breake frendeship and amytye.

CAPI. XXII.

A Slouthful body is moulded of a stone or claye: he that toucheth him, must wash his handes agayn. A misnurtured sonne is the dishonour of the fathre. A folysh doughter shall be lytell regarded. A wyse doughter is an heretage vnto her husbande: but she that commeth to dishonestly, bryngeth her father in to bruynesse. A doughter that is past shame, dishonoureth bothe her father and her husbande: the vngodly shall regarde her, but they bothe shal dispyse her, the playnge of musycke is not mete where heupnes is, euen so is the correction & doctryne of wisdome euer vnpleasaunt vnto fooles.

B Who so teacheth a foole, is euen as one that glueth a pot sherde togyther: as one that telleth a tale to hym that heareth hym not, and as one that rayseth a man out of an heupe slepe. Who so telleth a foole of wysdome, is euen as a man, whiche speaketh to one that is a slepe. When he hathe to tolde his tale, he sayth: what is the matter? When one dyeth, lamentacion is made for hym, because the lyght fayleth him: euen so let men mourne ouer a foole: for he wanteth vnderstandynge. Make but lytle weppnge because of the deed: for he is come to rest, but the life of the foole is worse then the death. Seuen dayes do men mourne for hym that is deed, but ꝓ lamẽtacyõ ouer the vnwyse and vngodlye shulde endure all the dayes of their lyfe.

C Talke not moch with a foole, and go not with hym that hath no vnderstandynge. Beware of him, lest it turne the to trauayle, and thou shalt not be defyled with his synne. Departe from hym, and thou shalte fynde rest, & shalt not be wrothe back into his folishnes. What is heuyer then leade? And what thyng a foole be called els but leade? Sande, salt, and a lump of yron is easyer to beare, then an vnwyse, foolysh, and vngodly man. Lyke as the bande of wod bounde togyther in the foundacion of the house can not be loosed, euen so is it with the herte that is stablysshed in the thought of counsell. The thought of the wyse, shall neither feare ne be offended at any tyme. Prouerb.xxvij.

Lyke as a fayre playstered wall in a wynter house, and an hyghe buylynge, may not abyde the wynde and storme: euen so is a foles heerte afrayde in his ymagynacion: he fereth at euerye thynge, and can not endure. D

He that wypeth a mans eye, bryngeth forth teares: and he that pyrceth the herte, bryngeth forth the meanynge and thought. Who so casteth a stone at the byrdes, frayth them awaye: and he that blasphemeth his frende breaketh the frendshyp: though thou drewest a swerde at thy frende, yet dispayre not, for thou mayste come agayne to thy frende. If he speake sowrelye, feare not, for ye maye be agreed togyther agayne: excepte it be that thou blaspheme hym, dysdayne him & open his secretes & wound him trayterously for all suche thynges, shall dryue awaye a frende.

Be faythfull vnto thy neyghboure in his powertye, that thou mayste reioyce with hym E also in his prosperitye. Abide stedfast vnto him in the tyme of his trouble, that thou mayste be heyre with hym in heritage. Lyke as the vapour and smoke goeth out at the ouen before the fyre, euen so euell wordes, rebukes and threatenynges go before bloudshedyng. Be not ashamed to defende thy frende: as for me, I wyll not hyde my face from hym, Psalm. though he shulde do me harme. Whosoeuer heareth it shall beware of him. Who shal set a watch before my mouth, & a sure seale vpõ my lyppes, that I fall not with theym, and that my tonge destroye me not?

¶ A prayer agaynste pryde, lechery, and gloteyne. Of othes, blasphemy, and of wyse communicacion. Of the thre kyndes of synnes. Many synnes procede of aduoutrye. Of the feare of God.

CAPI. XXIII.

O Lorde, father and gouernour of my lyfe, leaue me not in their ymagynacyon and counsell. Od let me not fal into such reprefe. Who will kepe my thoughte with the scourge, and the doctryne of wysdome in myne herte? that he spare not mine ignorauce, that I fall not with them, lest myne ignorauces increase, that myne offences be not many in nombre, and that my synnes exceade not: lest I fal before myne enne-

myes, and so my aduersarye reioyce. O Lorde thou father and God of my lyfe, leue me not in theyr ymagynacyon. O let me not haue a proude loke, but turne away all voluptuousnesse fro me. Take fro me the lustes of the body, let not the desyres of vnclennesse take hold vpon me, and gyue me not ouer in to an vnshamefast and obstynate mynde.

Heare me (O ye cyldren) I wyll gyue you a doctryne, how ye shall ordre youre mouth: who so kepeth it, shall not perysh thorow his lyppes, ne be hurte thorow wycked workes. As for the synner, he shall be taken in his owne banrytye: he that is proude and cursed, shall fall therin. Let not thy mouth be accustomed with swearyng, for in it there are many falles. Let not the naming of God be continually in thy mouth: for lyke as a seruaunt whiche is ofte punysshed, can not be without some sore, euen so what so euer he be that sweareth and nameth God, shal not be clene pourged from synne. A man that vseth much swearynge, shall be fylled with wyckednesse, and the plage shall neuer go from his house. If he begyle his brother, his faute shall be vpon hym: yf he knowledge not his synne, he maketh a double offence, and yf he sweare in vayne, he shall not be founde ryghtous, for his house shall be full of plages.

E The wordes of ꝯ swearer bryngeth death, (God graunte that it be not founde in the house of Iacob.) But they that feare God, eschewe all such, and lye not welterynge in syn. Vse not thy mouth to vnhoneste and sylthye talkig, for in it is the worde of syn. Remembre thy father and thy mother, when thou arte set amonge greate men: lest God forget the in theyr syghte, and lest thou botynge in thy custome, suffre rebuke, and wysshe not to haue bene vnborne, and so curse the daye of thy natyuytie. The man that is accustomed with the wordes of blasphemye, wyll neuer be reformed al the dayes of his lyfe. So syn cwyse is to moche, but the thyrde bryngeth wrath and destruction. An hote stomacke can not be quenched (euen lyke a burnynge fyre) tyll he haue swalowed vp somethyng: euen so an vnmortred man hath no rest in his flesshe: tyll he haue kyndled a fyre.

D All bread is swete to an horemonger, he wyll not leaue of, tyll he haue his purpose. A man that breaketh wedlock, an regardeth not his soule, but sayethe: Tush, who seith me? I am compassed about with darknesse, the walles couer me, no body seith me: whom nede I to feare? The hyghest wyl not remembre my synnes. He vnderstandeth not that his eyes se all thynges, for all suche feare of men dyuerth awaye the feare of God from hym, for he feareth only the eyes of men, and consydereth not that the eyes of the Lorde are clearer then the Sunne, beholdynge all the wayes of men, and the grounde of the depe, and lokynge euen to mens hertes in secrete places. The Lorde God knewe all thynges or euer they were made, and after they be brought to passe also, he loketh vpõ them al. The same man shall be openlye punysshed in the stretes of the cytye, and shall be chased a Leuit.xx.b

brode lyke a ponge hoze sole: and when he Deute.xxii.c
thinketh leest vpon it, he shalbe taken. Thus shal he be put to shame of euery man, because he wolde not vnderstande the feare of the Lorde. And thus shall it goo also with euery wyfe that leaueth her husbande, and getteth inheryteaunce by a straunge marryage. Fyrste E the hath bene vnfaythfull vnto the lawe of Exodi.xx.c the hyghest: Secondly, she hath forsaken her owne husband: Thirdly she hath played the hoore in aduoutrye, and gotten her chyldren by an other man. She shall be brought oute of the congregacyon, and her chyldren shalbe loked vpon. Her chyldren shal not take rote, and as for feute, her braunches shall bryngе forth none. A shameful report shall she leaue behynde her, and her dyshonour shall not be put out. And they that remayne, shall knowe that there is nothynge better then, the feare of God: and that there is nothynge sweter then to take hede vnto the cõmaundemẽtes of the Lorde. A greate worshyp is it to folowe the Lord, for lõg life shalbe receyued of him.

¶ A prayse of wysdome proceedinge forthe of the mouth of God. Of her workes and place where she resteth.

CAPI. XXIIII.

A Wysdome shall prayse her selfe, and be honoured in God, and reioyse in the myddest of his people: In the congregacyons of the hyghest shall she open her mouth, and triumphe in the beholdonge of his power: In the myddest of her people shall she be exalted, & wondered at in the holy fulnes: In the multytude of the chosen she shall be commẽded, and among such as be blessed she shall be praysed, and shall saye: I am come out of the mouth of the hyghest, fyrstborne before all creatures. I caused the lyght that fayleth not, to aryse in the heauen, & couered all the earth as a cloude. My dwellynge is aboue in the heith, and my seate is in the piller of the cloude. I my selfe alone haue gone rounde aboute the compasse of heauen, and peased the grounde of the depe: I haue walked in the floudes of the see, and haue stande in all landes: my domynyon is in euerye people and in euery nacyon, and with my power haue I troden downe the hertes of all, both hyghe and lowe. A wysdome

In all these thynges also I sought rest, B and a dwellynge in some inheryteaunce. So the creatoure of all thynges gaue me a commaundement: and he that made me, appoynted me a tabernacle, and sayde vnto me: Let thy dwellynge be in Jacob, and thyne inheryteaunce in Israell, and rote thy selfe amonges my chosen. I was created frome the begynnynge and before the worlde, and shall Prouer.viii.c not leaue the worlde to come. In the holy habytacyon haue I serued before hym, & so was I stablysshed in Sion.

In the holye cytye rested I in lyke maner: Exodi.xxv.a and in Jerusalẽ was my power, I toke rote

in

Pſal.xxxii.b in an honorable people, euen in the porcyon of the Lord and in his heritage, and kepte me in the fulneſſe of the ſayntes. I am ſet vp on hye lyke a Cedre vpon Lybanus, and as a Cypres tre vpon the mount Hermon: I am exalted lyke a palme tree in Cades, and as a roſe plante in Jericho: As a fayre olyue tre in the felde, and am exalted lyke a plantayn tre by the waters ſyde. I haue gyuen a ſmell in the ſtretes, as the Cynamom and Balme, that bathe ſu good a ſauoure: yea a ſwete odoure haue I gyuen, as it were Myrre of the beſt.

¶ I haue made my dwellynges to ſmell as it were of roſyn, Galbanum, Clowes, and Incenſe, and as Libanus when it is not hewen downe, and myne odour is as the pure Balme. As the Terebint haue I ſtretched out my braunches, and my braſthes are ꝑ braunches of honour and ſoupnge ſauoure. As the vyne, haue I brought forthe frute of a ſwete ſauoure, and my flowres are the frute of honour and ryches. I am the mother of bewtye, of loue, of feare, of knowledge and of holy hope. In me is all grace of lyfe & truth: In me is all hope of lyfe and vertue. O come vnto me, all ye that be deſyrous of me, and fyll your ſelues with my frutes: for my ſpyrete is ſweter then honye, and ſo is myne inheritaunce more then the hony combe: the remembraunce of me endureth for euermore. They that eate me, ſhall haue the more hungre: & they that drynche me, ſhall thirſte the more. Who ſo herkeneth vnto me, ſhall not come to confuſion: and they that worke in me, ſhal not offend. They that make me to be knowe, ſhall haue euerlaſtynge lyfe.

All theſe thynges are the boke of lyfe, the couenaunt of the hyeſt, and the knowledge of the truthe. Moſes commaundeth the law in the preceptes of ryghtouſneſſe, for an heritage vnto the houſe of Jacob, and commytted the prymples vnto Iſrael. Out of Dauid his ſeruaunt, he ordeyned to rayſe vp a mooſt myghty kyng, ſytyng in the ſeate of honour for euermore. This fylleth with wyſdome, lyke as the floude of Phyſon, and as the floude of Tigris, whan the newe frutes are a growynge.

This bringeth a plenteous vnderſtanding like Euphrates: and fylleth it vp as Jordane in the tyme of harueſt. This maketh nurtour to breake forthe as the lyght, and as the water Gihon in the haruеſt. The fyrſt hath not knowen her perfectye, nomore ſhall the laſt ſeke out the grounde of her. For her thought is fuller then the ſee, and her counſell is profounder then the great depe.

I wyſdome haue caſt out floudes. I am as a greate waterbroke out of the ryuer. I am as the ryuer Dour, and as a watre conoyte am I come oute of the gareen of pleaſure. I ſayd: I wyll water the garden of my younge plantes, and fyll the frute of my byrth. So my watre broke became exedynge greate, and my ryuer approched vnto the ſee. For I make declare to be vnto all men, as light as the fayre morynge, and I ſhall make it to be euer the clearer. I wyll pearle thorow all the lower partes of the earthe, I wyll loke vpon all ſuche as ſlepe, and lyghten all them that put their truſte in the Lorde. I ſhall yet poure out doctryne, lyke as prophely, and leaue it vnto ſuche as ſeke after wyſdome, and their generations ſhall I neuer fayle, vnto the holy euerlaſtynge worlde. Beholde howe that I haue not laboured for my ſelfe onely, but for all them that ſeke after the truth.

¶ Of thre thynges which pleaſe God, and of the which he hateth. Of nyne thinges ꝑ be not to be inſpeate, and of the tenth: chyefly of the malyce of a woman.

CAPI. XXXV.

THre thynges there are, that my ſpirite A fauoureth, whiche be alſo alowed before God and men: The vnytye of brethren, the loue of neighboures, and man and wyfe that agre well to gyther. Gen.xiiii Rom.xii.a

Thre thynges there be whiche my ſoule hateth and I vtterly abhorre the lyfe of them. A poore man that is proude. A rich man that is a lyer, and an olde bodye that doteth, and is vnchaſte. Eccl.xxv

If thou haſt gathered nothynge in thy youth, what wylte thou fynde then in thyne age? O how pleaſaunt a thynge is it when graye headed men are diſcrete, and when the elders can gyue good counſel? O howe comly a thyng is wyſdom vnto aged men? yea vnderſtanding and counſel is a glorious thing. The crowne of olde men is to haue moche experyence, and the feare of God is their worſhyp.

There be nyne thinges, which I haue iudged in my herte to be happye and the tenth wyll I tell forth vnto men with my tonge. A man that wyfe he lyueth, hath ioye of his chyldren, and ſeeth the fall of his enemyes. Well is hym that dwelleth with an houſwyfe of vnderſtandinge, and that hath not falſe with his tonge, and that hath not bene fayne to ſerue ſuch as are vnmete for hym. Well is hym, that fyndeth a faythful frende, and well is hym, whiche talketh of wyſdom to an eare that heareth hym. B

O how greate is he that fyndeth wyſdome and knowledge? Yet is he not aboue hym, that feareth the Lorde. The feare of God hath ſet it ſelfe aboue all thynges. Bleſſed is the man, vnto whom it is graſted to haue the feare of God. Vnto whome ſhall he be lykened, that kepeth it faſte? The feare of God is the begynnynge of his loue, and the beginnyng of fayth is to cleaue faſt vnto it. The heupnes of the herte is all punyſhment, and the wyckednes of a woman goeth aboue all. All punyſhment and plage is nothynge in comparyſon of the plage of the herte, euen ſo all wyckednes is nothynge to the wyckednes of a woman.

What ſo euer happeneth vnto a man, is nothynge in comparyſon of it, that his cupil C
wylles

wylles do vnto hym: and all vengeaunce is nothynge to the vengeaunce of the enemye.

There is not a more wycked heed then the heed of the ſerpent, and there is no wrath aboue the wrath of a woman. I wyll rather dwell with a lyon and dragon, then to kepe houſe with a wycked wyfe. The wyckednеſſe of a woman chaungeth her face, ſhe ſhal mokfell her countenaunce as it were a Beer, and as a ſack ſhall ſhe ſhewe it among the neyghbours. Her huſbande is brought to ſhame amonges his neyghbours, and when he heareth it, it maketh hym to ſyghe. All wyckednеſſe is but lytle to the wyckednеſſe of a woman, the porcyon of the vngodlye ſhall fall vpon her. D
